The Legislative Assembly became even more convoluted in "aristocracy than the Constituent Assembly. Since the empire, the counts, viscounts, barons, dukes, marquises, princes, chamberlains bellans, squires, the aristocracy and the domestic staff of the castle teau, tributary to the Legislative Body; the burgesses appahold the highest financial and industrial position railway, bank, and credit administrators said land, insurance, large metallurgists, factory owners first-rate. It's gotten to the point where the workers are believe they are obliged to oppose these aristocracies with candidates working-class people, convinced that France is returned to the caste system, and it is appropriate to vote

ECONOMICS AND POLITICS 71

by orders, as in 1789, in order to maintain the balance.

The disillusion of universal suffrage were easy to to expect.

Public spending and everything else that a nation is obliged to settle by delegation are the stone The stumbling block of ignorant societies. The more the commission The delegated sion moves away from the center where it originated. The more prone it is to wander. The most popular powers- The municipalities are the local authorities of small towns. That is to them we owe this admirable system of viability which allows goods from the hamlets to reach the major roads, ports, canals, railways, and without which the locomotive and the tugboat do not produce would only produce smoke. In our departments of central, the farm tracks are today- today in better condition than the national roads there are: thirty years old.

Already the city councils of major cities and the departmental administrations, in a less direct relationship with the spirit and needs of the masses, give rise to discontent and criticism that is too often justified.

As for the legislative chambers, they escape completely under the control of the electorate. Also the peasants, as long as political education is not provided at home through the reform of the economic system, prefers- will they always be to a nobody, an opponent, the great favours, exemption of a son from conscription, the construction of a church, a schoolhouse, a... railway connection, subsidies to agricultural roads.

792 CH. II. – CONCENTRATION OF MONOPOLIES

If the republic of 1848 had accomplished nothing of the reforms of which only the title made it an obligation, it nonetheless caused a terrible fear to the satisfied. Equality, above all, frightened the bourgeoisie; it did not could come to terms with the idea that its economic preponderance The political and mic was over. The conspiracy was not long in coming. to organize themselves. Failing that, those from Orléans, too close to their a fall to return; lacking legitimacy, which remained odious and unpleasant, a name emerged, popularized by the liberals and liberals of the Restoration and of 1830, a name whose ignorance or complicity had It is synonymous with revolution, equality, and freedom. Louis-Napoleon Bonaparte became the Veuillot candidate and of the Third Estate, of the Universe, and of the Constitutional Council. The popular suffrage, for the reasons we have just stated" to say. He voted with them. "The empire is made," said Mr. Thiers at the end of the legislative session. The ie was done as early as the 40th LE December 1848.

$2. – ECONOMIC EXPEDITIONS OF DECEMBER 2 ITI

The people had their program, the complacent had theirs. and Louis-Napoleon his own, three irreconcilable programs- bles. The address of the coup organizers was guessing what was the most immediate thing to do, except to throw the country, for a hundred years, into economic servitude no era offers an example of this.

POLITICAL ECONOMY OF DECEMBER 2, 2013

The ruling class, the most restless, the most da- managerial, therefore, perfectly free from everything political principle, monarchical or republican, had one concern: ensuring the enjoyment of his privileges vile. She was ready to trample on public liberties. who would guarantee his income? The Empire did better, He carried them beyond what could have been hoped for, or to count, in a few years, the resources of a century; for however absolute a power may be, it is not in its means of decreeing wealth; he can only move.

His first economic act was the merger of the com-railway companies, with extension, to four-twenty-nine years, of concessions, some of which were halfway through their deadline. At the same time as industrial concentration put the railways at risk. under the immediate control of power, there was, for Ia bourgeoisie, a shower of concessions, of subsidies all sorts, a deluge of stocks and bonds, more or less less guaranteed, debt securities, capital gains, an unchecked and unjustified increase. The plebeians were being offered... unsustainable work, relief funds and re-trade, cheap soup kitchens, parades, promenades military parades and fireworks. Already the functions-public officials of all kinds, administrative employees, magistrates, soldiers and priests had obtained increases treatment details. The horn of plenty is becoming... poured it on everyone. Too bad for the future; we seemed to have adopted the motto of Louis XV: After We are in for the flood. But the flood has begun. Against the dissatisfied, if any were to occur, we had the clerks-local, cantonal and general sariats; the commands-military contingents, the contingents of one hundred thousand men, the municipal authority subordinate to the prefects, the police reinforced in major centers, the silent press, the overturned tribune; then, later, the general security law-rale, administrative transportation to Cayenne and in Algeria.

5

74 CH. II, -: CONCENTRATION OF MONOPOLIES

Thus, the exultation, originally, knew no more. terminals.

But the abyss calls to the abyss: the demands of the appe-Material needs are insatiable: it's the barrel of Da-Naïves. Speculation, in a few years, had devoured everything. New largesse was needed, especially since the pro-. Napoleonic gram: balance of power, rectification borders, military glory, were about to come online; this. who did not take into account the bourgeoisie and could not-would have to accept it without significant compensation. . . .

*

° e° e 3 L] . e LE e° e L] . 3 LD LI [2 Li

Moving is not creating, as the saying goes. Let's take a look.

a brief and quick look at what fortune

The public has either won or lost from these upheavals.

When the State and finance – the two largest collective forces of a nation – join together and lend themselves

With a strong hand, one can expect wonders, such as we will judge this by a few examples; but the pro-

Problem with distribution?..... We will also be able to,

to appreciate its effects, not only between contemporaries rains, but between generations.

POLITICAL ECONOMY OF DECEMBER 2, 175

(rs

IV

Bank of France. – Under the terms of the law of June 30, 1840, the privilege of the Bank of France was due to end on December 31, 1867. This monopoly is the key

the linchpin of the financial structure, of hierarchical credit, tax collector on the working class. The elected officials from the census at 200 francs had, in large numbers, asked

'the abolition of the privilege as early as 1840, and again in 1847.

The ministerial majority had won the vote, by do-perhaps more out of civility than conviction. The representatives-

Those who supported universal suffrage didn't make such a fuss about it.

In 1857, ten years before the monopoly expired, a

A sudden anxiety gripped the beneficiaries; it was necessary to extend the agreement.

the concession, and urgently. The legislative session was already well advanced. What does it matter? When the princes of safe deposit boxes are in demand, there are no reasons why they could – .

prevail.

The report from the Council of State, submitted on May 8, was immediately submitted to discussion by the offices;

Mr. Devinck, the reporting deputy, submitted it on the 26th of the same month, his approving statement of reasons. The discussion was removed in a single session, on the 28th – forty-eight hours later – the last day of the session. The count-

The ruling of the Legislative Body does not mention, on such a serious matter in this matter, which a speech, that of Mr. Kænigswarter, dis-formerly: very humble remonstrances.

On June 8, the Senate approved; on June 9, the emperor

10 CH. I. – CONCENTRATION OF MONOPOLIES.

promulgated: just one month, amidst concerns

“and multiple discussions, to grant to a compa-
the most enormous privilege imaginable.

As early as 1857, the shareholders had found, under in the form of dividends, five and a half times their initial investment funds; by 1867, the capital had been repaid seven times over.

They were not laborers, as one can see.

Here is what the law cost the fortunate privileged few in question.

The privilege was extended for thirty years; that is to say until December 31, 1897. The old capital, represented sent by 91,250 old shares of 4,000 francs, was doubled. The new shares were issued at 4,100 francs;

They were immediately quoted, like the others, at 3,350 francs.

So that the fortunate subscribers could, from overnight, realize the following profits:

91,250 shares at 3,350 francs each..... 305,687,500 francs.

Deduct 1,100 francs paid per share. ... 100.3:5,000

Profit or agio.,..... 205,312,500 fr.

205 million in capital gains as a result of a single law!

If the upper bourgeoisie had shown itself hostile to the empire

In the presence of such displays of tenderness, it would have

It was more than just ingratitude.

As for those who, less in a hurry to achieve, you-should wait until the lease expires and follow up on the case

To the very end, here are some figures that will help Appart their cube of the cake.

The dividends had been:

| 20% in 1855

27 – in 1856

33 – in 1857

POLITICAL ECONOMY OF DECEMBER 2, 1977

which do not yet deliver what one might expect, since they are in the installation phase, they have lowered profits. On the other hand, when all departments will be equipped with a counter, which the commercial traffic-
.ciale will be completely in the hands of the institution, this will be wonderful. Based on an average of 150 francs. of revenue per share per year, we are certainly lying below the likelihood, since it is at just 45 out of 100.

Now, thirty annual payments of 150 francs give 4,500 francs. per share, that is to say a little more than four times the Capital paid out; i.e., 730 million in dividends for 182.5 million in capital, or 557.5 million of net product in thirty years for less than 200 million of course. Frankly, could high finance have shouting "raca" at the empire?

In 1840, regarding the rsstone of the same privi- Mr. Grandin, who was never a seditious man, criticized the government of Louis-Philippe for doing, This extension law provides a gift of 160 million to the bank's shareholders. Frankly, they're putting in the effort. The Conservatives in the government were being prudish July. 460 million! So much fuss over a baga- such. The February revolution was right to sweep away these grumpy.

We have spoken of the lot of the chosen few of privilege; that of the The public is quite different.

The Bank's monopoly gives it the exclusive right to issue bearer notes; it's a real de- the delegation of a right of the sovereign community, that of minting money. Viewed in this way, the concession is not something other than a public service detached from the administration, as one could make tobaccos, powders and of the postal service, just as we did with the railways. The Science says that, in this case, the privilege , in order to be legitimate- time, must do better and cheaper than free competition. But then where would we find the elements half a billion in shareholder payouts, me- Happy with yesterday, satisfied with tomorrow?

78 CH, IL. – MONOPOLY CONCENTRATION

The law of June 9, 1857, following the logic of its inspiration-at 6 percent of the commercial interest rate. The price of The discount knows no bounds; it has already been at 10 out of 100, it can go up to 15, 20, 30, depending on the suitability of the administrators and at the deepest level of mis-taken from the collective interest.

The requirement of three signatures has been maintained.

The Bank still has the highly regarded ability to reduce the duration of the deadlines. When all the co-exchanges gistes, based on established practices, accepted paper at three months, they can suddenly find themselves, without warning prior weaving, overnight, in the face of a

A coup d'état that declares treaties unacceptable at higher levels sixty days.

"At least – a few timid opponents had asked – sants – let us oblige the Bank, since it has a privilege, to The government will create a branch for each department. adopted the idea in principle, but without giving it any weight no binding force.

Ten years after the promulgation of this law, he said

æ

POLITICAL ECONOMY OF DECEMBER 2, 19

Article 10, that is to say, from June 9, 1867, the go – the government will be able to require the Bank of France that it establish a branch in the departments where it does not have one would not exist.

Will be able to demand: always arbitrariness and whims instead of the law. So what happens? The pro – Bank dams the counters where she sniffs out clean products at to realize. She has three in the Nord department: at Lille, Dunkirk and Valenciennes; two in the Seine-Inférieure: in Rouen and Le Havre; only one in about fifty other departments, and not from the all in countries considered poor.

So that the regions most in need of a traffic agency to develop commercially
* are abandoned by the Bank and forbidden from

Some members of parliament had, it seems, still proposed to associate to involve the State in sharing such a bountiful pie. But the authorities responded that such interference was immoral, spoliatrice. 11 gives, he concedes, for honor and the glory of conceding and giving; we must not assume on his part an ulterior motive of profit in his granting of privileges. Monopoly concessionaires They are his friends, no doubt. But they intervene in all this as ordinary citizens, and not with a public nature.

And with that, naive believers in a repairing government-Eur, go and ask the heads of state again to you to pull from the claws of wear.

80, CH. 1. – CONCENTRATION OF MONOPOLIES

The Discount Office. – We have very little to say about this institution. Founded in 1848 as an experiment-they were against the crisis, for only three years, she was protected, on April 49, 1850, for six years to run from March 18, 1852. The creation of the Trading Post involved... something of the cooperative and mutualist principle. Thus, the initial funds were raised, one-third by the State. One-third from the City of Paris, one-third from the public. deductions of a certain percentage were made on the borders reaux presented for discounting in order to complete the capital social. The initiative finally came from the shopkeepers who created saying so themselves, in the absence of bankers, almost all In suspension of payments. All that was needed was to develop-In principle, by removing the Bank's privilege, to make the Comptoir the instrument of a revolution – in credit.

But routine took over: the inter-bankers came into the matter, and from then on the administration showed more concern with making dividends to the actionnaires than the circulation at cost price to escompteurs. Thus corrupted, the Trading Post no longer had 'reason for being a' once the crisis was over; everyone returned to his banker, always more amenable than an institution at Statutes and regulations. The micux was to liquidate at the expiration of the nine years. But the manipulators of af-The people sensed money to be made. The duration was pro-

Discount counter, relegating the discount to ten-seventh plan, launched into the fantasies of what one he calls the high bank, and what Proudhon called the high underworld.

Shareholders have already recovered in dividends a one and a half times their capital. As for the public, confident in the Comptoir's reputation for republican integrity, he has accepted, on his recommendation, the all-too-memorable Mexican and Tunisian loans, as well as other va-theirs, which we won't talk about anymore, because we'll have too many of them spoken.

.

VI

The Crédit Foncier. – Of all the creations born of an honest, utilitarian, almost philanthropic inspiration prick, there are none that have succeeded, under the influence bankers, to a more complete mystification than the Mortgage lending. Who doesn't remember their origins? The Crédit foncier was supposed to revolutionize agriculture, to hunt the mortgage lender, spreading money in abundance in the countryside, credit the clearing, the re-afforestation, landscaping, increasing production tenfold agricultural, and thus achieve for the people the famous pro-The problem of living cheaply and of the chicken in the pot.

Journalists, ministers, state councillors, . The deputies and senators only spoke about the project with tenderness, unction, and enthusiasm; they were making of the eclogue and the bucolic. We were sure that all the political nuances would applaud and contribute to the state-the collapse of the Agricultural Bank. Indeed, it was worse than to the kiss of Lamourette. °

5.

82 CH. 11. – MONOPOLAGE CONCENTRATION

The State granted a subsidy of 40 million as completely free; it was modified for the exclusive benefit of the institution, the law on mortgages, the purging and the transcriptions; stamp and registration fees were lowered

A more expeditious cut against bad debtors. The Crédit foncier was finally treated as Benjamin of finance.

Three companies had originally been created in Paris, in Marseille, in Nevers. The competition frightened Benjamin; he was granted a monopoly; the uniform rate of the annuity was a nuisance; it was made movable. In short, the statutes were revised at least twenty times; We even closed our eyes when it suited Benjamin to make snags in it.

The capital, set at 60 million, was issued in series; but on the 500 franc shares, he was only called upon half; the remaining 250 francs entrusted to the probity and conscience of the subscribers to be paid only when needed.

Where does agricultural regeneration stand now? The bankers' blatant derision and supreme impudence. Crédit Foncier does not believe in the mortgage of labor; His statutes forbid it. The owner can borrow—land on his fields, his houses, up to the amount of half their value, and to engage, with the sum, in commercial, banking or stock market operations, without that a penny of it returns to the land; while the farmer a farmer, who needs fertilizers, soil amendments, etc.

POLITICAL ECONOMY OF DECEMBER 1983

The workforce cannot find a single cent of credit. The land bank can do nothing for him. So the administrators—trapeze artists, leaving the bucolic ones behind, have they embarked on body lost in speculation, without however rendering to the State the 19 million that had been entrusted to them for Something else entirely.

Crédit Foncier sponsors and provides the funding for rolling out to the capital's home manufacturers; the three-fifths of its operations take place in Paris and in the Seine department; it serves as a pawnshop for the Real estate company, to which he lent nearly 50 million lions.

He anticipates the luxury works of the cities, of the municipalities and departments, the construction of prefectures towers and monumental churches, squares, roads imperial gardens, all unproductive values. When he has negotiated the city's 465 million debt From Paris, it will have reached its peak.

He still lends capital to the Grand-Ture, to the Au-cheating on foreign railways; he gambles with the annuity Italian; he does everything, in short, except what concerns his state. He is in flagrant breach of statutes; for the ar-Article 4 requires him to maintain his share capital in the proportion of the twentieth month of the bonds issued; and that is not his situation.

However, agriculture is suffering and groaning, not only-The fear of receiving nothing, but also of having something taken from oneself the capital which, without the fatal institution, would accrue to him rights of law.

Why doesn't she create her own bank at her own expense?
Votion, this poor agriculture?

84 CH. II, — CONCENTRATION OF MONOPOLIES |

– Ah! There you have it, that's the Crédit Foncier monopoly is 99 years old, and that during all this time, he is inter-told individuals and the community to establish at-no similar institution. Not content with doing nothing, Privilege still places an embargo on people's knowledge and goodwill.

–At least there is some compensation for these mis-accounts? |

– No doubt, otherwise it would be enough to despair of the civilization. The Land Tax, which was supposed to regulate the rate of the in-interest and maintain the provision of capital within the circle with honest moderation, offers lots of 10,000, 50,000 and 100,000 francs. He sometimes pays up to 20 of the 400 to its shareholders. The 250 French from the pre-The first issue recovered one and a half times its initial investment. in sixteen years; those of the second issue will be rem-Stocks were listed in eight fiscal years. Finally, the shareholders have chance, according to previous examples, of finding in four-twenty-nine years, nine or ten times their original investment.

In order to safely indulge in fantasies, the Crédit Foncier has created subsidiaries through the intermediary in which he carries out prohibited operations within his own statutes: these annexes are Crédit Agricole, Comptoir of agriculture, the Sub-Office for Entrepreneurs, Supply.

This last Company, which had been languishing, obtained the monopoly of the La Villette slaughterhouses. The butchers of they had to go every morning to get their meat at 8 kilos meters. Consumers pay for the trip with the interest; there will be dividends for shareholders and large salaries for the directors. Always the same system: sacrifice, commit, count on the future in order to create immediate satisfaction.

POLITICAL ECONOMY OF DECEMBER 1985

In truth, only the government can achieve this. with so much happiness his philanthropic ideas.

j

VIT

Personal property credit. – Yet another spoiled child of the Em- worse. Centralized political power needed a counterpart. In finance, an institution capable of driving up and the decline, to force the sponsorship into business, what whether they were serious or ambiguous, to raise the public funds and paving the way for borrowing. Since the invasion and the explosion of speculation had supplanted work and business in the barometer of national prosperity required a regulator, or, for To put it more precisely, an elevator to the Stock Exchange. Such was the mission of Crédit Mobilier, "the largest gambling house of Europe," according to Mr. Berryer and the lawyers general- r'aux. |

The disasters caused by the institution are among those that become historic. We have already said, in the painting entitled Raid of Saint-Simonianism (p. 57), how, based solely on the Company's shares, there _ had 282 million lost by someone and 282 million won by others. This is just a small glimpse of the disaster. Crédit Mobilier delivered the flower to the public shareholders

\

Examples include:

Spanish Furniture,

Italian Furniture,

The Dutch General Company,

The Ottoman Bank,

The railways of the Midi,

The merger of the Eastern Railways,

That of the western paths,

Austrian Railways,

The Northern Spain Railway,

The Cordoba-Seville railway,

The Western Swiss Railway,

The canalization of the Ebro,

The real estate company,

The shipping company,

The General Stores,

The obligations of Spanish roads,

Two Ottoman loans, etc.

The lot loss on the issue price of all these values exceed 580 million. The total loss on the The highest listed prices are ONE AND A THIRD BILLION.

This is how the initiators of the credit responded to their mission and demonstrated, by yet another example, how strong governments are dangerous for the fortune of citizens and the public interest.

Crédit Mobilier was not vested with any monopoly: also the banks Mirès, Amail, Millaud, the attached to financial newspapers, such as La Semaine, Industry, the Shareholders' Journal, the Journal of the railways, did they follow the same institution

\

POLITICAL ECONOMY OF DECEMBER 1987

Simonian in its evolutions of the game. Today,
All this throng of speculators is dispersed; the syndicate
Stockbrokers are, it is said, finishing cleaning up the square.
But here's something else entirely.

VIII

\

The Constitutionnel published there on September 2, 1868
Next news item:

Of all the financial newspapers, the first undisputed Financial Week is a significant event, which, as a result of the
Mr. Eugène Forcade's prolonged illness has just changed of hands.

Sold yesterday at auction in the office of Me Bouchard, notary, on the starting price of 40,000 francs, she was pushed up to 172,500 francs. That's the price she got was awarded to Mr. Janty, director of the newspaper La France; Gibiat, director of Le Constitutionnel, and Émile de Gi-Garden, owner of the newspaper La Liberté, who are going, he says on, to give it the strongest possible impetus. It is already question of the immediate formation of a committee of seven members who would undertake the preliminary examination of all new cases and who would rule on them, such as the
The discount committee of the Bank of France rules on the effects presented to him, admitting some, rejecting others so much the others!

Excellent, here's a trio of advisors.
matching. Janty, the man of the Roman railways and du Graissessac in Béziers; Gibiat, the administrator of the famous small car company; Enile de Gi-

Its paragraphs and its dramas ensure immortality.

Mirès, who is struggling to get into the council, and who deserves A every point of being there, he adds, after reproducing the newvelle: |

This is where things have come to! Imprudent decisions.
and the mistakes made, by compromising the safety of capital, should have led to a similar result. No one can now, without worry, place, in the so-industrial companies, the fruit of his work and his efforts gues, and most of the time the competition requested by the"
advertising is a lure, a way to surprise the confiance.

- The control that will be exercised by the committee that will be formed did not belong to individual initiative; but, when the trade association of stockbrokers, the authorities competent people and the bankers themselves let it go capital and random association, it was necessary that it A center is being created. It is now being established under a a form that was certainly not foreseen; however, it
It must be acknowledged that this initiative is welcome, and it can become, for capitals so often deceived, a

... effective protection.

Thus, sponsorships and anonymity would not be possible.
to be formed without the censorship of the Janty-Gibiat committee-Girardin - (decidedly, Mirès' absence is a scan-Dale)! If the capitalist public found itself face to face with
He would certainly respond to these three upright men.
their consultations by a huge burst of laughter or by the expression of a convinced sentiment. But the triumvirate will present themselves under the guise of a pseudonym. The council-
They will be called France, the Senate newspaper, the Cons-

born \

POLITICAL ECONOMY OF DECEMBER 1989

_titulionnel, semi-official sheet, devoted to the order and to the Government, Liberty, dear to admirers of The human cannonball and the Léotards of politics, the Week financial, not to mention the cronies and accomplices who, behind the slaughterers, will pick up the scraps.

The new Crédit Mobilier has a chance to make its hole; who could possibly counteract it? Simple honest people, strong in their experience and an irreprehensible? But everything was foreseen in the constitution of financial feudalism. To found newspapers, he requires millions in revenue and fifty thousand francs of surety per sheet; in short, one must have previously, the Roman roads, the small cars and mines from Saint-Bérain. The Conservatives from the hundred-sou coin, are they beginning to understand that Politics and business intertwine and merge in a close solidarity?

Yet another financial advisor of more recent origin: the National of 1869; this respected, revered, full title From chivalrous memories, the business slackers have dared to get my hands on it. Each copy costs: Stamps, 5 centimes; postage, 4 centimes; paper, 3 cents; that is to say, not counting administration fees, the drafting, the composition, the printing, the delivery to Merchants, total 142 centimes. – Selling price, 5 centimes times. Is that clear enough? The National is organized, subsidized, maintained by a union of bankers, business initiators, both good and bad, who spend, “Year in, year out, three million in advertising. They sacrifice—trust the third party to found a newspaper specifically dedicated to their sponsors, convinced that the bonuses and the extras—

... 90 CH. IT. – MONOPOLY CONCENTRATION

values nurtured in advertisements, Parisian facts, the In-depth articles will more than compensate for their sacrifice. “We will be in the opposition,” the program, because it is important to be in the opposition for to be widely read. – We would become ministerial of evening to morning if public favor returned to Mr. Rouher. What constitutes the power of the state?

This is a time for profanation, and the world belongs more than ever to the brazen. After polluting the Armand Carrel's title, here comes the despicable croupier taints that of Proudhon; a People (of 1869) makes counterpart to a National of the same manufacture. Both

. newspapers which represented to the highest degree the honor-civic and civil purity, that the nation, friends and enemies, collected and classified in its annals as a patriotic historical monk, here they are exhumed by the jackals of The Stock Exchange and the backroom deals, prostitutes to the machinations to the ignorant, the weak-minded, instruction and the recomiort will now cover the initial financial investment, at which allowed so many fortunes to be taken from them, "thrown away" and lost in the abyss of culpable speculation," in the words of Mr. Ducreux, the Advocate General:

Thus, the tax laws concerning stamp duty and security deposits they function for no other purpose than to create on the work, Science and conscience, a customs duty for the benefit of the parasitic speculation, gambling and speculation. Sad mo- In reality, what sad politics! Silence for the poor! There will be... Good times ahead for business swindlers.

And

POLITICAL ECONOMY OF DECEMBER 1994:

#

IX

The cars of Paris. – Since we have, at Mr. Gibiat's remarks, recalling this case, let's give him place here: it enters, albeit in a very small way, into the series of feudal institutions whose influence and results. _

Car rental and chauffeur services in Paris
It was, before 1855, a prosperous industry, fragmented into- among a crowd of entrepreneurs, some of whom were both owners and coachmen. Saviors of the pro- Priesthood, family and religion, with Mr. Gibiat at the forefront, flanked by Mr. Calvet-Rogniat, they persuaded one day to our Parisian prefects that it would be much better to amal- gamer in a vast company all these little in- taken, and to push back into wage labor the pot-bellied ones who they only had one or two vehicles in their possession.

We will have told you at length, in our previous publication, Speculation before the courts, this burlesque escapade, which came to unravel before the correctional police. We will simply report on it. peel back the main features.

The capital, set at 40 million, shares of 100 francs, priced the cabs at 22,000 francs each. Speculation, of the time, pushed the shares up to 220 francs, which put the cuckoo clock at 44,000 francs; and even, at most bolstered by the increase, the Company still only

92 CH. II. – MONOPOLIES CONCENTRATION

848 cars, the price of each one amounting to 103,000 francs.

Mr. Prefect of Police, in order to help flee: obli- was selling the old lessors to the Company when They were considering retiring from business.

According to the Imperial Advocate, the founders won at least 40 million in these tr'potages. As for the pu- public, it needs to be categorized. We need to be able to say What exactly was his lot?

4° The public shareholders were completely ruined;

29 The travelling public suffers a worsening of 33 percent in the hourly and fare price.

80 The public taxpayer will pay the Company, ex- owned by its monopoly in the name of economic morality mique, forty-seven annual payments of 360,000 francs each- cune, as compensation.

The system, as we can see, holds together and continues within the smaller things as well as larger ones; the The distribution method is the same everywhere: the economy and The policies are in complete agreement.

X

Parisian Gas Company. – Another fog- small compared to other cases; it none She also offers her teaching services.

The current company, formed in 1855, consists of of six old companies: 1° Margueritte, 2 Brun- ton, Pilté, 3° Dubochet, 4° Lacarrière, 5° Payn, 6° Gos-

the companies taken over in one were entrusted to Messrs. Emile and Isaac Péreire, who were not in any combination previous.

Why this privilege, why a merger? It's all—days the same policy, concentrating, amalgamating, cent—adapting work to the image of the administration, and pushing—France is following in the footsteps of some pashalick Egyptian. The debut of the new combination were not happy; there was, in particular, March 43, 1857, a general assembly where the most violent accusations Actions were taken against the administrators and merger—neurs. It felt like we were in a criminal court, or something like that. less so to the correctional police. The session had to be adjourned. and save the business without the shareholders' cooperation. Thanks to opera in the absence of justice, and she did wonders.

As early as 1862, the 500-franc shares were rising to 4,500 francs: the paid-in capital of 84 million had tripled, if not in value, at least in terms of market price, and could be sold at a price of 252 million, i.e. with 468 million in benefits fice. As for those who want to remain loyal to the investment, The annuities, increased to 100 francs and above, have a chance to reimburse them, within the fifty years that it will last the privilege, eight to ten times the original stake. Also pen—are we only the rigorists and puritans of the assembly of March 13, 1857, they swept the irregularities under the rug. and the foundation's account transfers. When they would then have suffered losses amounting to several million. Isn't the right audience—clients and consumers—there for Repair everything?

It is a curious contract, the one that binds the city of

94 CH. IE. — CONCENTRATION OF MONOPOLIES

Paris to the Gas Company. The price is set at 30 cents. _times per cubic meter for individuals, 45 cents only for the municipality. The monopoly is Fifty years. During that time, no discoveries. no invention can be applied in Paris without of the Seine. Improvements, like those which we saw the sample in the Place de l'Hôtel-de-Ville at beginning of 1868, are subject, not to the apprehension of public opinion regarding price and quality, but to that of the Prefect. So that one can say, without hesitation—deserved, that any innovation will be welcomed without failing if it is likely to increase the net product, which already exceeds 20 out of 100. This is how they will manage consumer services, delivered under a monopoly to Messrs. Pélissier, paid the welcome of the new regime.

We could include in our review the docks, ports, general stores, imperial streets, railways, mines, ocean liners and all business establishments, large, medium and small ones that were founded or modified under the new reign. We will not mention any more. only two.

XI

The railways. — It's always the railways of iron that we need to come back when we want to show the application largely from the feudal system.

The empire, in establishing itself, found the railways
#

POLITICAL ECONOMY OF FRANCE DECEMBER 95

French forces fragmented among about forty companies; the new concessions, if one had followed the old system—interior, the only one conforming to economic law, would have increased the number of companies to sixty or eighty. The spirit of the new regime was absolutely repugnant to the division. So they began by concentrating the network in the hands of six major industrial commands. In At the same time, the leases were extended uniformly to 99 years; it was an increase from 43 to 80 years on previous contracts.

Speculation spiraled out of control. The shares of 800 francs rose to 1,000, 1,800 and 2,000 francs. In a few years, speculation produced two nobodies of bonuses on railway shares only, discount—so many conditions that should not make their quieter than ever; because the buyers in the upper classes courses were specifically placed in the category of small savings, and the decline of the product kilometertric as net product did not leave to the port-5 out of 100 on purchase prices. That's when the finance, in agreement with the government, conceived the famous treaties of 1859, to guarantee a minimum dividend.

A guarantee of a net product, whatever the figure, is undoubtedly the most monstrous design
The most unbelievable thing imaginable, since it is the suppression-sion of the principle of responsibility in matters of inter-:
taken. For capitalists, there were two categories of investments: 4° fixed-income securities, such as annuities, municipal loans, bonds

96 HP. I. – CONCENTRATION OF MONOPOLIES

railways, those of the Crédit Foncier, the mortgage loan
1. Library; 2. Securities with random income, shares.
Everyone is free to buy according to their preferences, their hard-dies or its prudence. As long as the State guarantees-knows that railway shares require a minimum return
In fact, he would have been better off buying them back right away concessions. and to give to the holders of the securities of the consolidated annuity.

But it was less about carrying out a state operation than to revive the rise. Many a company, comproput in place by certain usurious business markets and construction, had no other salvation than the guarantee of the budget. It was essential to save the financial sector.

However, presenting the case to the Legislative Body in her undressing would not have failed to raise protests, even among the most docile representatives of the majority. Therefore, the coalition made efforts to imaginesuperhuman nations trying to sugarcoat the pill.

We need to correct the ideas that have spread.
regarding the agreements reached for the company of Orléans, wrote La Presse on July 12. It is not a question of as some newspapers assume, of the guarantee of a minimum dividend. The State authorizes the company to collect, from 1864 onwards, 25,000 francs per kilometer across all its old and new lines, for to distribute the net proceeds to the shareholders. The surplus bonding, on which the government-guaranteed 4% interest, plus 65 cents to the a-mortar in the event that the receipts are insufficient health.

POLITICAL ECONOMY OF DECEMBER 2, 1997

Let's examine the substance of this casuistry:

The Company deducts 25,000 francs from its gross product.
of income per kilometer; on the surplus, she pays her taxes.
debts; if resources are insufficient, the perfect state
The difference: – official version.

Let's change the order of the details:

The Company pays its debts from its gross revenue;
if the remaining amount does not yield 25,000 francs per kilometer to the shareholders, the State perfects the difference: – translatedliteral translation in the vernacular.

Did we arrive at the same result? Was it good?
Is it worthwhile to correct widespread ideas? The word garan-
The dividend tie seemed far too cynical; that's why-
We were engaging in this quibbling exercise.

Moreover, financiers did not have these pu- for long.
their. The same newspaper, on August 8th, admitted
To put it bluntly:

Shareholders no longer have to fear seeing their re-which have diminished during the duration of the works and the
The first years of operation of the new lines.
combination adopted for the separation of concessions
in old and new network establishes a minimum of dividende below which shareholder profits will not be able to get off.

You have to see these things to believe them. Being Given any gross product, the Company for-first focuses on building up his net income. With
If there is any excess, the creditors are paid; if there is none
No problem, we'll refer them to the Minister of Finance.

This is certainly an accounting system that would lead right in the assize court the first person who comes along, merchant, manufacturer-cant, entrepreneur or manager who would apply it to his matters. The professor was definitely right: there is

Two morals, the small and the great. – The tithes of before 89 have never been provided with such guarantees.

Mergers, extensions, minimum dividends, etc.
_ billions in bonuses to be stirred up: this is still just one a brief glimpse of the mess.

According to the financial documents published by the mid-
Ministry of Public Works in 1868, the capital invested in French roads, before the concessions voted on The last legislature was composed as follows:

AND DD CLP RE Ras 1,450,469,190 fr.

By Companies (stocks and bonds). 7,646,940,724

By various... esse sosooovee ._ 85,107,424
Total sales 9,183,517,268 fr.

The miscellaneous section refers to municipalities, the industrial groups, departments, that is to say in-core taxes, subsidies provided by the community;
It is therefore appropriate to combine them with state funds:
which brings the sacrifices of the nation.

Furthermore, the State guarantees at 4.65 francs: 400 the bonds-companies' contributions for a capital sum of 3 billion 859 million, representing annual revenue of 1484,188,250 francs. Whoever answers pays. Since the
The warranty works, the budget provides each year a thirty million on each fiscal year to help your Companies struggling to improve their dividends.
Serious calculators believe that before 1880, the subsidies

+

_tions granted as a guarantee of net income will amount to each year to over 100 million.
Let's recap taxpayer participation.

Subsidies in pure donation..... 1,536,576,5144 fr.
Guaranteed capital..... 3,859,000,000
Total..... 5,395,576,544 francs.

The electoral railways voted on in 1868 carry already the taxpayers' share, in donations and guarantees, to $1.5 billion, without prejudice to the future.

So, who owns the railways?

To the Companies, which have only provided shares one and a half billion (1,519,276,399 francs, capital gains) including, a quarter of the taxpayers' quota, already repaid and beyond by dividends).

Thus, it is no longer a secret: the Public Treasury appears— It is concerned about the aftermath. It lavishes subsidies on Credit land, Crédit Agricole, railways, etc. shipping companies; it guarantees dividends to Some, interest to others. He has just repaid the Mexican lottery; he bought back the Small Cars. The _ scammers themselves bring their victims before the representatives of the government and the budget.— These Won't the State, the unfortunate people we have robbed, do anything about it? Nothing for them! The State, on the sole chapter concerning roads. de.fer, assures shareholders of five to fifteen times the reimbursement of their original investment; that is to say that when the buyout becomes necessary, a possibility Long planned, he will pay between five and fifteen which will have sunk one. |

100 ch. II. — CONCENTRATION OF MONOPOLISES

XII

Hausmann's Paris. — Never the interference of Politics in business has never been more complete, more constant, more disastrous than since 1852. Besides the renewal, extension, multiplication and concentration of monopolies, the government still has given to militarism and public spending a dis-

The labor shortage, once again fatal to the industry, which finds itself constantly tossed between overwork and unemployment.

Railway constructions were imprinted with a feverish impulse, out of proportion with savings and the country's labor resources. At least can we find solace in saying that the railways are a capital of the species qualified as reproductive; Sooner or later France will find, in their exploitation, compensation – minimal compensation, no doubt – to his anticipated sacrifices.

The situation is different with palaces, principal promenades the barracks of Boulogne and Vincennes, the barracks, the churches, monumental prefectures, and a host of expenses rightly labeled as unproductive by the School.

Let's pause for a moment to consider the masterpiece of the genre:

Hausmannization of the capital.

= The upheavals that Paris has been experiencing since eighteen years is an unprecedented event in history; this is nothing less than the mass expropriation of a city, harbinger of its downfall.

POLITICAL ECONOMY OF DECEMBER 404

Those who imagine the importance of the capital is due to the royalty and the stay of the court are in a complete mistake. The situation in Paris, on the most major river of northern France, between the estuaries falls of its three largest tributaries, the Yonne, the Marne and the Oise, gives this city a geographical position of the first order, which designated her in advance as the metropolis of a country that is more continental than maritime.

Under the federal system, there would have been other capitals cities of unequal importance, such as Tours, Lyon, Strasbourg, Toulouse, Marseille, Bordeaux, Le Havre. Centralization predestined Paris to dominate them all. But she nonetheless adopted, and did not create, a point determined by the very nature of the region.

It's wonderful to see how, under the impetus of this geographical predestination, the agglomeration parisienne was formed, despite the administration of all eras and all regimes.

The city, in fact, is built against the grain of lengthy and against the grain of reason. While the cities, crossed and served by a major road navigation, they lengthen and: align themselves on both banks of the river, to the point of forming only one long tunnel, at In Paris, industry and commerce are located in the Streets perpendicular to the river. Why?

This is because the administration, imperial or royal, cherishing at his leisure above all, began by seizing from the valley. She took:

...On the right bank, the handling of goods at the Billy quay, the the aristocratic promenade of the Champs-Élysées, the garden 6.

402 CH. 11. – CONCENTRATION OF MONOPOLIES

Din and the Tuileries Palace, the Louvre, the Hôtel de Ville, Arsenal; |

On the left bank, the Champ-de-Mars, the Garde-

Crown furniture, the Military Stores, the Matobacco factory, Les Invalides, the Legislative Body, the Legion of Honour, the Council of State, barracks, The Institute, the Mint, the Hôtel-Dieu, the Botanical Garden, leaving only the wine warehouse to the trade.

Wherever commerce can seize a piece of On the quayside, it's wonderful to see him at work: proof of this that he did from Bercy, from Ivry station and from that of Grenelle.

As soon as the Oureq basin and the Saint-Martin canal Excavated, work and trade, driven from the river, rush to their shores and improvise a city there production and labor next to the luxury city and fantasy. The port of La Villette becomes the third-sixth largest port in France in terms of tonnage, coming immediately-temment after Le Havre and Marseille.

It is impossible not to see in these phenomena the character of a spontaneous national creation.

But while trade continues on its course, administration tration takes another. Paris, according to the aims of Mr. Prefect of the Seine, the metropolis must no longer be from industry, factory waste, the blouse of work, blackened by contact with materials and tools, clash with the embroidery, the cords, the twists, the trinkets, the baubles of the official world.

Paris should no longer be anything more than the residence of the civil servants. naires, rentiers, idlers, the caravanseraï of the Europe...it was said; even less than that: the Paris Hauss-Mannized, it is the winter city of the idle who will, in the summer, stroll about, bored and idle

POLITICAL ECONOMY OF DECEMBER 103

the trendy beaches, the sea bathing, the waters, the woods, at the resort. |

Wherever the municipal auger makes a hole,
the workshop, the worker's house, the little
The manufacturer's building gives way to the Haussmannian barracks.
where the old apartments rented for 200 to 600 francs.
the attics, the dormers, in the new ones, to flatten-800 francs, and apartments, from 3,000 to 12,000
francs. |

But first, the inhabitants must refrain from mon-
to have a boiler, a steam generator, a force driving force, a workshop that hits and smokes.

Maubert Square was rebuilt, as was Boulevard Ma-
the herbs; the marsh is transforming like the Antin road; Mouffetard street is modeled on the street of Rivoli.

The hunt for industry, which began with the pickaxe, culminates in the annexation of the suburbs and the extension of the octroi to suburban municipalities, formerly located outside of his brand: Belleville, Ménilmontant, Grenelle, the Villette, exclusively industrial towns, are being pushed back.
by Parisian customs as incompatible with the majesty of the crown and the decorum of the court.

We can say that Paris is commercial and industrial,
Before the expropriation, it had reached its peak.
railways, in fact, have shaken the geo-
graphs and significantly reduced their importance.
Large-scale manufacturing and major industries are dependent on mines for coal or raw materials, are called upon to decentralize, to move closer to the sources of their supplies. This is how the Cavé establishments, having reached the end of their lease, have emigrated from Paris and shifted their focus to Lille, in order to have the coal and metal closer, on hand, cheaper Therefore.

But time had to take care of the need–
The capital invested in large factories is not free to withdraw at the deadlines set by a prefect of the Seine. The time required for its amortization and its reconstitution is not a matter of a decree nor of a law; it's a matter of accounting. The prohibition imposed through the works and grants of Mr. Haussmann on industry Parisian, it's the immediate destruction of a tool
In the middle of the report, perhaps a hundred million, for the replacement of which it will be necessary to spend again– calves one hundred million without creating a single cent of product more. This, along with the ruin of the individuals affected, is a ca– National hospital thrown into the sea. Politics will never have inflicts such violence on the social economy; –without pre– judgment of this army of demolition men, of pickaxes, of earthmovers, taken away from the harsh work of the fields, con– centered in national workshops of a new kind, no less worrying than those of Mr. Marie in 1848.

Under the influence of these transformations, the Paris baus– Mann's Paris no longer has anything to do with the Paris spontaneously created by the Geography, work, and history. Haussmannian Paris
As we said, it is the winter spa town of the rentier and speculation; it is the Versailles of the Bonapartes.

Every city founded on industry and commerce is

–_– a CRETE

DJ

POLITICAL ECONOMY OF © DECEMBER 405

built on rock; any settlement based on the fan–

sand. Each season sees some station decline in this way. fashionable in favor of a new one. The whim does not settle never for long.

The Versailles of the Bonapartes will become what is meant by... I came to the Versailles of Louis XIV, Louis XV and Louis XVI, after 1789. A return to constitutionalism between 1814 and 1850, a reduction in endowments major state bodies, an economic evolution which would erode the usurious profits of speculation and * Speculation, departmental subsidies eliminated—mées, finally a whim of the court or of European fashion—pagan, not counting the unknown; that's it for Paris; The hunted job will not return; the expelled industry—Sée will not return.

The property will lose 60 to 80 percent of its value; sparse inhabitants, sheltered at sea and at little cost, will install small gardens in front of their doors, on the Mr. Haussmann's monumental sidewalks.

Those who are not yet fifty will see the creation of this horoscope.

The strangest thing about this whole affair is that this violation, this rape of national Paris, have been found for accomplices of Parisian merchants, constituted by by decree, without the participation or vote of their fellow citizens, in the municipal council and in Mr.'s satellites Prefect of the Seine. That one still dares to mention him as The scarecrow is a reminder of the Paris Commune. Never discretionary and revolutionary power will not have perpetuated a more disastrous upheaval.

C2

1406 CH. 11. — CONCENTRATION OF MONOPOLIES

XIII

How many things we would have ignored in this affair of an economic state if the plutocracy had not counted dissidents, opponents, malcontents for insuff—grant session.

A financial review from the press, from March In 1867, he published the following revelations, which have never

We have so far remained silent about an operation which was said to be committed between the Crédit Mobilier and the Caisse deposits and consignments; we wanted to wait, for to take care of it, so that the fact was indisputable.

This is not the first time that the Caisse des dépôts and consignments, a public fund that centralizes the services of savings banks, mutual aid societies, life annuities and the army's endowment, intervenes in the interest of a private party. Last year, the real estate company, having borrowed from Crédit Foncier 30 million, received only 5 million in cash, and the 25 million, supplementing the loan, were given to him in bonds. Obviously, negotiating on the market such a mass of securities, and moreover the real-estate company, would have required too much time. The insurance Society therefore sought to obtain an advance on deposit obligations of Crédit Foncier.

We know that these titles are expressly mentioned among those on which the Bank of France grants loans. But, with the Bank's tendency to reduce as much as possible the number and amount of large loans, it is not surprising that in the presence of a de-

!

ns nn Om ee Re mm

POLITICAL ECONOMY OF DECEMBER 2, 1877

Given the high demand, she required a personal guarantee. from Messrs. Péreire. They refused it and turned to the Caisse des dépôts et consignations, which provides the sum necessary, and received as collateral the 25 million bonds of Crédit foncier.

Since then, the placement of the bonds has been effected through Crédit Foncier itself, the Caisse des dépôts et consignations found itself supplemented tement dégagé.

This year, it is claimed, new needs have arisen.

run to take out a loan; this loan would have amounted to 13 million, and the Caisse des dépôts et consignations would have provided this sum in annuity securities, in exchange for the- which ones she would have received:

{4° A delegation from the Compagnie générale Transatlanticks to the subsidy paid to him by the State;

2° Obligations of the said Compagnie générale Transatlantic;

3° Obligations of the real estate company.

According to the Messenger de Paris, which was the first to report This news, from the Caisse des dépôts et consignations would have lent, in fact, not money, but registrations annuity bonds, that is to say securities having a certain value tatne, against the ambiguous titles of the plat- Companies created under the patronage of Crédit Mobilier. The newspaper of Mr. Mirès adds, by way of comment:

These guarantees offer such perfect security that the The Caisse des dépôts et consignations has nothing to fear. harm from this operation.

Why the Caisse des dépôts et consignations, if the liters exchanged are so safe, didn't she invite the Cré-

108 CH. II. – CONCENTRATION OF MONOPOLIES

said furniture to offer them purely and simply to his creditors, instead of substituting a 3% annuity?

'It is true,' the press continues, 'that there is an exception complete in accordance with the law, since the latter prohibits any affect-allocation of public funds to specific companies when the Legislative Body has not yet spoken; thus the 50 million loaned to national industry to help it moving from a system of protection to one of freedom trade bills were passed by the Chambers.

But, in this instance, it seems that REASON The State did not allow companies to perish which pool the capital of so many thousands of families.

Is that clear enough? Here come the financial gamblers, after having acquired a stake in the private stock market, must, for reasons of state, draw at their discretion from the public coffers. Mr. Mirès not only finds the a natural thing; he calls for its extension to all compromised companies; and which Company that has more or less ruined its shareholders and obliged-silence?

What moral lesson can we draw from this set of facts?

The press continues. – Always the same; it's that we don't can allow to perish, without endangering public safety the numerous interests that have been allowed to cluster around the Personal property credit. The time for recriminations is over; it is It is obvious that if one could have assumed what use the Credit furniture was supposed to provide immunities and facilities that it were granted, this establishment would never have existed; but now that the damage is done, it is not necessary only think about repairing it, and we must not back down from no means, however extraordinary it may seem, if this means does not harm either fairness or the public interest.

POLITICAL ECONOMY OF © DECEMBER 409

Would to God that this necessity of professing these species of miners, the shareholders, would have been recognized by all ...time, and would have been taken as a rule of conduct! would not have rushed headlong into an inexcusable catastrophe the numerous interests that were brought together and sheltered General Railway Fund I

If the administrators of Crédit Mobilier, of the Company real estate, Crédit Foncier, etc., etc., included how much compensation was granted to the shareholders of the The General Railway Fund would be useful in the in- The public interest, and how much it would restore confidence that we have been pursuing in vain for a long time now This repair is reportedly underway.

– The government would have readily agreed, if the men approaching + AAPEREN the Emperor to him had demonstrated fairness.

The law provided for the case where the miners' fortune would have was wasted; it has always held the guardians responsible sands, up to and including the penal colony, in case of abuse of trust; she never said that the state would reimburse:

to the rescue of Crédit Mobilier, why was he refusing his Competitions at the General Railway Fund?

Mr. Mirès' shareholders were also interesting and as laborious as those of Mr. Péreire. The Mirès thesis is the legitimization of financial banditry: it is re- It's dizzying, but it makes sense, since it's so true that it's enough to propose the generalization of a false principle in order to to demonstrate the odious and the absurd.

410 CH. 11. – MONOPOLIES CONCENTRATION

XIV

How does the publisher, a subscriber for € billion, and half and guarantor for 4 billion towards the paths of iron, grantor of subsidies and privileges, endorser a portion of the losses from speculation is served "by the feudal system to which he made such rich gifts, This is something that is easy to show him; because the monopoly no longer even bothers to conceal its aims.

The report of the Compagnie du Midi, in 1858, for- He thus voiced his grievances:

The section of our route from Toulouse to Cette, which is parallel to the Canal du Midi, it had been opened on April 22nd 1857. A few days later, on May 1st, the canal reduced its rates in very high proportions. Our operator- tion was almost completely paralyzed.

The merchandise traveled by waterway, without profit for the Company, which was diverting it from its intended direction. normal by exceptional reductions. The correspondences maritime and land transport, which we aircraft established at the extreme points and the inter- points medians of our line were thus dislocated. and our revenues were depreciating day by day, even in the part not directly competed with by the channel of the South, because the efforts that were made to preserve goods transported by waterway, between Sète and Toulouse, had the effect of keeping them on the lateral canal at the Garonne or on the river between Toulouse and Bordeaux.

We have, on November 17th, that is to say seven months after the price reductions implemented by the channel, applied reduced fares on our entire Bor- line waters to Cette. This reduction, despite the commercial crisis ciale, which was raging at its most intense, has restored some transport, but did not change our revenue than in small proportions.

Upon closer examination of this presentation, one might be authorized to conclude that the undertaking was premature: one had in fact spent over 100 million ruining the in-canal industry and to create a traffic-free railway, without income: two ways to a single service when a That was enough. Was it a matter of sound economics? We We will not insist, for all imaginations are temp- due to the railway and the locomotive. Nevertheless, The competition from the canal was easy to foresee and that it had been planned: proof that the government had given 35 million in subsidies for this part of the network. But feudalism, passionate about free trade When it comes to international relations, he does not suffer No competition within. The government, – Nothing should surprise us anymore after what we have seen, – handed over the canal for forty years to the Company of the South.

"We have firm hope," the rapporteur continued, that by means of the simultaneous operation of the path of iron and the two canals between the two seas, and by means of with fairly remunerative tariffs, we will be able to establish a classification of transport which should naturally be allocated to both paths. We will see about leaving the heavy materials in the canal. and to transfer to the railway the goods which, By their very nature, they require more speed and care. that this route can more easily provide.

This is how we believe we can be sure of being able to reconcile your interests with those of commerce and the river transport.

A12 CH. II. – CONCENTRATION OF MUNOPOLES

The struggle with the Canal du Midi will end, and the fares of the waterway, like those of the railway, will be immediately noted.

A subsidy of 35 million from the country on a "in section;

Guarantee of 4 fr. 65 cp 100 on loans;

Dividend guarantee;

Increase in tariffs due to the sequestration of the canal:

This is what financial feudalism calls concluding the interests of trade with his own.

Thus, when in 1867, the general council of Moselle offered the State an advance of 41 million to channel Following the river, the railway committee opposed it. because river transport would lower revenues and fares on the Eastern lines. [lost his case in 1867; But in 1858, his opinion would have prevailed; the Moselle would have been abandoned for forty years, like the canal of Neen, in order to kill all competition.

The section from Le Mans to Angers, handed over to the public in 1863, shortened the route of Paris by 34 kilometers in Angers, Nantes and Saint-Nazaire, on the route by Orléans and Tours. Why did the State subsidize This construction? Apparently, the public... needed it, and that she was offering a discount on prices.

But the following year, the administration of the Compagnie The Orléans engineering firm reassured its shareholders by declaring that, by a treaty made with the Western Company, It had been arranged that the two routes would not be made No competition.

. POLITICAL ECONOMY OF © DECEMBER 413

Thus, it is not enough for the country to have paid in cash and guaranteed by billions; it is still necessary that the Commerce is being overpriced. It's taking money from taxpayers. the costs of constructing a shortened line; then, by the coalition of operators, their benefit of shortening.

Let us also mention the report of the Compagnie de Lyon in 1857, on the same subject:

a system which consisted of creating a third major line heading towards the Mediterranean and the southern lines, and interposed between those of Paris to Marseille and Paris to Bordeaux. This line, formed by the Bourbonnais, the Grand-Central, was to extend to Alais and connect to the west with the Midi network. The promoters of this combination thus openly displayed the flag of Competition!

Fortunately, the new combination was abundant in difficulties. 11 It was necessary, in order to achieve it, to retrace the steps from the Bourbonnais region to the Companies of Orléans and Lyon, who were not willing to give up without resistance (the faith of contracts!) a line of defense that was not being attempted to remove them only in order to make them an instrument of concurrence. It was necessary to return to thought, the only practical one, of a dismemberment and division of Grand-Central.

The interposed lines were more or less constructed. as the competitors had proposed. The State, the taxpayers lavished subsidies and grants there capital gains. But the network, handed over to the old Companies, is operated according to the tariff principle maxima, instead of offering, through competition, 'the better conditions for travellers and merchants dises. All under the Fons and with the privilege of the gouvernement.

414 CH. 11. – CONCENTRATION OF MONOPOLIES

And when you think that there are still some like that for over eighty years!

XV

Thanks to this system of amalgamation, mergers, and concentration, destruction of competition, all the The country's transport services are subject to capital taxation. six companies, which add to the legal monopoly the coak-prohibited activity. The specifications imposed by the State It is true that it sets a maximum price which it prohibits from exceeding the limit. But this rate is roughly the same as for towing. ordinary in the time of the Marlboroughs, so that if the "Railways applied it, the carters would have benefited to recover, and the river transport sector, where it is not

It is therefore necessary to go below. Now, their re-

Inductions, the six companies are absolute masters,
Each on its own network. They aggravate, they worsen.
according to their whims or interests; the lines are broken down into sections; prices fall when We walk alongside the river; they get up when we arrive at plains, hillsides or mountains: so that the
The poorest countries pay the highest taxes.

We urge the reader to study with us the following comparative statements of transport prices of a tonne of wheat (1,000 kg) on our different lines.

ss - te en © moe ue

mn ne CR ne -

POLITICAL ECONOMY OF DECEMBER 115

To make it easier for him to understand the matter, we...
We will present the subject in several forms. Never the
No economic disaster has ever received such prominence.

The standard approved fixed rate is 10 cents per tonnage and kilometer the transport of cereals on all the railways; that is to say, the companies do not may exceed this maximum of 10 cents; but if .

They applied it, they would not transport any wheat, except in regions where no other exists means of transport: it is indeed 7 to 8 cents of More than just navigation. Also, the prices actually charged.
are they regulated by special tariffs that we will
to expose the intelligent and democratic economy.
Let's first say a word about the special temporary fares.
raires. In lean years, he played in front of the public, heavily advertised, a little comedy whose inner workings it is time to reveal.

The government, full of concern for the classes suffering, addresses the railway companies of iron; he begs them, he implores them, to consent to a sacrifice temporary by lowering, during the period of high prices, cereals, legally fixed at 10 cents.

The administrators prick up their ears, frowning.
They roll their eyes: the government's demand,
imbued with an essentially philanthropic character,
It certainly deserves consideration. However, the State will have to acknowledge beforehand that he does not have the right to intervene to come into play in pricing, as soon as it involves lower taxes –
less than those stipulated in the specifications; it will proclaim that the management is sovereign; that if

416 CH. 11. – CONCENTRATION OF MONOPOLIES

They agree to a temporary tax relief, that is because – pure devotion to the interests of the people.

On that note, the unofficial newspapers, sycophants of the . power, and the opposition newspapers, subservient to the companies, vying with each other in enthusiasm and arguing about the question of who the public owes the most recognition to birth, railway administrations or of the government.

Stripped of its staging, the dialogue re-sum up in two very simple points.

THE MINISTER OF PUBLIC WORKS. – We must lower transport fares for six months wheat.

THE ADMINISTRATORS. – At your leisure, Excellence; we will even transport them for free, if that suits you That's fine. As soon as you guarantee us 184 million of annual revenue, which we will lose in traffic,
We will address this through taxation.

MORAL. – There is no way out of a problem badly solved.
committed; as soon as viability becomes a source of income,
It's the subjugation of the country to the concessionaires. Instead
From a tax relief, we arrive at a transfer of accounts:
charged the maximum rate, Jacques Bonhomme paid his transport costs are based on consumption; tax-free at the PNR
He will pay for them from his contributions.

The temporary rate rarely lasts more than four or six months; it ceases to function with the cause that caused it gives rise, for example, to famine, in the case that we we just mentioned, an epizootic, an eIR flood other circumstances.

The special ordinary tariff, an exception to the general tariff

POLITICAL ECONOMY OF DECEMBER 117

and cheaper. Unlike him, it operates continuously. varies from company to company, and even from section to section to section, on the same network. Examples:

On the Lyon line, 1st category, from Paris to Lyon, branches from Auxerre, Besançon and the Jura, the The transport cost of one tonne of wheat is 6 cents. when the distance does not exceed 50 kilometers, and 4 cent-times beyond 50 kilometers. – 2nd category, from Lyon in Marseille, branches to Nîmes and Montpellier, 7 cents up to 50 kilometers, 5 cents beyond that. – 3rd category, Dupiute lines, 5 centimes, what whatever the distance.

Why these differences? Could it be because of the journey above Paris is rivaled by the Seine, and that the company's main business is based on wines rather than On the wheat? If that was the motive, it would give us— would be the key to the exorbitant taxes levied on the West, and which amount to the following figures:

9 centimes up to 100 kilometers; 8 centimes from 100 200 to 300; 6 centimes from 200 to 300; 5 centimes from 300 to 500. and to the nearest cent beyond 500.

The Chartres line has neither canals nor rivers in its path. currence; a major element of its traffic is the ce— Beauce reales and flours.

On most roads in the South of France, the fare is uniform— a reduction of 8 cents per tonne and kilometre.

On the Orléans line, the tax is 8 cents up to 100 kilometers, from 6 cents for 100 to 250 kilometers, from 5 cents up to 400 kilometers, and 4 cents beyond that.

| 7.

beyond 400 kilometers. Where the railway is con-curved by the Loire, the price is uniformly 2 centimes, regardless of distance, without prejudice to Special discounts, from station to station.

In the East, 8 cents up to 200 kilometers, 7 cents thereafter.
up to 300, 6 centimes up to 500, and at centimes per-over 500.

Prices are uniform beyond 500 kilometers; but, at Part of the Paris-Lyon-Mediterranean company, the journeys of this distance are rare; so that the mint-mum finds little or no application.

After these special prices come new specspecializations: these are the station fares at the station. Thus, by way of exception to the aforementioned conditions,
The Eastern Railway is reducing its prices as follows for Grain destined for Paris and coming from:

From Lagny'..... To 27 kilom. 2 fr. 60
From Meaux....., .. 43 - 2 70
From Nangis,..... know 60 4 4.
From Coulommiers..... T1 - 4 95
From Provins... Sesame 94 - 5 70

And so on, gradually, for forty or fifty named stations. The markets we have just mentioned they all belong to the Seine-et-Marne department, and are served by the Eastern lines; those of Melun (44 kil.), Fontainebleau (59 kil.), Moret (66 kil.), Ne-Mours (86 km), belong to the same department and are served by the Lyon line. If we were to limit ourselves to According to the initial figures, the constituents of a single prefect would thus pay 480 and 200 where others would not taxed at only 100. This could result in electoral conflicts

—.....

POLITICAL ECONOMY OF © DECEMBER 119

toraux on election day. Is that the reason that
To establish specific conditions for certain stations?

plausible reasons where the facts are merely a matter of empiricism, foolishness, or negligence. He pre-there are other considerations as well, of a completely different order different: a large miller, who happened to be in the same time the predominant administrator of a railway, would certainly not fail to exempt wheat and farines; similarly, a coal mine owner exempted discounts on coal transport; for such is the wisdom that guides the world, and that the Garnier family, The Horns, the Baudrillarts, the Batbies admire as much as the the finest product of our economic freedoms.

The Northern Railway only knows the fares of station by station, without generalities; he taxes the wheat coming on Paris, as follows:

From Senlis. so.os.. s..... B2 kilometer. 2fr. 10

From Villers-Cotterets.,...9, 76 – 5 50
From Chauny of the sndeians 422 – 7 80

From Saint-Quentin.....,..... 152 – _9 30

We must retrace our steps, and, neglecting the tariffs of Station by station, let's see how things are going. within a 300-kilometer radius around Paris, taken for example.

D:

PRICE OF TRANSPORT OF 1,000 KIL. OF WHEAT (COMING TO PARIS).

On the Lyon.

From 4 to 5 kilometers.....s.,..... 6 cents per kilometer.
Beyond 50 ee 0... 4 =

120 CH. II. — CONCENTRATION OF MONOPOLIES

On the Orléans.

From 1 to 100 kilometers.....,....., 8 cents per kilometer.
 From 101 to 250 -- soso cece ... 6 -
 From 951 to 400 _-. 0... 5 _- Beyond 400 _— 2000000... 4 nr

To the East.

From 1 to 200 kilometers.... 8 cents per kilometer.

8

From 201 to 300 EPS se... es 7

From 301 to 500 - 00.0 6 cn

Beyond 500, see you 4

On the West.

From 4 to 100 kilometers.....,..... 9 cents per kilometer.

From 101 to 200 -, Mussce D -

From 201 to 300 - 6 _-

From 301 to 500 - say D -

Beyond 500 -6.. 4 men

The table can naturally be deduced from this data.

next: | |

PRICE FOR TRANSPORTING 1,000 KIL. OF WHEAT (COMING TO PARIS)

Via Lyon, via Orléans, via the East, via the West

d0 kilom, Sfr." Afr."n . Afr." Afr. 50

100

- 4 8 » 8 » 9 »

150 - 6 » 9 » 492 °° » 12 »

200 - 8 » 142 » 16 > 16)

250 - 10 » 45 » 47 50 45 »

300 - » 45 » 91: 148 » |

vinciales. Is it necessary to demonstrate that the tariffcarailway companies restored them in the form of Toll? Nothing could be more natural than transforming the tollprevious blue in this one, taking as the price of

POLITICAL ECONOMY OF DECEMBER 191

returns, meaning zero tolls, the lowest rates Expensive, those from Paris-Lyon.

CUSTOMS DUTIES *

Erected on the wheat, according to which gates they enter Paris:

from Lyon, from Orléans, from the East, from the West

50 kilometers 0 Afr. p Afr. » - Afr. 50

100 - 0 4 » 4 » 5 »

150 - 0 8 » 6 » 6 »

200 - 0 4 v 8 » 8 »

250 - 0 5 | 7 50 5 »

300 - 0 3 » 9 » 6 »

What we say about wheat happens ON ALL FOODSTUFFS.

It seems that before establishing free trade with abroad, it would have been necessary to start by ensuring it at the in-exterior; or better yet, the reader will understand from the figures
As mentioned above, there is a difference that exists between EcaL-exchange, compensatory, mutualist, egalitarian, and the LS empirical, speculator and prevaricator,

The only conclusion to be drawn from this paragraph is that life is not sustainable for a country in such a state of crisis.
reilles conditions; there are no treaties or contracts that hold:
Ninety-nine years of such a regime! But the
The French nation would be killed before it is thirty years old if it does not broke this web of inequality and iniquity that encircles him and the suffocates.

/

The best things turn to rot in hands of banking feudalism.

The specifications attached to each concession he said in the most imperative manner:

Tax collection will be based on tonnes and kilometres.
indiscriminately AND WITHOUT ANY FAVOR.

However, one day, an administrator of the Or-Léans, Mr. Didion, an organizer who went astray in a
In this era of parasitic speculation, our central network crosses the steppes of Sologne, a land without traffic for our path, if we do not help agriculture to
to develop there, it will never give us circulation tion. On the other hand, we return empty the wagons which brought the livestock to Paris, the agricultural lilies and industrialists from Limousin.

If we loaded them, on the return trip, with the fertilizers, the lime and plaster, which are abundant in Paris and its surroundings rons, we would give the Sologne farmers the
a way to make their lands productive, and we within ten or twenty years, we would create traffic and re-
These are for the company.

The problem can be presented as simple ifs
The kilometer rate may not be applied, which ren-would make transport too expensive. Regarding the che- -

POLITICAL ECONOMY OF DECEMBER 193

min of iron, any return recipe is profitable, since it
The wagons, loaded or empty, must be brought back.

Consequently, he proposed applying the fines-agricultural products are subject to a uniform, very low tax. The price was roughly the same as the one unloaded at Etampes or in Salbris. This is what is called a differential tariff, a derogation from the specifications which prescribe the tariff Kilometric, indistinct and without any favors.
The offense, in this case, was one of morality and utility.

designed with a well-understood commercial interest in mind, it almost took on the character of a philanthropic innovation tropical. That was enough to justify the principle of differential tariffs.

Something else. Lyon's position, in direct communication directly linked to Paris, it was dependent, for its sugars, on refineries at La Villette and Ivry, which abused the situation. Nantes, another major refinery center, due to of a direct line to Lyon, was obliged, in order to get there—to have its products pass through Paris, having to pay for the entire journey between these two cities in addition to the industrialists of the capital. The two Gold Companies—Léans and Lyon agreed on the application of a common rate, based on the straight-line distance of Nantes, the capital of the Rhône, as if the line were built. Despite a dual journey, the Nantes sweets were able to arrive in Lyon at roughly the same price as transports than those of Paris. The Parisian refiners are from there They complained bitterly; but the consumers of Lyon didn't care. They found it quite suitable. It was what you call a discount rate. turning point. It had its good points; that was enough for the legitimer. The kilometer tax was demonstrated, for certain—certain cases at least, such as those we have just discussed His speech was insufficient and retrograde. His cause was lost.

124 CH. II, — CONCENTRATION OF MONOPOLIES

What the companies did with these two innovations if morals surpass anything one can imagine of hatred—scandalous and scandalous. Left to the whims of the administrations in the process, differential tariffs became a means of Punishment against the unruly cities.

The vinegar factories of Orléans have been up until the last time a first-rate industry. The reputation of which enjoy its products, the awards it has received in all public exhibitions note its superiority priority.

Well! The Orleans railway is displeased that this Industry existed in Orléans; the railway doomed it. to perish, and indeed it is dying.

For this, the railway only had to decree, by a differential tariff, which Nantes white wines, intended they would pay less for vinegar production

Paris canton, which thus has the raw material at best account, easily excludes from the market that of Orléans, which is, in addition to this difference, burdened with a transport of 120 kilometers, that is to say at a rate of 4 francs per piece, according to the regular price list. (Petition of 730 merchants from Loiret in 1856.)

Why this construction of an industrial center? Because that the inhabitants of Loiret had dared to protest sometimes against certain coups d'état of the company of the railway; because the administration, in developing logging industries at the ends of its lines, favor-choose the products that give it the longest journeys.

#

POLITICAL ECONOMY OF DECEMBER ® 495

Differential tariffs are still, and above all, a means to ruin water transport.

In order to ruin navigation on the Lower Seine, the Compagnie de l'Ouest grants shippers rates at reduced prices in exchange for their commitment "d'engager à servir, sous toutes circonstances, soit directement ou indirectement, "By another route than the railway." That is to say—to say, for example, that merchants and manufacturers rails that would bring down, at any time, any portion of their produce via the Seine, would, by that very fact, be excluded from the privilege of operating, at reduced prices, no transport on the railways of a quarter of the Empire. They would pay in all circumstances Highest prices. Therefore, this is the navigation. reached by the river, it is now at a disadvantage; a host of collateral interests to overwhelm him. (Petition from 110 manufacturers in Seine-Inférieure in 1856.)

So this is what the 238 million in subsidies are used for. tion and the guarantee on 570 million of capital granted by the State to the Western Company!

We read in a report from the administration of the shemin of iron from the North.

Navigation by ordinary boats is done with good-
A cost-cutting measure on the northern canals. Freight there is at very low prices, and to enter into a share in the trans-coal port, our Company necessarily had to-how to give up applying its 10 cent per cent rate tonne and kilometre, and even consent, below
this limit, considerable reductions.

After very thorough studies, we have determined to have a set of wagons built of a capacity of ten tons, and of a relatively lethal weight weak. We also ordered locomotives at the same time.

496 CH. II. - CONCENTRATION OF MONOPOLIES

powerful motives, so as to significantly reduce the cost price of these transports carried out per load complete. We applied, starting in August 1852, a tariff for coal and coke, combined with in order to ensure transport in the summer without us ex-to avoid being cluttered in winter. This is on the condition of the one-year period, for which we awarded prizes of 3.3 cents per tonne and kilometre, between the border and Paris.

Let's break down the figures a bit.

The coal transport equipment is divided into two parts course for a single recipe; we calculate, in expense of traction, two empty wagons for one full one; which reduces - the rate of 3.33 centimes to 2.22 centimes. If the Compa-
If the company incurs its expenses at this price, why doesn't it apply it to cereals and goods of the same nature, taxed typically between 6 and 8 cents?

But we must take into account the costs. According to Mr. Grangez, head of navigation office, water transport fees of a ton of coal from Mons to Paris (350 kilometers) are 9 francs 63 centimes, or 2.7 centimes per ton Per kilometer, roughly the price of the railway. Now:

The average cost per kilometer of canals is 138,000 francs; that of the railway exceeds 460,000 francs.

The boat is a body in equilibrium; the wagons and the Locomotives are crushing the tracks.

Navigation equipment is inexpensive: with the
For the price of a 64-ton machine, thirty could be built coal-fired boats.

Water traction requires six times less effort than

D

POLITICAL ECONOMY OF © DECEMBER | 127

on the rails, and the speed for this kind of commodity is not an element of wealth.

So the Northern Company, with a view to ruining the – shipping and to increase its gross revenue, transports the mineral fuels at a loss.

If there is a shortfall in the dividend, the Treasury guarantee is to fill it.

The northern canals annually load a thousand lion 700,000 tonnes of coal; the railway 1 million approximately, at the risk of ruining its path and arousing Traffic congestion, a perpetual source of accidents. It is It's impossible to even consider transporting 3 million tons by railways. The canal would have to be dug if did not already exist.

We are not leaving these figures to the judgment of the people who did not completely stun the enthusiasm of the che-mins of iron, and to that of the administration of the works.
published, which seems to have been the case so far, is navigation interior would become useless.

We borrow from an excellent note by Mr. Ferdinand Bouquié, civil engineer, the comparative figures of last exercise of navigation and railway of the North :

The situation at the inland waterway, he said, allowed the Northern Railway to transport, in 1867, 805,000
lions of tonnes per kilometer of coal and merchandise Dises, at an average price of 6.10 centimes. Navigation from Mons .towards Paris transported 371 million tons in 1866
kilometers of coal and goods at the price average of 1 c: 78 per tonne and kilometre.

tons transported via the northern route, 1 kilometer away,

L2

1498 CH. I. – CONCENTRATION OF MONOPOLIES

could have been transported by waterways with a difference of # c. 21 per tonne per kilometre, the French trade would have achieved a saving of 34 million. In the figure of 805 million tons to 1 kilometer, the goods are valued at 426 million of tonnes; the average price received is 8.37 cents per tonne and per kilometer.

To transport 805 million tons over a distance of 1 kilometer, The Northern Railway employs 16,275 wagons worth an average of 3,500 francs and representing a capital of 56 million; finally, 402 freight locomotives cost—they cost on average 90,000 francs and represent a capital of 36 million, for a total of 92 million.

To transport 805 million tons over 1 kilometer with 250-tonne ships making ten trips per year Between Mons and Paris, 900 boats would be needed, representing a capital of 11 million, that is to say 81 million less than to carry out the same transport by the rail.

The northern route must also spend, all the eight years, 38,000 francs per kilometer for renewal ment of its main routes, and this taking into account the price of recycled materials.

In summary, it is obstacles of all kinds that oppose laying down the boats that allow the way from the North to monopolize the transport of goods, to charge businesses 400 percent more, while requiring as much time as a riverboat service in the necessary conditions to regularly produce four kilometers per hour.

Is such a situation normal? A deposit—

Is informed silence in the public interest permitted at the discretion of the public? hold? _ |

Why are the railways so keen to ruin navigation?

gation, this is what emerges most clearly from the following fact—as reported by MF Bouquié:

The Compagnie du Nord charged 28 francs for the transporting one ton of sugar from Lille to Paris. Thanks to the organization of a special and regular service on the ca- For the transport of sugar, the railway had to reduce its prices by 15 francs per ton, that is to say 108 p. 100.

Thus, public utility expenditures, com- municipal, differential tariffs, the best things of our economy, become, in the hands of the roads of iron, a means of extermination for navigation and the river transport, to the establishment of which the country had already he has devoted hundreds of millions, and that he will be obliged. to one day restore at great expense if the Judeo- coalition Saint-Simonianism succeeded in destroying them.

In the hands of an administration concerned with the interests published, differential tariffs could become a way protection in favor of poor countries, such as in the example cited concerning Sologne (page 122). Judaism and infantilism have made it a means of crushing investment for our industry for the benefit of foreign countries.

A large quantity of French goods are paying, on our own railways, good transport prices superior to their foreign counterparts; such are the cries- rates, glassware, silk plush, worked leather, the metalworking, the fur trade, the drapery, the hardware- lerie, etc. These products from our industry, starting from Metz and destined to be shipped from Le Havre, pay 83 francs 30 centimes per ton up to that last town, while than the same goods, shipped directly from Germany, pay only 62 francs 20 centimes for the same course.

Isn't there a blatant injustice in this single fact?

430 CH. II. - CONCENTRATION OF MONOPOLIES

How can we compete in the transatlantic markets? ancients, with our foreign competitors, when our Products arrive in England and America overloaded. transportation costs 34% higher than those

the foreigner to enjoy the benefits of a railway to the construction to which we contributed through our im-

pots?n» |

Not a session goes by without the tribune of the Corps
The legislative process does not resonate with similar revelations. This are goods from the Far East, warehouses seats in Marseille, which cost less to get to in London rather than staying in France; these are the fabrics English, landed at Dunkirk, who pay 4 francs of less likely to come to Paris than their counterparts from Lille, Tourcoing and Roubaix. It's nothing less than a crime of high treason against the country.

XVII

Despite the companies' misuse of the system
differential tariffs, the higher administration closes eyes in consideration of the goods that could in to emerge, but on the conditions of favor, it shows uncompromising. Article 48 of the specifications does not com-no comment or interpretation is required:

He said that tax collection would be done indiscriminately.
and without any favors. Any special treaty that would have to have the effect of granting one or more senders a

POLITICAL ECONOMY OF DECEMBER 2 - 4314

discount on approved rates, remains formally forbidden.

It is stipulated entire: When a reduction has been cun-
sent to one or more senders, it must be aca rope to all those who demand it.

The petitioners from Loiret were already denouncing the abuse
in 1856:

A company obtained, for the transport of salts, a discount on the regular rate so considerable that she gave him the Loire, from Nantes to Nevers. And treaties exist for the transport of grains.

The manufacturers of Seine-Inférieure said in core: |

Recently, the Western company supported before the Rouen commercial court that she has the right to demand a price from a manufacturer in Le Havre for transport which the regular rate is 10 fr. 50 c. between this port and Rouen, while it did not require another builder from the same city, at the same time, for the same price, for a commodity of the same nature and of the same class, that 4 fr. 55 c.

These arbitrary differential tariffs, these treaties of favour, as well as the tax inequalities noted in $45, are no less, in another form, than the re-establishment of internal customs duties between countries, from usme to factory. The government, harassed by the cl-"Damage and scandal," he said one day in his booming voice: "I inter-Say! But he dared not add a penalty to the prohibition.

432 CH. I. — MONOPOLIES CONCENTRATION

penal. Therefore, specific treaties are flourishing more never; only they are secret; they work under the cover of the tax refund office.

When shippers discovered fraud, they did not are not allowed to denounce her to the imperial prosecutor; they only resort to civil justice, in the form of a request for repetition and reimbursement of the overpayment. The Eastern and Northern companies had to thus returning hundreds of thousands of francs in 1867; That's less in dividends, and, in this case, the State guarantee compensates the shareholders of the pre-justice done to them by their unfaithful administrator. That is 'it is always the taxpayer who bears the cost of repairing the miscalculations and misdeeds of the barons of privilege.

As for the culprit, always the beneficiary, for all or Part of his wrongdoing, he incurs no punishment, nor neither reimburses nor returns; he remains in office, ready to re-to begin, unless one surrounds oneself with more discretion. at other times, or to refer back to the taxpayers the

the law of distribution. It is important to support this with an example. This account is as true as it is improbable.

On January 17, 1868, the First Civil Chamber of the
The Seine condemned the companies of the East, of the West and from the North to pay to Messrs. Contet-Muiron, Delarsille-Fas-Sin, Wagner and Deulin, damages (to be established) (by state), for harm caused to them as a result of preferential treatment granted to Mr. Luzzani on transport Champagne wines. On December 26th, the the imperial court of Paris confirmed in its provisions
the main points of the first instance judgment.

POLITICAL ECONOMY OF DECEMBER 133

It took no less than ten years to discover-
to expose fraud and ensure its repression.

The plaintiffs were certain, according to the actions-Luzzani's investments and their current prices, which he enjoyed of an illegal tax refund. We're not at to notice such a thing in a marketplace such as Reims. But how to obtain proof that Does the preferential treaty exist and function?

Mr. Contet-Muiron wrote on September 7, 1858, to the chief from the East Road commercial office:

I am here to request the application of the various tariffs.
of the subscription you have with Mr. Luzzani, your agent.
It goes without saying that I comply in advance with the conditions
tions relating to said treaties.

The next day the head of the sales department replied.

We have the honor to inform you that Mr. Luzzani did not subscribe to any Com- subscription rate company.

On September 28, 1858, after two letters dated the 2nd and of the 6, which remained unanswered, Mr. Contet-Muiron summoned Service of process by bailiff to the Northern Company:

To want to apply the various tariffs to one's own advantage and subscription agreements that are granted to various commissionaries of the road transport service, and in particular to Mr. Luzzani, agent for the Eastern company, in Reims.

The Northern Company, in turn, denies the existence of the preferential treatment. | £

434 CH. 11. — MONOPOLAGE CONCENTRATION

On July 28, 1858, the same Mr. Contet-Muiron addressed a similar claim to Mr. Werlé, administrator of the Ardennes railway.

On August 10, the chief engineer in charge of the line replies, in his deepest voice:

= In order for Mr. Contet-Muiron to have the right to complain, he would have to prove that the company is doing Mr. Luzzani or others made concessions along his route, and that, while demanding 7 francs 10 centimes from him for the transport of From Reims to Rethel, it only perceives a lower price. No similar concession has been made. No such arrangement has been made on behalf of the Company with none of its correspondents. One can to attest to it in the most formal manner, and Mr. Contet-Muiron can be challenged to provide a single piece of evidence of what he is saying.

On November 12, 1839, Mr. Delarsille-Fassin addressed by bailiff's summons to the company of North of having to make him enjoy the subscription treaties consented to Luzzani.

Whereas, the writ states, the subscription agreements are put into effect without any publicity, which he has not was the applicant's wish to claim it earlier profit, etc.

The Northern Company persists in its system of .

denials. The Western one does better: during a dignity offended.

No advantage, she said during her conclusions,

—

—ms

, POLITICAL ECONOMY OF DECEMBER ® 135

was not done by the Western line to Mr. Luzzani and to the shippers in Reims. The Company could not, without breaking the regulations, WITHOUT FAILING TO DO JUSTICE ICT, making them the specific concessions they request cite.

Such self-assurance, or such impudence! It was almost... to overcome even the most stubborn convictions, until The proof was established against the brazen ones. Now, the means, I I ask you to remove the liars from the archives. This is the proof they are demanding you provide against them!

Yet the coins came out one day, without any break-in or climbing, from their well-guarded lockers. How so? What happened? Here is what the report to which we Let us borrow these facts:

In 1865, following heated debates that took place at Legislative body between Messrs. Jules Brame, Pouyer-Quertier and Delebecque, and in which the former reproached to the companies their illicit and ruinous actions For commercial purposes, anonymous letters were sent to Mr. Léonard, who founded, several years ago, in Paris, a complaints office against the railways iron, whose aim is to unite and defend the interests individuals harmed by the companies. Mr. Brame received also letters of this nature and delivered them to Mr. Leonard. These documents are in the file.

There are only two pieces; but they are overwhelming.

control of the Northern Company to the chief engineer.
We extract the main pieces of evidence:

Mr. Engineer,
Under arrangements dating back to the month of

436 CH. II. – CONCENTRATION OF MONOPOLIES

March 1859 (decisions of the committee of March 1st and 29th, 1859), the companies of the Ardennes and the North grant to Mr. Luzzani, on first and second grade goods series which he entrusts to the railway (Champagne wines), discounts calculated as follows:

Zone 1: 25 cents per 100 kilograms and 50 cents per 100 bottles.

2nd zone, 40 centimes per 100 kilograms and 75 centimes per 100 bottles.

The discounts for the first zone are shared equally _ element between the two companies; the discounts for the second zone are shared in the proportion of the recipe created by each company.

On the other hand, the Eastern Company granted to Mr. Luzzani, for the same fiscal year 1861, the following discounts sales (details follow) amounting to 20,713 francs 50 centimes.

The Western Company also grants Mr. Luz-Zani offers a discount on Jes wines destined for Rouen and Le Havre.

(The total amount of rebates from the three companies is for 1861 at the sum of 32,848 francs 70 cents):

Signed: DELEBECQUE.

The second item is a letter addressed from Châlons, on August 9, 1865, by the chief inspector of the exploitation tation of the eastern roads, to the director. She proves only that at that time the tax-free shoppers continued to operate for the special benefit of Mr. Luzzani.

In the presence of such overwhelming evidence, after ten said that your companies should have bowed down, presented their apologies and payment of the compensation legitimately owed, attempting to cover it up with a belated repair and with the Silence, the shame of their situation. But moral sense is incompatible with monopolies. Therefore, there is a lawsuit. in the first instance and in the court of appeal. The means of The defenses put forward by the companies are worthy of their actions and their management. We will highlight the most cy- - niques.

POLITICAL ECONOMY OF DECEMBER 2, 137

The companies oppose the claimants with the prescription- three-year term; they claim that the claim The action brought against them is a civil action arising from a tort. and subject to a three-year statute of limitations, like the action pu- republic itself.

We would not call such a means of defense. We will simply take this opportunity to warn the public that actions of this kind are prescribed by {thirty years, not by (kings. Notice to merchants and &ux industrialists; that they carefully keep their letters of car; they may contain, without them knowing doubt, the elements of an establishment for their en- Fanis and successors.

The companies are still demanding that the two parts evidence against them being removed from the proceedings because they were taken away through a kind of abuse of confidence. If the tribunal and the court had admitted a pa- With this claim, there was no further recourse possible. even against crime,* as soon as it involved companies monvpoleuses.

Regarding Delebecque's letter filed with registry, says the judgment of first instance;

Whereas the Northern Railway Company requests not only restitution, but also the implementation outside the scope of this document;

Whereas the company provides proof of ownership of this document, and that it is necessary to order its return between her hands; 3

But given that this letter, written by the head of the control to the chief engineer, is not a confidential letter; that it constitutes an administrative dispatch whose disclosure the court could have demanded if the applicants, instead of producing it themselves, 'by a irregular and reprehensible path, they simply had demonstrated its existence in the Company's offices;

That removing it from the debate would be a pointless formality procedure, since the court would have the right to order the production of books and correspondence; that there is no Therefore, there is no reason to reject the said letter from the debates.

The court was harsh on the honest unknown man who had revealed reprehensible schemes guided by morality as much as by the law. Our readers will wish with us that he finds much imitation trade and industry should have seats reserved preferentially for honest employees who render them similar services, and who compromise- They reveal their position within the companies. iniquity.

XVII

+

If we had written this table two years earlier our political economy under the empire, the book, despite the accuracy of the information and the seriousness of the figures, 'would have been rejected as a slanderous novel of the nation, its leaders, and its institutions. Is it newspapers, whether of opposition or satisfaction, never Had they told similar stories? The enthusiasm about of our industrial and financial system, wasn't it... unison in the leaves of every shade? We divide- He only knows about politics; as if economics and * a state's policy could work in reverse of one another on the other hand, without leading to dissolution?

POLITICAL ECONOMY OF DECEMBER 2, 139

Since then, complaints have come from the top; satisfactions have arisen from the bottom; facts have turned into discontent. The vivacity of Complaints appear to have increased precisely because of the Previous muteness. At least Messrs. Roubher and Forcade will they return to our so-called democratic opposition MPs this justice system is flawed, because they have never mingled their voices with the demands in the economic sphere, although they had taken precedence in 1868 over the discussions of the political, and that there was popularity to be gained.

And that's precisely what should open our eyes to power, were it not for the Gerontes.

The secret to the empire's original prosperity is now pierced to the day. The extensions and concentrations—monopolies, the nation riveted to the Bank until 1897, at Crédit foncier for ninety-nine years: years, to the railways for another {three-quarters of century, with subsidies and guarantees—billions, they say much higher than the flowering period has only done so 'counting the future of three or four generations. According to the principle that any overexerted action calls for a reaction—The equivalent situation, the fall was terrible.

Where are they, those 86-franc rates on the 3%, of — 407 francs on the 4 1/2, 76 francs on the Italian, 4.600 on the Bank's shares, 1.760 on the Credit land, 1,982 on the Furniture, 4,060 on the East, of 896 in the South, 990 in the West, 700 in the Real Estate—

440 HP. IIS — CONCENTRATION OF MONOPOLIES

Billière, from 900 on Spanish Furniture? Where are the 8 billion in capital gains swallowed up? Where, the fortune of holder of $90 securities without income, of which we don't We used to deny the weekly table? Who then, rightly From these high courts, one can boast of having incomes at 5 out of 100? How many values will remain stable? companies will go to join the Mouzaïa, the Ports of Brest, the Roman, Spanish, and Portuguese roads? Safety shareholders of our reputable companies the best—our railways, no longer reside today today in traffic, despite billions in subsidies; without an effective guarantee from the Treasury, without revenues taken annually from taxes, three out of six companies would already be at sea.

Is it possible to resurrect this phantasmagorie, to rekindle this firework display of which only a few remain

what to expect? When we transform the concessions se-perpetual culars, would we obtain 10% of A rise for three months? No, no, the feast is It's finished, and all that's left is to wash the bowls.

We don't know if the work, confined within the hundred monopolies, the outlines of which we have just sketched, and the levies, will be able to live; perhaps the best will bewould it be necessary to begin the demolition immediately of the building so imprudently erected since 1852, and to render production to its autonomy. Personally, the empe-
The owner must have enough of the Bank, the Stock Exchange, the Anonymous companies, Jews, Saint-Simonians, extensions, mergers, subsidies, guarantees, of railway companies, gas companies,

POLITICAL ECONOMY OF DECEMBER 141

Docks, Small Cars, Land Credit, Mobi-link, Louvre Hotel and Grand-Hotel, Message-national and transatlantic ries. None of that was not in its avuncular tradition and does not touch the military glory, neither to the 'revenge of Waterloo' nor to the front-Rhine river basins. He believed, based on bourgeois greed, that once material interests were satisfied, it would be lawful for him to possible to go about one's business at leisure with the realization of the Napoleonic idea Léontenne.

The emperor got the date and time period wrong. The editor-economic factor, a mere accessory in its aims, is became the main focus, the entirety of his reign. War, tou-disastrous days, even for the victors, barely weakened the nations living off property, as was Europe continental at the beginning of this century; it exhausts
Those that thrive on exchange and circulation. Russia
she left the countryside less tired than we were Crimea; the Mexicans didn't even have to defend themselves to force us into retirement; we took Beijing to almost without a hitch, and we returned less richer than before; the Italian expedition cost us a half a billion, and left us with neither allies nor auxiliaries.
nor trade treaty; the war of Rome has nothing to do with us to offer compensation only in the spiritual realm.
In short, everywhere we covered ourselves in glory, but also of debts and loans.

Suppose a victorious campaign on the Rhine; that is at least another 4 billion to be added to the consumer debt
The idea: fewer workers, more taxes.

20 billion in war contributions to buy back

Pa

442 CH. II. – CONCENTRATION OF MONOPOLIES

France's monopolies? The annexed populations?
would they be of great relief to our natives in taking their share of the burdens with which feudalism crushes us industrial activity, especially considering their conquest would have recorded more than 50 million in annual annuities?

All of this, no doubt, is as prosaic as a theo-accounting method. But the era of epics is over, and The sublime borders on the ridiculous; we must resist-to avoid being only producers, under penalty of becoming wretches.

The economic problem, forgotten during the holy orgy Simonian, has reappeared for two years, and especially in 1868, with an energy unprecedented in history for twenty years; he has returned, no longer under the cover communists, socialists, those who share, and others nobodies. It was from the rostrum of the Legislative Body that he exploded and issued its warnings. Its advocates belong to the highest positions in the country; they named Pouyer-Quertier, de Janzé, Brame, Kolb-Nard, Lespérut, Thiers, de Tillancourt, all except one, official or agreeable candidates. The diagnosis is a-Nime: under the weight of the internal privileges of banks and railways, national work cannot be suf-fire; even less can it fight with foreigners.

The leading ministers were moved, not because to warn of the dangers reported in the situation, but to
to replace Protestants with mutes in elections, Honesty through obedience. Could it be power?
would be affected first and foremost by the evil that we
We called it gerontocracy?

CHAPTER III

MORAL DEPRESSION. – MEDIOCRACY: A STATE
IN THE STATE. – THE CODES OF MEDIOCRACY AGAINST THE PUBLIC AND AGAINST ITS EMPLOYEES.

•
Read

e

47. – CYNICAL CONFESSIONS:

The government in France cannot get used to to be merely the representative of the nation. He is keen to train class and caste apart, having distinct interests, con-traditional values of citizens. He is an entrepreneur.
of a multitude of things that do not concern him; also does he show himself, in his concessions of monopolies, also eager for privileges that he lavishes with the good of the community-speed. Thus, he has access to the capital of the savings banks, amortization, deposits and consignments, re-drafts, from the army's endowment, like a banker which would create turnover. It forces the companies to... companies to invest their guarantee funds in government bonds.
It stipulates conditions with the Bank of France for

/

144 CH. III – MORAL DEPRESSION

his current accounts, his advances, his bond issues of the Treasury; he demanded that she lend him her new capital-tal against the annuity 3 p. 100. 1] horse trader with the Railways, with subsidized ocean liners, of the tax exemptions for the transport of its agents, its troops piers, from his dispatches.

Similarly, the City of Paris, by granting the monopoly
from the gas company, secured a price of 45 cents
times the cubic meter versus 30 cents that it imposes to individuals. Then comes the specifications where the
The sheer number of fines allows him to pay the
the largest part of its consumption in official reports.

well known. On the one hand, the Jews shout that they flay them, let them be restrained; they speak of renouncing the concessions, as they become increasingly costly, of abandonment—to end the game, to leave the country and power to chance of their unfortunate fate.*The State, for its part, makes L'austrère, the intractable one; he holds firm, he uses his deep voice. The clappers give the signal, and all along the line we applauds the selflessness of the business swindlers, to the minister's firmness and the advantages that the public will withdraw from the convention. Essentially, such a message as the the government is having fat transported to the Orient or to America costs taxpayers seven hundred francs.

1. There is no relationship between the exorbitant nature of the advantages facts to the monopolists and the meager public services to—which they are subjected to. That's what's called burning a forest to cook an egg.

Such are the prodigious economic combinations of mediocrity, the great enemy of ideologues.

CYNICAL CONFESSIONS 145

If the government, more often than not, is unaware 'of what he does, the same cannot be said of the concessionsnaires. [You have to hear them, when they're in a small comité, when they report to their associates on the the way in which they safeguarded the interests of the fund. Let's listen for a moment to the Company's rapporteur d'Orléans at the assembly of April 20, 1853, concerning the mergers: |

Go back a few years, and suppose—
Consider for a moment that instead of conceding to you, in 1838, a line of 133 kilometers, the State came to tell you:

The company I am proposing will cover 1500 kilometers in total length; it will touch at three points to the Ocean; on the other hand, it will have, towards the Mediterranean and the Levant, an outlet that will not be within his power no one to close it to him, because I assure you, through measures special, the neutrality of the common core which must serve it—extension in this direction. It will connect Bordeaux to Lyon, Nantes to Marseille, Paris to the center of — France and its double southern border, embracing in its network of provinces also important by the number of their populations than by the variety of their — products. This undertaking, already three-quarters complete, you will exploit it for a century, with only one and single direction. The results appear to be due to be very advantageous: nevertheless, to counter even to the most unforeseen circumstances, I guarantee, during fifty years, an interest of k per 100 on 450 million of capital, i.e. an annual payment of 6 million.

If the State, gentlemen, had made you, fourteen years ago, Would you have accepted such a proposal? Without No doubt about it: this proposal would have seemed excellent to everyone the world. | | or |

146 CH. 11. – MORAL DEPRESSION

Well, what we didn't do fourteen years ago, because that (it had to be said, although) capital was timid, because the major combinations were not yet ripe, because the experience had not sufficiently illuminated minds, perhaps also because of private industry at the time it inspired more distrust than sympathy; it is to do it today, and under conditions of success much safer, since the product evaluation, instead of being based on simple probabilities, it rests based on established facts and certain data. This a long route that touches both the center and the south, To the east and to the west, it is entirely up to you to give it to yourself. no, because the Government has already decreed the concessions which must complete it, and we bring you the treaties by which the master companies of a part of the network agrees to transfer it to you.

If, in order to arrive at the situation that is being proposed to you and which offers so many guarantees to all interests, it was necessary to condemn you, gentlemen, to sacrifices that will be considered bles, your board of directors might have hesitated perhaps– to advise you on the operation. But here, there is no Sacrifices! Far from it, luck as assured as possible to improve further, and to a significant extent, the company you already have so much reason to be satisfied with!

The Note that we had distributed to you, as soon as the The first few days of this month contain, in this regard, indications... cations 'whose accuracy everyone was able to verify. She showed you that in return for the concessions you made were requested, and you were granted broad com– thoughts. Es.

Thus, on the one hand, you are abandoning certain clauses of your old Specifications (1);

(4) It is not useless to be informed about the concessions demau- granted to the company and the bonuses extracted by the Government birth.

€ AnT. 4. – The State is exempt from the obligation imposed upon it by article 2 of the specifications to establish a special station at or

: CYNICAL CONFESSIONS _ 447

You are paying 16 million into the state coffers;

You undertake to perform, with the help localities, the extension of Poitiers towards La Rochelle and Rochefort.

But, on the other hand, you get three in the center extensions that had been unsuccessfully sought until – that here, and which are carried out under the conditions of the law of 1842, The 16 million paid by you to the treasury in assurance– make the prompt completion, and bring the moment closer where they will give you products.

You obtain, for all of your concessions,
for the Orléans line itself, which dates from 1838, a enjoyment for 99 years from 1852. In other terms– my friends, you gain on the road to Orléans a prolonga-tion of 13 years; on the way to the Centre an extension 59 years old; on the roads to Nantes and Bordeaux a a 49-year extension, and all new sections that you will need to use are also provided to you.
for 99 years.

You also obtain, on the one hand, the ability to
The repurchase option for the State is only available fifteen years after the purchase movement of all the planned extensions; on the other hand, that it can only be exercised on all sections of the company at the same time: which is a guarantee, otherwise against the buyout itself, at least against what it could to have dangerous.

near Orléans for the Central Railway service, and he demeure was exempted from the fee he paid for the use of the station.
d'Ortéans.– He is also exempt from building the workshops of Vierzon. – Furthermore, the company will not be able to claim from the State, at the expiration of the concession, Island reimbursement of expenses which it would have done during the term of the lease to increase the number or the extent of its stations, stations and workshops.
“ART. 6. – The Company shall be required to transport the troops

"ART. 7, – The transport of dispatches shall be free, except between Paris and Orléans.

"ART. 8. – Third-class sails will be covered" and enclosed with glass.

–

148 – CH. III. – MORAL DEPRESSION

The State had reserved for itself a right to participate in the net products, beyond 8 percent on the roads of Centre and Bordeaux; beyond 6 percent on the chemin from Nantes. You obtain that this sharing clause shall be deleted, from the moment these various lines make part of the association; and for new concessions, No such clause is introduced in the decree.

By connecting to the Avignon road, which ensures the connecting your network with the Mediterranean, you ob- hold conditions such as, on the Burgundy side, no encroachment detrimental to your interests will be permitted. It might even be worth trying. There's more: you get that,

for relations between Paris and Lyon, the Bourbonnais and

There

Burgundy cannot engage in a price war, the equality of total taxes to be collected on both routes being now established in principle.

Finally you get the renewal for fifty years, and for all your lines, the interest guarantee relating to a capital of 150 million.

All these concessions, gentlemen, are important that no one can deny. They compensate for the movement, as we were saying earlier, those which requests were made to the Company.

You will notice that among these, that is to say Among the obligations that the Company had to accept, there was the obligation to execute the Poitiers branch line to Rochefort and La Rochelle. Now, on the one hand, this obligation is reduced by 10 million, as for the expenditure, thus

(1) The Explanatory Note reads as follows: |

"The expense to be incurred for the extension to La Rochelle and Rochefort is subsidizing:

"First, 4 million, which will have to be provided by the localities;

"Then another 6 million represented by the maintenance of the uncertain conditions for the transport of dispatches on the Paris line to Orléans, transport which, according to the new specifications should have been free, and will continue, as an exception, to be paid for to the Company at a rate of 300,000 francs per year.

CYNICAL CONFESSIONS. | 149

On the other hand, it is further mitigated by the prospect of products that this branch, according to studies more recent, seems to add to those of our general exploitation; so that ultimately, and if the forecasts on which we expected to be confirmed

'ment, the branch in question, instead of being a burden for the Company, would rather constitute a new source of profits.

We must therefore consider it certain that the combination of authorized by the decree of March 27th, realizes a great thought of public utility, not only without imposing sacrifices profits to the shareholders of Orléans, but ON THE CONTRARY, in adding to the strength and importance of their income.

Such eulogies are a disgrace to a country.

The rapporteur of the Paris Company in Strasbourg
Thus, in 1846, he appreciated the importance of the concession.
who was then only 43 years and 286 days old.

Along the entire main line and on the branch line
In Reims, the state is covering three-fifths of the
- expense. We are free from difficulties and chances of expropriation. We have nothing against us
the unknown, which is always a threat in execution major public works, and the expenses that are our charge, for the formation of the path, can be eva-things to do to the State, and the only condition that is imposed, is to deliver the road at the end of the concession ironworks and its outbuildings in good condition.

And in 1847:

During the presentation of the law to the Chambers, the governor the government considered that the work for which it was responsible on the

150 CH. II. – MORAL DEPRESSION

The main line could be valued at 110,200,000 francs. for the 540 kilometers.

Since then, the government, which has never ceased, we like to to repeat, to show enlightened concern for the major interests represented by the railway Paris in Strasbourg, was kind enough to grant our demands mations and to our requests, even though he could resulting in additional expenses for him.

But let us admit, gentlemen, that the expense is borne the state's contribution must not exceed 110,200,000 francs planned. It's a considerable amount of capital that we haven't not to reimburse; and we have, for almost half a year century, the operation of a 662-kilometer railway line tense, which will have cost 235,200,000 francs, on which we will have committed 125 million.

Upon expiry of the concession, the railway will return to the State, except for our rolling stock, which remains our property, and which will be reimbursed to us according to experts.

ee

This is the exploitation stipulated in a decree of March 25, 1852. extended the lease to ninety-nine years, to run November 27, 1855.

IT

It is in the disputes between monopolists that he we must seek the true measure of the public interest and of

On this subject, in 1862; an epic quarrel between the two railway companies of the Midi and Paris-Lyon-Mediterranean: would a direct line be built from this? in Marseille, along the coastline, shortening by 45 kilos meters the route already in operation via Nîmes and Mont-

: CYNICAL CONFESSIONS 151

Pellier, belonging to the second company? Or perhaps... Would we be satisfied with the broken line, without creating any concurrence? The opposing parties roused a third of France: they provoked petitions, deliberations the wishes of the chambers of commerce, the resolutions of the Councils generals. This was more serious than the Capulet dispute. and the Montagues.

Never have the geniuses of construction and exploitation were addressed with more impertinence. The clan Lyon-Méditerranée demonstrated that the connections The proposals she put forward would cost at most 24 to 30 million. while the opposing clan's plans would reach 70 million; difference, 40 to 46 million.

Traffic estimates border on nonsense, people say. on both sides: according to the accounts of the Mediterranean, They will not reach 10,000 francs per kilometer; according to The figures for the South will exceed 41,000 francs; that is A difference of 31,000 francs between the two valuations: serious lesson for the public, if it is willing to reflect that one throws at the head, reciprocally, as sanction and proof of veracity, the authority of masters of art Railway sciences, all masters, equally masters, and masters of the same rank.

The tournament's academic prize belongs without contest at the Compagnie du Midi, much stronger in French discourse than the Mediterranean. We must see its outbursts, its evolutions, its turbulence. None His means of attack did not escape him. It happened in front of The Legislative Body held a favorable opinion regarding the claims. from the Lyon company. What is the value of this opinion? Mr. Peut asks. And he immediately concludes:

452 CH. III. – MORAL DEPRESSION

A few words spoken from the rostrum of the Legislative Body Latif, in response to a question from the honorable

: Garonne and the municipality of Agen, and by Mr. Eschasseriaux, deputy from Charente-Inférieure, discovered the attack plan adopted by a company to which these gentlemen appear to want to build up the defenders.

There is nothing there, moreover, that is not perfectly natural.

We know that Mr. Noubel owes his position in large part to the very powerful influence in Agen of M^s Dumon, an- former minister and chairman of the board of directors of Paris-Mediterranean railway, and that Mr. Eschas- Seriaux is the latter's nephew.

* The South is not entirely satisfied with a deliberation- tion of the Marseille Chamber of Commerce. Immediately Mr. Senès takes up his pen:

The indefinite expansion of the Mediter- company ranée, he said, as well as societies that converge around from her, produced, by the very force of circumstances, an es- a type of clientele similar to that which surrounded the pa- Roman clerics. This clientele can be found everywhere. even in admiring bodies. We don't want To judge it, we are merely acknowledging its existence; Moreover, this existence is due solely to natural law. which brings intelligences and leading figures of all kinds. Therefore, we are not surprised to meet within the Chamber of Commerce, in the body that unites the elite of our fellow citizens: One member at a time vice-president of the board of directors administration of the Docks company and administrator of maritime services of the Imperial Messageries;

A member advising the management of the Forges and Chan- third of the Mediterranean, owner of lignite mines in Fuveau; |

CYNICAL CONFESSIONS 453

The brother of a director of the Docks company.

Regardless of these direct affinities with the com- Mediterranean company, we meet in the heart From the Chamber:

A member who represents; in Marseille the house -of Mediterranean:

And a member who is part of the supervisory board of a coastal shipping company operating between Cette and Marseille.

That these men rightfully enjoy the consideration | general principle, no one disputes it. We applaud at their intelligence, their business experience, and their well-known integrity.

But isn't that a mistake, at least on the part of the electricians?
rather than entrusting the defense of their interests, in questions that can affect the company on a daily basis
the civilization of the Mediterranean and its dependencies, to ne-merchants, bankers or shipowners who must be In opposition to their own interests? Civil law allows for the recusal or referral of a judicial case before another court, when the judges are relatives or allies of the parties to a certain degree, to a greater extent That's the right thing to do when they're interested in this matter. Isn't it?
not here the case of a kind of financial kinship which should have led to the abstention of most members from the Chamber of Commerce?

There is more: this Chamber possesses, as a moral entity, shares of the Docks, which she received for her part from property in the dry dock company, and we we have mentioned the close link that exists between the Docks and the Mediterranean company.

And it is a Chamber, placed in such conditions-tions, who would presume to seek the truth in the question raised by the railway investigation!
But, with the utmost impartiality, she cannot...
to find, and even if she did find it, her word loses its authority. It will always be said that between the truth and its appre-

9.

154 HP. READ. – MORAL DEPRESSION

In this situation, he was able to inevitably place a screen, a cloud, in his path:
private interest. You may try to silence his voice, but you have beautiful, dominating it with the full height of your intelligence and your sense of justice: self-interest creeps in Despite your best efforts, it clouds your vision in your consciences.
It obliterates your convictions!

Thus, Lyon represents a coalition of interests.
disreputable private individuals. The South alone embodies within itself the Selflessness and love of country. Since that At that time, three Pereires, its administrators, became deputies, and Mr. Senès naturally refrained from accusing the voters' choice, appointing "mandate-holders whose personal interest may be at odds-
"A gonism with that of the principals."

The Mediterranean company, disregarding these personal digressions, resolutely takes evil by The horns; trade and competition are sacrificed on the Bordeaux to Cette line.

We are authorized to assert, she said, that between the hands of the Compagnie du Midi, the rates for the railway of iron and channels are combined in such a way as to direct for-cementing transport on railways.

The waterway is completely sacrificed to the road railway. As a result, the canals are almost entirely abandoned.

"and do they retain no other means of transport than those of which the
the railway is willing to grant them the concession purely out of pure human respect, and in order to leave them with an appearance of circulation and activity. (See our quotes on page 110.)

Mr. Émile Pereire does not hesitate to launch into this personally and with his pen in the arena:

CYNICAL AYERS 155

And why, he exclaims, this relentless campaign?
against the exploitation of canals? Where does this interest come from?
such a great deal for the Languedoc and for the Ga- valley
The ronne that animates our adversaries? Who gave them Mandate? Is it a sense of their own interest? On the contrary, if our canals were taken away, in order to free them from Any toll would ruin the Compagnie de la Méditerranée;
indeed, which is transported to Bordeaux, at a price of 7 francs.
per tonne, the wines of Cette, Béziers, Carcassonne, from Narbonne, and this immense traffic, combined with other products of Languedoc, Roussillon and Provence, which congested its stations last October and November.
deny, and who fills his coffers, will head towards Paris, no no longer via Lyon, but via Bordeaux, where he will borrow the the Orleans line, or the sea route to Rouen; there product development for the Mediterranean company more than 20 million per year, that is to say the representation with a capital of 400 million, because the Méditerranéenne company would not only experience the loss of pro-diverted products, but, in addition, the reduction of tariffs on the products of these regions that she would manage to conserve on its line,

Yet this is how, when passion gets involved,

It manages the interests of its shareholders.

And what about the public? Please. Without the sequestration—The operation of the canals, granted by the State for the benefit of the chemins de fer of the South, the "Languedoc, Roussillon traffic" "from Lyons and Provence to Paris" would save each year, according to the author, 20 million in transport. And that's what neither the administrators nor you want from Lyons, nor those from the South.

Mr. Pereire, terrible in his logic, continues:

The acquisition of the canals should aim to sup-

156 CH. II. — MORAL DEPRESSION

Toll pressure; however, removing tolls would be to deal a disastrous blow, not only to the Compagnie du Midi, but also to all the companies of railways; for if one were to admit in principle that when a company operates two transport routes parallel, the State must seize one of the two in order to operate it without tolls, in order to maintain competition. Therefore, one would logically be led to ask that the State resume: |

At the Méditerranéenne company, one of the two lines railways that it operates, through Burgundy or through Bourgogne;

At the Orléans company, one of its two lines on Tours, via Orléans or Vendôme; one of its two lines via Bordeaux, Angoulême or Limoges;

To the Northern Company, one of its two lines of Paris to the Belgian border, via Amiens or via Saint-Quentin;

At the Eastern Railway Company, one of its two lines on the Rhine border, via Strasbourg or via Mulhouse, Improvising himself as a representative of agriculture, of the com-

Regarding commerce and industry, Mr. Pereire added:

When, apart from these jealous passions as much as in-Consequently, someone examines it calmly and impartially.
the question of the operation of our canals, we acknowledge that free access to the channel is not necessary for the de-agricultural, manufacturing and commercial development of Southern regions.

That is not what the residents have claimed since countries deprived of the enjoyment of the canals by their lease to the Compagnie des chemins de fer du Midi;
on the contrary.

CYNICAL CONFESSIONS: 157

Why this relentless attack against the Canal du Midi?
and the Garonne, dependent on the railway? Mr. Peut va
to make us feel the patterns.

While the other companies had not, in the waterways that ran more or less parallel to them, than incomplete or impotent rival lines, the Only midday found, in those against which it had to fight, a competition of the most serious nature and the more formidable. Thus:

While the waterways, parallel to the others networks, except those in the North, are all paralyzed by gaps or imperfections that hinder and hinder it-those that compete in the South are in perfect condition and without any discontinuity.
The East faces competition from the Marne and the Ja canal

Marne to the Rhine, but the unnavigability of the Marne cancels
the positive effects that the channel could produce.

The West, for most of its length,
has no other rivalry than that of the land route.

Orléans faces competition from the Loire and the system of built at various times and without any sense of unity, dif-

they create locks between them, of varying width, depth, etc.
and the Loire itself is not navigable in the most
a large part of its course.

The North faces competition from canals generally in good condition, but, as will be said later, these ca-
They find sustenance in the transport of coal abundant enough to sustain their activity, without harming that of the parallel railway lines.

The Paris to Mediterranean company was supposed to ren-to counter its enormous and dangerous power a counter-weight or moderator in Haute-Seine, Yonne, the
the Burgundy and Rhône-Rhine canals, the Saône and the Rhône; but the state of the Upper Seine leaves unfortunate-

158 CH. III, - MORAL DEPRESSION

Fortunately, there is much to be desired; the Yonne is even au-today in a state close to the state of nature; the nav-
The flow of the Saône is interrupted at the level of Lyon;
The Rhône still requires significant work, and the bar which closes this river at its entrance to the sea opposes a an insurmountable obstacle to large-scale maritime navigation, thus paralyzing this great and magnificent artery which unites the Mediterranean Sea with the North Sea and constitutes one of
of the world's most important waterways.

It is this obstacle that the Saint-Louis canal aims to overcome.
to make disappear; and that is also why, since sixteen years old, the men who are at the head of the company
those of the Mediterranean did everything they could to do to prevent the execution of this last task, although it has been demanded for a long time, with the most vigorous efforts, by twenty-two General Councils, twenty-four Chambers of Commerce, ten Municipalities, that all studies, all investigations, all tests administrative decisions have been consistently and unanimously made to him favorable, and that it was the subject of twenty-three petitions addressed to the emperor by as many cities or towns of banks of the Rhône and Saône rivers.

It's truly regrettable, given such revelations...
tions, that: the monopolists do not dispute more "often, or that their quarrels have no more re-Tension in the country. We read in a petition to the emperor for the defense of national labor:

The Journal des Débats, whose devotion is acquired to free-trade interests, has been led to recognize, in its issues of August 4 and 5, 1858, that an establishment-French ment, which spends each year, for its investment in operation, 29,700 francs worth of coal, would be spent again in England, which was 7,440 francs, by returning the same products, and that the creation of this establishment, evaluated

'CYNIC CONFESSIONS 159'

400,000 francs, for the English, amounts to 600,000 francs for us. due to the difference in the price of coal in the two countries. The whole question of lifting the prohibitions is found in the comparison of these figures; it summarized in the price of coal on both sides.

France is dependent on England for the most part part of its coal; however, our soil contains 250 rich and powerful coal mines, which would suffice, and far beyond, to our consumption; but the costs of-transport via canals does not allow us to exploit- . to our coal wealth; these roads are properties particular (for the most part), burdened with interest, fees, of taxes, duties, tolls or other charges that increase-tempt the value of coal out of proportion with its cost price in England.

The quarrel between the companies of the South and the Mediterranean Ranée is rich in lessons on the subject itself tribulations denounced by the petitioners. He does not The railways must not encounter any competition "Reference. That is why, where the canals are insufficient, Unusable, they are neglected; where they would be effective, They are delivered to the railway.

What it cost the country to lock itself into the embraces of this immense octopus; we have said it elsewhere. Let us also mention this fact, attributed by the lawyer from the South to his opponent:

For three lines representing only 417 kilometers, the Mediterranean company received no less than 120 million in state subsidies, or more than 287,700 francs. per kilometer! And if we didn't take it, to compare it to that of Cette to Marseille, that the Marseille to Tou- line lon, we would find for the latter a subsidy which exceeds 447,000 francs per kilometer.

has

460 CH. III. – MORAL DEPRESSION

On our honor and conscience, we believe that these questions deserved, at least as much as the pro-the Liberal Union's agenda, to be discussed in the press and at the podium by writers and speakers who pride themselves on taking some interest in the country, in the democracy and revolution. (That's putting it mildly.) (Here, revolution and conservation are one and the same.)

11

While the government does not always have foresight alienations of public property that it consents to, the high The bank, on the other hand, knows what to expect regarding favors. that she requests. But, another question, of a purely-moral dimension: was feudalism aware of its flaws? Predation?

We don't believe it. Nowhere, the morgue, the insolence, self-sufficiency, and self-admiration are not:

*

pushed to a higher degree than in her. It is necessary to hear him deliver his eulogy.

The times that Mr. Oscar de Vallée compared, 1720 and 1857, they are not alike, said Mirès. The illusions ephemeral 'introduced into a country that had ruined the poor administration as well as the misfortunes of the monarchy, have no more connection with the immense aug-wealth creation produced nowadays by development development of credit and industry, that the fortunes of dealers and speculators from Quincampoix Street did not have any of them. rent with the fortunes acquired nowadays by men those who entered the industry and dared to major utility works D

Walk along the Rue de Rivoli, completed in so few months;
Take a look at the map of our railways, and see with what activity have the works been conducted since the advent of imperial policy.

Bridge the distance that separates us in your thoughts.
from Marseille. There, thousands of workers conquer the bed from the sea, create ports, found factories and cons-
they are building a new city.

Cross the southern border or the northern border;
Go to Switzerland, Italy, Hungary; everywhere you will find you will see in progress the works which must connect all the peoples through the ease of communications, and destroy their traditional antagonism, by substituting everywhere the

from the reign of reason to that of prejudice.
Is there, then, in these works neither elevation nor gran-
and do not the men devoted to this work deserve
No consideration? (Mire, Constitutional of September 8)
(December 1857.)

That much is clear: the financiers have everything fact: the nation, shareholders, taxpayers, customers, or-vriers, doesn't count. Popular boorishness comes in support for these claims.

Large companies initially present themselves as One day, a highly utilitarian concept: the cheap. Never
We didn't get the linens, the knitwear, the fabrics at the best price.
account. A bank branch, a branch that:
created in a shopping center, it develops a movement-
business dealings and unknown transaction facilities until then. The common people know one thing: formerly a A journey of sixty leagues required thirty hours.
cost around thirty francs, not including the costs of road; today we can travel the same distance in eight hours, at the price of 14 francs, without drinking or eating

162 CH, III, = MORAL DEPRESSION

Gas lighting is cheaper and cleaner. than oil and tallow. That is enough for him; it does not occur to him to the idea of inquiring whether it might be possible to establish the journeys at 2 cents per kilometer instead of 6, the es-cubic meter instead of 30. Also, while there is that anathemas against isolated usurers, the greatest many are now resorting to lyricism on account of the vast inter-shots. The most beloved opposition journalists have moreover, popularized this theme, the spread of which is worth to its authors of a thousand and a thousand francs of annual income, while that the opposing thesis, that of disillusionment and In reality, it only leads to prison.

However, what is the solitary usurer, the traitor? so much of the old regime, the tax farmer of the ancient royalty, the supplier of munitions to the armies of the First Empire, compared to the Saint-Simonian nabobs? The pre-The first ones spent their entire lives building fortunes of a few million; it's in the hundreds and hundreds of millions that the latter, in less than ten years, have sup-put their asset. The wonders of collective strength, of grouping of producers, mechanics, in mul-
. Utilizing the means of work, have at the same time expanded tenfold the basis for understanding stock trading, of: the parasitic speculation and usury. This explains the The progression of pauperism grew precisely because of the improvement of industrial tools and organization triel. As for all these material means, there is also the press-The state's surrender to feudalism is enough to make one despair. the working population.

It is futile to object that the large companies are

CYNICAL CONFESSIONS 163

. the exception in our economy; that the field of lini- Individual initiative remains the most extensive. It is sufficient, for that

"Serfdom becomes the common law, let the machines essentials have been appropriated.

We know that mercury is used in the treatment of Gold and silver ores, said Michel Chevalier. The mines of this metal are rare; only two are known which give somewhat abundant products: one is there mine d'Almaden, in Spain; the other that of Idria, in the Car-Niole. Savvy speculators have seized these mines; they now dictate the law to the producers of me-valuable rate. As a result of this monopoly, the costs of ex-The traction of money has increased in recent years. 10 francs per kilogram. As we receive every year annual of 3,600,000 francs.

The Loire mining coalition, under the rule of Louis-Philippe caused a scandal that made people cry out in protest. than to the classic defenders of laissez-faire; the Dic-Lionnaire d'économie politique writes on this subject:

LS

The only prospect of the benefits promised by the acquisition the capament of the mines of the Fair, was able to raise, in a few months, shares of interest, which represented at . barely 200 francs, up to 1150 francs; considerable fortunes were founded all of a sudden by this maneuver.

Nothing could be simpler, as we can see: monopolize the coal is a way of levying taxes on all industries who use coal; to hoard mercury, that is to say at the same time and as a consequence, to annex the product of Industries that handle precious metals. Similarly

164 HP. III. – MORAL DEPRESSION

The Bank, by virtue of its privilege, extorts money from all circulation. fiduciary system, and the railways impose their tariffs disruptive to everything that travels, men and packages alike. there is no state tax more securely established on the total production of a country.

A nice consolation prize, then, for the liberals, of to demonstrate that two grocers, dependent on the Bank, railways, imperial mail services, Transatlantic liners and other rodents, still retain the right to compete for 20,000 francs of clientele in two shops 25 meters apart!

2. – MYSTIFICATION AND DERISION OF PUBLIC AUTHORITIES THROUGH FINANCIAL FEUDALITY.

Our ridiculous infatuation with equality revolts against this accumulation of testimonies of our vassalage.

What does this mean? Fortunes, so disproportionate

Do not the happy and the unhappy enjoy the same things?
Civil and political rights? Don't we have equality of-
Before the election, before the law, before the courts? What is it?
that a privilege limited to the satisfaction of ma- appetites
Real? |

Thus chatter our liberal lawyers, boastful, men-perpetrators, instigators of despotism and servitude.

And first of all, why this disdain for material interests?
It is no longer, as we have said, a question of the rich and of | poor, but of wealth and pauperism. The system-
The crisis has been measured: 21,000 children died.

FINANCE AGAINST THE STATE 165

out of 22,000 births in Lille in the last seven years; a _indigent in five, in three inhabitants. If the bi of repair-
The tention is not restored to its base, it is the death of the country, consumption. The solution to the problem is so__ctale, of public interest, not private, since our multiplications
The creators of forces and products only lead to us sinking deeper and deeper into the abyss of destitution.

The caste, however, understands the complexity of pro-
The problem is: she knows that a people cannot live by pain, but also independence and dignity; a na-dignified in her misery, coldly disdainful of her operators, is a threat, a danger to any aristocratcracy, also, not content with sequestering for its own benefit the collective product, does it neglect nothing to crush the wills, demoralize consciences, debase characters
You should see how she treats everything around her,
the State, its shareholders, its customers, its suppliers, its employees.

This brief overview of Saint-Simonian action
In the moral realm, it will be a respite for readers who don't like numbers. But what about the chauvinists?
equality will pass the chapter if they insist on their illusions; For we have not yet told them anything so nayrant. |

IV

Of all the communities that may have a problem with Starting with industrial feudalism, there is no such thing as

than the government. Its complacency, moreover, is mis-
They deserve something more than deference.
caste understands this; therefore, it is lavish with hosannas.
when power consents to remain its humble servant.
But if statesmen ever dare to raise their voices in favor of the law, to restore relations on a footing of justice and equality, it's good to see them unleashed_ ments. |

In 1848, the government submitted to the National Assembly national a project to buy back the railways. Great
The rumor was circulating among the councils of the swindlers. They met-
They deliberated, they protested. The bulldogs mon-
They bared their teeth; the barkers cried out against the plunder, to rape. Catiline was at the gates.

The shareholders of the Orléans company have met three times during the past year. In The first assembly, for us, was about giving the company's annual operating statement. In the Secondly, your vote strengthened the protests.
whose council had taken the initiative against the measure of sequestration. In the third, which took place under the influence of the strong apprehensions that the projects had given rise to – repurchase, all shareholders were called upon to consult with the council on ways to ensure defense of their property. Let's hope that from now on the .worried-studies that prompted these last two meetings do not will renew more. (Report of the Gold Company-(Léans in 1849.)

"He is probably not one of you, gentlemen," he said.
1848 the rapporteur of the Strasbourg Company, who had not taken note of the draft decree presented on the 17th May, and the accompanying explanatory memorandum. Mr. Mid-

—

1° The right and the necessity of buying back the roads of iron ;

2° The suitability of applying only one and the same condition of redemption on all roads, without regard unlike their situation;

3° The buyback formula which, according to him, must have based on share prices and annuity prices.

Public opinion was stirred by these exorbitant claims. aunts, and public opinion is rising up on all sides against a draft decree that tears up contracts (the companies (of railways have already torn down huf cents), and which, while seizing the property, refuses to acknowledge it contradictorily the value.

However powerful the support of public opinion may be, Republic, it is up to you, gentlemen, to defend your property. In principle and in fact, it is in your interest as a stock- As citizens, and as your representatives, It is a duty that we will fulfill with energy.

The concessionary and successful bidder companies railway lines, say the definers of roads to Bordeaux and Nantes, believe it is their duty to protest, as they are protesting, against the measure which would be taken by the government to pass the railways in the hands of the State, considering this measure as an abuse of power that would render it null and void and of no effect; reserving the right to pursue this nullity through all legal channels, by appealing to the justice system of the country. (Assembly of April 25, 1848.)

The faith of contracts! But this is the first article Barbarian and civilized codes; the savages of the Orénoque, the blacks of the Guinea coast, the islanders of Papua New Guinea, the inhabitants of Tierra del Fuego, the Pata-

108 CH. III – MORAL DEPRESSION

Gons, the Esqimaux respect their sworn word without – that no penalty compels them to do so.

The faith of contracts! We know what that means in Israelite language. The Methodical Repertory of the Legis-

Public Works, says that "all laws, orders laws, decrees and orders relating to these communication routes In the first months of 1864, the increase amounted to nearly of 800.

Eight hundred redesigns in twenty years for centuries-old concessions! It is the faith of contracts if each The new modification brings about an increase in the premium. confirmations, extensions of privileges. With its one and a half billion in subsidies, already granted, with its 4 billion interest-guaranteed bonds and amortization, the State can indeed be considered as owner of the network, where the shareholders have not committed than one and a half billion. But this is not a buyout at cost price; what's needed is speculation for 2 billion; that's a guaranteed dividend, such as The day the State has had enough of the roads, it will have the meals-will be in the government at five times and ten times the price of return, as she did of the canals. The faith of the concessions The practice is to charge ten for what is worth one; the spoliation, it's simply a full refund, in capital and interest. Never an injunction of the francs seigniorial no one who aspired to royalty reached this degree of arrogance.

And the seventeen million that were counted too much, by mistake, in the negotiation of the city's delegation vouchers Paris at Crédit Foncier: what do you think of the distraction? s

»"

FINANCE AGAINST THE STATE - 469

V

The Jewish community goes further in its audacity; it makes to public authorities of the farces of Mascarille.

In 1865, the Compagnie du Nord proposed to the government a new restructuring of its concession, - always the faith of contracts. It was a matter of making disappear= remove the sharing clause from the specifications, beyond of a certain figure, between the company and the State, of profits from the operation.

1364, so that the company would be subject to the sharing of : benefits, however subordinate it may be to an increase A very considerable portion of our revenue. This sharing could not can only be explained by effective state participation at the company's expense; there is no reason for it to exist As far as we are concerned, since the public treasury is not burdened, in our interest, with no expense, no possibility of expense.

It is true that the Northern network did not need of subsidy. But what would happen to its traffic if it were the only one established in France, if the lines of Lyon, Orléans, from the East, from the West did not extend it to all the points in the country and did not bring him transport to Follow them to the border? The company is participating, and in a very effective way, with such large allocations lavished elsewhere. The condition for sharing is the consequence of this law of solidarity outside of which there is no possible society. Until then, the rapporteur of the The company is simply devoid of moral sense. This is where The outrage begins.

19

170, : CH. LIL. – MORAL DEPRESSION

The company, in order to have this clause removed from the agreement... lage with the State, made great charlatanism of his devotion- It was intended to serve the interests of commerce. It was meant to create a fourth class of goods (marls, ashes, manure, fertilizers, stones, paving stones, pebbles, sand, charcoal vouchers, coke), on which she would consent to extraordinary price reductions, designed to enrich the regions it serves. Instead of the price of 10 cents per tonne and kilometre, she would grant: 8 cents for distances of 4 to 100 kilometers, 5 cents for distances between 101 and 300 kilometers, 4 cents beyond that of 300 kilometers.

It was in 1865 that the Compagnie du Nord proposed to transporting coal and coke at a price of 5 to 8 cents times per ton and kilometer; however, we have already read, in a quote taken from the 1856 report (p. 126), that, since 1852, it had been applying the tariff of 3 cents times 1/3.

of 300 kilometers is even more curious to note; Indeed, the most extreme points of the concession were not 300 kilometers apart at the time; none for the part there was no route of that length.

It's truly hard to know what to be most astonished by, or of the audacity of the scoundrels who allow themselves to do to a government of similar mystifications, or of the im- the stupidity of the statesmen who suffer them without doing anything about it See. The proposal, in fact, was approved by the committee.

FINANCE VERSUS THE STATE 471

superior of railways, approved by the minister, discussed and voted on by the Council of State, which attached to it a fine, approving report reached the Legislative Body tif, where a simple observation is enough to have it rejected with the use The due to its authors.

VI

In all its dealings with power, it is the finance makes the law, regardless of the decrees and specifications stipulated by the ministers. To this end, The organization of the company always begins with the What a mess. Who could define the legal status of each category of railway participants: action- shareholders, taxpayers, bondholders, interest guarantors? The same chaos reigned over the infamous Exposition universal of 4867.

Would we abandon the matter to private industry? That was a solution; but, as Mr. Béhic observed in his Report of February 91, 4865, this method of proceeding is not Not in our traditions. So, construction by the State or by | The city of Paris, separately or in participation. passion; for, as the proverb says, a door must either open or closed. Well, no; our men The state doesn't like straightforward solutions. The funds were done, namely: 6 million by the city of Paris, 6 million from the Treasury, 8 million by public subscription republic. What was the situation of these subscribers for 8 million? Were they lenders? Were they dis- tionnaires? sponsors, participants or on behalf of col-

lectif? 1] It would have been difficult to say what their position was legal; the French spirit, not particularly legalistic anyway, does not... It doesn't matter what these legal questions are. | ”

In any case, the State retained absolute control: it imposed itself on its co-participants (the city of Paris and the individuals), without asking them for the endorsement of the ballot; if these ways of acting were not absolutely regular, | at least they were dictated by the right motive, such as Mr. Béhic's report attests to this.

In London, he said, the main revenue produced the revenue from entries was supplemented by various levies facts relating to the company's benefit regarding contractors 'restaurants, catalogues and seven other services of of lesser importance. In 1862, for example, these recipes Accessories amounted to more than one million.

I don't think that in 1867, any more than in 1835, he... have just resorted to these financial means; these do not they hardly fit into our traditions. By organizing Monopolies create poor services; they dissatisfy- Consequently, they tempt the public and harm the main revenue. These kinds of taxes also weigh heavily in part on the exhibitors or their usual representatives; and It seems unwise to burden so many people in this way. sounds that it is important to attract to this great competition, and which are often imposed by a pure sense of patriotism, . the considerable costs that result from this.

The Minister's economic manifesto, summarized in these few lines, was absolutely perfect Claire: private industry, with its focus on high revenues, to the highest possible product, would constitute, by way leasing, monopolies, and would lead to high prices. The State, on the contrary, free from any speculative intent, delivering its services at cost price would mitigate the charges and would create the right market. To implement this very simple program, a decree of the February 1st, 1865, a special commission was created and invested general. Mr. Le Play had been involved in the Saint-Simonism; his appointment was a bad omen for the ministerial program: the Exhibition at re- prices comes. Saint-Simonianism, in fact, in matters of finance, professes that the public must be squeezed excessively in order to obtain the highest possible yield; in administration, he is averse to order, accounting, and pre-decision; he prefers arbitrariness, grace, whim, the fantasy, inspiration. Those interested in the foundations of Crédit Mobilier knows something about that.

FINANCE AGAINST THE STATE | 173

'When it comes to companies formed for fifty and ninety-nine years old, the claims can to remain in a latent state for a long time, before taking the proportions of a clamor. But for the Exposition which, Born in 1865, it was supposed to end in 1867, it was not possible to conceal for a long time the original sin saint-Simonian. Also, from the very first months of the year, It was a general {colle, in France and abroad, against-the commission. oo

Mr. Béhic had wanted to avert the disastrous effects of monopolized and to hold the Exhibition at cost price; the honor-the country's leader, since the State was interfering in the matter, exi- It was a matter of fact that it was so. It would have been inhospitable to attract The foreigners were in a trap. The commission had received an imperative mandate in this regard; we know how she It fills it. Its leases, its constitutions of privileges 30.

4

474 CH. III, – MORAL DEPRESSION

aroused universal indignation, until the day when, pushed to the point of burlesque, they provoked hilarity Gargantuan. There were concessions for photography, for catalogue, of cafes, restaurants, concerts, of theaters, changing rooms, restrooms, One Hundred Trials More or less ridiculous things were grafted onto these monopolies. The catalogue entrepreneur forbade any bookseller to exhibit and sell no book, no drawing having related to the exhibition, the farmer of the display demanded 300,000 francs in damages to English people who had displayed their mechanical drawings in a glass case. Exhibitors were forbidden to build: their watches made by workers of their own choosing, who would have asked for 80 francs per linear meter, because an en- (the carpentry business owner had obtained permission to establish these cons- Instructions at a minimum price of 350 frames per meter, _privilege of cafe tables without chairs and wings

without labels. | |

In a free country, the actions and words of the commission-
The proceeds from the Exposition would have provided the basis for a hundred vaudevilles, Censorship in France did not allow it. Mr. Le Play and...
His coadjutants got away with it by staying abroad.
as in our country, the object of public ridicule. The go-
The government was quick to sense the absurdity of the situation and the odiousness of his position, But, as we have said, when he
He surrenders himself to financiers, he is no longer in control of anything.

FINANCE AGAINST THE STATE 175

VII

The sequel's claims are growing because of tolerance and weakness of public authorities to
In his regard. The audacity of the Jewish community surpasses all that that the imagination could invent. And now she has dared to urge the French government to declare war.
This is a fairly recent phenomenon, and public opinion is not yet... completely recovered from the emotion stirred in the country by the scavengers, regarding a resolution, quite natural However, from the Belgian government.

A law, improvised in a few days, forbids Belgian railway companies to have of their network with foreign countries and to modify the clauses of their concessions without the authorization of the authorities indigenes.

That's how things are going here:
Two adjacent French companies cannot even to unite their rails into a single administration without the self-
The minister and the Council of State's decision. What an outrage!
Have our neighbors made us by applying our own principles?
And what about our legislation?

And first of all, what is it in the species that gave rise to it?
What's the point of this ridiculous conflict? Our Eastern company has af-closed the operation of the Grand Duchy's railways of Luxembourg. The tycoons of both countries negotiated the affair between them, as if there were no other in the world.
their power and suitability than their will. The taste-
The Belgian government, understandably offended and worried, takes a decision prohibiting such transformations they are growing on his territory without his consent. That's the casus belli.

Then the gang of scoundrels set out to flail their weapons.
in the wind. Belgium dared to thwart a combination of financiers; it's not too much to ask for his removal from the . map of Europe as expiation. The newspapers of the triumvirat, the intermediaries of the Crédit mobilier, the innomma-
the issues we have identified, challenged to justify of avowable resources, sound the war trumpet-Saint-Bérain leads the crusade. What does that mean!
the French government has not yet recalled
Brussels, its ambassador!

Public opinion, surprised and stunned by this belligerent explosion an unexpected queen, which she doesn't understand at all, smells some bloody hoax, some kind of blow to – The purse supported by the Chassepot rifle. And in fact, it is not nothing else. | E

Did Belgium have political motives – and for-Why wouldn't she have any? – She doesn't need to put them on forward to repel the horror of the invasion of our financiers; honesty and instinct are all he needs.
conservation. It does not have, like our shareholders imfools, threw two billion in bounties to the scoundrels and capital gains to acquire railways; she to made up of cost price and cost price.

Really, she's incredibly presumptuous, our com-
Eastern company, going beyond our borders, especially among the Belgians, order, regularity, wealth!
Do we know the conditions under which it operates in France?
worth mentioning:

\

FINANCE AGAINST THE STATE 477

4° She received 200 million from the State absolutely free (190,652,153 francs at the end of 1865); – 20 the Treasury guarantees him nearly a billion of loans (860 million in capital and 40,033,000 francs)
of annuities as of December 31 +865); – 30 it applies “the highest rates; – 4° it was unable to distribute its meager dividends of 33 francs per share than in pre-

2,158,063 francs in 1866;

4,134,284 francs in 1867.

And Von is surprised that Belgium is barricading itself against the invasion of such administrators.

Secondly, that's not all: our chauvinism doesn't allow that we know what is happening, both good and better, at the door of our house; we completely ignore the Belgian fare and traffic conditions regarding rail transport. Our Flemish, however, better educated by virtue of their immediate proximity, you would say that, contrary to the Saïint-Bérain and company, this It was the Belgian administrative system that invaded France.

The report states that Belgium's small railways Mr. Plichon's report to the Nord General Council produces a gross revenue of 16,000 francs per kilometer, with rates considerably lower than ours.

And again:

The 3,000 kilometers of railways that crisscross 'Belgium gives an average of more than 25,000 francs. per kilometer, with freight rates of 25% lower than those of French companies, and fares of travelers reduced almost to the absurd; indeed, if these

IN

178 CH, III, – MORAL DEPRESSION

fares were applied to the Northern network, a traveler from Roubaix, Tourcoing or Lille to Paris would pay, in 1st class, less than 7 francs, and less than 3.50 francs in 3rd class.

The journey, which costs 244 francs in France, is not paid in Belgium, only 43 francs.

So Belgium doesn't want our French Shylocks to...
They will impose increased taxes on her
of twenty-five percent on goods and of five
One hundred percent on the travelers. That's why Shylock and Saint-Bérain call France to arms.

But what is the final word on this tragicomedy?

Here is the first letter.

The Guillaume-Luxembourg Company was con-established with a capital of 50,000 shares, issued at 500 francs;
That's the price Messrs. Prudhomme paid. The securities one day they fell to 100, to 98, to 96. That day, Shy-Lock bought back everything he could; the 25 million didn't...
They didn't cost b. |

Besides stocks, there are also 27,000 bonds
launched at 425 francs, later falling to 400 francs,

. which Shylock and Saint-Bérain stuffed their wallets, sniffing out or brooding over a combination-naison. . |

Did not the treaty of the Eastern Company bring back that the price of 250 francs per liter would be a a bonus of 41.5 million on the prices to which bought Shylock; if we regained parity, the profit
The total would reach 25 million. Already, under the influence of rumors favorable, and thanks to a skillful game of strings about

FINANCE AGAINST ITS SHAREHOLDERS 179

Thanks to this treaty, the shares had risen to 200 francs.
approximately. What was needed to complete the work? Con-to seize control of Belgian roads, to increase a quarter the tariff on goods and quintuple that travelers,

Belgium refuses to be pushed around. And so the Saint-Bérain, to whom the customs of the stamp and the deposit-have left public opinion defenseless, swell their voices and they cry out: France is outraged; the arro-
The Prussian's oppression has become intolerable; revenge is necessary.
The insult to our flag!

of the oppressed, a law which, twenty years earlier, had brought about the revolution resolution of contempt for the sole honor of morality and of Honesty, that is what excites the infamous Jew-Verie and Saint-Simonianism brought you down!"

This involves restarting an expedition in Belgium. Mexican for the benefit of the Jeckers of the continent. One billion borrowed and one hundred thousand men killed so that Shylock earns 20 million, that's what Israeli diplomacy has called the Franco-Belgian conflict! Shylock once asked a pound of his debtor's flesh; he did not degenerate.

6 3. – THE JEWISH COMMUNITY AND ITS PROVIDERS OF CAPITAL.

WINE

When high finance allows itself to (deal also _boldly the established powers, even the most docile

Li

180 CH. I. – MORAL DEPRESSION

to his commands, the most lavish in their favors, which res-
Will she respect it? Perhaps her financial backers?
Poor cash cows! We wrote a volume of Their tribulations. And let's not forget the current bearers.
They have not, they have never bought securities at par. It is they who paid the swindlers the eight billion from the raid Saint-Simonian. Their income, with regard to prices purchase and increasing depreciation do not represent
Not 5 out of 400. But we won't dwell on this point.
A view, foreign to our chapter. Let's return to the moral aspect.
relations between feudalism and its clients.

_ The Loire Lighthouse of July 2, 1866 contained,
In the form of correspondence, the following observations:

* We are taking advantage of the moment when large companies and small, pay all the dividends of their actions and the interest on their obligations, to address
I humbly ask two or three small questions to whomever it may concern.

The law imposes an equal and proportional tax on all of the same denominations: – issued at 300 francs, redeemable at 500, producing the same yield, 40 francs per year, 7 francs 50 cents per semester.

Each company, by paying the holders of its bond obligations, withholds from the sum the tax which it owes Treasury account. Nothing better. But how is that possible? that, since the tax is the same, the companies do not operate Why is everyone being held back the same way? Why is the Paris– Lyon–Méditerranée, for example, retains 22 cents She pays 7 francs 28 centimes per coupon, while the companies of the South, the Ardennes, the North, Rivoli, retain only 20 centimes and pay 7 francs 30 centimes? For– which the companies of Orléans, the West and the Mediterranean– ranée herself, on certain obligations of which she is charged, do they make another variant and pay them Tfr. 29 c. per coupon, instead of 7 fr. 28 or 7 fr. 30 c.?

FINANCE AGAINST ITS SHAREHOLDERS 181

Once again, since the tax is the same, why this difference? – difference in perception?

Secondly, how are the sums pro– What are the consequences of these differences? Who benefits from them? Is it Is it the state that loses? Or are it the shareholders who win? If so The state is incurring a loss, why is it incurring it? harm to other taxpayers? If the excess collection– tion benefits shareholders, in which chapter of their accounting for the companies that collect it Do they include the figure?

It's a very small sum, one might say, that 1 or 2 cents per coupon. But if the revenue figure is minimal, the number of obligations is large; and if the The tax rate is really only 20 cents per coupon. Here is what the Paris–Lyon–Mediterranean companies, West and Orléans, which make Bayer 21 and even 22 centimes, receive too much:

Paris–Mediterranean, 2 cents on 3,600,000 bonds. 72,000 francs.
The same, 1 cent. on 1,183,906 bonds 41,839 »»
The West, 1 cent on 1,856,000 bonds. 18,560 »»
Orléans, 4 cents on 2,222,408 bonds. 22,240 80

Total for the three companies... 124,639 francs. 80

Add that this perception occurs twice per Therefore, the preceding sums must be doubled, so that that the three companies above would collect from their bondholders at 3%, an annual tribute of 29,279 francs. 60 cents

The principle of Judaism is that, above all, one must afflict citizens in their wealth or their means of existence. We understand, however, that here eupidity is not the main motive; what matters is to af-

| 11

* 482 CH, Ji, — NORMAL DEPRESSION

to solidify the caste and repress the plebeians. There is the law and Taxation for all; but alongside that, there are the regulations of the gang, the arbitrary rule of the lords, without which the yoke would not place sufficient weight on the shoulders of villains.

[X

The position of the shareholders, the partners of the company
The seizure is a hundred times worse than that of the lenders.
The statutes exclude shareholders from the general meeting.
of fewer than twenty or forty shares. On the other hand, Custom dictates that all sorts of people be introduced there in a certain capacity.
of claqueurs. The famous trial relating to the merger of Ports of Marseille, in partnership with Immobilière de Paris, has spread out
This wound in all its hideousness. Renowned lawyers.
Democrats and Republicans dared to defend the procedure. In the so-called Crochard case (December 22, 1886) and January 4, 4867), Mr. Senard did not hesitate to say:

We have reproduced for you the indignities put forward by Cro-Chard in the Marseille Ports affair; you were... only four lines of the Court's judgment, those in which the court condemns practices that until then were used in a large number of companies, at
to know that, for deliberations of general assemblies, in order not to have to start them again as a result of the IN-DIFFERENCE from many shareholders, we distributed actions in the hands of representatives, of people who don't relying on the possession of the shares they held from the verifiers DEOPRETATER tables;

+

FINANCE AGAINST ITS SHAREHOLDERS: 188

Let us translate the Senard principle into political terms, and suppose—sounds for a moment the author. returned to the ministry of inside, during an election period: "In order to not having to restart the elections, by way of example.
. FROM THE INDIFFERENCE of many voters, the guard—
The rural population will repatriate the children, the women, and the animals.
if necessary, all beings who are not voters, for
to form the minimum electoral contingent.

This trial and three or four others like it have given giving rise to compensation that deserves to be highlighted:

To Mr. Crochard is riens css 200,000 fr.
To Mr. de Chaumont-Quitry..... 200,000

To Mr. Bouillon...,.... TT 80,000
AMeBiesss tisse as dédaus 87,275

To MM. Paulze, d'Houdetot, de Villars... 383,000

To Mr. Dubourget..... vsssre. 072,000
To those opposed to the merger. 80,000

Reimbursement for 521 stolen shares. 300,000
Three seizures on a Mr. Jolly, head of T8 flap... 0% 3,000

Total..... 2,305,275 fr.

A chapter on which shareholders have never admitted to exercise the slightest control, & "is that of:
markets to be supplied and built.

The discount given by the general contractor to the founders—company directors, said Mr. Deplanque in 1856, in The Stock Market Almanac usually goes to 10 percent.

cfer.

10 out of 100 out of 8 billion already committed to the re-Bucket, that's exactly 800 million in bribes, the cost of 3,500 kilometers. We have revealed since the marthe Graissessac area in Béziers, the Grand-Central area, the Aubin mines, from which it follows that Mr. De-'s assessment

4

184 CH. IH. – MORAL DEPRESSION

The cover story is far below the reality.

X

However, not all waste is diverted.
nations; there are fantasies, boasting, encouragement-comments on genius.

This insatiable vanity, which occupies so much space in the national character, there too, proved to be imperative,
And the legislature and the administration gave in. This love of false grandeur, of false distinction, in the past had made us open roads one hundred feet wide,
, which had to be left impassable. When, therefore, it was Having finally decided that we would build railways, we didn't didn't ask the question of how much France yp will put, year in, year out. We proudly tell ourselves that the
The French people should have railways throughout the country.
the senses, and that, by their style, the French railways were to be born and cede it to those of no nation. The conse-
The consequence was that a large number of things began at the same time.
of lines, and which was decreed legislatively and administratively actively a completely disproportionate mode of execution with the sum of available capital: which made the excessive and impossible extent of the railways that one:
had voted. That's why, with a large expense, we we only have sections unrelated to the size of the territory. We hardly own the roads to iron than in dreams, because it is by giving birth to TEVCS that one reduced the power of vanity.

– At the time Mr. Chevalier was writing these lines, the cost The kilometer cost of the railways was 463,000 francs. However, it was the most productive network and the less costly, routes in the plains, or parallel to the valleys, without trenches or considerable embankments. Could these be mountain networks: from Orléans across Creuse, Corrèze, the upper Limousin; from the East into the Vosges; from the South to the Pyrenees; from Lyon to the: Hautes-Alpes and Basses-Alpes?

According to the effective documents published by the minis-
“In the public works sector, the cost per kilometer was, at the end of 1865, from: |

449,004 francs on the old network,

431,929 francs on the new one.

It now seems clear that it could have been established . lines at a maximum price of 200,000 francs; the tracks

Local interests prove this every day.

Vitré to Fougères railway, established by Mr. De-bauge, came back at 67,500 francs per kilometer.
These are combinations of utilities and caleu- .

Jators; no monuments, no dazzling displays, no

of grandiose masterpieces to decorate the engineers

engineers and architects. How much more glorious are the fantasies: viaducts costing 15 million versus 2 million

lions that an embankment would have cost; tunnels that collapsed melted down after having won the grand prize for their authors;

works of art worthy of being reproduced in the or-illustrated books and newspapers. We don't bargain with genius, with the aristocracy of intelligence, palladium of the aristocracy of the crowns, always odiously common.

Not far from La Loupe, on the Western line, the track crosses a small stream by means of a magnificent bridge

bias, in Alençon granite, costing 45,000 francs;
A straight culvert, made of local materials, would have cost 2,000 francs and provided the same service, with less maintenance costs. Chartres station was, before the attic conversion, built: 4° in dressed stone and rubble; 2° dressed stone and bricks; 8° stone of size without mixing.

XI

Nothing is too expensive when it comes to extravagance. One of these illustrious figures to whom governments and finance do not They bargained for nothing, Mr. Claude Arnoux, who later became-administrator of Small Cars and grand prize of mechanics of the Institute, had invented a system of articulated trains, considerably similar to the Dietz patent (1836), designed to maneuver in the curves of the most small radius. Pebbles, rolling obliquely along The inside of the rail imparts undulations to the train. of the snake, according to the literary expression: a day-ruinous in terms of traction costs and wear and tear on equipment riel, paid 125,000 francs to the inventor by the compagnie. If the idea had any value, it was at the provided that trenching and tunneling costs are avoided, of embankments and bridges. The essay would have been appropriate in the Jura, Cévennes, Vosges mountains, The Alps and the Pyrenees: we were spoiled for choice.

—

But it is indeed a matter of utility and economy; the important thing is...

FINANCE AGAINST ITS SHAREHOLDERS 1487

it was about performing a feat of strength, not in the middle of a rural population, incapable of admiration; the essai was attempted between Paris and Sceaux, so as not to to escape the judgments of the capital. Despite the condemnation of the experience, the madness continued further late from Bourg-la-Reine to Orsay, then extended to Limours. Concession of 0 years, extended to 99 years.

2,905,000 francs, interest guarantee on 4 million euros prunt, resumption of the disorganized line and implementation by the management by the State; then, to finish, everything imposed on the com-Orléans engineering school.

Built under good conditions, 'without undulation-serpent-like formations, as required by the terrain, this tronçon could have covered its costs from the outset and become Header of a useful section. Unless there is an expense considerable for curve rectification, the invention The grand prize for mechanics is and will remain in perpetuity. what it was from the beginning, a ridiculous, incom-fashion, crude, brutal, incompatible with exploitation® serious discussion. Have the shareholders ever considered to the consequences of these ruinous fantasies? and if they They wonder one day, what can they do to stop them?

The Paris to Vincennes-Saint-Maur line deserves to to take its place alongside the previous one as a design industrial and a stroke of genius from our engineers. It emb-. boat its passengers ten or twelve meters above from the ground; it passes in arcades, then in embankments, over the Faubourg Saint-Antoine, to go and sink into a a deep trench before reaching Bel-Air. The roadway, - because of these provisions, it only includes two tracks; no station possible for goods. This-Meanwhile, the promoters of the route had the idea of... laughing at the idea of making it the starting point of the line Mulhouse. The 17 kilometers operated cost 24 million. lions, or 4,200,060 francs per kilometer, fouruis part by The state, partly through the shareholders of the East. The clearest of the profit went to the properties located on the par-Prices; land values have increased tenfold. Remarkable. effect of the law of distribution under the Judeo-Saint-Simonian.

188 CH, II, - MORAL DEPRESSION

The Gare de l'Ouest, Boulevard Montparnasse, in Paris, operates under exactly the same conditions as that from Vincennes. She boards at approximately 10 meters from the above the street pillar.

Travelers, provided they are not suffering from gouty, neither paralyzed, nor wheezing, nor obese, nor women in-They, having been strapped in, eventually manage to get out of it more or less cheerfully. ly. But parcels, high-speed goods, They absolutely must be brought up to the level of the rails; we have

+ constructed for this purpose quadrangular prisms and platforms rising and descending perpendicularly the burdens, real jewels. Then we established, for the trucks, ramps that allow them to climb the hill half-charged. A waste of energy and resources, but much glory for the difficulties overcome, created at the sole purpose of having the merit of defeating them: that is what is ap-shovel encourages genius.

The marvel of this kind is undoubtedly the atmospheric railway of Saint-Germain-en-Laye, opened on April 4, 1847. The idea of employing as motive the atmospheric air, compressed behind a piston or rarefied in the foreground, is as old as mechanics. However, a machine is still needed for condensation. "or absorb the air. Therefore, according to Stephenson and practitioners, to make the force act directly on the driving components, instead of interposing a third element Whether by air or water, a great nation is always quite... rich enough to afford a small trial of a system which-conch shell, even if it was condemned by theory. Thus they had The English judged it, by establishing atmospheric traction risk on the Dalkey, Dé One and de sections Kingstown.

FINANCE AGAINST ITS SHAREHOLDERS 189

In 1844, MM. Isaac Pereire and Eugène Flachat were: delegates from the administration of the Saint-Germain line hand to go and study the new engine on site. They brought back from Ireland studies and drawings such as mentement complete and meticulous that it was only a matter of reproducto replicate, feature for feature, in our country the experimentation of beyond-* Sleeve. This is how our illustrious geniuses become Creators, innovators offline.

In Saint-Germain, said Mr. Armengaud, they copied exactly-the Irish system; the valve was executed by Messrs. Chagot, from Paris, and Joly from Argenteuil.

Our deputies hastened to vote 1,800,000 francs. to try out the innovation; the city of Saint-Germain granted a subsidy of 200,000 francs; the company The company spent twice as much. The machines of Chatou and of The Pecq buildings were demolished before they could be used and were sold. to a scrap metal dealer on Rue de Lape. The test was not completed.

!1.

D

190. CH, HI, – MORAL DEPRESSION

2 kilometers, with a gradient of 3 and a half centimeters per meter. It was necessary, in order to train at a very low speed five wagons, two suction engines of the force of 200 horsepower each. The most curious thing about the story is... that, just as the funds were being voted on in France from the experiment, the English demolished their trunk Croydon's atmospheric system was deemed too expensive. 11 It would have cost 6 francs per kilometer compared to 2 that the locomotives cost. : | Mr. Perdonnet pronounces in these terms, in his third sixth edition, the funeral oration for this ruinous extra-vacation: | |

The atmospheric system, fifteen or twenty years ago, threatened to dethrone the locomotives. His supporters were numerous. It has long been recognized that for lines with low elevation changes, under the conditions In ordinary terms, this system is completely impractical. assumed that on very steep slopes, such as that established between Le Pecq and Saint-Germain (3.5 centimeters), it would operate more economically than the locomotives tives. An experience that lasted fourteen years has de-showed the opposite.

The English had given up on it fourteen and seventeen years earlier, without being any more stubborn.

This experiment has just been brought to an end, and the trains are now only towed by locomotives. It is It's true that the system was flawed in several areas: 1° the tube being fixed above the track, it was not possible to lifting over 62 tons at a time: that was enough weekdays, but was insufficient on Sundays sleeves and other busy days, because the trains often weighed 142 tonnes at that time; in this case, it was necessary to divide them; the stationary machine towed one half, and 1. An ordinary locomotive, the other half; 2. The machines fixed working for only 6 minutes, at inter-valleys, quite far apart, were very expensive considering their work.

But these flaws are minimal compared to this—for having required considerable establishment costs rables.

As for traction, we compared the costs by convoy and by kilometer on the road to Saint-Germain, the service being done with fixed machines or _ with locomotives, and we found, in the first case, 3 fr. 80c. at 4 fr., and in the second 1 fr. 32 tbsp.

The costs are therefore much lower with the locomotives than with fixed machines, and if we add the interest on invested capital in both cases, the difference becomes enormous.

The Saint-Germain machine, after fourteen years pointless experimentation, since the English had abandoned the atmospheric system before it had functioned. Having arrived in France, he went to join his elders on rue de Lape. from Chatou and Le Pecq, as well as the tubes, pistons and the valves. Only one thing remained of the attempt: it is that the two importers became, Mr. Isaac Pereire the first financier, and Mr. Flachet the greatest engineer of the world, Cost: 6 million establishments, triple that in Maintenance costs and derision as a final word.

As a price for these extravagances, the shareholders make to their nabobs of the princely civil lists: a director tonche 100,000 francs per year; a works director, 80,000 francs; the operations engineers, each 30,000 francs, and the gatekeepers, 40 francs

492 CH. III, – MORAL DEPRESSION

per month; bonuses double, triple the big ones treatments, and pension funds are chipping away at the small; we will return to this other variant of the law distribution.

Let's not abandon the railways by changing paragraph; they are still the inexhaustible mine when These are acts of harassment and violations of common law.

The public whose tribulations we are about to recount as a customer is, – let's not forget, – the same one who, as a taxpayer, provided companies with a mul- half a subsidy (as much as the shareholders) and guaranteed four billion in loans, not counting _what the future holds for him.

The most terrible element of disruption for the com- Merc and | industry, that's how companies railway companies apply differential tariffs, which we discussed on page 122, when considering the question- tion from another point of view. From Calais to Creil, the Bulky goods pay 2 francs 40 centimes per ton. because there is competition from river transport; from Creil to Paris, where one no longer has to fear navigation, the tax rises to 4 francs 40 centimes. Similarly, the companies of the South, from Lyon, the East, the West, Orléans, have Prices are shown in hatching by zone and region, ranging from 50 to

FINANCE AGAINST ITS CLIENTS 193

400%, depending on whether the railway is in competition Open monopoly. Never before have we seen such upheaval. common sense and social economy: the paths iron, created to bring cheap transport in countries that had neither canals nor rivers, con- that is precisely where they focus their abuses and their perceptions. usurious, reserving their tax exemptions for the benefit of the inhabitants many valleys, already favored for centuries their means of communication.

After the arbitrary taxes based on distances come the treaties of favor, veritable entailed estates created by disloyal administrators who favor certain favorites sometimes for their own benefit through the use of inter- names questions were raised. From a trial held in 1867, it emerged that a The ironmaster from the East had obtained on his transports a tax refund of ' 73 c. per tonne: which cons- held an annual profit advantage over its competitors of 750,000 francs. This arbitrary decision resulted in the restoration of... blir.in France, in another form, the old provincial customs, as we have abundantly mentioned- as established in the previous chapter (pages 114–138).

When tax exemptions are granted abroad, at the discretion of the taxpayer, the tax refund France's downfall is nothing less than crime.
of harm to the nation; there is more than just weakness in the part of the government not to repress such fixed penalties. There is an article 417 in the Penal Code who had targeted this type of attack:

Anyone, it is stated, with the intention of harming the undu-
French trie, will have allowed di- to pass into foreign countries _ rectors, clerks, or workers of an establishment, will be punished with imprisonment and a fine.

494 CHI, – MORAL DEPRESSION

What, I ask you, is this peccadillo?
above, noted next to the companies taxing at 92 francs
the raw materials that remain in France, and at 80 francs.
Those that will open abroad? From Dunkirk to In Paris, English fabrics pay 22 francs for transport to the Northern Company, while the fabrics manufactured
In Tourcoing, Lille, and Roubaix, they pay 26 francs, although The journey is shorter. There is no expression to describe such a regime.

Banners are charged on certain lines in qua-Third class. – Fine, said the company, I cannot
I will go against the specifications; I will apply the prices of the fourth class; only I will not guarantee the bales against the hook of the charger than to those who will pay third-class fares. We have seen this laborers riddled with holes in the train stations
the packaging brought in by bad apples, that's-that is to say, by the manufacturers who wanted to stick to the price legal of Ja fourth class.

And this speed, this suppression of distances which the literary lackeys made so much noise, to the glory of Jews and engineers, we need to see what becomes of them in the hands of the companies. From Marseille to Paris, the Railways take twenty days for the service of Slow speed; from Paris to Rouen, six days. We
We have cited a fact elsewhere; from Corbie to Amiens, four leagues, when the delivery of goods takes place seven days after shipment, there is no need to make a claim. compensation; this is the measure of the legal time limit. Under Louis-Philippe, the accelerated rolling process brought the cottons into wool
From Le Havre to Alsace within a maximum of twenty days.

under penalty of detention. Since the railways, the
The regulatory period is thirty-five days.

However, there is a way to reach an agreement if we want to be served faster: it means agreeing to pay more.
price. in

It remains a given that the factories located on the route of a waterway, which can perform completely their water transport, - it is a condition-essential tion, - enjoy both the low price and Speed: thanks to geographical location
In addition, there are those coming from the enemy coalition of the navigation. Always in the poorest regions High taxes and long delays. It's appalling.

7 XTII

There are no kinds of beggars that companies do not-windy,

The shipping slips all bear large print.
letters these words: WITHOUT GUARANTEE, the railway refuses to receive goods from the one who does not con-doesn't feel like giving him a discharge in advance in case of loss at of damage, it is open revolt against the law, which says Indeed :

The valet is liable for the loss of items to be transported.
to bear, except in cases of force majeure. He is guarantor of damage other than that which arises from the inherent defect
. of the thing or of force majeure. (Art. 403 of the Code of trade.)

1496 CH, IL, - MORAL DEPRESSION

Such is the law common to all French people; but the Jewish law: Without guarantee or liability, what
"Let it happen," she said; "and you will sign, otherwise I will not transmit-"
It does not carry; and as there is no other way than the mine, I ruin the trade and the manufacture of the recalcitrants. |

a region known for its barbarity, where the population mistreats Jews. Don't believe a word of it: they are simply honest people who hunt down scoundrels, usurers, to the plunderers of labor; religion is not for nothing in this act of high justice.

So here it is, our national Jewry, reinforced by the Saint-Simonianism; not content with having conferred upon it 41789 civil and political equality, we delivered to him the monopoly of our transport, with subsidies and guarantees ties by the billions. That's just a small sample of this that she gives back to us in return. We ask this of everyone a man who has not lost his sense of dignity: Is it possible for a nation to live in such abject poverty? reille, bowed under the insolence, the arrogance, the rod and the exactions of these hordes of scoundrels, who, without inventing tion, without work, without genius, have MONACAPED the most vivid Sources of the country's wealth?

However, morality and written law say, no one may stipulate against the law; any agreement conceived in outside of common conditions is null and void. Also the courts, when a claim is brought before them submitted, do they not hesitate to break these initiatory stipulations? _ fairness, imposed by fraud and duress. But there is no criminal penalties, and this has to be repeated every time.

FINANCE AGAINST ITS CLIENTS 497

Commercial Court of Caen, September 40, 1859:

The railways, which have a monopoly on transport: cannot, by means of a disclaimer of warranty, that they require the sender to disclaim responsibility which weighs on them as freight forwarders, under the general terms of commercial law.

Whereas the disclaimer of warranty required by the companies, which exercise a privilege and a veritable monopoly, can only oblige senders in the measure of what is just and reasonable, and according to the cases which may arise; that these principles are all the more more true, than by reason of the very monopoly exercised by the Western company, R. was unable to give free consent lement to the disclaimer clause required of him, since he had no other mode of transport option.

Imperial Court of Paris, August 22, 1859:

French companies that undertake trips circulars produced with the assistance of foreign companies, are responsible for lost and stolen packages, even when-
that the break-ins took place abroad, on lines co-contractors, for the said circular journey, with the com-French company.

Commercial Court of the Seine, May 8, 1856 and
September 7, 1859:

The railways that handle the transport of livestock intended to supply Paris, are responsible for damages towards the shipping companies
eurs, when the livestock did not arrive on time.
Useful for market days.

They cannot invoke the provisions of special tariffs.

198 CH. lil. — MORAL DEPRESSION

- Ciaux that would absolve them of all responsibility in this
In this regard, although these tariffs have received the approval of the authority, if they are not related in the letter of farewell
"ture, which alone governs the parties in matters of trans-freight port.

There is slight censorship in this last paragraph.
encroachments by the administration; a ruling by the Imperial Court of Paris, January 6, 1888, acentue
the case law in such a matter is very clear Tier:

The judicial authority has jurisdiction, to the exclusion of the administrative authority, for the resolution of difficulties and the assessment of tariff changes by the companies, regarding shipper claims.

Court of Cassation, December 30, 1857:

Because a railway company is not bound,
according to its regulations, to ship by slow speed.
the goods and livestock that it takes charge of transport, that within two days of their registration-damages for delay in the arrival of the merchandise or livestock shipped, even within this timeframe, when there is a relationship between the company and the sender a tacit agreement by which the company has committed itself to send the goods out in such a way as to make them arrive in time for them to reach the market where they are to be put on sale. This agreement can be proven by presumptions. _and by all the evidence. The judges were able to note especially to make it the result of a series of previous expeditions, which in their eyes constitutes a long practice.

FINANCE AGAINST ITS CLIENTS 199

Imperial Court of Paris, March 22 and 30, 1860:

Companies cannot refuse to issue to exporters of waybills stipulating, at a rate of indemnity, in case of delay in the arrival of goods, the one-third of the transport price was retained.

Imperial Court of Paris, December 7 and 14, 1860:

The recipient is entitled to refuse delivery and the payment for transport before verification of the internal condition of the goods as well as outside the packages. The administration cannot, based on this refusal, have the matter brought before experts appointed in court, to the verification and verification of the state of objects transported.

Court of Cassation, July 17, 1861 +

The recipient of a shipped item is not required to use, for transport from the station to his home, from the truck-swimming organized by the company. He can, if he prefers, or collect the item himself at the station, or have it collected by an agent of his choice, although the label. The shipping label bears the mention: HOME DELIVERY.

Imperial Court of Paris, May 18, 1863:

When a package lost by a company is not found that subsequent to the favorable time for using the

to receive it, even with an offer of compensation, and to claim the full price of the merchandise,

Imperial Court of Montpellier, April 18, 1863:

The companies are responsible for the loss of the animals

...

200 CH. Ill. – MORAL DEPRESSION

evils whose transport is entrusted to them, even though These animals were placed in a special wagon, at at the sender's own risk and peril, if the lack or disappearance of some of the transported subjects may be pre-sumée attributable to the poor layout of the wagon.

Commercial Court of the Seine, November 42, 1863:

The companies are responsible for the deaths of the chefs worth they carry, although these horses have been placed in stable wagons by the employees of the ex-petitioner, and that the regulation adopted by the administration frees them from liability for accidents teeth that appeared during the ride, when he was also established that the train transporting them had been parked for a long time-time on the road, and that the horses were not the object of no supervision.

Commercial Court of Rouen, November 2, 1863:

The companies are responsible for the damages sustained naked during transport, despite the stipulation of no guarantee imposed by them on shippers.

Another clause of the Saint-Simonian Code, inspired by the same spirit of greed and despotism, it is the one who is printed on the baggage claim forms: "In In the event of a lost package, the Company is only responsible for travel; she is only responsible for registered items. Always, alongside the law made for madmen, come... regulations outside of common law. We have not

Needless to say, the courts are assessing this pre-attention to the same measure as the previous one.

THERE

.

FINANCE AGAINST ITS CLIENTS. 201

Civil Court of 11th Seine, February 20, 1856:

The traveler whose trunk has been lost has the right to re- to claim compensation equivalent to the loss he suffered, without being able to object to the lack of declaration special; it cannot depend on the company to limit by a regulation its responsibility to a determined sum. mined.

Whereas a clause that would limit the liability of the administration cannot bind third parties who may have been unaware of it. rer, and who, moreover, were not able to give him a free and reasoned adherence, forced as they are to to comply with the company's requirements.

'Civil Court of the Seine, October 46, 4857:

A company is responsible for any object that has been received from a traveler by one of his agents, during . even though this object has not yet been registered. The aver- printed material, under the terms of which the company de- Clare only responds to registered items, not in any form not between her and the traveler a contract whose administration The administration is entitled to raise this objection.

The railway companies, said Mr. Descoutüres' substitute, claim many rights which. are unfounded. Among their claims are that of not being held responsible for the loss of objects that have not were not recorded. We need to be clear about this: the bubble-

They do not bind the traveler. This is the established case law of the court, and we wish to reiterate that. The sole principle This is true: the company is responsible each once she can blame herself.

The Imperial Court of Paris, by decree of the 24th of no-

"

202 CH. I. – ... MORAL DEPRESSION.

November 1857, a. er. the Orléans company to to pay a traveler the sum of 3,700 francs for loss of a trunk containing 5,600 francs in gold, according to the statement of the owner of the trunk, the package having was lost or stolen from one of the Company's buses which lead travelers from the station to the various are a third of the city.

Imperial Court of Angers, January 20, 1858:

The railway companies, notwithstanding all their printed statements and opinions, are responsible, in
In case of loss, not only of travelers' belongings:
but also sums of money contained in the lost trunks, when these values are in proportion with the needs of the trip and the traveler's situation.
These sums, being considered as an accessory in-Dispensable baggage, are not subject to a special declaration and payment of the established duties for the transport of gold and silver materials.

Therefore, the companies are only doing one act of hypocrisy when they decline responsibility under under the pretext that the values were not declared and that they did not pay the special rate. The administration, in fact receives tied, sealed bags or packages for the de-
a statement made to him, without verifying its content;
She taxes according to the stated tariff and assessment; then
When she delivers the package, she intends not to be responsible for what it contains. Always Jewish law alongside the | law of honest people.

In the case judged by the Court of Angers, the claimant-commander. The Imperial Court of Bordeaux (May 12 and 24) 1858) ruled in principle in the same direction; she judged only that the sum of 25,000 francs what was demanded was no longer in proportion to what it had been. It is called the natural accessory for luggage and travel.

Imperial Court of Rouen, July 26–27, 1858:

Case law consistently recognizes that the responsibility of transport companies, in the event of lost packages, must extend to the actual value of luggage transported, despite the companies' claims to limit their liability to an arbitrarily specific figure _ fixed by them and recorded on the baggage claim slip "to the traveler or sender.

XIV

There is no transgression of the law, better observed—more vigorously condemned and vilified. Than im—door? Banking feudalism is not subject to common law that forced and constrained. She said to herself: Counting the cowards, fools, ignorant people, aspirants, we We must succeed one time out of a thousand. Most of the Indians—Vidus will first believe that our prescriptions are, if not the law, or at least an annex to our monopoly, a granted as a favor, an exception, agreed upon and approved like so many others by the Minister of Public Works. Those who suspect fraud will not dare to complain. either uncertainty of success, or disgust. An obsessive re—

204 . _ CH, Lil. – MORAL DEPRESSION

Vendiquera? May he please! He'll see what it costs for to obtain justice against us: we will oppose him with exceptions tion on incompetence; – we will exhaust all means dila—toires, we will drag it out for three years of default in opposition. Winning his case will cost him ten times the sum in dispute. What does it matter to us, who have a Organized litigation? If the administration is found liable,

If the dividend falls, taxpayers will cover the deficit.
Was there ever a more revolting pact of iniquity? Is there possible to find, in space and time, a nation more ignominiously plundered, deceived, contaminated-born, slapped, mocked, that the French nation, so infamous-killed, however, by her egalitarian pretensions, which she makes: willingly mourns the loss of public freedoms?

d XV

If the companies belonged to free industry, there would be no reason to raise a protest against them public tion. But, invested with a monopoly with sub-convention and budget guarantee, they are only a demembership of the common domain, and the complicity of Their misdeeds are traced back to the administration, which tolerates or approves. For ten months I had the honor of to write a daily journal, open to complaints from. all the wounded and harassed by privilege, it was a cl-meur, a lament of incomparable sadness. This daily investigation, using miscellaneous news items,

FINANCE AGAINST ITS CLIENTS 205

Some serious, others grotesque, all odious, how-
It was enough to shake the public out of its torpor. The work was not continued, and no book will replace it.
Let us recall, however, a few 'anecdotes', while remaining on the terrain of the chronicle, since we promised to reserve this chapter for readers who are interested in figures are not interested.
The Paris suburban service, on the lines of The West and Vincennes, does not have third classes; His Sunday rate is twenty-five to one hundred percent. more expensive than the one from last week. This benefits the worker, if we are to believe the famous maxim of the Cons-Technical: The more a nation pays, the richer it is.
In 1855, on the day of the Loges festival, the line of Saint-Germain, which has a rate of 25 centimes on weekdays, 4 francs 50 centimes on Sunday, raised the price of tickets to 4 francs 60 centimes departing from Paris, 3 francs after midnight at departure from Saint-Germain. We are not saying that she didn't We did not do the same thing in subsequent years; we did not We were not, and we only certify what we are sure. u
On September 22, 1855, there was a large crowd at the 'Orléans station for the seven o'clock morning train.

although the distribution had started half an hour ago
Before departure, it was easy to see that the employee was not there might be enough. The travelers lay down in long queues like the curious at the doors of the theatres days of free performances. The receiver did not remain idle.
Not for a moment. In accordance with his instructions, he closed the ticket window at five to seven. About fifteen people—12

' ;

266 CH. I. — MORAL DEPRESSION

4 ORAL

Sonnes, who arrived well in time, could not get a place.

— You will take the eight o'clock train, they were told.
However, this convoy, being direct, did not serve all the stations; then he only had first-class stations left, at 80% more expensive than the third option. Anger and protests, intervention of the town sergeant against the Discontent, arrests. We had come to lead a friend. We asked to speak to the stationmaster. He he admitted to us that the administration could well be in His fault, that he couldn't do anything about it, adding that one shouldn't, p+s blame the subordinates. But the superior, the responsible—
Where can I find sand, please?

This clearly highlights the second aspect of the system:
The humiliation of the public. The people must be taught obedience and proving to him that the companies are not Not at his service, but he at theirs. That explains it.
again the refusal to open the halls to arriving travelers
in advance. By rain, storm, snow or islands
In the heat of the heatwave, you have to stay outside until The standard time. One and a half billion in subsidies and a 4 billion guarantee does not even entitle them in respect of the fact that hospitality in all countries provides free of charge to the first person who comes along.

Who hasn't experienced similar indignities?

A traveler arrives at Blois station, wearing in his arms a child who had reached that ambiguous age classified between free and half-price. The ticket collector accepts the toddler for free. Our man registers his luggage; he had to pay for the excess.

In the waiting room, another employee: — The child must Pay up, go get a second slip. — The cashier

#

+

FINANCE AGAINST ITS CLIENTS. 207

judged that there was no case to answer. – I judge otherwise– Lies; you shall not pass. No explanation needed.

The train was entering the station. What to do? Comply. The
The traveler takes a second ticket. With two tickets, he had no more excess baggage; he went to the office to claim the refund that was owed to him. – Which
It is written, it is written, you will claim it upon arrival.

The check in Paris takes place before entering the station.
Our claimant requests to keep both of his ballots.
in order to obtain his baggage allowance. – Impos–
"It's possible," said the controller; "only you can call me–" to give testimony.

Complaint at the station. – It's up to the central administration–
the department that you need to contact, in the Chaussée-d'Antin.
Response from central administration: –'Your claim–
the theory is perfectly well-founded; it only needs to be proven Your statement; return to the station (why not to Blois?)
and get yourself a certificate. There was enough to make one wonder "Wait." – "Here," said the employee finally, in a paternal tone, Believe me, drop the matter; you would lose more than time than it's worth. – Theft and outrage, it's always the same system.

= Convoys, having three-class seats at the de– part, are relayed, thirty leagues further on, by a train express train that only has first-class tickets. Passengers from Seconds and thirds are forced to stay and swallow the child, three and four hours, often in the middle of
at night, while waiting for the omnibus train.

On June 24, 1857, a traveler appeared before the Compiègne criminal court. His crime was for refusing to show his ticket to the ticket inspectors

208. CH. III. – MORAL DEPRESSION

Route. Ridiculous obstinacy! some will say.– How to describe
So, should we call a criminal for such a stupid thing?

to relinquish his ticket. It had happened to him, a short time before, an adventure that proves that in terms of tickets With iron, it's better to hold on than to show it. this same northern line, at Breteuil station, a The ticket inspector had come to collect the passengers' tickets. from the same compartment to mark them. Then he had handed over with such confusion that the accused of Compiègne, carrying a ticket to Amiens, had received one for Ailly-sur-Noye; he had been forced to pay the fare supplement between these two stations. He had sworn he wouldn't be caught again; but one doesn't defy with impunity the law of the Jews.

This reminds us of another atrocity. The These companies display: In case of loss of the ticket, the traveler-geur must have the longest journey, he only came from the last-last station. In similar cases, the courts admit all possible evidence, testimonial or written. There are a hundred ways to establish one's starting point; the a guest's or friend's testimonial, an invoice, a note of a restaurant. The courts would admit all the evidence; but the Saint-Simonian sequel sees in its Settling a double profit: scamming a traveler and the humiliation of a Philistine. Payment must be made in advance, under reserve if you want, under penalty of being thrown in at the station, in accordance with the jurisprudence of the commissioners of surveillance, mostly by old soldiers, happy to import the habits of the capo-realism. » j

FINANCE AGAINST ITS CLIENTS - 209

XVI

An axiom of the law of honest people states that the good Faith is the basis of contracts. Here's how the principle is applied to railways.

On Sunday, December 9, 1867, several travelers – from the same company (I was part of it) went from Paris in Fontainebleau, equipped with round-trip tickets to third, at the price of 4 fr. 50 c.

They left Fontainebleau at 9:30 a.m. nuts; the train not containing thirds, we give them made each person pay an additional 2 francs 70 centimes for occupy seconds.

Don't laugh at this filed regulation, which is not displayed not, which is not found in the Bulletin of Laws or in the Moniteur, which remains clandestine, in the hands of chiefs train stations that sometimes refuse communication (I'm referring to them). (Speaks from experience). Because if you find yourself in con- If the violation involves him, it is the correctional police who

times. :

Thanks to the kindness of the Commissioner of Surveillance-vigilance, – I say vigilance, because we do not recognize– no right arises for claimants, – I could read and co-pier the article of the regulation. Here are the texts: |

Any traveler occupying, at their request, a seat in a class higher than that indicated on his ticket of going and returning, or who, during the journey, will have taken This place will be held:

ls (a case foreign to ours);

98 If the event occurs only on the return, to pay the the price of the seat he occupies, according to the standard rate, deducting the value of the return coupon which it is paricur,

Now submit the question to any man of

FINANCE AGAINST ITS CUSTOMERS | 211

In good faith, tell him to arbitrate the tiebreaker: he will do it for you. the following account: .

\

Price of a third-class ticket, round trip: 4.50 francs

Dont MONIB esse sense céosssduos size © 25

Price of a round-trip ticket in seconds: 6.20

Half of which... onda sooéasdestaisen 04 A0

The traveler who, on the return journey, is forced to take Islands seconds, having already paid, on..... ". 3fr. 10

A half-intersection in third gear., . . ,.. 2 95

Must be returned. 0.85 francs

His trip cost him a total of 5 francs, 35 centimes, and 85 centimes. less than if it had taken seconds there and back.

Nothing could be more equitable, if one consults justice, the sense common, the good for finally, the basis of contracts. Thus.

But by taking a closer look, we arrived at a different conclusion.
The approved fare, deposited in each station, but never displayed, explicitly stated that payment must be made following
...before the regular rate. Gold:

The standard price of the journey in seconds from Fontaincbleau in Paris is from..... .. + A4fr. 95

Deduct the return coupon for third-party items... 2.25
Still to be paid..... 2 fr. 10

And that's how it's legal that, for having used the thirds on the way there, seconds on the way back, the travelers pay 7 francs 20 centimes; whereas if they had having taken the seconds at the start and finish, they would not have paid only 6 francs 20 centimes, that is, 4 francs less. It is necessary to...
to dispel the idea of saving and economy. . ;

Such subtleties are a disgrace to the administration.
and the affront to public decency:

212 CH. III. – MORAL DEPRESSION

4. Because good faith is the basis of agreements
(this reason is peremptory and should suffice);
20 Because all consciences protest against

'of such methods, except for one hundred and thirty-six consciences'

—

'of the one hundred and thirty-six podestàs of the French railways;

3° Because, in the good faith of the travelers, the Compa-
Genies oppose surprises, mischief (unbearable)
in court), recorded in a regulation that is not displayed not, that it not be promulgated in the Moniteur, nor in the Bulletin laws, although it has the force of law;

4° Because the first movement of travelers
Thus surprised is the indignation, a legitimate indignation;

5° Because indignation provokes in everyone, or—Businessmen, bourgeois, even shareholders, explosions of insults;

6° Because insults, even in number and spontaneity
These offenses are the subject of official reports and convictions.
tions ; :

1° Because finally everyone is bringing it up, with a great semblance of reason, even within the government, the responsibility for such acts.

XVII

We will not leave the chapter on approved tariffs—
fords without revealing our full thoughts, especially since the Case law seems to have gone down the wrong path so far.
in their interpretation, especially since the audience doesn't know the first word of the question. In order to...

FINANCE AGAINST ITS CUSTOMERS 213

To make things clear, we will put our presentation into practice.
_ in the form of a special case that is not hypothetical,
one continues regarding round-trip tickets, return Expired.

“Every French person is supposed to know the law,” said one an axiom that must be respected, even while waiting for all The French know how to read.

The following are considered equivalent to the law:

1° The decrees,

2. The decrees,

– 8° The orders,

49 Since the empire, the senatus consulta.

Therefore, these four types of legislation are pro—published in the Moniteur and the Bulletin des lois, TO WHAT IF NO ONE IS UNAWARE OF THIS,

Through excessive favor, the Com—
companies a fifth category, that of homo— tariffs

When a citizen refuses to pay a tax that he/she—shockingly like an extortion, regarding one-way tickets and return, for example, expired return, the commissioner of Station surveillance sets up a warning against the recalcitrant individual.
A report of fraud: nothing more; he is aiming the ordinance of November 21, 45, article 63, paragraph 4, thus designed:

It is forbidden to enter cars without having taken a marble.

The penalty is found in Article 24 of the law of July 15–21, 1845: Amcnde from 16 fr. to 3,000 fr., and
In case of repeat offense, from three days to one month in prison.

214 CH. III. – MORAL DEPRESSION

"I did not contravene the ordinance of 1846," he said.
the traveler; I did not board the train without a ticket,
as proof that I presented my return coupon.

"A thousand pardons!" replied Monopoly: "your ticket"
Since it's expired, it's as if you didn't have any.

– How will I know if my coupon has expired?
the patient replied.

– That, replies Privilege (when it deigns to re– (to lay eggs), this is categorized into a multitude of rates. Thus We have : "

1. Working days: Return tickets are not valid.
lesables than for the day they were delivered, that is to say–
Say until midnight. At one minute past midnight, the coupon Expired is no longer worth its weight in cardboard.

2nd Sunday: Tickets are valid from Saturday afternoon to Monday before noon.

3. So-called pleasure trains: Depending on the importance of the festivities, Return coupons can be accepted up to eight times, and fifteen days after their delivery, depending on the cases specified.

49 Circular journeys, with the option to stop: There are passes valid for one month or more.

"Enough with the distinctions," replied the bewildered patient. All of this is tariff fantasy and cannot give rise to a fraud prosecution. Cited me in court-business registration if you are eligible.

– Sir is probably unaware of Article 44 of the ordinance of 1846, which states:

No taxes will be levied by the companies that by virtue of an approval from the Minister of Works public. *

FINANCE AGAINST ITS CLIENTS 245

Approval means that any approved tariff it has the force of law; to violate it is to break the law itself; The repression also concerns the imperial DAGEUTEUE, No, the civil party.

Aïusi, besides the law and its similar (orders, decrees, ordinances, senatus consulta), the French are cen- They know all the approved rates, since they have same effect as the law. – Let them not be frightened by so little: this will force them to learn to read.

"Well, you execrable Monopoly," the patient continued, That's your sentence. I have a coupon; you claim it is worthless, and it's not by virtue of the order of 4846, which says: without a ticket. I maintain that it is Okay. Bring me your approved price list, or rather, let- I will leave; I will look for it myself in the official collection.

11. Leafing through the volumes and years of the Bulletin des Laws. Nothing; no trace of any tariff.

– Your approved rate is, if not apocryphal, of less 'clandestine'; and I would be convicted or prosecuted because I didn't know him. The Civil Code and the... Real laws, that is to say, laws that have been promulgated!

LS

The Napoleonic Code states, article 4®:

by virtue of the promulgation made thereunder by the emperor reur. – They will be executed in each part of the empire of the moment when the promulgation of it can be known.

What is meant by the word promulgation? Dare–
Could we still raise ambiguities on this subject? Impos–

216 CH. lII. – MORAL DEPRESSION

possible: the ordinance of November 27, 1846 cuts short to the arguments by its article 4.

In the future, the promulgation of laws and our ordinances nances will result from their insertion in the official bulletin.

Article 2. It shall be deemed to be known, in accordance with Article 1 of the Civil Code, one day after the Bulletin of laws will have been received from the royal printing press by our mid-Minister of Justice.

Then came the decree of December 2–9, 1852 which regulates the promulgation formulas, depending on whether it is a matter of sénatus-consultes, laws or decrees.

Article 1, The senatus-tonsultes, the laws and decrees se– will be promulgated in the following form. (The following are the formules.)

When you consider that every Frenchman is supposed to create the law and the regulatory provisions contained therein assimilated, it cannot be said that the legislator has exaggerated the formalism and precautions regarding the publicitess. We would rather have the right to complain that he it should be limited to the bare essentials.

The advertising in newspapers of all stripes, the dis–
The percussions of the Chambers further add to the notoriety of Official promulgation, when it comes to laws. But the clerks of the Ministry of Public Works and a dozen bigwigs from the companies. Nothing "a Moni- nothing in the Bulletin of Laws. The minister signs without neither read nor understand. Proof that a former Excellence was very surprised to find herself being asked one day for a

L

FINANCE AGAINST ITS CLIENTS 217

ridiculously usurious taxation which she herself had

. dedicated the approval, without having read or understood.

Once the companies were in possession of the document, the They hide it with the utmost care. It is not found displayed neither in train stations, nor in the surrounding areas, nor in the city. For more information To find out, you have to ask the leaders of Beware, to the Surveillance Commissioners, who hold him kept under lock and key and sometimes refuse to communicate.

The companies, on the other hand, are lavish with publicity for such special provision which favours their abuses, and whose approval was most surprising often requires the vigilance of higher administration.

In any case, the companies' posters, when They do so, but do not constitute a promulgation: from which we are authorized to conclude that the condemned correctional nations that have intervened so far for violence The amendment of approved tariffs was subject to appeal. The courageous citizen who will have the patience to bring the The case before the Supreme Court will certainly change the jurisprudence.

DX VIII

4

If only we could take the administrators at their word... operations and the supervisory commissioners! Well, No; sometimes there is falsification and lying. Here is what proposes a story that would be unbelievable if it did not have the notoriety of the courts.

In 1862, on Mid-Lent, two travelers, Georges Duchène and Gustave Lefrançais were leaving for 18

218 CH. 111. – MORAL DEPRESSION

Meaux by the nine o'clock morning convoy, well-endowed each with a return ticket costing 4 francs, That's a 20-cent discount on the regular price.
returned during the night, at four o'clock in the morning, and pre-
They sent their coupons; they were told: They are pe-Rhymed, you must have full space. A debate ensues.
as follows;

Passengers' claim: The standard fare
Paris to Meaux is 2 francs 10, and from Meaux to Paris
2.10 francs; total 4.20 francs. The round-trip fare is 4 francs, a discount of 20 centimes. We are disappointed.
we have lost the benefit of the reduced rate (4 francs), and we must the ordinary rate (4.20 francs), that is to say, having already Having paid 4 francs, we owe 20 centimes.

Company Claim: Any expired coupon will not worthless; you owe 2 francs 10.

Offering a return ticket in such circumstances-editions, assuming they are legal, is always an immoral act. It's setting a trap for the good faith of public, under the guise of a lottery where there is a chance of win 20 cents or lose 1.90 francs.

The travelers stuck to their four-penny offer and left their address. The employees gave them the courtesy of not messing them up, expected, they said, that they were not in force, the sergeants of city being absent at this late hour of the Night. Imprisonment for debt remains, it seems, a right.
special in favor of companies, even and especially during-that they are demanding what is not owed to them. In the
That evening, the dissenters received the following letter:

se
There

Ministry of Agriculture, Trade and Public works. – Control of roads

Eastern and Ardennes region. – Police Station

of Paris. – Subject: violation of the order of 'service of November 14, 1861, approved by the minister.

Paris, March 28, 1862,

Sir,

It was a mistake to arrive this morning from Meaux to Paris by the train number 30, with a return ticket that had not been given to you issued only for the day of March 27th until the last train, you refused to pay the fare from Paris to Meaux or vice versa, which you had just done by a train departing from Meaux and arriving in Paris on the 28th, day where your return ticket had legally expired.

To avoid the inconvenience of a traffic ticket for contravening the service order of November 14th 1861, approved by His Excellency the Minister of Public Works blics, to which the Eastern Railway Company is within the right to request it, I prefer, through a process of conciliation, you agree to pay the company the sum of 2 fr. 10 c., price of this journey ep 3rd class; I would be forced, against my will, by your refusal, to comply with the stationmaster's requisition.

I have the honor, etc. =

The administrative oversight commissioner,

A. DE MONTEZON.

One of the accused (yours truly) went to the office from the Commissioner. He renewed his offer of 20 cent-times with a statement of reasons to support it, as has been said above. 11 requested communication of the order to service. Mr. de Montezon replied: Demand that I justify—to disregard my words is to insult me in my double quality of civil servant and honest man. Pay, or withdraw, otherwise I will be forced to add to the proof his duties. He added: Believe me, if I had I was at my office when you landed, I... would have sent them to the jail until you "RONPZ" determined to pay.

Official report: Insulting a police commissioner in the exercise of his duties

Further information obtained from the litigation department, at the movement's office, at the complaints office, he was It had become clear that the case was punishable by hanging. Our stubborn people did not p were no less stubborn in their obstinacy and made an offer, by letter charged, to pay each the 20 centimes of which they

THE A

They acknowledged their debts. The letter went unanswered. and was added to the criminal file as a circumstance aggravating; the whole thing was finally handed over to the prosecutor imperial court near the Paris tribunal.

The case was called on May 4th before the 6th chamber of the correctional police, presided over by Mr. Salmon. He the outcome of the debates was that neither stationmasters, nor employees, nor commissioner, not even the ministry publishes, I don't know— They knew the elements of the case. The case was settled, no by the service order of November 14, 1864, but by a tariff approved on April 15, 1865, notified to the Company by the said Mr. de Montezon. He was formal— stipulated element:

Return tickets are only valid for the conditions under which they were issued. Everything voyager carrying a return coupon ticket, and who finds itself in a condition other than that expected by the fare under which the ticket was issued to him, must pay the ordinary rate, less the value of the ar-

the coupon holder who has it in his hands.

Thus the claim of those assigned to the assignment was perfectly well-
The tariff had been mandatory for five years, and one had thus far condemned those who had demanded it benefit. Messrs. Duchêne and Lefrançais were dismissed the purposes of the complaint; but neither the Company nor the com-
The officers were not disturbed, although there had been some here.
their part attempted extortion with threats of arrest-tion and slanderous denunciation in fraud. Thus
The march towards equal justice for all.

In June, during the changes to the service
For the summer season, the Company requested and obtained that the unfortunate tariff of 1857 be withdrawn and replaced by another who sanctioned his claims. Four newspapers, Le Droit, La Gazette de France, Le Courrier
Sunday's edition, Le Temps, reported on the affair.
The others didn't breathe a word of it; for the journalists, who
They do it year in and year out for 15,000 or 20,000 francs worth of advertising.
free to the railways, get well for 8 or 40,000 francs worth of passes on various networks: remuneration-unequal treatment which they receive as a gracious gift, so much do the servant morals of our public egalitarian,

Despite such minimal publicity, the company of The West, which was not involved, became alarmed. It did.
display the following notice extensively in its stations:

Several newspapers reported that the court of the Seine had decided that a traveler carrying a ticket

292 CH, III, – MORAL DEPRESSION

the outdated round trip ticket "was supposed to benefit from the money by paid him, and not give him anything more than his return ticket that the complement of his place, » the administration of - Western Railways recently informed the public public, by means of a notice posted in all its stations, that the
The question had received a contrary answer. Following the jumanagement of the commercial court of Le Havre, any ticket

no one, and the traveler who is in possession of an expired ticket must pay the price of a full seat...

This judgment is, moreover, the opinion adds, in accordance with the ministerial decision of June 13, 1862, approving the special conditions under which tickets are issued of going and returning, conditions that the traveler cannot modify as one pleases.

Since then, everything has returned to normal. The Minister of public works has overhauled taxes and conditions at the whim and under the dictates of the administrations; he authorized cancellation, even of return coupons issued without discount, at the regular price.

+

XIX

This is even more serious than our trial for four cents.

Article 17 of the specifications of April 6, 1855 obliged the Western company was not collecting, between Sillé-Guillaume and Fresnay, transport costs and rates that for 31 kilometers, half the actual distance. In exchange for this concession, the State relieved the compa-

FINANCE AGAINST ITS CLIENTS 293

"genie of the obligation to build a connection between the two points.

Despite this formal clause, the company was content to make this reduction for travelers and fares general, always calculated on straight-line distances. bucket. But she continued to apply, because of the actual distance (62 kilometers), special rates.

It is easy to understand the enormity of the figure thus – perceived by the Western company to the detriment of the commerce from 1856 until June 2, 1864, all goods of significant tonnage, which have traveled from Rennes to Cherbourg and vice versa, having borne the

I say until June 2, 1864, because on that date only-lyment, and at my repeated urging, the company. sent a circular to all stationmasters, presenting them with writing to effectively reduce in the application the 31 kilometers, including the tax relief, although formally prescribed by the specifications, had been considered hitherto like a dead letter. (Accidents along the way.) of iron, by G. Bisson, mechanic, published and annotated by Mr. Baron Janzé, Member of Parliament.)

And people ask what the commissioners of Surveillance! I met one who told me: We must to be firmly supported, - although invested by the State, to to escape the vengeance of the general staffs - of companies when one wants to conscientiously fulfill one's mission. . | -

Another fact, even more serious than the previous one.

During the discussions raised in 1863 by the company the South region, in order to obtain the railway from the State direct from Cette to Marseille along the coast, it was recognized that this route shortened the distance by 45 kilometers:

224 CH, HIT. - MORAL DEPRESSION

between the two points; that therefore, since the project of the Compagnie du Midi was pushed back to maintain the traffic on the Tarascon line, it was necessary to at least make profit the public with the route reduction indicated by the Compagnie du Midi. The minister acknowledged that he was from it was entirely just to impose on the Lyon company the obligation of not perceiving, either for travelers, or for the goods, the price of which is calculated over 160 kilometers instead of 205.

An agreement was reached between the Minister of public works and the Lyon-Mediterranean company, on May 1, 1863, and was annexed to the decree of June 11 Next. This convention states, art. 5, § 3:

"Regarding the Cette to Marseille line, the the company will reduce to 160 kilometers, for the ex- points terms of the line, the number of kilometers subject to fares for travelers as well as for goods to or from this or the network of

(ral of Bouches-du-Rhône.)

It appears that in 1865, the date of publication, the pa-public had not yet been admitted to enjoy the benefit of the specifications: what constituted the illegal levy at 4 francs 69 centimes per traveler, and at 36 centimes on average per ton of merchandise. Things still need to be...
The same applies. Ah! If the higher administration-devoted as much energy to suppressing these frauds as to seizing Sir Lanterns! If the great democrats of the press devoted the tenth to revealing these depravities
the ink they poured over the misfortunes of the little one Mortara!

FINANCE CONIRES ITS CLIENTS 225

XX

The health, safety, and well-being of travelers are treated like their stock market. Many people still living people saw the third classes of Orléans and Rouen before 1848. They were literally tombs-reaux, open to the sky, without a ceiling; the floor was pierced with holes so that water could drain in case of apoure. That's where they piled the outcasts of the écu.
of a hundred sous for four or five hours and by all the weather, frost, snow, hail, showers, storms; we don't know any-would not have put livestock there. 11 required nothing less than the Revolution of 1848 to put an end to this scandalous mess taken from human life. A decree required covering all the cars. What did the Companies do then?
They invented a way to close the windows with curtains.
leather sliding on rods, always tossed by the wind. Leather cost more than glass; but the
The audience was more uncomfortable: it was a consideration decisive. It was necessary, as with the burghers of Falaise-en-Lanternois, that a new decree imposed, in 1852, the obligation to close skylights with glass panes.
(See page 147, in the note, the underlined paragraph, art. 8)
of the new specifications.)

Shall we talk about accidents? That would be the topic:
from an encyclopedia. We will simply quote from it some of them in the next paragraph.

21st

You shouldn't believe that, because we have given to the railway companies an extension of a—die, that they alone be guilty of the withdrawals usurpers and harassment of the public. The system it reproduces: everywhere, with the same characteristics and the same contempt for the nation.

In 1844, the commune of Montrouge had negotiated with a company that supplies gas at 40 cents the cubic meter, provided that on the day the price falls would be in the same service area, the municipality would benefit of the reduction granted to neighboring localities. Consequently from the merger of the companies in 1885, the price per cubic meter The price of gas was reduced, for Paris, from 40 to 30 centimes. The new company refused to extend the benefits of the com-Montrouge municipality discount, under the pretext that eke was not included in the imposed specifications by the prefect. This was before the annexation of the ban-place. Precisely because of this circumstance, the com-suburban municipalities did not yet have to pay the fee a grant of 2 centimes per meter; at 28 centimes, they left the same profit as Paris at 30 centimes, and They wanted to make them pay 40. They had to plead their case. The sorting-Bunal did not hesitate for a moment; he rejected the claims of the company and took the opportunity to express to him the assurance of his less than distinguished feelings.

The company's police forces are rife with abuse, _vexations, additional costs that are not authorized—

FINANCE AGAINST ITS CLIENTS 997

granted by the concession decree: branch privilege
Repair, maintenance and lubrication of taps, installation, sealing and sealing of the meter, punching and welding of the needles, advance payment for gas to be consumed and a deposit of 7 francs per spout for this purpose, to be paid into the hands of the administration.

Then, as always, laws alongside the law:

The subscriber waives the right to object to the payment request. any claim regarding the quantity of consumption consumed days paid upon presentation.

HAS

There are still uses that are not mentioned in the police, and about which the public sometimes complains very quietly.

Who will write up the serfs' grievances and lists of complaints?

from 1868?

Monopoly, pervasive by its very nature, worsens by-core of a host of annexes that inevitably befall him.

The Bank of France, thanks to the privilege that was granted to it renewed, confirmed, extended, it quickly monopolized the discount service and cash collection service-everywhere it has established its branches. And so it is.

monopoly like all the others; not only it

It's expensive, but it also eliminates, one by one, all the guarantees which the legislator had sought to surround with:

HAS]

commercial operations.

This is how, after centralizing the service of the en-

cash registers in Paris (which could have some advantages),
The Bank found itself powerless to enforce them.
by its employees. Indeed, overworked, the recipe boys find themselves unable to absolution to ACTUALLY present all the tickets that their are submitted. For the commercial paper service, Just as with the letters, the concierge receives the visit, and that's enough. 11 Now we'll have to record the amount of his bills to his doorman.

The receipt boy leaves that famous slip of paper that everyone
Parisians know this, which requires an endless number of errands.
which, after having exhausted the subscriber of a bill-let, often still force him to undergo the visit and the requirements of a new bailiff.

This slip reads: come and pay at the Bank at 2 o'clock at 3, or from 3 to 4... ask for Mr. , no. 00.

This is going quite well for the day of the presentation.
tion; apart from the inconvenience that a loss always causes of time in the middle of the day, and the inconvenience not It's less serious to wait an hour, and very often two.
hours, the return of a boy; we leave peacefully and certain of escaping the bailiff's clutches.

But if the unfortunate Parisian surrenders the next day
At the indicated counter, he finds an employee who gives him-way to Mr. So-and-so, a banker; the banker sends him back to his turn at the bailiff's. Lucky if, as a result of the congestion in the Bank's offices, he did not
He was not given inaccurate information in this case.
less rare than one might think, after having run from Door to door, office to office, it will still be necessary, and To top it all off, pay the 2 francs demanded by the clerk.
tasked with making the protest. And all this under the assumption of a single bill to be paid. If there are several, it is im-it is possible to escape the protest.

FINANCE AGAINST ITS CLIENTS _ 2929

XXII

The encroachment of privilege and the restriction of common law extends and becomes more widespread, penetrating
where we would never have erased or even suspected their possible intrusion: everywhere the commons are receding facing appropriation and expropriation. The purchasers, hand on certain things of common enjoyment, elewind a barrier, erect a turnstile, and, without further their right, that their impudence, levy tribute on the public, Rich and poor.

It exists in the department of Puy-de-Dôme, in 40 kilometers south of Clermont, a development of baths, very famous today, Mont-Dore. It is not point, like many seaside resorts, a place appointments for the idle, the dilettantes, the people who don't know where to spend their idleness; the persons who frequent Mont-Dore are sick

For real, according to the popular saying. To impose, at profit of an owner, collective or individual, a donation
nature's free gift, especially when it comes to diseases, of healing and health, is nothing less than sacrilege.

It is understandable that the tax authorities are asking the able-bodied citizen, at worker, to be active, in short, a part of his produced for the company's overhead costs; but to the infirm, the sick, the convalescent, the man that his sick condition places a burden on his family, claims
The sea of contributions is nothing less than a mistake.

ft

230 CH, III, – MORAL DEPRESSION

accounting; because it prevents the worker from-brought about by illness, to become active again, productive
A useful person, helpful when needed.

Let's be clear: that an establishment is formed

THAT

around the healing springs in order to offer to foreigners treatments, advanced bathing procedures, showers, inhalations, rubs, linens, bedrooms and resting beds,

meeting rooms, literary studies, the comfortable Finally, nothing better: service for service, and nothing for Nothing, it's the social law. But the poor who don't complain that the right: to drink from the springs and to immerse oneself in them, j1 no payment can be demanded.

rial, up to 4% January 4861. Under the feudal system, while the sources were the property of some sei-lord of the land, the poor man's right to natural water has never been contested or prescribed.

In 1809, a Mr. Lizet bought the springs and...
manda au préfet le autorisation de collecte indistinte-75 cents per bath and 45 cents per liter of water. The case was investigated with the utmost care, and he.

was observed:

That the public had enjoyed at all times the right to bathing in Caesar's bath and in the natural pools
the Pavillon's springs, and to draw water from them free of charge.

In accordance with the conclusions of slow a-decree of July 7, 1809 declared:

That Mr. Lizet could not receive any remuneration tion of patients who would take baths in the vats

\

FINANCE AGAINST ITS CLIENTS 931

natural and in Caesar's bath, nor people who they would draw water from it.

Some time later, with the approval of the council
general of Puy-de-Dôme, the baths of Mont-Dore were purchased for reasons of public utility. (Decree) (of March 13, 1810.) The experts tasked with proceeding the estimate did not include in their operations

* rations:

The baths taken, either in natural pools, or in Caesar's bath, nor the waters drawn from these sources, for the reason that these two objects had always public had been maintained in this enjoyment by the discretion of 1809.

In 1829, the part of the establishment known as the
The name of the swimming pools was opened to the public, and, for the modification of the service, they moved the free baths there, a kind of servitude consecrated by custom and sanctioned
by decrees, PF

The conspiracy against the rights of the poor will not be repeated.

"but not easily: but gratuitousness triumphed too:

days, notably again by imperial decree of May 8 1813, by royal decrees of December 23, 1815 and of August 29, 1821. The decree of June 26, 1849 declares, in express terms, that "the baths taken in the two Large swimming pools are free for all sick people.
distinctly.

In 1855, the Mont-Dore establishment, which had long-

The time, administered directly by the municipality, was leased to Mr. B...

Article 3 of the specifications set the prices to be drilled

239 CH, II, - MORAL DEPRESSION

to see for the water administration. It was not done mention of the Piscine baths, which, as in the past, remained free.

Finally, on January 18, 1861, a new tariff was granted
the concessionaire has the right to collect 20 cents per Bathing pools; so that there are no more baths
free in Mont-Dore.

Let's be clear here: The poor of the department, which sends a request to the prefect of Puy-de-Dôme, always obtain free access, by perspecial and personal mission. The right has been replaced by the whim; and there are people who find This is admirable, for, they say: "Charity is indeed at-above justice and law. The poor of the-Neighboring parliaments are also admitted, but at their expense relief funds voted on by the general councils.

This is perhaps less serious than the encroachments.
of financial feudalism and the attempts of swindlers;
But everything is connected and linked; the expropriation of poor people in this matter fall squarely within the signs time.

A. 5. – JUDEO-SAINT-SIMONISM AND THE WAGE-WAGED PLEBES

XXII

We are entering the seventh circle of hell: wearyciate ogni speranza. The population we have spoken so far, taxpayers, capitalists and customers,

–

FINANCE AGAINST ITS EMPLOYEES 233

is only subservient to the east by interests. The one whose
The topic of what will be discussed in this paragraph is enslaved, no-not only in his possessions, but also in his person,
his freedom, his morality, his conscience.

Indeed, if there is a group of citizens who are excited by the
both the envy of those who do not know her and the pity of those who saw it up close, it is that of the workers and employees working for large government departments. The em-Ployé starts and finishes his work at a fixed time; his Moments of leisure return periodically; he can to have at one's disposal as desired, fifteen days and six months in advance.
He has no experience of unemployment, and his budget, fixed at one Throughout the year, it allows him to arrange his plans.
think without worrying about subversive possibilities; he can save money without fearing an off-season.
Forcing him to spend the amount due on the stew which he had previously assigned a job to. He can anti-focusing on the future, certain that the periodic emoluments
The funds will enable him to pay off his loans. His the share of responsibility is minimal compared to the industrialist; some deductions, a suspension or any other disciplinary penalties are the sole punishment of a Accidental negligence.

What a difference from the worker, constantly besieged by Unemployment and wage disputes? How many?
The situation of the manufacturer and the trader is even more difficult.
those who have to anticipate business stagnation, hassles
Customer series, bad debts, payment deadlines Criticism, protests, bankruptcy. Also, out of a thousand citizens living, at their own risk and peril, on wages and pro-

Their position against a fixed job, even so the salaries would be below average annual increase in their earnings. This disease of bureaucracy is not simply a quirk of the French mindset, as the vaudeville writers claimed; that's the clue of a profound unease that can be summed up in two words: the Lack of guarantees, uncertainty about tomorrow.

However, it is a sad condition, which does not differ * essentially domesticity, rather than that of the functionnaire. What employee would ever dare to display an opinion different from that of the boss or the department head? He Is it enough to be suspected of opposition to be dismissed? The employee must not know any relatives or friends when... He is ordered to strike. He must be a witness and an accomplice. of all abuses, of all plunder, without ever having the right to express a reprimand. The official who has not not stifled within him any feeling of justice and honor lives in a veritable hell; sometimes we see those who... would sacrifice their position, the lives of their families, and more. It is better to remain in such a state of moral abjection. But these Catos, we can count them. The rest try to... to bring up to the level of common morality and to annihilate in itself every kind of will, according to the recommendation of the Jesuits: perinde ac baculus. We are not speaking not extra staff, visits and small gifts to the protectors, women from the point of view of the advancement, New Year's greetings to the chefs, some Commanding ovations for the masters.

If one still encounters in the administrations of people who dare to have their own ideas and allow themselves to Observations suggest that their specialty requires specific knowledge-

FINANCE AGAINST ITS EMPLOYEES 235

something that cannot be improvised; one could not remove to place without disrupting service. We consider, not the performance, but the usefulness one derives from it. As for the men of hardship, laborers, paper-pushers, bureaucrats and others, for whom twenty-four hours of learning are sufficient, they belong to the equipment rather than the personnel of the Company. But with mechanics and large workshops, the share of intelligence expended by the worker becomes

There are twenty maneuvers. Each employee, upon receiving his appointment, considers himself the victim of his pro-detector; it's a favor to work.

A publicist, speaking of factories where one oc-
"Cupe les femmes," he said: |

In the past, bosses and foremen maintained their teachers, today they give them open-vrage.

The wealthy patricians of Rome nurtured their numerous clients pay exorbitant fees in order to obtain their votes. in the struggles of the Forum. The factory managers, the factory managers, administrators of large companies companies have veritable armies, which they make ma- to act as they please in the ballot box or elsewhere; because They provide work for this starving population.

This decadence of society has not escaped the notice of more optimistic.

The creation of large companies, said Mr. de Gé- hiking, is a stop taken against small-scale manufacturing in the same genres: it destroys the workshops where the simple

236 CH, HE. – WALL DEPRESSION

The worker was self-employed; she caused a momentary but inevitable ruin; it puts an obstacle to the use of small capital.

Concentrating, in the person of their leaders, the principal- principal operations of the intellect, those which have for object the calculations, the direction of the work, the combinations- The speculator's sounds, the large establishments demand of these leaders a high intellectual capacity, a more A broad culture, deeper studies. Through this, they open access to the fruitful light of science field of industry; they propagate them there, they endow it on the one hand, entirely new and almost indefinite since- intellectual capacity. But at the same time they restrict, for all agents relegated to subordinate roles, the share of intellectual cooperation, and replace For These are THOUGHT through OBEDIENCE.

both to increase the number of proletarians and to nn to a purely operational job. As they rise on a larger scale, they weaken
the middle class, reducing its importance and comfort;
They give rise to a kind of industrial empire
new feudalism, by grouping large families of laborers warriors gathered around a leader, and linked their destiny to his establishments. (Of public charity).

Absorption of small industry by large industry; sup-pressure from the middle class, which will swell the ranks of the proletariat; at the top a few hundred well-fed wasting millions by the hundreds, down with a nation Completely exhausted from fatigue and misery, maneuvering
at the whim of the commanders, with the precision of a disciplined army:
This is the society that the feudal system has created for us.

FINANCE AGAINST ITS EMPLOYEES 237

XXIV

Are we making the worst-case scenario? – That we questions contemporary events,

More subtle than the theologians and scholastics,

we have achieved in the field of work the separation-“tion of the spiritual and the temporal, of the idea and the form, theory and practice. We created the transcendental schools of law, medicine, pharmacy
macie, arts and crafts, fine arts, painting, sculpture, engraving, architecture, the Polytechnique, the Centrale, Mines, Ponts et Chaussées, Normale, the Veterinarian, the Forester, without prejudice to the three baccalaureate degrees: so many Procrustean beds, on which She sized herself up, measured and molded this blissful Mediocrity who rules the world. High positions are reserved to pure science, untouched by any practical application. The mandarins
The diploma pushes men into the lower floors hand and execution, devoted to servile work, according the energetic and contemptuous expression of the Church .

The citizens of the provisional government of 1848
had not found the monopoly sufficiently condensed.
These great revolutionaries had imagined the free tuition at the École Polytechnique and founded the Ad- school

The free Polytechnic School, they said, was access to higher education, and, consequently, of High social positions for the proletariat. Where then? Had these popular reformers lived? We enter at the École Polytechnique at eighteen, after eight or ten years of preliminary studies; and the proletarian, at ten— At eight years old, one must know how to earn their bread, and sometimes that of his elderly parents.

238 CH. LI, – MORAL DEPRESSION

The School of Administration was even worse. In the public services, advancement can sometimes be given to the mere; with the innovation of our democrats, it does not— more than just a diploma mattered. The hardworking, forced to working from the age of fifteen as supernumeraries, saw their careers cut short; fifteen to eighteen hundred francs of salary became their walking stick — chal. The sons of good families, on the contrary, educated, examined— born, graduated, praised, supported, recommended, deb— were twenty—four years old for two thousand francs; the High—ranking positions became their property. Genius, word of which we are very lavish in France, cannot live in safety only on the condition of hiding behind the di— diplomas and to shut themselves away in the certificates of studies special. The competition for work freezes him with fear— vanity. Therefore, work is reduced to a bare minimum. whatever he does and whatever he produces.

There is no progress without emulation, without a spirit of initiative. initiative, and no great inventors without the impetus of the necessity, says Mr. de Janzé in his petition to the Senate against the engineers' monopoly. The history of the main developments covered in our century proves that, under the breath of With these powerful motives, genius can reveal itself at any age. It is to simple workers, often to obscure cher— the most beautiful inventions are due to: the steam, the propeller, the locomotive, gas lighting, the television Electrical writing, the railways. It's foreign,

FINANCE AGAINST ITS EMPLOYEES 239

Finally, who has just solved the problem of the installation of the transatlantic cable.

In a country where universal suffrage reigns, we ren-Let's counter this anomaly: a simple soldier can become Marshal of France; but an educated man, even if he
The genius of Brunnel, Watt, and Stephenson will never be...
but chief engineer of bridges and roads or of mines; a telegraph employee, even if he were Hughes, Morse or Caselli, will never become inspector general if he doesn't have spent time at the École Polytechnique.

This is the effect of our administrative organization, that in France it is also difficult to move from one class
in another, than in India to change caste.

We see a striking example of this in the body of the Road and bridge engineers. Kept in a state constant inferiority by the engineers, who however could not do without their experience, which the con-
The best that makers can hope for is to take advantage of the law of December 8, 1850 to obtain the title of engineer deniers. But so far this law has remained a letter dead. Does that mean that for sixteen years he hasn't Found no driver capable of taking advantage of it? No, the admission programs were written by engineers
engineers for whom theoretical knowledge alone of some value; by engineers who, considering the practice and experience as a profession, have been dominated born out of fear of seeing what they call the intellectual level of their bodies. If we subjected them to theoretical and practical examinations for all engineers, he
It is certain that not all of them would be accepted as drivers.
or, to speak like Beaumarchais: To the capacities that they demand of their inferiors, how many of them will be...
Would they be capable of being drivers?

Do we want to get a true idea of the value of the di-Plumes? To the practitioner who has sunk by thousands of meters

240 CH, IL, — WALL DEPRESSION

cubes the concrete in the bridge piers and the pilings, we requires making, in a 5 deciliter mortar, a cement according to certain sacramental formulas, Ja plu-outdated and condemned by experience. If
If he fails, his future is over; he will not reach the in-genius; he will be sent back, in a subordinate position, to continue his so-useful and helpful works under the direction of a pedant graduate, ignorant of practice, as AFROgAnt as able.

Even the most junior mining, bridge and road engineer ships, shipbuilding, telegraphs and tobacco costs the state and the companies at least a thousand lion for his learning. When he knows roughly his The job, we make him an administrator. The weight of the work it falls entirely on the pickers and drivers, riveted.

to the proletarian caste.

This is a constant fact, as the petition points out. as mentioned above, that our polytechnicians are pure of all great modern inventions. They will look to the The English and the Americans, always ahead of the others nations, drawings, tools, machines, pro-chemical transfers, even errors after retraction. Finance and newspapers promote them; no one speaks of them. plus their names without adding: the famous, the illustrious, the Dean, the incomparable one; there they are, now mandarins; and when the banking coalition, properly informed about their glory, needs to carry out a coup d'état, she takes one of these child prodigies, whispers raps to him ports, statements of reasons, and the good public says to itself: with conviction: On the guarantee of such a master, he There is no chance of error.

FINANCE AGAINST ITS EMPLOYEES 941

It was the engineers who invented the way to contain the Loire across and along its length, so as to raise the bed of the river and to grow willow groves where, twenty years Previously, there were depths of three to five meters of water. It is the engineers who are conspiring to abandon it. rivers and canals for the benefit of railways, because navigation doesn't lend itself to lyricism. These are the engineers who doubled the manufacturing department cation of gunpowder for war and commerce, multi-unnecessarily bend the tobacco factories, in order to Create jobs for the cronies of the clique. These are: the engineers who prevent steam heating wagons; which hold the handbrake against the sys- systems powered by steam, automotion or e-electricity. As long as I am director, said a manda-I will not tolerate any experimentation on the part of an inventor. on my line other innovations than my own.

The most inept ideas, as soon as they come from a gold. Those that come from another source are a animatedly repelled, unless they have an im- lift such that they impose themselves, and in this case we simply steals. – We will wait for the de- "Deadline," the nabobs tell the inventors. January 41st In 1859, the Imperial Court condemned the company from the North to 15,000 francs in damages towards a inventor whose processes she had acquired free of charge Lubrication. Loss of use for non-operation during two years, the ruling states, cannot be invoked by the counterfeiter, if the non-application stems from –the lack of financial resources, and especially when it comes to a invention which cannot be put into use by the pu- public, but only by a limited number of industrialists tries.

14

249 CH. I. – MORAL DEPRESSION

On February 26th, the same Com- was convicted company in 200,000 francs in damages towards the Vaucher estate for counterfeiting of inventions bre- vedées (metallic lining applied to surfaces) rubbing).

Another hijacking had taken on significant proportions. such as a limited partnership was organized to 'continue the demands.

XXV

This is how Mediocrity, the new power, operates. which dethroned all the others.

When will we be able to get rid of despolitism? "Capabilities!" said the King of the Jews one day, the most great among the mediocre. It was at the time when The regime was being established; it needed initiators, some Professors in all branches of the service. Some workers had the audacity to display independence dance! Also, as soon as the machinery was assembled, in We wiped the slate clean.

A director, whom we could name, informed that an entire class of employees from the North intended to warned his subordinates that, by order of superiors, who-conquie would allow herself to write, spread or sign a claim would be immediately dismissed.

FINANCE AGAINST ITS EMPLOYEES 243

The mechanics, skilled workers who were irreplaceable
* not as conveniently as grease fittings, con-Drivers, switchmen, or bureaucrats, thought themselves quite independents to overcome the administrative threat trative. They were unanimous; it was a strength. New opinion that the initial signatories would be removed, given the im-
The possibility of sending everyone back. The petitioners then imagined drawing a circle at the bottom of the claim.
information and to arrange their signatures therein in a circular fashion.
There was neither a first nor a last; it was impossible to take action.
The administration simply considered the petition
as null and void and in addition to the observations interested parties.

There is no employee: of a large company to whom ten or twenty years of impeccable service have ac-
'Who has the right to die at his post': an administrative whim
The trader is enough to break his position.

The employees and workers raised, in 1848, whatdemands for salary increases, for work-related attenuation, to participation in the organization
The provision of the service, even with a share in the profits.
date has remained a nightmare for administrations;
the reports, after ten years, still spoke with horfear of the time when one was forced to endure tyranny work. How well things have been sorted out since then!

The most beneficial, most protective prescriptions trices have long since become a dead letter to hands of mediocrities. In the past, one could not entrust driving a locomotive is something a mechanic of the a-Adjustment and assembly. Safe operation does not require no less. # '

244 CH. Hi. - MORAL DEPRESSION

Today, says Mr. Boutaud, the mechanics are re-Crusaders everywhere: hatters, masons, clerks of machine operators. It is very rare to find them today, not only men educated in the schools of government government, but also workers coming out of the big Construction workshops. Also, a passenger train If he remains in distress, we must wait for help from the nearby station to clear the track, the drivers. having no knowledge of the mechanism of the machine. China.

A large number of accidents are the result of faulty workmanship. knowledge of machine operators. For example— to get an idea of the serious drawbacks of the railway—the brutality of the mechanics as it is taking place today, We will take one fact, and the most singular one at that. A driver at night, authorized to operate the machinery, was making a maneuver at Tonnerre; he opens his regulator, cannot or no longer knows how to close it, and goes for a walk on the chemin d'Epineuil, where the wheels of his machine sink in the ruts up to the axle.

"What does it matter," Mediocrity tells itself; "the more the employee is..." The more incapable he is, the more docile he is. As for the wounded and the In the event of deaths, shareholders will pay for the damage, concurrent with the Treasury, guarantor of minimum dividends dividends.

And so that the public does not become alarmed about From these human massacres, the government has allowed to be persuaded that in the name of public safety, it was necessary to distort to simulate, for each disaster, the number of victims. Newspapers are forbidden from publishing any other figures than those accused by the authors and perpetrators of the boulevard. Darling. Do we want a sample of the sincerity of these states? During the accident of September 9, 1865, at the At Vaugirard station, the killers claimed nine dead and Twenty-three wounded; thirty-two victims in all. Four months later, a lawyer, arguing against a request of compensation by a civil party, said: "The awful accident of September 9th claimed seventy victims; The courts are only seized of two claims; this Doesn't this fact demonstrate the loyalty with which the Is Compagnie itself arbitrating the repairs?

FINANCE AGAINST ITS EMPLOYEES 245

Out of seventy, thirty-two admit to it, less than Half. And that's what they call protecting the public. Ah!

combinations of implies and greed, Jews and engineers lead to these historic massacres, he revolts for good, and it's not under the influence of these emotions that would lead him to demand the abolition of the penalty of dead.

XXVI

How is it that every time he mentions a
In this case, the prosecution has not found any other culprits.
than tiny subordinates, most often crippled in the collision for which they are held responsible? That's because the the terror that weighs on employees silences all the mouths. At L

Following the numerous accidents that have been reported, in the summer of 1855, the operation of the railways,
The Minister of Public Works ordered an en-quest. The blame was placed on insufficient staff and an excess of 14,

\

246 IC. I. – MORAL DEPRESSION

work imposed on the service men. The mid-report Nistériel hastened to declare that the companies were, from this point of view, beyond reproach. Where Had the Minister gathered his information from the Directors? They couldn't help but exonerate themselves.
near the employees themselves? The traditional terror-it would then have produced its effect; for there is no protection capable of defending a subordinate against the administrative retribution.

As soon as an accident occurs, Mr. Emion said, all the employees seem to have lost the ability to speak: in
It is futile to search for them to question them, to inquire about them.
about the misfortune that befell him, about the circumstances surrounding him rent, on the approximate number of victims; each disappears, or if someone is found for the purposes of the serving in front of the public, he is quick to relay.

dismissed after fifteen years of service to the company Lyon, because he had provided a report on a collision to a supervisory commissioner. In two cases serious, the public prosecutor was able to accuse a company of the grievance of having dismissed those who had been less favorable in a previous trial. (Accidents) (of railways.)

The government has inexplicable fondness for-towards the feudal lords; when he conducts inquiries, under the Overwhelmed by public outcry, he selected the testimonies;
He only accepts declarations that are duly signed and admitted, without guaranteeing the depositor against removal.
'It is well known that employees of large companies-gnies are burdened with service, especially the small ones, conform-

"

FINANCE AGAINST ITS EMPLOYEES. "247

based on the principle that the less you are paid, the more you work valiant.

One author writes about this: .

If railway management favors young people
As for people regarding admission, they often do well
To pay for this favor through an increased workload. It is necessary.
- to know the inner workings of all the services that depend on
of a railway to know precisely how far it goes,
On this point, the requirement of certain departments. I have to this given the data is too precise to allow us to say that I speak blindly or absentmindedly: it goes as far as destroying, through excessive work, the health of the most vigorous It's enough to discourage even the most zealous service. And that's without the compensation, quite legitimate though it may be, of an equal pay gu mal: which is understandable, since the economy, which wants that one person should do the work of two or three,
He doesn't want us to increase an insufficient salary. I think to fulfill a double duty by also appealing against this abuse
They will attract the attention of senior company executives.
It is good to take note, for discouragement is widespread among them.
Most useful employees. (Mergers, by J. MARESCHAL.)

We ourselves took up the task a few years ago, service records whose figures may be outdated,

exchange.

The driver of a passenger or freight train-Dies accompanies him to his destination. Train 403, between Paris and Valenciennes, departure at 11:20 AM in the morning and arrives the next day at 5:20 a.m., after a
The journey takes 18 hours. The driver can rest until... that at 3 o'clock in the evening; and he brings back train 106, which puts 5:20 PM to go. Departed on the 1st at 11 AM

248 CH, HL – MORAL DEPRESSION –

20 minutes later, he returned on the 3rd at 8:20 AM, after a: absence of 45 hours, of which 35 and a half were spent in road.

At least the driver can sleep in his booth.
or his van, although regulations forbid it; he
This is not the case for the driver and the mechanic. However those who provide freight service between Paris and Saint-Quentin residents have up to five consecutive nights to spend,
as evidenced by the following statement:

Departure from Paris on the 1st*, at 9 PM; arrival at Saint-Quentin on the 2nd, at 11:30 am;
Journey time: 44 hours 30 minutes.- Departure from Saint-Quentin on the 2nd, at 3:20 PM; arrival in Paris on the 3rd.
at 3 a.m.; duration of the ATOS 11 hours
hk0 minutes.

Departure from Paris on the 4th, at 1:30 am;
arrival the same day, at 2:20 PM; journey, 12:50 PM. – Departure from Saint-Quentin on the 4th, at 8:30 PM; arrival in Paris on the 5th, at 7:05 a.m.; 10-hour journey

35 minutes,
= Departure from Paris for Novon, on the 6th, at 2:45 am morning nuts; arrival in Noyon at 9:20 am; duration
6 hours 35 minutes walk.- Departure from Noyon at 12:00
40 in the evening; arrival in Paris at 7:25 a.m.; journey at 6 hours 35 minutes.

From 4:00, 9 PM, to 6:00, 7:25 AM
In the evening, 118 hours had passed, 63 of which were spent in

Clean your machine and make your tubes on each trip;
It's a 3-hour affair. The mechanic must be at the depot an hour before departure; both of them, at their Upon arrival, they have to put the machine away, do the trimmings and other ancillary work; so that it is necessary to take into account, as working hours, 42 additional hours at the mechaniccien and 24 to the driver for the six trips; which

FINANCE AGAINST ITS EMPLOYEES 249

In fact, out of 118 hours, one worked 75 hours and the other 87 hours.
of work versus 43 and 84 of rest, rest always taken during the day, since every night is spent traveling.

"I heard a mechanic say that he had given his resignation, because in the month of February in particular (his last one), he had spent twenty-five nights on his locomotive motive. I don't remember if the year was his_sextile. .

Another, who had remained on duty for six consecutive nights, having asked to be replaced for the seventh, he
He was told that this was not possible, unless he
He did not go to the doctor to be called in sick. - I am not
"I'm sick with fatigue," he said, "I don't need anything else."
He refused treatment other than a little rest.
his shift was at 2:45 a.m. The fact was considered an act of rebellion and subject to a penalty on foot. For two days.

The decision-makers remain inviolable, although the executors cannot contradict the terms of service.
We have always explained disasters by a fact that is part-private, isolated, without wondering if the cause was not organic.

During the L Boves accident in 1864, the mechanic had refused to leave with his locomotive, declaring that it was out of service without extensive repairs;
A zealous man had volunteered in his place. At post 121, the axle

250 CH, IN. - MORAL DEPRESSION

the machine broke down during a needle operation;
the train remained stranded on both tracks, so that to be caught in a scarf on the way up as in the eAcenIe which, inevitably, happened.

-

At Apilly station (Nord), there is only one employee, who is simultaneously stationmaster, switchman, and level crossing keeper. in charge of the telegraph service and team man for Maneuvering the wagons. (Railway Accidents) of iron.

Did we read the sentence against this poor switchman correctly? of the Northern Railway, which was the cause of almost The only one from the accident of September 5th? We know that Two trains met at the entrance to the station, under the Ponte Sant'Angelo, and that seventeen people were injured.

This unfortunate man, named Blainer, was sentenced to six months in prison and a 50-franc fine. It had to be done. to strike, since he was "guilty"; but condemned her- tion, which morally passes over his head to go and reach the company, was singularly mitigated by the de- laborer's defense.

This defense was brief, but serious and good for me-
edit: | / :

"During my eight hours of work, without a break, a said the switchman, I have an average of FORTY-FIVE MO- NEEDLE STORAGE to be operated on per hour. I have always been Good worker. The company has now deprived me of my services. from my job. I saw my mistake right away. I I exposed my life in order to repair it. We don't know, in the end, what "What is our condition?"

No, in truth, we don't know what it is; not enough, at least!

Forty-five hand movements per hour in one hand only!... that is to say, the movement of a heavy lever to be applied almost once a minute, with the

,

* FINANCE AGAINST ITS EMPLOYEES 291

often requires putting pressure on this leto live throughout the entire passage of the train; that is to say the

another to go from needle no. 1 to needle no. 3, of needle no. 4 to needle no. 7... needles extending over a network that is all the wider because "they are more nom-- breuses | |

Blainer had opened the switch to "park" the train goods from the Chapel. 11 had forgotten to close it-- sea for the entry of the Calais express train into the station. But at No sooner did he realize his mistake than he was running through the middle of the ways, at the risk of being crushed, he shouted, appe-- milk, managed to make the indicator disc rotate which automatically places a firecracker on the track. In short, the ex--
The press, warned, "reversed its steam," not in time.
but in such a way as to receive a less: stamp harsh !

This ten-second drama proves to us that Blainer was neither without energy, nor without heart, nor without presence of mind, but having forty-five lever strokes to to give by the hour, he had "once" forgotten the four--
The twenty-tenth part of his work... close the lever!
(Press, November 23, 1866.)

There are three classes of level crossing keepers:
First class at 80 francs per month;

The 2 - 55fr., ,

The 3 - 70fr.

A fee of 5 francs is retained for the rental of the house, plus 3 percent for the pension fund.

While the level crossing keepers work at their can-- Surprisingly, the women maintain the barriers and do the signals; they receive compensation of 10 francs per
- MONTH.

Let us add that the level crossing keepers are obliged to do the road maintenance and supervision service. We see in the trial of La Fouilouse, one of the guards of the road

252 CH. II, -- MORAL DEPRESSION

"main, accused of not having signaled a stop,
was also a switchman on a branch line.
A service organized in this way cannot be a good service, and leads to more than one accident.

In the same trial in La Fouillouse, one of the women level crossing keeper, accused of not having given the signals.

When the train stopped, he replied: I didn't see what time the train was past; I don't have a clock, and it's not with 10 francs.

of appointments that I can get one. And his

The lawyer defends her, saying that the company should at

at least provide her with the necessary tools so that she can to carry out the duties assigned to him. (Mr. Bonpe.)

Here is an article from the mechanics and con- regulations

Northern drivers, which confirms the cumulative figures in every respect incompatibilities already identified:

It is strongly recommended that mechanics whistle to make them apply the brakes, when they see a si- stop sign. Without this precaution, the agents assigned to track monitoring cannot detect if the signals have been seen, and are thereby exposed to an inan unfortunate certainty. The switchmen at the junctions, by for example, when they don't hear the brakes whistling at the approach of a spinning record while stationary, they worry about to see the trains or machines continue their journey; for they cannot appreciate the degree of slowdown.

So, fearing that the disc might not have been spotted,

They make the arm signals, and thus carry all their attention.

tension on a single point, when, by the nature of their functions, they have to monitor SEVERAL DIRECTIONS AT THE TIMES.

e ee Rgrns- AR PR ie mn to "

FINANCE VERSUS ITS EMPLOYEES 2N3

XX VII

more than a certain number of atmospheres; but at the same time
He then ordered them to arrive on time, under penalty of a- .
Mende. Nothing could be wiser: public safety only has to applaud. But does public safety know that these Two prescriptions are sometimes irreconcilable; that the old machine must go up to ten atmospheres for to provide the same service as the nine-to-eight; that the rails, depending on whether they are dry or wet, give more or less printing, and that, to arrive on time, there is no
no mechanic is without needing to, from time to time to violate the regulations concerning the number of atmospheres spheres, by adjusting the valves?

Compliance with this regulation depends on the good state of affairs.
maintenance of machinery and equipment; and on this side the Administrations are far from being beyond reproach. To avoid
To cite just one small example, one of our friends did,
with the same machine, 86,000 kilometers before ob-to maintain that the tires on its wheels were put back on, which had literally become multifaceted.

Regarding the Mouches accident of September 7th
In September 1867, a correspondent from Lyon wrote to us
vait: |

The crewmen's day begins at 6 a.m.
half past half past the morning, and continues until 10 o'clock
half past the hour, sometimes until midnight on Sundays, always until 11 o'clock. The boat captains suffer-:

15

964 .CH, I, - MORAL DEPRESSION

They are angry and dare not complain. Who would they go to ask?
their bread? The driver-mechanics, who can tra-to venture elsewhere than on ships, were bolder;
They dared to ask, around May or June, not for an increase salary adjustment, but compensation based on the number of working hours. The company has been... extremely irritated by such temerity, all those who did not renounce the collective plea were put to the
A merciless door. Who replaced them? 11 would be It's interesting that the justice system is looking into where the drivers are...
The students of the Flies company have completed their apprenticeship Weaving of mechanics.

I knew Marcel D..., a mechanic, personally.
to the Northern Railway, condemned, in 1865, to three years in prison for the Pierrefitte accident. He had not Didn't see a stop sign, at 4:30 AM evening, on a foggy day, one of the shortest days of the year.
winter; and he had stumbled upon a delayed train, undu-was stopped at the Pierrefitte train station. However, several years Previously, Marcel had been the victim of an accident which had... almost cost him his life. Passing at full steam under a bridge, he had been struck in the forehead by a bottle that a country prankster, just to play a trick, had thrown it at him from the top of the footbridge. He had fallen He fainted, his skull split open. He was between the life and death, and he only entered convalescence at the end six months. He was left with a large scar on his forehead.
like a double bass string and a deci- long meter. When he returned to the Company to ask for work, he was offered his job back. 11 replied that he could no longer see out of one eye, and that out of his other eye, the Well, he wasn't always lucid; he spent some time...

_FINANCE AGAINST ITS EMPLOYEES 255

fogs, -as he put it; there were still some mists - nuts without seeing anything; he was therefore no longer fit to drive trains, and he was looking for a sedentary job. He was told replied: "Either your service, or dismissal!" 11 No.
He had no need to hesitate: Marcel took his locomotive again.

We discussed whether the Pierrefitte stop disc was or not lit; it was pointless, after the state where We just said that Marcel was there. The evilheureux died at Sainte-Pélagie, of boredom and despair-fear of being locked up for three years, with the certi-study of no longer being occupied anywhere upon the expiration of his pain. Is there reason for public vengeance to be satisfied?
Made of this result? Was there no one more guilty than Marcel in this affair, and the rigors of justice
Could they have been somewhat mistaken?

The year 1855 was especially marked by the passing of Vanquishy disasters. I allowed myself then, taking advantage of certain relationships, to establish a little 'information'.
It was impossible for me to publish it at the time, the high one.
independence of journalists from government agencies
Having closed off all means of advertising to me. It was well done.
an official investigation, but official investigations are not
Not everyone who wants to hear it can do so. Then there's this method of instruction for a
The whole affair seems fundamentally vicious to me, and I have no

Here is one that I extracted from several others.

In 1855, the movement to the north of Paris was 40 trains per day (summer service). Despite this, It is possible to guarantee [security, if one only has] regular trains; but let fantasy get involved, and one We'll see some beautiful things.

256 CH. HI, – MORAL DEPRESSION

There are people for whom direct, express, pos- Rates alone are not enough: they need special trains. Among them are the administrators; they do not think- wind, travelers confused, even with the common herd of the aristocracy.

On August 41, 1855, a special convoy, carrying MM. J. de Rothschild, Petiet, Delebccque, Picard and other members of the general staff, were heading at full speed Fear of Paris over Boulogne. According to custom, the tele-

The electrical graph warned in all stations that one It was necessary to park the regular service trains. Delay for everyone, without prejudice to the elements of accident- Teeth, now that's what you call administration. At 5:86 a.m. In the evening, a train assigned to ballast work departed from the Ailly station, post 198; he stopped at post 131. in order to unload it. Not having been notified of the extraordinary convoy and relying only on the re- service Gulier, the driver, who had all the time in the world to do his toil and to get going again, neglected to go to one thousand meters back, place a stop signal.

At 6:34 a.m., the special train passed through Ailly; the ballast convoy had a lead of 38 miles nuts on him; the stationmaster judged the space sufficient and did not signal to stop. A few minutes later, the locomotive pulling the wagon of the admins- The transporters arrived on the ballast wagons. Happy-

The mechanic had spotted the obstacle and com- -began to slow down. The administrators were spared from a shock; but three men on duty

The dead were given first-class funerals;

0]

FINANCE COUNTERS ITS EMPLOYEES 257

The compensation was negotiated amicably; it was awarded to each widow an annuity of 200 francs per year until maintenance of their children's rights, plus a savings account of 4,000 francs. Each of the injured was awarded 4,300 francs. once paid. The case cost approximately 35,000 francs. company, not including damage caused to equipment. We say to the company, to the shareholders, no to the administrators.

The courts heard the case. The victims of natural- The really designated ones were the station chief and the cons-ballast train driver. The crime was blatant. 'The first criminal had neglected to stop the train' special, relying on the sufficiency of 38 minutes of interval; the second had neglected to send 1 kilometer backwards indicate that the way was not clear, because that he was not counting on the passage of an extraordinary convoy dinner. They were sentenced, one to one year, the other to three months in prison. 'Well, I doubt there will be public outrage here yet.' declares herself satisfied. The lofty fantasy of the administrators were also worth a few years of prison and a fine of around ten thousand francs. Reserve

All the harsh measures against subordinates are actions

like the dog that bites the stick, instead of jumping on the hand that operates it.

Mr. Michel Chevalier, great eulogist of finance, chatting aimlessly about the matter, said someone part: |

The railway, or, to speak more generally, steam, of which it is the most surprising application, is, in the internal economy of societies and in that of the world, the effective agent of a double revolution, towards the-

 what the slope of history, or, to put it more precisely, the irre-
 the irresistible genius that Providence has placed within us, leads us Since the beginning of time. Firstly, within in each state, the condition of men tends to become more uniform.
 to read. Secondly, between states and races, the dis-feelings fade, hostilities subside, interests harmonize. This double movement is the effect of a the sole cause, the power that the daily acquires a feeling of brotherhood among men; and then he . reacts to this fraternity in order to strengthen it. But here, Com-
 How does the railway present itself?

In the old days, when a lord travelled, he was, with his entourage, on horseback, in full display of strength. The craftsman who was moving about walked on foot, through the mud pits or along steep paths, all alone, when he hadn't could find some of his peers who had by
 By chance, the same route to take. Later, the same lord and the wealthy man of the Third Estate, who had, to a great extent Out of respect, those who were likened to him went to their posts. The peasant where the companion continued to walk, or at most!
 It rose up to the stagecoach. Today everyone goes on the railway, by the same train, in carriages who are holding on. The petit bourgeois is often in the same compartment as the duke and peer, where it remains more dukes and peers. No one splashes his neighbor.
 sin. Everyone obediently obeys the driver of the convoy; no one has the right to give it orders. There too, the law
 The common good has replaced the privilege,

Privilege has responded; it would be superfluous to comment on it.

FINANCE AGAINST ITS EMPLOYEES 259

XX VIII

CR

The anecdotes we have scattered throughout this re-

Since then, silence has prevailed over all... points, with the elimination of the despotism of abilities.
It's no longer in industry, on construction sites, in the workshops, where Mediocrity will recruit its personnel
. nel; it's in the dried fruits of our brave army (style dedicated). The old soldier invades everything.

By old soldier, we do not mean the unfortunatereux who, against his will, suffered the fate of his number; that one hurries back to his tools or to his plow as soon as its time was up; we understand only-the soldier out of love, the one who, having failed his civil position, has committed himself; or such other person who, having unlearned the job, renewed lease for a second leave.
After ten or fifteen years, tired of life
barracks, despairing of the epaulette, these brave men...
They are being told to become ordinary people again. But what are they to do with themselves
The large companies, fortunately for them,
"are found there. As soon as it was a question of replacing the aptidiscipline through obedience, knowledge through uniforms, division work through the flexibility of characters, Mediocrity
I couldn't find anything better. The protections are also good.
do they preferentially focus on this elite of the declarases; we go as far as the Tuileries to seek recommendations donations for a road worker's job. They even crammed in in the repair shops of old soldiers who have

269 CH. HI. – MORAL DEPRESSION

Never touched a file or a hammer. The letter of pre-Sensation replaces learning. All of this is not Incredible, and yet all of this is true, SCUUSEMENT
TRUE.

The intellectuals at the foundation had a feeling deep in their servitude; they made on their exercises jokes full of bitterness. Those from Paris in Lyon translated their initials PL, by pas bre;
when the merger added the network to the operation of the Mediterranean, they interpreted PLM as pity them.
unfortunate; those from Orléans to Bordeaux read in the
The letters OB stand for obedience. The old soldier,
On the contrary, he is proud of his livery; he would get angry if anyone...
it provided material for a pun.

* The docility of the servants being directly proportional to Their inexperience, their incapacity, we understand that the caste encounters in these recruits devotions of bulldogs; that's how we saw a stamp

better, the machinist, having agreed to cover the engineer-denier, to whom all the blame lay.

As a result of a natural reaction, the old soldier brings, in its relations with the public, these airs of "rogantes of the drill sergeant, this morgue of the capo-:

realism to which, fortunately, the public did not subscribe. Don't bite.

Before being hired, the aspiring servant must undergo he goes through the visit naked, like during a medical examination; then he must produce an extract from his criminal file. We have him-that his entry into the administration involved de-sa part of adherence to all regulations.

FINANCE AGAINST ITS EMPLOYEES 261

XXIX

The regulations! Here's a chapter that will give us better than any other the measure of our depression morality and our servitude. After the coups d'état that Feudalism allowed itself to act against the public and against the law. (see previous $5), we can expect that in this

As far as personnel are concerned, the administration no longer knows of _ terminals. There are perhaps two million at this hour of active citizens, voters, eligible to run for office, for whom there is no neither Civil Code, nor Code of Procedure, nor Code of Commerce Merce: nothing but the laws granted by Mediocrity, without control, neither from the Council of State, nor from the Senate, nor from the Legislative body; each pasha improvises, proprietor molu, legislator.

"Leaving aside the ridiculous prescriptions on the length- . beard length and haircut, we read in a regulation of the Northern Railway Company, article 57:

Mechanics or drivers who would like to leave the company services must notify the 'traction engineers.

Article 58. Mechanics remain subject to the action of the (judicial) authority in the case of a coalition or for the accidents resulting from their lack of foresight or their negligence. The penalties they may face for one or the other cause will not be confused with those INFLICTED BY THE COMPANY.

So here we have a double Penal Code for an entire ca-legion of citizens.

* 15

262 + CI. NEITHER. – MORAL DEPRESSION

Regulations for train conductors, April 1867:

Art. LL. Each driver is required to provide a ca-
A deposit of 1,200 francs is required. The security deposit remains affected.
by privilege to the payment of sums of which the holder can be constituted as debtor, either by a decision of the Co-management change, either by a court order.

Yet another double Penal Code.

The Management Committee is the sole judge of cases where the res-liability is incurred, and determines the importance of the compensation to which it may give rise, without recourse possible against his decisions.

Removal of the Code of Procedure.

Here is an example of summary execution reported by Mr. Borde.

An accounting employee from Nemours having failed to send as an expense a sum of 15 francs.

\

The chief direct Ini applied a 2 franc fine, The general agent
5 francs, and the Director General 200 francs. – On the observer-the assessment that was made to him, that this agent only earned 1146 francs.
per month, that he had a wife and two children, he repondit: We will retain 50 francs per month sq part payment.

We appeal to all honest people, and we Let us ask for whom the penal colony is made, if not for such acts. Compared to the employee's omission and assessed in proportion to its code, the extortion of Mr. the director
The general would deserve twenty years of hard labor.

Article 45. To assist, in certain circumstances, the

#

FINANCE AGAINST ITS EMPLOYEES 263

drivers to bear part of the losses and compensation
it is constituted
between them (in order, not spontaneously) a fund of a-mutual insurance composed by means of a payment of 100.fr. per each of them.

That is to say, the security deposit is increased to 1,300 francs.

It is administered by the Steering Committee.

That is to say, automatically and without the participation of the a-safe.

Every time a driver is found responsible of any loss or damage whatsoever, the Committee of di-Reclion decides whether the compensation is left entirely to his burden, or if it is borne in part by him, partly by the insurance fund; t/ finally decides whether the
the company itself takes on a fraction of the compensation,

/

Abolition of civil and consular courts, only competent to arbitrate the share of responsibility, of each. The regulation comprises 102 articles of the same

Each class of employees has its own specific legislation.
ciale, something as extensive as the 2281 articles of the Civil Code, without approval from public authorities, without approval, without promulgation.

Major industries have modeled themselves on the large companies. We find, not a regulation
The RAnUSEtRe of Rouen:

– j

264 CU, IT, – MORAL DEPRESSION

Fines of 10 cents. 5 cases of 1015 c....., 1 –
from 10 to 20 c..... 2 –
from 10 to 40 c.. .., 10 – 25 cents....., To –

from 45 to 50 c..... CRE . 1 Er.
of part of the day... 3 –
of the whole day..... 6 –

Total number of fines issued... 29 cases

Without prejudice to deductions equivalent to the damage,
the only legitimate ones;
Without prejudice to provisions such as the following,
completely foreign to common law:

Only one-fifth of the workers of the same species
Each workshop will be entitled to its own two-week period.
time. – No worker can leave without making a quin-Zaine. – Every worker succumbing to his pretension before the competent authority, will be required to pay, before the delivery of his booklet, the amount of fees incurred
by the judgment, otherwise the booklet will be charged.

This last regulation is in formal revolt against the law, which prohibits any mention on the booklet favorable or unfavorable.

In a workers' workshop regulation, same city,

can be renewed "several times a day.

Some of them should be located by the end of the week.

in return, especially if we take into account certain pres-
draconian cripples (for women), such as This one:

It is forbidden to speak unnecessarily, that is to say, to things unrelated to work.

FINANCE AGAINST ITS EMPLOYEES 265

It might be objected that this is the only way to attempt his world. However, we have another set of rules here.
where there is no question of fines or exemptions to the Common law: nothing more than the delivery or retrieval of the passbook.
when we are not happy with each other, and the res-responsibility in case of damage or improper handling.

An offensive provision that we have read elsewhere:
the worker who carries raw materials to be processed at his home he is not allowed to control the weighings, although he be responsible for the missing item.
The history of the Roubaix riots – has updated the
The following regulation applies:

Article 17.– A fine of 3 francs is imposed on:

1° The worker who smokes in the establishment or enters with a pipe that wasn't properly extinguished.

29 Anyone who touches the belts or the mechanism professions.

3. Anyone who, while holding two jobs, is absent one entire day, even due to illness, if he does not present not a doctor's certificate. – The fine will be reduced to 2 francs, if the worker only operates one loom.

Article 18. – A fine of 50 centimes is imposed on:

1° The worker who will light his own gas burner.

20 The one who brings in a foreigner.

3. The one who cleans or greases his loom during walking.

And the one whose trade will be recognized as poorly cleaned at the Detailed visit:

59 Anyone who introduces or drinks liquor into the attic... bind.

6. The one who cuts his piece before the markings indicated ques.

Article 19. – A fine of 25 cents is payable:

266 | CH. HT, – MORAL DEPRESSION

1. The worker who leaves waste lying around outside his bag or on the ground.

2. The one who washes himself, combs his hair, or polishes his shoes to his job before the last quarter of an hour preceding the exit.

3. Anyone who is found without permission on a point

...where his work doesn't call him.

_ missing.

He who, during the daily inspection of the bins and baguettes, will be convicted of uncleanness.

Art. 20. – He who is missing a spindle, or buot on the board, will pay 5 cents per spindle or buot

u \

As one can see, the Penal Code is nothing in comparison of its countless annexes; and likewise that every French person is supposed to know the law, just as "every worker, by virtue of entering the establishment–

"He is supposed to know and accept the rules."

It's not good for the boss to get his hands on it, under in the form of a fine or otherwise, on the wages of the ou-Friday. This is neither legitimate nor legal. No one has the right; even for proven reasons of compensation and repair . legitimate, to pay with one's own hands, to impose ped-

nurturing and executing sentences.

XXX

The Roubaix strike raised a very important question. The problem of regulations is extremely serious; we will say about it one word per episode, by the way, since both the workers' congress in Brussels, in September 1868, a The problem was taken up again. It was a matter for the manufacturers...

FINANCE AGAINST ITS EMPLOYEES 267

to have two carts driven by a single spinner, re-a form which, by the bosses' own admission, immediately put Approximately one thousand workers are available. The manufacturers _spread profusely, during the turmoil, a A most sensible economic instruction.

It is true, they said, that this measure will eliminate temporarily a thousand workers. But like the clerks-The sales will return as soon as the selling prices of the fabrics

-will be lowered, what will be the result? I] will have to go up 'k,000 more jobs, and consequently 2,000 more to occupy. workers. All things considered, the Roubaix factory occupied-'pera, under these new conditions, a thousand workers of more than today.

We didn't need to wait for a riot to talk about this... wager. The timing is poor to initiate the people, in the moment of danger, in the study of social economy. It is important not to let the prospect of having, in a year or

Two, 4,000 more jobs to drive, soil presented unemployment or famine; stoic calm must not be from the scientist, declaring that society can do nothing about it, consumes too much on the anxieties of a starving population; That would almost be ironic. There is something to be done. That's undeniable. – What? – We're going to because from the most practical point of view,

There is no need to force analogies to find a great resemblance between the abolition of a monopoly and the mechanical invention that momentarily eliminates arm movement: in both cases, there will be a displacement of acquired positions, reduced costs and certainty of impending overproduction, that is to say individual suffering temporary conflicts and benefit for the community.

– +

L

268 CH. II. – MORAL DEPRESSION

The imperial government liberalized the profession of commercial broker, and the former holders. The city of Paris bought back, at the price of four-seven annual payments of 360,000 francs each, the privilege the law concerning small cars; but it did not compensate either the neither butchers nor bakers. The State therefore has no principal- The authorities have reached a decision on the issue of compensation; it seems, Based on these precedents, the large ones should be compensated and leave the little ones to the risks of their situation. To that end As such, the worker cannot count on the luck of an indemnification.

Besides, that's not where the solution lies. What service would the machine be worth it if the savings it provides were to disappear- To provide relief and subsidies to the downgraded? Better- should keep the old tools, because it is more moral to paying workers a wage rather than giving them help. Does this mean that we must abandon everything? linked to the bad suggestions of Ja faim the workers whose livelihoods are destroyed by a sophisticated tool? Not at all. In a society driven by such a powerful problems.

When an industry is completely and forever downgraded, like the postal service, stagecoaches, and transport. Following the railways, the problem is indeed simple; it is certain that only one of our main lines employs more personnel than Loute l'industransport management thirty years ago. If, instead of recruit-to discriminate against employees through favoritism and arbitrary decisions,

FINANCE AGAINST ITS EMPLOYEES 269

a right of preference would have been created for the benefit of the marginalized. In fact, the railway would not have taken twenty years to develop. popularize in France; there are still regions where It is considered a scourge; and this is the first appreciation of the worker whose tool he breaks without com- immediate thought.

The case of the workers in Roubaix is a little different. The economic guidelines published by employers did not advance It was not an empty promise. Within a year, the thousand ou- Downgraded books will be recalled, and it will also be necessary to do apprentices. The employers themselves have an interest in guarding- of this population at hand. However, large cities, _the departments have always, within a radius of some places, major public works to be undertaken, tra- indispensable values, but which do not have the character of the emergency.

What was there to do? The SS in Roubaix had determined at a fixed time, and well in advance, on the day when the application of both professions to be carried out by a single person A man would throw at least a thousand workers out onto the streets. Why not make it coincide with the same day? The start of an earthmoving project? Paths? local roads to be built, roads to be straightened, hills to lower, ports to be dredged, railways of interest Local premises to be created, is there a shortage of work?

If the municipality of Roubaix believed it had the right to de- to disclaim all responsibility towards the bosses, she does not The same can be said of the workers. We spent on repression, troop movements, trials, seizures sounds, funds which, if judiciously employed,

270 CIE. HI. – MORAL DEPRESSION

left useful work undone, and prevented even the idea of a protest. As the orders would have per-
Instead of creating new jobs, the workers would be returned to the factory.

Whether the administrators are municipal or not rates charge: excessively the rioters by making them responsible for everything; they do not fully justify themselves. their negligence in the eyes of public opinion. The sword, the bayonet and cavalry charge are a sad way to restore order; it should only be resorted to when one has We've exhausted all means. And here, we haven't tried any of them.

To the kind words addressed to him by the "Prefect," said Le Progrès du Nord, "the crowd responded:"

What we want is WORK.

That's the whole moral of this unfortunate story:
Work! You can't throw out a thousand workers with impunity. on the pavement on a fixed day. There is something else there besides the law. coalition.

XXXI |

With the episode over, let's get back to our rules.

The most beautiful one we had ever seen was titled:
Penal Code for Road Workers; it was signed by the pre-fet and the engineer from the department of Ja Vienna.

The memorable strike of Parisian coachmen revealed in the private administrations of morals without precedent-

FINANCE AGAINST ITS EMPLOYEES ° 971

whose normal wage was 3 francs per day; but a series of deductions for clothing, palefreniers, gardiens, lavage, assurance, levied À fr. 70;

_coachmen" could not live without doing so from time to time—skip a race; the administration knew it; and she incorporated this element of the recipe into his calculations. Woe to the clumsy ones who would let themselves be caught! Misappropriation by tacit consent is the sin—blame of the genre. The strikers agree on this in these words, in a letter made public:

L° The coachmen have never denied that, according to the expression from Mr. Ducoux, they did not deviate from the recipe one sufficient sum to complete their day, with the such a small sum remains after all expenses are paid. And This is the main reason that made them go on strike; they want to work without having to embezzle what Mr. Ducoux criticizes them.

The administration further surmised, in the recipe, the tipping, which has thus become almost obligatory for the traveler, already surcharged by 33%.

Thus the Anzin Company, "which produces approximately each year in dividends its initial capital," according to _

She attributed this 4 to Mr. Foucart's testimony which she calls its benefits.

The pension of 7 to 10 sous per day, granted formerly at 50 years of age, after 40 years of service to the Company, that is to say, under almost impossible to fill, would no longer be given, it is said, except to an older age. It is not even up to the rent of the inhabitants—

9272 \ CH, II. — MORAL DEPRESSION

services that the company provides to its workers, who had not been increased; the burden was placed on the workers repairs that were formerly the responsibility of the company.

"...Same procedure used on the Orleans railway."

From the year 1845, says Mr. Maurice Valette, the company had associated its agents with a stake in its be—

_tion of 8% to shareholders, it was to be done, on the excess of net products, a levy of 45% of one hundred percent in favor of employees. This allowance was intended to in order to complete, to perfect the figures for treatments fixed, whose cramped conditions could not be ignored, Inadequacy. This noble endeavor yielded the best results. The levy produced, for the fiscal year 1853, 1,966,430 francs 10 centimes, or 40 francs 96 centimes per 100 treatments fixed. Unfortunately, we regretted so many gene- redness, |

Indeed, the distribution, on the one hand, decreased in 1865, at 14 francs 40 centimes 100; on the other hand, the company, in dangling the prospect of... dangling it before employees, especially new ones the prospect of this reward, reduced below in all likelihood the number of appointments fixed; like the small car company, which ro- The coachman's day was becoming increasingly familiar, for the reason that the bourgeois gave the tip. The last word of the progression would have been, as in some restaurants rants, cafes, bathhouses, to sell the right | to work from home.

Why this gradual decline in the share made up to the employees, when the company's revenues follow-

FINANCE AGAINST ITS EMPLOYEES 973

On the contrary, they were experiencing an upward progression of the most marked?

Something even more shocking is the im- nixtion of administrations in employment that the sala- 'Riés dolvent faire de leur argent. Sur les dites bonuses, which today are only an insufficient supplement Regarding the fixed salary, management automatically pays into the pension fund a share of the return-good- to each employee. The great misfortune, it will be said, of forcing- employees building up their own income!

Indeed, forced annuity is more than just a misfortune: It's a mockery. In 1853, the company, on 40.96 francs, carried 43 francs 65 centimes to the pension fund, and handed over in cash 27 francs 31 centimes. In 1865, out of 14 francs 40 centimes, she retains 40 francs and leaves only 4 francs 40 centimes available nible. An agenda sparked a row for everyone. employees because they neglected the issue of the annuity.

It was to spend thrifts receiving between 800 and 2,000 francs per year that anyone dares to speak in a partisan way. They don't have found a way to reduce their expenses to consider their old age. They believed they had nothing to add to the payments made automatically on their behalf! We are as-forced to hold their stomach in knots for life in anticipation of a retirement which one reaches as late as possible, when. We're getting there! And that's what we call being administered. Saving is a superfluity, a luxury we don't have the right to. to impose on man who often lacks the necessities.

Thus speaks the author, whom we regretted not being able to – see borrowing all its revelations. We leave from on the side those which are specific to railways and the * company of Orléans, to focus our attention especially on those which have a collective character.

274. Chapter II – Moral Depression

A masterpiece, among thousands, of the morality of the protectorate:

An employee who asked to withdraw a small amount of the savings bank, based on what a recent accident His wife's bedtime created needs in him which He could not escape; the response was most singular. His division chief, remembering that such a The incident had already occurred the previous year, he retorted. by a dismissal, adding that he did not see at – there is a very plausible reason why such a thing should not happen not reproducible every year.

The employees, whose fixed salaries have been reduced and their participation, at a time when the cost of living worsened by at least a third, they dared to petition the – near their lords and masters.

For some time now, said a journal in 1867, the revocations follow one another in a unique way in the railway companies; especially the Orleans company (This is where the first petition originated) removes and

So far. And who are, I'm talking about the vast majority, these Employees being thrown out? You can guess: this These are the ones who signed last year's famous petition. These unfortunate people, for daring to complain and raise the voices to express the pain of their situation, sem- could have become the lepers and the cursed of the administration

Nistration.

So, these are men, husbands! Fathers of fa- a thousand on the pavement, without resources. I'm not talking about eco- nomies: with what salary would they have made them?

FINANCE AGAINST ITS EMPLOYEES 275

has.

At { N

What will become of them and how will their children dine tomorrow? small children? Where to go? What to do? – In the other companies, right? They exercise the distrust they have learned. Thank God! It's not just one company in France, and an employee can hope that, coming from the North, 'He will enter from the South, or from the East, or from the West, provided that he to know its condition and to provide services.

Well! No, it seems a tacit league has formed- – mée. The companies reached an agreement, they s- "Gnalé the leaders, – leaders, poor people! – and" It is generally accepted that an employee dismissed from a administration will not enter into another. – What will you- So what is he to do, then, this man? Beg? Or that he dies?

How could it be otherwise? There are only a hundred of them. thirty-six, the sovereigns of our railways, those who possess the tool as if it were their property; those who make laws against the law, against the public and against the employees; those who finally arbitrate according to their own interests whims and their grudges determine the fate of three hundred thousand Employee families. Since the despotism of the capa+ cities gave way to livery, which the instruction replaced Talent is a powerful tool for mediocrity.

Boards of directors are making a big deal out of it from their pension and relief funds. Let them dare therefore comparing the number of their retirees and ment, mandatory for year-round employees, is to 8 p. 400. To be eligible for retirement benefits, one must be at least less than fifty years old and having spent twenty-five years serving vice of the company. The one who would have been thirty years in the railways, ten years in the West, ten years in

276 CH. 11, – MORAL DEPRESSION

The East, ten years in Orléans, is entitled to nothing, despite having paid everywhere. We always take care to hunt, under a whatever pretext, the employee who is approaching the time regulatory. Elected officials, when there are any, receive from 30 to 150 francs annual annuity, subject to conditions that they leave the service; for if they prefer to continue to to live on wages, the 30 francs of income are super-award-winning.

The foundation's workers, the capable ones, have They withdrew, full of disgust and discouragement; they are went to all parts of the continent to promote the initiative from their experience and knowledge. Many are died on the job; others returned, crippled with pain. Theirs, crippled with injuries, riddled with infirmities. May the – Princes of the railway dare to tell us where the re-survivor trafficking!

Nothing is done in the companies except for the installation. Advertising and Macairism. Here is a letter that skewers These methods of charlatans:

Paris, April 3, 1867. Dr.

For the past eighteen months, thousands of workers have been... ploved at the Champ-de-Mars during the construction of the Palace of The World's Fair. Excessively many accidents serious, the number of which would be difficult to say, are on-Venus. I myself had a broken leg (I belong- (born at the Gouin & Co. house.)

During those eighteen months, the medical service was entrusted to a single doctor, whom they had taken care to take- to be far from the site of the works, so that no doubt it would be fixed . care capable of treating the wounded. This doctor, forced to choose between its private clientele and the service for which it had taken charge, only came to the Champ-de-Mars for an hour per day, and the workers who lacked foresight _of injuring himself while he was present, were put on a stretcher and transported to the hospice without having received any

On-site care.

No one, however, can deny the extreme pose - Immediate care was given to the wounded. Would I be crippled? and now unable to resume my state if my fracture- Was the wound treated immediately?

During my accident, I unsuccessfully called for assistance. from a local doctor; I couldn't get them to go _ I was asked to find one, and my fracture wasn't bandaged until the third day, during the visit of the hospital's chief surgeon-pital.

How many other injured people were found in my sad situation, and that immediate medical attention would have singularly relieved!

Now that the work is finished, that the acci- Teeth are useless, the service is organized lavishly medical staff at the facility; nothing is lacking; not even professors from the Faculty. When some beautiful vi-siteuse or high-ranking figures, inconvenienced by the In the heat, they will come to demand medical care approximately insignificant, we won't tell them that hundreds of ou-Fouriers, seriously wounded, almost dying, were transported without immediate care to the hospice, and the world will be amazed by the splendid way in which they are made: things at home.

I am disabled, many of my classmates are in the same state, and we are being disputed point by point, not only-_mentally all daily assistance, but still a miserable compensation.

Will the imperial commission deign to acknowledge that the the wonders she displays to the world cost lives or the health of a large number of workers, and will think-such as a tiny portion of the fabulous sums, that she will receive, would be well used if it served to

to provide these disabled people with an honorable existence that the Can't they get work anymore?

| Pierre-Joseph Buvry, '
Passage de l'Alma, 26, Gros-Caillou.

XXXII

The wickedness of the directors of anonymity has made school. The leaders of the industry remained relatively free ask to wade through troubled waters, like the Lords of Israel and Childen. The contractors of The Paris painting team had a meeting during the current of April 4867. Here is one of the main grievances they have requested the rectification. The Seine prefecture was able to – blie every year an average of prices (labor and materials) of building work. When we say An average is a mistake; you have to read a maximum.
mum; the rates are indeed just a simple fix “of the starting price, on which the successful bidders and –between– Buyers agree to discounts of 48 to 35 percent.

In any case, the publication of these rates serves as basis for all expertise; the most foreign individual the building work can be seen by him–
Indeed, any entrepreneur who imposes a surcharge is safe to be repressed. Great scandal among speculators in business. The painting contractors took advantage of their meeting to draft a petition to the emperor in view

* to prohibit the city of Paris from publishing its prizes

FINANCE AGAINST ITS EMPLOYEES 279

standard. Let them deliver the inexperienced customer to Thank you, let's make the night around him, let's turn off all the lights capable of making him see clearly; that painting contractors, united in a union, solid– areas for the stifling of practices, be chosen as experts, in the event of dispute, to the exclusion of architects. That is their conclusion.
The regimentation of workers by large corporations companies has also expanded into all sorts of pro–.
trades. Arts and crafts, carpentry, locksmithing–

They are trained every day in factories. We don't learn no more skill, but only a tenth, a twentieth by profession. Piecework, the only moral, only based on the true price of things, retrograde in the face of the hours of attendance, entry at the bell, meals at fixed time, fines and suspensions. The popula-
The working class adapts to this debilitating regime; it turns to lazzarone; she applauds herself for doing the least possible, while remaining cloistered, secluded, locked away making the regulatory duration. Some jokers, under pretext of equality and fraternity, find that it is already a democratic system, the hour of presence passing the nickel on the strong, the weak, and the average. It is the last-denying the word "voluntary servitude" and the most serious a symptom of moral depression. It is especially our decadence as a productive nation; ear the price marthe cost of everything, instead of having as a basis the average of the time employed by the worker, balance made The distinction between strong and weak now rests solely on arbitrariness. State interventions, through the granting of monopolies,

280 CH. NL, - MORAL DEPRESSION

Subsidies and guarantees, finish destroying even the final elements of responsibility. What's the point of getting involved? to search, to combine, in short, to work, since the sun rotates with the same motion for all the world and that the public treasury is there to fill the voids created by laziness, ineptitude, and fraud?

* Under the influence of these transformations, the world pro-
The conductor entered a kind of quietism preceding Lethargy and death. Peace and public order are not more troubled, as in the days when one had to endure the des_potism of capabilities. What do you want it to demand or claims a mortiser, a boring machine, a roughing machine, a finisher, a maker of tenons, dowels or che-towns? What can be expected of these poor old soldiers, pi-barracks and cabaret ties, which a high protection improvised blacksmiths, fitters, assemblers, heaters firefighters, mechanics, PAEE chiefs serving some

- railway? ,

The bourgeoisie, which does not suspect the depth from the abyss to which this decadence leads her, she applauds herself this material calm, which is only surpassed by that of the ne-crops. Also the first strikes, after the law of May 25, 1864, did they produce satisfactions on the world?

Journal of Debates, monitor of laissez-faire, organ of-official of liberal hypocrisy in economics, did not hesitate to lay down all his charlatanic baggage and to request
the use of force; the Universe, returned to existence to denounce, cried out for Social Revolution; the Union de-Clara, that, given that war was already a war, it was better to hasten
_the French against the Germans in a conflagration

-

FINANCE AGAINST ITS EMPLOYEES 281

quehonque, with or without motives, than to leave, at the fa-
peace advocate, the proletarians to produce their demands cations.

In the inner circle of Mr. Jules Simon, it was being spread about
The tailors' strike, stories where the burlesque takes center stage.
He argued with the odious; fear makes people accept slander.
the most absurd. In the corridors of the Legislative Body,
There was talk very loudly of demanding the withdrawal of the law on the coalitions. It seemed that we had returned to the most bad days of hateful excitements of the Constitution-nel against the workers and the socialists.

Finally, the republican Jules Favre, crowning the work,
he hastened to denounce from the podium "meetings
"They are all the more dangerous because they are public."

The only obstacle to the universalization of the medieval regime
The critical point is that it still exists among men.
mature citizens, aged forty and over, who have I've seen and practiced another way of producing and living, resistant capacities, full of anger against this apotheosis of mediocrity, incapacity, and worthlessness
ity. It is [the only sign of dissent. When this generation will be extinguished, everything will be over: it will be the sys-
the theme of Egypt and the Orient imposed on France and anx countries that gravitate in its orbit.

These symptoms of decadence are related to all manifestations of the human mind point to a Unprecedented regression. Look at popular poetry, the Pe-
Little Lambs, Bastien's Boots, the Moody Foot, Zim-là-là, and a hundred other absurdities equally foreign to the prosody and language as well as common sense. Consult the statistics; you will see the stagnation of the po-

16,

289 CH. NI, – MORAL DEPRESSION

population, the increase in bastardy, the invasion-the nature of prostitution. Examine the morals according to the theatre. In the past, famous women were called Mesdames de Staël, de Girardin, Guizot; their names are Today Rigolboche, Turlurette and Cora Pearl.

Unconscious human stupidity, conspicuous foolishness worsen with corruption. The workers devoted to the Or-phéon concentrate their activity on a medal to con-to seek, a revenge to be taken, thus making of a distraction, all of their leisure time. Those who have the pre-the tendency to think and plan clings to fogtilles, a five-cent-a-day increase, abolition of article 1781. Those skilled in politics claim that The whole point of public freedoms is to bring about the chamber, against the Peyrucus of the government, the Du-Faure of the opposition: Dufaure, the Minister of the Interior of June 43, 1849, instigator of the looting of printing presses Proux and Boulé, who became a liberal thanks to a coalition-tion of arrivals (a new word made to the size of the Mediocrity, ambition, scheming, seeming too grandiose for such a small world). The pontiffs of the sentimentality, popularity seekers monopolize the attention-tension regarding the abolition of the death penalty,
as if, under the weight of the embraces that constrain us, Nothing was more urgent than saving the head of an Avi-dwarf, a Lapommeraye, a Dumollard. The saint-sentimental monism, convinced that the Jewish regime
only has a chance of taking root amidst demoralization.
Universal lion, inaugurates public meetings with pornocracy courses, under the guise of emancipation of women.

FINANCE AGAINST ITS EMPLOYEES 283

It is through these outlets that the intensity is masked.
...of harm. It is by making this nonsense the epitome, legitimate demands, which are being stifled, among the minority of the population that remained active, up to the point of feeling real users. =

XXXIII

·
—

How much have we regressed on the annual plan?
higher than 89? because there are more egalitarian boasts to spread out. The laws of caste and privilege do not leave no room for illusion. We are in the midst of a s-wave.

In the past, the tithe or tithe Drélsrait was like its name P indicates, up to one-tenth of the products of labor; that was the maximum of privileged prelibation; still Did the option of settling in kind provide any mitigation? Nuatign to the rigor of Ja tax. Today the capital of The Bank does not operate less than twelve to twenty times a day. one hundred; the wealthy railway companies estimate – also by twelve and twenty of a hundred, that is to say by fifth, double the tithe; the Crédit foncier table out of twenty-five percent, a quarter; the Gas out of twenty-seven to twenty-eight of a hundred, two and a half times the tithe.

In the past, property rights were clearly distinct from state tax; it was not included in the levy-nent and [x distribution neither confusion nor accumulation, Current-The public, subject to taxation and forced labor without mercy, nor mercy, begins by sweating, in the form of contr-PUBLIC funding, the billions with which to build titles the domain of the modern feudal lords; then he pays, at title of PERSONAL rights, the twelve or twenty-eight of the one hundred, of which 1x caste makes up its dividends.

284 CH. I. – MORAL DEPRESSION

In the past, the dimmer always followed the odds of the operation, taking on more during the boom years, contenting himself with less during the famine years. He par-in short, participated in the good and bad fortune of tenant, of the corvée. Our contemporary barons have nuclear, whatever the chances. The storm of seasons, frost, hail, rain, floods have Sterilized and paralyzed labor. Harvests will be meager; Jacques Bonhomme will clutch his stomach; he will only have Few or no products to exchange. What does it matter? The dividend is inviolable; something Jacques Bonhomme does not will be able to supply the feudal lords with traffic, he will pay for it in contributions; he will perfect on his labor the contingent of which Bad luck and unemployment have weighed on income. H will pay for the honor, the glory and the inviolability of the rent, without receiving any service in return; for thus the . wants the faith of contracts.

Hue then! Work and strain, —. Jacques Bon- man, under the weight of the day and the heat, because he has bound by treaties, and although you have accepted nothing nor Once signed, you alone do not have the right to fail to fulfill your commitments. comments. |

We repeat: never, at any time,
No other country has seen an example of such an economy:
political economy.

—

FINANCE AGAINST ITS EMPLOYEES 285

However, it is a matter of principle and command among our pastors of the people, demophiliacs, demagogues, de- democrats, that we should not shed light on these miseries nor To expose these wounds is to betray the homeland and freedom. than to draw attention to the horrors of this regime; it is to corrupt the good minds of the political elite. transcendental tic, than to fix their attention on of ignoble material interests. O cockroaches! your spiritua- The myth is starting to be exposed, you all have steeped in the corruptions of Mammon; that is the secret of your hypocritical asceticism.

French democracy went to find its inspirations rateurs, its directors, in the legal profession and the press: the legal profession, the only corporation that is still governed by the regulations and guilds of the Middle Ages; the press, State rule from 1852 until the abolition of the au- prior authorization, monopoly, at all times, of the finance for large guarantees, for large capillaries, for Big bribes. Didn't we see Jules Favre, de- defender of the Virgin of La Salette in Grenoble, to tear down

Graissessac in Béziers; Crémieux, remove the ac-Mirès's departure; Victor Lefranc and Senard, cover from their rhetoric the 'deportations of the founders of the.
Furniture; Marie, writing memoirs in favor of greedy Mexican lottery players; Émile Ollivier, accept a salaried position of a foreign sovereign, the viceroy of Egypt, a crime of high treason for a French deputy Cais, according to the principles of '92? The financial barons and the directors of large companies are the only ones who-
"thinkers of the causes of fat; really our demo-

286 CH. III. – MORAL DEPRESSION:

Crates of the bar and of politics have Figaro's flair.
Tartuffe's dissimulation and Basil's science.

And how many of our great journalistic writers...
Are there any who haven't prostituted their advertisements to ninety defunct stocks, to the horse traders limited partnership founders, enriched by the sum of ruins that they piled up around themselves?

Is it necessary to emphasize the depth of these betrayals? How does the industrial empire differ from the em-
The worst policy? It was enough for the unsympathetic third party, to lift a corner of the veil that covered the machinations protected by the pact of liberal silence, to take precedence in one session the leading figures of the so-democracy.

Ah! If only publicity in the press and the public forum had simultaneously championed the demand for freedoms and the denunciation
the cation of financial subjugation, we would not be crushed today under the weight, we will not say of the Despotism, but of our moral depression. How much Are they, these platonic lovers of a political order
ideal, in which interests are not taken into account

Materials? Two or three hundred thousand voters perhaps, freed by the income from the daily worries of Ja animal life. As for the peasants, the illiterate workers, Ignorant people, what do you expect them to be passionate about?

freedom of the press and the right to reunion, if you do not do not place within reach of their intelligence and their hand
the program, the reform plan that interests them
The biggest issue? Political life has declined in our country by more than Coup d'état, socialism, and politics went hand in hand.

FINANCE AGAINST ITS EMPLOYEES 287

while since then, the economy has been repressed as in-Discreet and dangerous.

It is not only in the electoral world that feudalism strikes; it is on the adolescents, on the women; women, detestable advisors in the periods of silence and repression, always horrified, always trembling as soon as the son, brother or husband talk of protesting, of making demands in the name of law and of justice. Isn't this picture of our... quite heartbreaking?
moral collapse, of this servitude, which has become -will-
How can we hope to remain silent out of resignation? How can we hope to move forward?
never the spring, concerning ideal freedoms, in a a people who not only knew how to defend their savings, their home, its dignity, against the encroachments of a caste Having only his audacity as his right? That's the claim
Is socialism really as materialistic as the pre-
Are our demagogues holding us back?

I will admire the heroism of the thirteen as much as anyone wants.
and any organizers of election meetings,
at the end of which they see their name emerge from the ballot.
with excommunication of the refractory ones. But it was necessary to...
at the same time form unions to protect the action-
the company against its administrators, the public against its Monopolists, the worker against his employers. It was needed to denounce with the same vehemence violations of the notebooks charges and violations of home, coups d'état of the Bank and the arbitrary actions of the police, the illegalities of tariffs and those of tax. If there is still a way To galvanize this nation, it is on the condition of bringing together in a single bundle the worker's grievance notebooks and of the citizen.

<

288 CH. [il, - MORAL DEPRESSION

Do lawyers and journalists still want to hold on?
The head of the movement in this sense? They will lose out and the fat causes and gilded advertisements; but they profit from it. will maintain their honor and dignity. If they prefer to continue-

Masks! They are and remain the firmest supports of the political empire. Quod Deus conjunxit, homo not separate. The social economy of a people is everything simply the material translation into facts and actions of abstract thought immanent in his politics.

\

CONCLUSION

\

(er, – SUMMARY OF THE IDEA OF THIS BOOK.

We have strived to put in as much effort as possible possible, order and method in the narrative of numerous facts that form the basis of this book and its justification tification. However, in order to give even more re- As a matter of fact, we will discuss our thesis here, in a few pages, the concise summary. We shouldn't be afraid to repeat when it comes to popularizing issues which the public finds difficult to grasp, however interested it may be or to explore them further.

OLD ECONOMIC REGIME. – The apologists of competitive system inaugurated in 1789 did not lack- What; there's only an embarrassment of riches when you want reproduce their enthusiastic declarations and declamations naps.

17

290 CONCLUSION

Indeed, since Royer-Collard, "democracy is flowing "Bursting full"; that's a well-known and accepted fact. Since 1839, "Each soldier carries in his knapsack the marshal's baton- "...chal of France." Since the declaration of the immortals principles, "all citizens are equal before the law, before the taxman, before the law." Or again: "Ch- one can aspire to the highest political offices and social barriers exist; no caste law closes the barrier.

To his successors, we repeat to you all: At most "Worthy!" That's how a Minister of Education expressed himself.
public, grand master of the University, in a speech of prize distribution, at the grand competition of 1839.

"In agriculture, industry, commerce, the Sciences, arts, literature—there are no longer any professions.
"Closed!" cried the official economists. The prole-
The victim should blame only their own iniquity for their distress.
laughter, his negligence, his lack of foresight, his wastefulness.
The orderly, sober, thrifty worker always manages to reach the pa-throne, to fortune. Proof: three-quarters of the elect-"Providers of property rights can't just read." There-above, Baron Charles Dupin demonstrated, figures in hand, by means of a meticulous budget which included right up to the chemical matches, which the wheel turner
He could live on thirty sous a day, pay his rent.
to raise his family and put money in a savings account.

From this came the famous axiom, dear to our millions-contemporary pairs, that wealth always goes to the in-intelligence, order, work, genius, whatever it may be could say Giboyer.

The fact is that at a certain time, provided that one

SUMMARY OF THE ISLAND OF THIS BOOK 291

would have received from civilization or Providence parents
well-off, not fussy about education and costs
that it entailed, one could become a bachelor of arts, es-sciences, licentiate, doctor, associate professor, officer, and pre-
to strive for all functions and professions for which A diploma is required.

Apart from the ministerial offices of bailiff, solicitor, of notary, stockbroker, trade broker and marine insurance, interpreter—driver of na-turn, from auctioneer; apart from professorship, the Medicine, pharmacy, law, engineering: reserved to the graduates of the special schools; apart from certain single-urban hubs, such as the butcher shop, the bakery, the waste disposal, funeral homes, theaters; apart from the State monopolies: telegraphy, postal services, tobacco, gunpowder and saltpeter; apart from a few industries subject to the formality of the concession, such as printing, bookselling, hydraulic plants, mines, mining and quarries, and a hundred other trifles of the same kind, the Frenchman was truly, and rightly so, proud of his autonomy, of his

as a producer, he could do whatever he pleased.
knows, except what the law or the modesty of forbade him his fortune.

The economists of the time, who called themselves, quite rightly
The liberal school of law, developed in their courses,
in magazines and books, the benefits of this regime and its advantages. To be fair, it
It must be said that every time they encountered a monopoly, they were ranting about it with sincere conviction and an inexhaustible verve. They especially had a knack for...

L'

Pi

_292: CONCLUSION

Revolutionary actions against the duties and taxes
indirect. , |
Why did we change all of that?

HE

INVASION OF THE NON-POLIS. – The meager privileges that we listed in the previous paragraph, the most of them unjustifiable, without moral or social justification to exist, were but an atom in the whole of the country's production. But, what is more serious, they for-they were enclaves within common law; they operated as a catalyst for dissolution and putrefaction. A Once the door is opened to exceptions, the law is no longer in safety.

However, it would be wrong to believe that a government absolute certainty, even based on precedents, at-would have been capable of transforming, in the interest of utopia

or politics, the social economy of a nation, if it had not found, at least in an important branch and of this metamorphosis. It is the railways that provided the pretext,

Indeed, in banking, real estate credit or furniture, navigation, gas, cars, distribution Waterworks, docks, freedom has its supporters, too founded in principle as well as in practice. The necessity of the Centralization and monopoly are no less contested. that's debatable. It's not the same thing when he

SUMMARY OF THE IDEA OF THIS BOOK 993:

These are railways. Even the most liberal wouldn't dare to... to ensure that once the road is built, the first person who comes along can at will to launch his locomotives and his wagons. Public safety requires regulations that inevitably leads to the granting of a privilege. But once the recognized necessary monopoly; the question of more or at least falls within the realm of appreciating public authorities. The competitive system had weighed on the concessions of Louis-Philippe's reign, to the point that the first five thousand kilometers of railway had were divided among about forty companies. The West The current one, for example, includes eight former companies: 1° Paris to Saint-Germain; 2° Paris to Versailles (riverbank right); 3rd Paris to Versailles (left bank); 4th Paris to Rouen; 5. Rouen to Le Havre; 6. Branch lines of Dieppe and Fécamp; 7° Paris to Chartres (or Western province); 8° Paris to Caen and Cherbourg.

We had exaggerated the fragmentation to the point of making onerous, due to the lack of solidarity and the multiplicity of costs generals, the farms. The empire, centralizing politics, brought its principle to the economic social economy and brought the whole network back to six companies.

With the railways came another idea: that 'public service. Let's start by making it concrete and explaining to clearly explain what is meant by these words. We will take a well-known example, the post office letters.

In Paris, transporting a document in an envelope costs: 40 cents by the postal administration, and 2 cents: by print distribution companies. We can

So, keep in mind that at the post office, there are 2 cents for the service-defect rendered and 8 centimes or four-fifths for Tax. Usurious, exorbitant tax! the liberal school would say; that the tax authorities abandon their position and let the in-free industry: the consumer will gain four five-quièmes d'économle.

"Just a moment," the administration continues, "it is true that..." I collect 8 cents in tax out of the 40 that the residents pay. so many from Paris to correspond with each other; but, by On the other hand, there are, in the Creuse, the Lozère, the Haute-Loire, Indre, the Hautes-Alpes and Basses-Alpes, Corsica, factors that I pay 700 and 900 francs per year, and which does not pro- They don't generate 400 francs in annual revenue. I'm establishing a compensation. Without it, such a letter that I charge 20 cents-times and which costs me 10 francs for shipping could not ci-euler, neither at one price nor another.

Here the idea of public service is striking: it matters such a municipality, which does not exchange ten correspondents dances per week, or served like the big city which ships fifty thousand of them per day.

From the post office, correspondence service, to the road of the railway, passenger and freight service, the assi-Milation is not forced. The analogy stated that the line from the North, for example, leaving net product, should subsidize the lines in Brittany, the Cévennes and Landes, insufficient to cover expenses such as traffic.

We explained how, instead of following this In practice, the government had proceeded by way of con-centennial transfers, subsidies amounting to 1 million one and a half billion, of guarantees covering 4 billion in ca- -pital and 484 million in annual revenues.

THERE

SUMMARY OF THE IDEA OF THIS BOOK 295

That's not all, the government said to itself, for-following its analogies: The Bank of France is also a public service. In the days of departmental banks, each issuing their own personal paper, such as a banknote "4,000 francs, due to exchange rate fluctuations, pou-

998 francs in Marseille. The unit of measurement for banknotes on demand, at the port—the teur, true paper money, is the corollary, the com—natural complement to the unit of metallic currency, of the unit of weights and measures. Therefore, only one investment is required. and unique establishment of the privilege of ADPaUer the paper currency. | ;

If we want to establish a serious institution, eff—Crédit foncier's office, it is equally important that the bonds mortgages circulate uniformly and at the same rate price across France. If we leave to take individual initiative, sometimes the northern zone will take precedence over that of the South, sometimes the islands and constituencies of t will be unfavorable, and those in the West on the rise. The The principle of solidarity dictates that there is only one kind of securities: hence the need to monopolize credit _land., |

We continued drawing analogies in this way, ad infinitum. proved that with the freedom of gasworks, of the quarter—A third would pay 20 cents per cubic meter and others 30 cents: which would be equivalent to a customs duty of 10 cents between two adjacent streets. Regarding maritime services—times, it was not difficult to demonstrate that the colony of Reunion had just as much right to the solicitude of the a metropolis like that of Senegal, and that which needed to be compensated for, through subsidies, the differentiated pathways to

i

296 CONCLUSION

followed by the ocean liners intended for the service of our states colonial settlements, whether they were located on this side or beyond the Cape, in the Pacific or in the Atlantic.

Ed

III

THE FINANCIAL OLIGARCHY. — These considerations, which one Don't be fooled, they are not specious; without them, he "It is not political despotism that could have been imposed" on France an economic transformation as radical as that. whose subversive effects we have described during this

They come, says the cooperative principle, from the fact that the PUBLIC SERVICES, instead of being a source of net product, must be exploited at cost price. However, we know how—The political economy of December 2nd proceeded as follows: Excessive subsidies, guaranteed income and interest rates and dividends, alienation of the public domain without other reservation than an insufficient set of specifications, that the concessionaires deal at the Cambronne; constitution of an oligarchy of which one could name all the members, because their number does not reach two hundred; con—finally, concentration in the hands of this financial elite, of all the major industries in the country.

If we were able to dismiss the privileges as trifles prior to 1852, the new ones deserve, in F'TÉYANONES to be accused of hoarding.

The Bank of France, for example, — the only right to mint money throughout the empire, not an exchange

SUMMARY OF THE IDEA OF THIS BOOK 297

nothing escapes his grasp. The producers in direct contact Those treated best by her are the ones left to fend for themselves. The others, left to the third-party merchants, signature, also have a su—brécot to pay.—Between these, there is competition: one takes half, another one, the other one and a quarter percent commission. The discount rate at the Bank was on average, since the renewal of the privilege, of 5 percent, meaning there is a monopoly for five francs. and competition beyond that for twenty-five cents, the five remaining regulation francs, sacred as the im—pot, acquired by the monopoly.

Similarly, any package and any person sentenced to Travel owes much to the railway; the price is calculated by... Installation: 4° transport costs, actual service rendered; 2° of the toll, a levy representing no work and intended to make up the net product or dividend. When line traffic is insufficient to provide a mi—income peak, taxpayers make K difference on taxation. In the transport industry, there is still competition between the cuckoo clocks, the stagecoaches, the trucks, the carts, the wagons that extend onto the land the railway; that is to say, the monopoly on the roads iron, like that of the Bank, monopolizes for a hundred percent and let the competition argue over one.

gas companies have a monopoly among citizens
the most common and productive reading,

This is how the feudal system was established and how it was formed.

However, it will be objected, this is indeed the mass of the public which provided, through shares of 300 francs and bonds of 300 francs, the billions encompassed in the single-member companies

17.

298 CONCLUSION

poleuses. How to reconcile this fact with the word oli-Garchy?

That's what we explained in a publication

previous, to which we will allow ourselves to return

a few paragraphs.

.

From the point of view we are discussing, there are three categories of very distinct citizens, in terms of their means of existence-
tence ;: - one lives exclusively from work, from wages;
- the other lives partly from work, partly from income; - a
The third lives specifically off their investments. The first does not knows the income only to pay it all along the ell;
The second receives with one hand and pays with the other; Ja troi-
The sixth person receives more than they pay.

Nineteen-twentieths of the security holders are... working people, laborers, industrialists, merchants, farmers sellers, who have saved a little money, are re-trusting for Ten, producers for a thousand. If the financial world meborn from the majority of interests and votes, this po-
The population would soon understand that by raising the interest rates, transport fares, insurance premiums assurances, it undoubtedly creates increases in dividends; but she would see that at the same time there was a strike especially its production, its workforce, its general costs raux; that it draws from its cash box (manufacturing account)
to put back in his cash register (account of account)

In short:

– pay without compensation;

A considerable portion of rentiers – by far the most considerable, – does not receive in dividends this which she paid for in bonuses, and remains in deficit;

Some are in doubt;

And the profits go to a small number of privileged people.

This monstrous clash of interests between the big and small shareholders of the same company bring–

SUMMARY OF THE IDEA OF THIS BOOK 299

would inevitably lead to conflict sooner or later, if feudalism had not taken precautions to prevent the vile multi–study of disturbing the established order. The general assembly of The shareholders of the Bank of France consist of the two Hundreds more interested; same conditions at Credit land and furniture; in railway companies of iron, one must hold 40 shares to attend the general assembly.' |

Administrator positions are also protected. against the invasion of the plebeians. The statutes require each person deposits fifty, one hundred shares, more or less. as a guarantee of their management.

In general, the statutes are written in such a way that an action–_naire cannot take part in the deliberations of the assembly–wounded if he has not invested at least 28,000 francs in the enterprise. At the Northern Company, one is not admitted, in the current state of the prices, if one represents an asset of at least 45,000 francs; at the Bank, it is necessary to represent–send more than 400,000 francs.

While honest people are excluded from the assemblies general wheat, due to insufficient wealth, and boards of directors, because they don't have 100 or 200,000 francs to consolidate, the Saint-Simonians and Jews are engaging in incredible hoarding at force of enormous power; we have seen twenty companies governed by it different, 3.5 billion in capital, 10,000 kilos+ meters of railways and 400,000 employees of tuus grades. In short, the 20 billion in securities are at the discretion of 200 nabobs, who have no say in the matter. Wagered 200 million. Antiquity provides no example

300 CONCLUSION

IV

LE SALARHAT. – If the small shareholders, partners, co-participants in the company are thus pushed back and re- After being overwhelmed by the general staff, what will become of the employees? Wage labor is expanding every day; the field of Independent professions are constantly shrinking in the face of the encroachments of the monopoly. Where are the serious an- tiennes of Bonhomme Richard and Simon de Nantua on good workers, having good conduct, doing Good savings, in order to reach a good institution?

What do you expect him to do with his savings, the good man? Bank employee? In which branch? Can someone skilled in their profession and expertise commit their Savings? Setting up a branch on your own? The law he is forbidden, under penalty of fine, imprisonment and confiscation, until 1897.

And the gas company employee, had he spared thousands upon thousands, even if he were an inventor, a perfectionist- neur, he was forced to remain tied to salaried employment until 1905; if the privilege is not renewed there.

In vain would the Paris omnibus driver have piled up penny by penny, the capital needed to buy a car CT of his team; if he decides to launch a vehicle at his relying on Mr. Haussmann's asphalt, a good vehicle, well paid from his good savings, the first sergeant of The town will come and jump at the reins of its horses and the con- will be impounded. Then, the Prefect of Police, full of kindness, will show him the concession book of the company. – Come back in the year of grace 1910, he will tell him- he said in a fatherly tone; if by then my successors have not If the privilege was not renewed, then you will have the right to drive for yourself.

SUMMARY OF THE IDEA OF THIS BOOK 301

If you can, be the director of a company. railway at a fixed cost of 100,000 francs and 200,000 francs an annual bonus, or a road worker earning 700 francs.

Whatever your title, your salary, your savings, or even driving, you will never establish yourself to your account in that part. Such is the fate, in this specialty, of at least 200,000 heads of household.

Finally, since 1852, the aggravation, the increase and the concentration of monopolies has confined people to the wage-earning class. in perpetuity, regardless of good or bad conduct, at least two nullities – of workers, without prejudice of what the future holds.

Not only are there millions of wage laborers prohibited from the ability to arrive at an establishment, but; Furthermore, they are governed by a set of regulations. to which neither the Council of State nor the Senate contributed: neither the Legislative Body, nor any public authority. They are not not subject to the jurisdiction of the jury, nor of the civil courts, nor of the consular magistracy. The steering committee, the boss, foreman, good pleasure, grace, the – grudges, hatred, reprisals: that's the law and the prophets. 1] There is nothing worse in Russia, in Türkiye, in Egypt, nor in India and other countries considered barbaric. The enslaved Black people still had their own code. black; our employees in large companies do not fall under Pure pleasure.

302 | CONCLUSION

It makes you not dare to think about the future. Can you imagine what France would be after ninety-nine years of a pa-Reil regime?

A 2. – TRANSITION AND TRANSACTION.

V

The diagnosis should suffice for informed readers. to indicate the remedy. But, on the one hand, we are in facing a public ignorant like a child at its first dentition; on the other hand, the problem becomes entangled with the times, and natural complications of an economical diet a mic where individuality fades before the expansion of the solidarity, and the confusion deliberately imagined by the in-Trigue, greed, and plunder. The solutions to 4789 were of a simplistic nature: a decree was all that was needed to abolish the masterships, the mortmains, the lord's rights riaux, ecclesiastical and conventual properties. 7 There was nothing to put in its place. Go on, by imi-work, exchange, the sponsorship rate!

We see two outcomes to our scrutiny regime:

One immediate, preparatory and provisional; the other challenging: native and dirimanent.

Immediately, it would be up to the public administration to prepare the routes, by forcing the Companies to respect their specifications, by forbidding them from legislate against their employees, against their shareholders, against the public, outside the bounds of ordinary law. To this Finally, a penalty should be attached to every infraction. penalty striking, not on the social fund, but on the offender.

- TRANSITION AND TRANSACTION | 303

The government's failure to embark on this path and to to force Mediocrity to respect the law, the chambers of commerce, chambers of agriculture, the body of notables, the consultative chambers of arts and manu- : invoices, the major industrial companies, on their own initiative, should form unions to pursue legal action the courts, all exceptions to common law of which we have given a brief glimpse. Encouraged by The proletariat would surely find a way to follow the example. the movement. The Companies, equipped with a container- Even the most well-endowed would shrink from... abuses whose repression would be pursued by another litigation, inexhaustible in terms of means and resources sources. It would be necessary to add to this organization, conti- killed in self-defense, a vast system of pu- departmental and central authority.

The judiciary, which lives and has no reason to exist except by respecting the law, has given a measure of what one can expect from her in this sense, although she has not ren- no support has been received in the press so far. [I] We should make better use of his excellent qualities more often provisions.

The method of claiming that we propose can to arrive at its legal constitution with the new legislature-- tion on Societies, title of Cooperation.

If the country as a whole began a prolestation in the meaning we have just indicated, it would soon be put

. aware of the final solution: the radical eviction of the Saint-Simonianism, Jewishness and mediocrity; if only one newspaper were to come and help, it would be a matter of a few years.

There are no lasting reforms capable of carrying out to bear their fruits, if universal consent does not bring them forth proves it and doesn't provoke them. France let two perish twice a republic, twice an empire, three times a monarchy constitutional; so it will be with the institutions which recommend themselves only from an ideal, metaphysical point of view. music. But at the beginning of 1868, we saw The peasants of the West ran after the priests, because a An unfounded rumor had circulated that the clergy were plotting a re- the collection of tithes and was preparing a claim for his property before 89. e

How easy it would be today to educate the na- to focus on his interests and to instill in his heart a hatred enlightened, conscious, and of monopolies, and of their exact- tions, and the servitudes they dragged behind them. That Would that be necessary?

To leave to the social economy, to science, the freedom of to publish and write, without conditions of security or of stamp, as is done in favor of the Atterature unhealthy and pornographic; allowing citizens to to gather for a serious business trailer, as is tolerated that they gather to dance; encourage associations political lions on par with shooting clubs and choral societies: further proof that the reforms of the political order and of social order is indissoluble.

In the current state of the press structure, there would have a way to prepare the roads, its condition of

-

TRANSITION AND TRANSACTION 305

to wage war on feudalism and the reclamation of The protection of civil liberties. But the press will do nothing about it. nor that of the opposition, which is known for reasons unknown, democratic. We have explained the reasons many times. during this lamentable story.

HAS

We owe the truth to everyone and to all parties.
After having stigmatized the desertion of the proprietors democratic principles in the area of economic freedoms mitics and the subjugation of the country to the Judeo- coalition
As a Saint-Simonian, it would be unjust on our part to to remain silent about this fraction of the majority of the Body legislative body which parted ways so dramatically with Mr. Rouher, regarding the trade treaty and international monopolies laughter. Certainly, this leader's claim has taken hold.
proportions and a tone of harshness that one would not have expected of such eminently conservative people. It was necessary that the disturbances were very profound and the interests per-sonnels were very keenly affected so that the protest possessed such vigor. The economic tournament at momentarily eclipsed the battles of transcendental politics tale, and since then, the two questions, or rather the two faces of what we call a single and the same queslion, have kept and will always keep, - we hope-at least, - an equal importance in the concerns of the public and the chamber.

This development is worth studying.

306 CONCLUSION

The Legislative Body, originally formed under pressure official recommendations and applications Troyes, had recruited almost exclusively from outside political parties, or at least their leaders.
The imperial government had thought it would find support from...
ide, durable, unwavering, among the large landowners,
the wealthy shipowners, the powerful factory owners, the great agronomists, the millionaires, in short, of the soil, of the trade, manufacturing, banking and communication Mandate. This elite of representatives of material interests-riels, inaccessible to ideology, capable at most of aspiration-dynastic or electoral tions to the realization of which,
Besides, she wouldn't sacrifice a straw, couldn't fail to give immediate, perhaps definitive, support to be, to the reaction of which December 2nd had been the promoteur. As soon as the political program no longer aimed to reassure the good and make the bad tremble, to protect the reality of business against the utopia of reforms, the emperor could not have chosen his en- betterlathe and its auxiliaries.

Regarding compression measures, the docility of the the room proved itself indestructible. It was between the lé-
The legislative and executive branches form a true marriage of inclination.
A continuous and cloudless honeymoon. The arrival of five, in 48537, did not change the balance. What were-
They? What did they represent? They came from Paris and from Lyon, a city of nomads held in supreme defiance by the majority. They did not, moreover, constitute a novel, since their predecessors, six years earlier,
had done better or worse, by refusing the oath.

However, ideology, which we would readily define

TRANSITION AND TRANSACTION 307

Here, the foresight of tomorrow could foresee from the beginning that the balance rested on a point of needle, and that unless one possesses an improbable wisdom, _ Superhuman, a rupture would one day occur, a ca-
It's possible to go as far as divorce. For example, property owners...
Conservatives, who were silent on democracy, believed that Politics and the social economy are not at all alike.
mun, and, unlike their antagonists, they sacrificed willingly the constitutional guarantees provided that one _ let them handle the affairs. If the government had been content
If politics were involved, the agreement would have been lasting; the majority
He would have even lost his aspirations for military glory.
provided that he did not touch either the annuity or the profits of industry, nor to the interests of capital, except for the reason of improvement and increase.

But, says Scripture, the Spirit blows where it wills: Spt-rilus flat ubi vult. The executive consisted mainly-lawyers, engineers, financiers, people who readily torments the butterfly, and those who are not frightened point of experimenting on the social body like the medefive on the sick man. We would not have run this risk if the wallets had been in the hands of farmers or manufacturers. Economic vertigo gripped everyone.
One day, the ruling elites would be swept away: what if we were to do some New, free trade, for example! No sooner thought of,
It was resolved as soon as possible. The matter was kept in the utmost secrecy;
The preliminary stages of the trade treaty were conducted like a conspiracy. The ministers' wives, he said a historian, they themselves copied the protocols, to that the secret would not be revealed to the indiscretions of the most-mitifs. |

308 CONCLUSION

The customs reorganization exploded like a bomb on the heads of the protectionists. It was a real blow to theatre, a change in full view. The shock was immediate. to give way to anger. What! Without an investigation, without prior notice, without precautionary measures and preserving- trices, without transition, especially without the opinion or approval representatives of the sovereign people were delivered abruptly. domestic production is facing external competition. Laughable! It was intolerably despotic. One might have added: Gladly: Agents of Pitt and Coburg!

Admittedly, we were ill-advised to push such large [projects]. clamor, regarding the trade treaty, when in. had sacrificed all freedoms to executive power constitutional rights of the press, of meetings, of associations, of parliamentary initiative; when the budget was voted on with the ability to transfer funds from accounts; when we had delivered to the police such a formidable weapon, Lo, the law of general security.

In any case, the protest necessarily had to to leave first from this ultra-conservative world; he lived based on a tacit compromise according to which he should — to maintain control over material interests, in exchange for the political direction that he was abdicating into the hands of the emperor reur; and suddenly, without warning, without declaration of war, the executive branch burst onto its scene: domain.

If only it had all been limited to a question of procedures! But the tariff reform hit the aristocracy hard. agricultural and industrial cracy of the Legislative Body, well more harshly than on the small bourgeois and working-class world who had elected the redundant Jules Favre, the crybaby Jules

\ TRANSITION AND TRANSACTION 309

Simon and the Isaiahist Pelletan. Or rather, the blow struck immediately, directly, abruptly, the great factory owners, landowners, metallurgists, the mine owners; it would not affect the islands ordinary people, indirectly and over a fairly long period of time. Is it this difference in electoral situation that has linked the: The language of our democrats and that of the third party? He nothing less than this shock was needed to draw the

Once their most fundamental interests are affected,
Those who had been satisfied the day before began to join in the chorus.
with the left on the dangers of personal government nel and on the right of the country to intervene itself in its own business. Review of economic conditions from France, the secessionists realized for the pre-
This was the first time we were burdened with budgets and millions of dollars.
a level of slumber out of proportion to our resources; they saw that the railways were crushing shipping there where they had not sequestered her; they acknowledged that mergers, subsidies, which they had voted for
With their eyes closed, they continued production and exchanges, transportation at the whims of a few small companies worthy; they recognized that the Crédit foncier, the Crédit agricultural, largely endowed by them, with a view to coming to Aid to culture only served to siphon off capital countryside and cities for the benefit of the Grand Turk, in favor of castles and railways in Spain, in Portugal, in the Papal States. All institutions were corrupted; all the societies granted privileges-laws, endowments and guarantees, operated at re-
The country

310 | __ CONCLUSION -

had tried to create tools, machines, elements of wealth and cheapness, and all this had been seized by a coalition of traffickers, external, in in some way, and superior to the nation, ready to deliver our manufacturing and our trade abroad for little that she might find profit, bonuses and increases there revenue figures. In short, through its public works and With its economic creations, France seemed ready to
'supporting the competition of labor against the whole world;
That's what the government thought when it made the trade treaty; and so the national equipment, without anyone suspecting it beforehand, was alienated for ninety-nine years in the hands and for the benefit of a caste that cares about French interests as well as that of the Patagonians and the Holtentots.
Certainly, if the political economy of December 2nd had not struck that the barons of land, iron, coal and cotton, we would be very willing to offer them, as
As a consolation, the refrain of comedy: You have You wanted it, Georges Dandin, you wanted it! But after the study of which we are drawing the final lines here, there is no more room for mockery. If the flatterer, the manufacturer of fabrics, the ironmaster supports by the dozens or hundreds of thousands of francs in annual surcharges including countless that we have pointed out, the proletarian serf, tied to large companies, is even more mistreated; because it's not just his salary that's in The game is still his safety, his dignity, his soul, his conscience. As for the average bourgeois, for example the worker who doesn't count what taxes he pays by ap-

LL 2

TRANSITION AND TRANSACTION 311

By supplying retail, he may not suspect the embraces that enfold him in privilege. But looking at it Up close, he will recognize that he is still the most heavily charged; for he too, in the cost of his consumption, reimburses the farmer and the manufacturer for the extortions of which the latter were extorted by the monopolies.

That's the whole secret of universal high prices.

\

Thus the economic problem, disregarded by our de-

Magogues, brought back into the spotlight by the highest aristocracy of the country, happens to be the most real question social conditions of the time.

While our demophiles, motionless like the god In short, they have not taken a step towards political economy. the economists of the Legislative Body, under the impetus of self-interest, have at least put a foot in the door The path of liberalism. It's not enough. More than one, among them, gave his approval to both measures restrictions on the press, the bond and the stamp duty; More than one person is also regretting it today. Will manufacturers and farmers understand that they will never be able, in matters of advertising, to do concurrence to the speculators who pocketed the eight thousand liards from the Saint-Simonian raid, and who are mistaken to their benefit of seventeen million in commission on a the only matter, according to the most respectable members

Parisian, on the discussion of the treaty of the city of Paris, _is full of lessons: let us discuss Mr. Hauss-Mann, nothing better, it's democratic; but respect

at Crédit Foncier!

The House economists may well come

312 ne CONCLUSION d

every year, once or twice for fifteen days,
to astonish the country with strange revelations. However,
After six weeks, the public no longer thinks about it, and the daily newspaper, like a drop of water, washing away the stain, It eventually digs into the stone. It must be sufficiently de-showed that the elimination of the security deposit and the stamp, allowing honest people as well as speculators to make their penny newspaper, would be an act of high morality and intelligent preservation.
The experiment with public meetings has troubled some grumpy minds of the majority. Instead of requiring the Given the severity of the prosecutor's office, why don't they organize assemblies?
Parallel meetings, doing more and doing better?
popular groups have already begun to dismantle monopolies;
There have been revelations and developments that have...
would have done honour to the rostrum of the Legislative Body.
Shall we talk about incompatibilities? Is it moral, is it legal that the directors of the Midi railways
The transatlantic liners come, on the one hand, in terms of quality:
dealers, requesting subsidies, that On the other hand, do they vote for themselves as members of parliament? Is it decent that the administrators of Crédit Foncier sign with one hand a treaty with the city of Paris, and that of the other, as deputies, they deposit the ballot in the ballot box approving Latin intended to give to the said convention force of law? We know that, according to the doctrine of...
In this century, it is anti-democratic to set limits on The choice of the sovereign people. However, the incompatibility that we point out here also seems to be motivated by less than the one that is being talked about concerning the squires, huntmen, chamberlains and other employees of the castle.

TRANSITION AND TRANSACTION " 313

before the legislature; that the economists of the House then remember our axiom: The solutions of political and economic problems are intertwined. comparable and fundamentally interdependent.

It is not enough to reform the laws; it is important to- core plus to transforming customs. Here the eco- party The Noinists would have to take a major initiative. Capitalist miscalculations, the ruin of small and medium-sized businesses carriers in the financial shipwrecks had begun to sow legitimate distrust. The revelations brought to the platform completed the discrediting of the organizations authors and initiators of the public edifice. It is no longer possible to launch a business with the resources that only Too successful for the past fifteen years. The cash is being hoarded. the Bank; savings accumulate in current accounts unproductive; it's a strike against capital. The only business programs organized recently are shows . of bonds and loans from French and foreign states. Nothing about sponsorship, nothing about anonymity.

However, there are such companies to which... The largest individual fortunes may suffice; it It requires public support, association, and grouping. forces. For a long time to come, our small and medium Capitalists will not be able to judge and appreciate the The owner of an industrial combination; they will need to- days, to make a decision, the patronage of men considered rables. The old bosses have fallen, succumbed to the The crushing weight of his own unworthiness. He should not be made to feel... Will he not kill a new one, rich in acquired positions? Even richer in honorability? And will it be necessary, for lack of 18!

_314 CONCLUSION

of initiators, remain, the portfolios Dies, in the presence of famine and unemployment?

The miscalculations of finance and its dependents. They are not exclusively concerned with wrongdoing, they come also a social economic error. The establishments- Banking companies alone have so far engaged and organized industrial associations. However, it is elementary that The Bank cannot commit its capital in the long term; Three to six months in advance is the maximum for the race that it can provide. If it interferes in enterprises taken at ninety-nine years old, it is only as of intermediary and commission agent. Its downfall is-certain when she is forced to uphold her values.

She must therefore realize this as soon as possible, and, naturally,

It aims for the highest possible prices. Hence this Unbridled greed, this excitement for the prize, this scandal inflated reviews designed to mislead the public and To get me to empty my wallet in exchange for hard cash consolidated banking institutions. Hence this scandal.
of centuries-old concessions expected in a few years.
A little more, a little less waste, the system, had it been "Conducted honestly, it could not succeed."

The essential condition for industrial regeneration and financial, @is that the Bank returns to its attributs-economic goals, from which it only emerged for the
The misfortune of the people is that in the future it will operate exclusively vement on short-term values, from three to six months, whose mission it is to facilitate circulation. The gold-organization of limited partnerships, public limited companies, re-comes naturally to people in industry who are used to relying on annuities, not on internal achievements

+

3

»

TRANSITION AND TRANSACTION | 315:

immediate and significant. Then the calculation of interest and depreciation constitutes the long-term values Breath almost at a fixed price. It's Jia made for railway obligations.

The economists in the Legislative Body are better than
no one capable of taking the initiative for a reform in the direction we indicate. Around them gravitates a whole staff of lesser-known, less prominent figures, and who However, it meets the best conditions indicated in this program; at the first sign of trouble, these people-

We will not insist further: we will pray alone—

—element those to whom these lines are addressed should meditate on this reflection, including the echoes of the Stock Exchange, if they frequent it—were, they would have already repeated several formulas to them: With the financiers, we did things expensively, we did things badly, we did dishonestly, but at least we were doing something.

Will we no longer be able to accomplish anything with honest people?

All?

4

J

Unforeseen circumstances have arisen.

dropping our book amidst electoral concerns rales. Perhaps he will suffer from the coincidence. We

However, we believe that if the examination of candidates was subordinate to the principle we have developed:

simultaneous march and demands for reforms

the political order and the economic order, that would be the more complete satisfaction sought by those who wait of the election and the legislature the improvement of our political and social organization. The problems raised here are not, in fact, socialism of the year 3000;

316 CONCLUSION

cannot consider reversing the tariff reductions customs officers, who are, moreover, just another form of monopoly. To reclaim, with our national tools,

our dignity, our autonomy as producers and citizens

Toys, that's the solution: it's up to the public to take care of it. souvenir.

Whatever happens, and even if we only speak to the world of converts, we will exhibit in a new publication (Labor Federation) the reason

“the economic upheavals described earlier” and the means of arriving at a solution, at a revolution as legitimate as it is necessary.

Readers already familiar with the study of these questions understood what the final solution had to be:

—accept as public services all allocations of the financial oligarchy, and apply the mu— principle to them of return.

This, however, requires a conscientious statement of reasons.
thoroughly investigated. We will strive to ensure that it is at the
the magnitude of the interests involved in this solemn debate.

END

TABLE OF CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION..- ECONOMIC TRANSFORMATIONS :
Tradition and modernity... ..,..... ddr se
Law of development of pauperism. soso...

CHAPTER I. - DISTURBING LEVIES. « ..ooooe

$ 4th. - The privilege of real property... ..,....

Transformations of ownership..... RE

$2. - The capital contingent on movable property,...

8 3. - Parenthetical note: That equality of conditions resulted from the organization of a society based on exchange. - Eugreindustries page..... eee Submitted weigh $4. - The share of the swindlers... esse soosoooserces ve

The constitution of financial feudalism. ... soso sossoou.oe Fraud... TD hates A
The raid of Saint Simonism. Does DEXTETTE Mae seu:

CHAPTER IF. = CONTINUATION OF THE SUBJECT: THE REINFORCEMENT OF THE POLITICS. - MONOPOLICE CONCENTRATION

$17 - Identity of politics and economics PRE:
$2. - Economic expedients of December 2nd. Riads

Bank of France..... ..:, nsc vise Discount Counter..... tar ons tinted are LA ST LES LD LEE LA PRE EE ET
Crédit mobilier.....,....., use sue esse
Small Cars.....,sssose.ee argus

Railways... Haas Re PR TT DT

Hausmannian Paris. 0.06.090200 9th 000.0, Revelations and recriminations, his

318, ' TABLE OF CONTENTS

Pages.

Destruction of the canals by the railway companies...
Conclusion of the benefit of shortening* direct lines

POCTIREOS des in sde ee Len ssmm nierpe HARD General and special rates: example taken from the transport of wheat.. 206080000106. 40-90-0006 2006... se Reinstatement of internal customs Te sas Re Differential tariffs... Séiotb iii adore Sri:

Diversion rates...

Comparison of transport conditions along the paths of iron and waterways.,°,.....

Favorable treaties..... ee sosococesce tasse
Summary of political economy for December 2nd.,.... die

CHAPTER III. – MORAL DEPRESSION. – MEDIOCRACY: A A STATE WITHIN A STATE – THE CODES OF THE AS AGAINST
THE PUBLIC AND AGAINST ITS EMPLOYEES.,9e dedioa so cist és

$17. – Cynical Confessions... his soso ee soooooouoese Sie
The profits from a merger,.
Duel between two monopolies,.. silk of A chain of privileges..... D $2. – Mystification and derision of the public by the financial feudalism.....,..... ares said

The faith of contracts! serves esse nets
A prank by the Northern Railway Company.....
The antics of the Exhibition committee... ..,.....
The Franco-Belgian conflict. ss... se. soosscssosreonee bee ;
8 3. – The Jewish community and its providers of capital..... se

Interior scenes... .e.ssseseres.oe ses e sostadtsadee
Glory and misery «..... dre s oia ame qe nsente
Tours of force by MM. PP Ne Nate use
$4. – High finance and the public/clientele. (same siestas)
More preferential taxes..... so sseossousossee
Contempt for the socio-technical D
Minor inconveniences of the railway traveler. ,..s..se.seuvse

The good faith of honest people and the subtleties of the scam.
Approved rates and the law.....,....., Stones desses
A petty lawsuit... in sesronsonsrseure:
Companies are removing their specifications...
Public harassment.....,, rs rdiieestses 6.6 0.4 98 to An article on the rights of the poor.,..... ss. Its
5. – Judeo-Saint-Simonianism and the wage-earning plebeians.
The employees' situation is deplorable.,....., dense

The engineers' monopoly. RS

Mediocrity and the despotism of abilities.

110

+

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Here

On liability in railway accidents...
Examples of accidents. ss sers anses etes «000
Invasion of the old soldier.....sessouse oosevosse
The regulations, the codes of Mediocrity.....,.....
Episode: The Roubaix strike. sos sesersssso sous
Strange customs of the administrative world.,.....,0..e
The contagion of example.....,....., ...ssssessesrese
Dimes and SelVage. side ess esasssscess rene tes sas

CONCLUSION TE ...

Ë Zee – Summary of the thought in this book....e oo00.000 ov»

END OF TABLE.

LS

+

PARIS. -æ IMPKIMERIE L, COUFART-DAVYL, RUE DU BAC, 30.

319

Pages.

245

253

259

261

266

210

18

283

:

UNIVERSITY OF MICHIGAN

DUT

3 9015

1! , : Lx. To | M *

Va ° \ at ; :

\ : gift 4.Û

/

2

sh jA TE. | : A AS] x L 5e

} Yi4" v ' L + 4

{ Re - 9. ÿ es
f / Fe. : M 4 4 <*
É AN A4 . + 1 4

A æ / / \s. at 12 132 LT

THE QU:

d to PA 2 i

N fre

»

As

This is a reproduction of a library book that was digitized by Google as part of an ongoing effort to preserve the information in books and make it universally accessible.

Google Books

<https://books.google.com>

Google

About this book

This is a digital copy of a work that has been preserved for generations on library shelves precaution by Google as part of a project aimed at allowing internet users to discover the line.

Because this book is relatively old, it is no longer protected by copyright law and is now “Belonging to the public domain” means that the book in question has never been subject to Expiration. The conditions required for a book to enter the public domain can vary from co
These are all links to the past. They bear witness to the richness of our history, our cul too often difficult for the public to access.

The footnotes and other marginal annotations present in the original volume are reproduced of the long journey the book has taken from the publishing house through the library to fi

Instructions for use

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize works in the public domain and make them thus accessible to all. These books are indeed the property of everyone and we are simply making them accessible. However, this is a costly project. Therefore, and in order to continue disseminating these books, we have taken necessary measures to prevent potential abuses by third-party merchant sites, in particular technical constraints related to automated queries.

We also ask you to:

- + Do not use the files for commercial purposes. We designed the Google Books Search program for personal use. We therefore ask that you use these files for personal purposes only. They may not be used for any commercial purpose.

- + Do not perform automated requests. Do not send any automated requests whatsoever to the servers for research concerning translation software, optical character recognition, or any other field of artificial intelligence. For large amounts of text, please do not hesitate to contact us. We encourage the use of Google Books for works and documents belonging to the public domain and we would be happy to be of service to you.

- + Do not remove the attribution. The Google watermark contained in each file is essential to our program and allow them to access more documents through the Google Books Search Program. Do not delete the watermark. No cases.

- + Stay within the law. Whatever use you intend to make of the files, remember that it is your responsibility. Be sure to respect the law. If a work is in the American public domain, do not assume that it is in the public domain in other countries. The legal duration of copyright for a book varies from country to country. The works whose use is authorized and those whose use is not. Don't assume that simply posting a book on Google Book search means that it can be used in any way anywhere in the world. The sentence to which you are subject. The penalties you would face in the event of copyright infringement could be severe.

About the Google Books Search service

By facilitating searches and access to a growing number of books available in many languages, Google Books Search contributes to promoting cultural diversity through Google Books Search. Indeed, the Google Books Search program allows internet users to discover the world's literary heritage, while helping authors and publishers to promote their works.

online searches in the full text of this work can be found at <http://books.google.com>

v4 ar. To:

| material ee R El EPS ERA T PER AP ARE PTE TT

—,

c Lulu 2%

c rt r

The ! > se

See you later,

" 5 A Fe

L " +

" . ; to > #:

ra . L

x 5 Re: ; +

ni ÿ Ê F. :

, rs to -

: Es oi en : .#

< ER np en ie #

: D # "

EL SE

HAS

#4; * 2.;

21st y #

4 a To € "a - Es": 3

L:," ä ë

EL ns. --m:

: ÿ :

PRAGUE MOTHER EE ALT VE Ze a IN NOTE D ERRRERET Ps:

RTS ue RU es CR ti ae

OR Ce OT OI UE EE ;

A PDA PR 7

d re

a+ Li

ds ad ©: DENT Re eng UT AN rs Nr 8 op

DE CPS Ai E ARER ep À ve 7

Jam LM £2 FA te ir eo? ss 4

5 NT Gus, PE

#,

$: :

M" THE

»

: e
", # + nn > Lo
Ouch Pit du on
e :
; = !, to .
: +
: RE EN
' has :
Faith
: + 4 Ü
0.5 L
Lo # Fi:
: Born:
; . +

▪

=
—

Psalm 4
: # :
<<" At 4 M 5 LS d the ue LE , a CD – CRE
uo =
< G: _." "

and Be 29 29 TL Wed ' " : AN. a Ti te

STATE AND

Los AR Ft fn Le
as F0 re Prat FER a RS it states we 15 c e HT

,

*
£

Fe | s
The ee . 4 tv : a – me to : + Fosgr a opee mes a ne" ES EU Se WH0:

va JE MR Ue Ai D. micr 1967 Re M s " DUR
CCR 7 TS COR NC PO ETS LR PRE ge Z: from Le a. #4
Does eee ge published Fe ". ss. .
HET NOR ar RE CR) FREE ES. Los

PET ENE Ra Louer and Unes te

very

at 4.54

* ie
ON
: +
#.
+
THE
3
£
z # :
x
r- C RE IT +
e raeh ee
FES

LP ee to TRE Ra, State et CT

DR
RC His -()6)0Q |:
Rcean ar m METE eT, * PR pr FO ':

In this sea, it molts. Pa to EURE to De ee ES TO CAPTURE CAT

EU

mrsc

LUS Ce LR D LL

This

1 re own ccm ee nee

: USE RAS RE Lee. RS D0
ae EPA Ra Pre CR RUE tt £ g: DR D ST LS È À ë sh 0 STE
cn pps. LS ù 5
+ . .
RS: to n
; 1. n to der ion
TO x AND. 5 NE OF THE Se À Fe À . a “
The ON ON oo TO F
Ye, ; ke ss ne, k es
+ Sea This The id, ve 4
e 4% to CS: = to. THE
— &r # M È , joe
: : To & ds : had ++
| EU ES PE
ra FE HA ere à + à ë + ÉA
[RE] ' ; z D = Se sl Le MO ÉD E REX Dion o Qu
F Fe a ÿ D «4 mg 5
1 2, 00 LA À É ;" È 4, us at # '
“Rs R 7 a ES À à 41
. cn Me RE £ 4*
'M pige Ua LE = + : ss. Re J = ès
; The KE ï 4. '4 a É LE »” Fe EE De ù
LUE HR Lies FRS * to RE L En à = à erie L TE
The DT Si
5” Br 4, HE
ER PR ee am Ê | : Ma Et
RE RU
PEER EN dite .w788
RE EL LS The
of
FU OTRARBUL LEUR UNE A GOREPIO EAN MORT € À FH rer PR D0 CEE +. as ee :

ms

É Fe Bu moe seat ten me 4 ET: ete los: su
A BE pue CEE Tat EU set

TDR CARPE in WRESTLING

RC ER

Potato MNT Tnt RE ME

DER ST DR ATRS er mn CI ee
DNS YARIS Voms

FAIRY TREASURE

id

7

Cr

4 smmisit

LAB0 RE fé

#

ER SE in CE: r
F 1.5 a EE 2
pe + Æ nu ER É ' " £ ot ET
1% + in 4 a e. + ne
to: # + : 5 He
k. to!
! # j = 7 : +
+ "LR "A

Read: : y :, a
to È 4 | Fa " st Le u
A ee F je "4
s D '
. + É a" i À gt
FF e ra n *.
4 Read "° » & 4
TE i mu =
No. an es to LOS 4 SD jen 4
"$ N 1st The # + 0 to 4 Fe LT End Of a The %
4 Ë Ée ot À « - ; Al. Ce _
3 u cl + ee "+ ": ë Es on e; k
: 3 + # PRE + <
PA Read The: THIS AND "i
A 'oh, SD) ne 5 .
: ER RO ET

LRATRENL mt RAP en

DO RT CUMÉ SPORT Mi CURE Mar ce SR

L'EN MU HOUAn

D TEE RU A LE AUS AT

A ES
se Past VE aie mi SLT &

EU SCPI DA M CALE LÉ)

1 LOT

TS UE Pre cd ne 2

Head 4 CET és 2 a. Read Eee NS NE TR
MORE SALT

< # st ne

4"

- +

DEAD me ea mes ©

AT SUP aa AE POPUTLE PT OR RE

+

has

CT SITITAR

MS CRU

en he Nr iimiuké rs 7 use

: RE ee RP ET

; THERE

; 5 4 see at

a The WE. EE dé ati

É ë : ts

: L 3. be ="

È % to rx A: ET Aer

4 hi + Fo to ... 4

m; 4, . es En:

ï ! " ÿ 3 ï =

* = m LT 2: Es È | : 3

F 4 fi: ! + - :

; : in 3 : ,

ë # Se + _- 3 to Ve at £ ä 45 €.

e 4 se à ÿ,* SRE pv > $

. ù A - +2 BE. cn ne |

to these.

A to a to 7 4 M jt =,

î ré nt + £ pa d é È

mł st { _ e, li je

The 37th É: ë. re;

L ue, DA ee

4" 1 & 'é re es

has ' : :

h ri to F The 4

At art LE

k F cu, at

: E FT ta -- :

. ns . . |

4 THE

re to LS Le
| se FN
Se FL k sr
Lu ALT er, Ag
TS nm
Li F + h Heu are
. ' - DD
On SO out a em peur

to A ON PRE RAP THAT to Fe es es .

+ ;
And Von SUR PER NN THIS ITS FI S

ne mn *

LM AU A ER OR
F7 APR SPORE EN a TP <a SP CR re

L

Digitized by Google

4

| Aryans and Semites

_. (A)

__ PARIS
* E. DENTU & C*, Publishers

BOOKSELLERS OF THE SOCIETY OF PEOPLE OF LETTERS
Palais-Royal, 15-17-19, Galerie d'Orléans
and 3, Place de Valois

Digitized by Google

P
of the"

12

OC 2"

ARYANS AND SEMITHS

THE BALANCE SHEET OF JUDAISM

AND CHRISTIANITY

WORKS BY ALBERT REGNARD

Essays in Scientific History and Criticism, { volume in-8,
Paris 1865.

New Research on Cerebral Congestion, in-8, Paris 1868.

History of Contemporary England, 1 volume in-32, Alcan 1882.

Mortality in provincial hospitals and the need a radical reform of Public Assistance, brochure 1n-8; Paris 1886.

Chaumette and the Commune of 93, octavo pamphlet; Paris, year 98-1889.

Science Policy Studies

The Principles of Revolution and Socialism, 18mo booklet.
London 1875.

The Social Revolution, pamphlet in-18. London 1876.

Atheism, 18mo. London. Year 86-1878.

The State, its origins, its nature and its purpose, 8vo. Paris, Derveaux. Year 93-1885.

The Right to Assistance, or to what extent public assistance Should it be compulsory? Paris, octavo pamphlet, 1889.

German, completely revised and augmented by five
New chapters, translated by A. Regnard. 1 vol.!
in-8. XLVI-540 pages. Paris, Reinvald, 1884. |

Force and Matter, by Professor L. Büchner, 15th edition |

ARYANS AND SEMITHS

OVERVIEW OF JUDAISM CHRISTIANITY

A. REGNARD

VOLUME ONE

PARIS
E. DENTU, Publisher
BOOKSTORE OF THE SOCIETY OF PEOPLE OF LETTERS

3, PLACE DE VALOIS, ROYAL PALACE

1890

The Semites! They are the shadow in the picture of civilization.
sation, the evil genius of the earth. All their gifts are plagues. To combat the Semitic spirit and ideas, is the task of the Aryan race.

Gustave TRIDON,

PREFACE

The author of Jewish France quotes somewhere,
with a selflessness that one must know
Thank you, for the remarkable work of our late friend, Gustave Tridon, on Jewish Molochism. "This posthumous work by the former member of the Commune, he said, contains, despite its errors and its Blasphemies, some accurate points of view. Gus-Tave Tridon is the only one among the revolutionaries, who dared to attack the Semites whom he calls "the om-
"Break in the picture of civilization, the bad
"Genius of the earth. All their gifts are..."
"Plagues: Combating the Semitic spirit and ideas"
"is the task of the Aryan race." And Mr. Drumont adds: "It is worth noting that he did not publish this book during his lifetime.

The truth is that if Jewish Molochism has not
The book was published during Tridon's lifetime, which is why... was barely finished when illness and death made the pen fall from his hands. Moreover, and without wishing to diminish in any way the merits of the bril-

—

ar fe

6 THE BALANCE SHEET OF CHRISTIANITY

writer whose Revolution and literature unfolded
In the event of premature loss, it is worth remembering that Hatred of Semitism was the order of the day among the young revolutionaries of the late Empire, especially in the Hébertist group to which belongs-Tridon was born.

We knew very well that the solution to the question-religious instruction-by which we must understand the sup-Church pressure – should, if not precede that of the social question, at least to go hand in hand with her. The metaphysicians of democracy have It's all well and good to keep repeating that the people only have to want it, "that they "Strength is number." Number is not as we should have noticed after So many failed revolutions. Moreover, there is the clear understanding of things, I'm not saying at the majority, but at least among a significant portion of the population: as long as the immense

The masses will be taken in by the juggling acts of the pre-
Very much so, she will want to remain a slave.

That is why we relentlessly attacked the Semitism and its immediate product, Christia-nism – the staunchest supporters of the Empire, undermined from then on, at its very foundations, through the awakening of the philosophical spirit, through the atheist propaganda of the Candide and Freethought. Also the condemn-
As nations rained down, Tridon spent more than two years at Mazas and Ste-Pélagie. He died there.

AND OF JUDAISM 7

not being among those whose constitution resists the Lack of fresh air and sunshine. Myself
I got four months in prison – and the fever typhoid on top of everything else – for having spoken among other things, from the lamentable moment when "the Hebrew monotheism spread throughout the world, as "A drop of oil on a vessel full of water." That
That being said, not to bring up old stories,
but to show how anti-Semitic ideas-which were widespread among the revolutionaries
from that time.

The Empire disappeared in the collapse of the France. Unfortunately, anti- propaganda religious, socialist, and atheist, embarrassed by all sorts of obstacles, hadn't had the time, in four or five years, to penetrate quite deeply in the masses. Once again, the number did not-was not the force and the oligarchic republic favor-rises for too many years continued-tion of the reign of the Church and the Plutocracy, all as powerful today as they were under the Empire.

Well! Mr. Drumont's book, "despite its

"Blasphemies and his errors," I will say in turn, had the immense merit of bringing back the attention of a
a generation too indifferent to one of these problems of paramount importance, the solution to which matters most to the happiness of humankind. By typing as corners under Judaism, this fanatical demolitionist

8 THE BALANCE SHEET OF CHRISTIANITY

did not realize that he was simultaneously ruining the building Catholic fice. And that's excellent work.

although unconscious; it is through this that this book...
It pleases and has gladdened the hearts of thousands of men,

among the buyers of its one hundred and twenty editions.
It is also through his violent attacks against this another immediate product of Semitism: – the Capitalism – through invectives against this regime of fierce competition, against the infamy of the tripot-Stock market investors, against the insolence of billionaires
res: and all the more so since the whippings will not not to sting the faces of the sons of Israel alone, but another bunch of uncircumcised, Judaized stockbrokers
through Christianity |

What pleases us even more is seeing proclamasea and spread by the thousands of copies of Jewish France, this striking, contested truth
only through the ignorance of the naive or the bad faith of those concerned: – the reality and excellence of the Aryan race, of this unique family to which Humanity owes the wonders of the Age of Pericles, the Renaissance and the Revolution – the three great eras of world history – and which alone is able to prepare and complete the finishing supreme element of social renewal.

"The role of the Semite," said Mr. Drumont, "his thought fixed has been constantly to reduce the Aryan to slavery vage, to put it to the soil. He tried to arrive to this end by war, and Littré showed the character-

AND OF JUDAISM 9

tère of these great surges that almost gave
"To the Semites, world hegemony." Alas!
that Carthage, with An-Nibal, Paul realized it. Yes! Semitism had the hegemony of the globe; of the East, through Islamism, of the West, of the Aryan race, by Christianity nism.

Hey! What, these Romans, these conquerors—well Better! — These organizers of the world have been vanquished by Semitism! Ah! no doubt, he has
The ancient civilization had to abandon itself: it
It was essential, above all, that the true founders be skillful—how to turn the grandeur and the institutions to their advantage
Roman tutions: it took the imbecile Cons—Tantin left the cradle and the center of all these glories, leaving Rome to the high priest of the Christians Look, the imagination of the people also reveals—early on, the brilliance and prestige of the masters of the world.
But if Semitism had to strip some—one of its most odious attributes and to use weapons even forged by the Aryans, Without that, he would not have won — the blow would not have
was no less harsh, and it took twelve centuries efforts to begin only to shake the strong foundations of this religion of mourning, of obscurity Anarchism and death, drawn by Paul and his successors sisters of Hebrew Monotheism.

“Christianity,” said Gustave Tridon in a masterful page that must be quoted in its entirety, —

10 THE BALANCE SHEET OF CHRISTIANITY

Christianity is guilty of having deified the Social crimes, poverty, ignorance, uselessness. It embodies all the destructive agents that man enclosed within its bosom. It is the origin and the support of all the abuses of our social order. In him lies symbolize the revolt of grace against the law, of authority versus freedom, selfish exploitation against the social ideal. The citizen is sacrificed to A believer, a man in God.

"The task of the modern mind is therefore to ba—layer down to the last particle of the Semi— spirit
tic and to return to the ancient destiny of our race, to the motto without which it cannot conquer, to its sublime dogma, Humanity.

"To the ancient world revitalized by the alluvial deposits of the na—modern traditions we owe to the conquests of our sciences, the brilliance of our arts, the dazzling of our cities. It was he who tore away the veil thrown over the life through religious terror. It is he who... has made love unlearned, family and friendship Cursed, all these genuine acts of piety, envied by nature put an end to the dualism that we wanted to render eternal. We are saved by the tears of Muses, uplifted by the wisdom of Minerva, delivered by the labors of Hercules, redeemed by victory of Apollo. These vanquished gods are ours; these goddesses whose free charms have been cloistered under the bure, are the only ones worthy of our sighs and our

AND OF JUDAISM 11

Prayers. Having fallen with man, they rise again. with him. Already the ancient cult is revived in the sciences and the arts, supported by its powerful breath The masterpieces of our literature, is the guide and the thinker's faith. The social question gives it an echo the depths of the voice of the Gracchi and of the storms of the Agora. » (Jewish Molochism, p. 200.)
– For more than twenty years I have not ceased, in my various publications, to express under a a less brilliant form, certainly, but with the same fervor and the same conviction, ideas analogs. I've been wearing them for a long time. In my head, the idea and the plan for this book, where they will to be established definitively, on unshakeable foundations labels of scientific demonstration, the asset of our Aryan brethren and the legacy of our eternal enemies, the Semites: the time has come to triggered by the examination of their balance sheet, the bank– the path of Judaism and Christianity, to which We must, in addition to religious stupefaction, the appalling development of the capitalist system A lot of people go away repeating every day that "antiquity had slavery;" and some unconscious democrats, in the best of circumstances tensions in the world – not to mention a greater A number of charlatans take advantage of this to follow suit. the step behind the band of black, Jewish men, Protestants and Catholics, obscuri viri, like Hunten speaks, declaring war on the Hellenists–

42 THE BALANCE SHEET OF CHRISTIANITY

me, at the most splendid manifestation of the spirit Aryan, that is to say, of human intelligence.

Yes, unfortunately! Antiquity had slavery vage. And then what? We have salaried employment, which doesn't our Aryan predecessors did not know, –

these three plagues, or rather these three aspects of a
the same scourge, Semitism, Christianity and the Capitalism. And despite the shock of the Renaissance-session and the great upheaval of the Revolution, he
It will take a major cleanup to get rid of it.
to calm the world and clear the way for the Socialists lism.

AND OF JUDAISM 13

CHAPTER ONE

BREEDS AND IN PARTICULAR OF THE ARYAN RACE

Opponents of the Doctrine of Races.– Fantasies of ML de Rosny.– Freret, Bopp and the Indo- family European or Aryan.– Importance of language in ethnic classifications.– The variations of Mr. Vambéry.– The “Reverend” A. Sayce and the “Pigeon-En"glish.”–Opinion of Broca, E. B. Tylor, and Haeckel.– Karl Penka and his Ariacae Origins.– Herder and patriotic ethnography. – On the true character-Theoretics of civilized races. – Excellence of the race Aryan.

"The gods of Rome and Greece, the symbols-the works of nature and life, the masterpieces of Phidias will lie down in the tomb: on the marbles
The ignoble gargoyles succeed the Parthenon, and upon the broken statue of Olympian Jupiter stands
The hideous corpse of a tortured man. Sinister and too much A true picture of the times ahead! For Over a thousand years, humanity will enter the sepulchre:
This is the beginning of the Black Terror. We are
"Stay with her (1)." Thus, Autrelois,
Having to talk about the Middle Ages, I tried to characterize-

(1) A. Regnard, Essays on history and criticism. Paris, 1865.
p: 150.

to, in my turn, terrify the fall of civilization Hellenic and the victory won by the spirit of Semitic races based on the Aryan race.

I say "the Aryan race," and I am forced to go into some explanations on this matter, because, finally, some routine minds, acting in concert with those concerned—that is to say, with Jews, Protestants, Catholics and other Hebrews saints, born admirers of the Bible and the Semiism — have made an effort in recent times to refute doctrines firmly established, accepted by the most eminent thinkers People from all over the world. The first pedant who came along.
believes he has the right, today, to protest
while talking about the great Aryan or Indo- family European and relies, when necessary, on declamations
the pronouncements of certain scholars who spout, while giving themselves With their philosophical airs, they spouted the greatest sophisms.
of the world.

"The most positive story," said one of them, "has had to bowing our heads in the face of fanciful assumptions which had to be imagined to establish the close relationship dark-skinned Indians (?) and dark-skinned English light and pink. When presented to the ethnographer
The Greeks next to the Indians, he can't help to compare art so pure, so natural, so well balanced the brilliance of some and the plastic excess that launched the others in monstrous creations...
when one contrasts the monotheism of the Semitic races—

THE ARYAN RACE 45

ques, and as a consequence their lack of taste for the arts, for industry (?) for the peregrinations (??), to the polytheism of the Aryans, to their sentiment-the very high level of figurative arts, with their ambitious-During his travels, the ethnographer cannot help to study the religious question very closely on which such a serious judgment is pronounced; it leads one to wonder if the philosophical idea and primitive!) of the Trimurti in India and of the Trinity among us, far from being a superfluous element crude of Semitic monotheism, is not,
On the contrary, a further step taken by man towards the nature of the eternal cause of existence. It is then asks if it is indeed true that the Hebrews had been, intuitively, and by the very nature of

This religious idea is not rather that of a individuality, that of Moses, whose role was to correct the idolatrous tendencies of the worshippers of golden calf. He casts his eyes upon the monuments of Babylonians, Assyrians, and Ninevites, on the masterpieces of elegance of the constructions marks and appreciates to what extent it is simply to admit the absence of artistic feeling among the Semites. The history of Arab voyages, The skill of Jews in business relations They, in turn, tell him that he might be being unwise. to deny these peoples qualities that they have possessed to a degree at least equal to that of European populations (1).

16 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

I wanted to quote this entire tirade, taken from of a small yellow book bearing the stamp of the an ethnographic society and which is part of a collection of inexpensive textbooks, intended for the diffusion of light among "the masses."

These would truly be to be pitied if the success of such fine efforts: for it is It's difficult to accumulate so much in such a small space. of errors and unfounded assertions. First, to regarding the kinship of the "Indians with the complexion" black" and the English, there is no need, without going far from having set foot in a few London salons, where he met with Dark-skinned Hindus, certainly, but no more black, like some southerners, and with a regularity features that would make more than one European jealous; I of course, he is talking about individuals of Aryan origin.

perfectly recognizable, even in the in the case of certain crosses: because I will not do so here Mr. de Rosny is insulted for believing that he wanted to... to oppose, under the name of Indians, the primitive tribes tives and inferiors, Santals, Mundas, Juangs and other Kolarians whom the Aryans found settled, in Hindustan, with the Dravidians. Furthermore, if

(1) Léon de Rosny, General Notions. Paris, 1885, in-12,

THE ARYAN RACE 47

Hindu architecture has little connection with that of Greece, how can one ignore, other
 On the other hand, the beauties of the Mahabharata and the Ramayâna, so worthy of being compared to epics Hellenic? And how dare anyone ignore them?
 the surprising relationship between Sankhya philosophy, between the thought of Kapila and that of Democritus?

As for the monuments of the "Babylonians, of Assyrians and Ninevites," the thinker with the neck-rant of remarkable current work on the As-Syria and Chaldea, and built upon the value of Mr. Halévy's productions, appreciate how he con- then comes the opinion of Mr. de Rosny, who is at I am almost alone in agreeing with this honorable Israel- lite, to attribute to pure Semitic influence the wonders of Koyoundiick and Khorsabad. I don't don't talk about "the skill of the Jews in the re- "commercial propositions": this seems naive, unless That this isn't a bad joke. Because this which they were specifically criticized for in all the time is to push this "habit- "lete" which, too often, deserves another name.

I am leaving aside, "the philosophical and primitive idea- tive of the Trimurti or Trinity." As "science "Religions" isn't a strong point; but this view particular is part of the "philosophical" system and primitive" by the author who, regarding ethnography, begins to sing the litanies of the "Single Cause", looking, moreover, at the persistence of thought as perfectly compatible with the displeasure- gation of the constituent elements of the brain I do not I wouldn't want to say that Professor us presents a unique example of such a coincidence marvelous; but yet, these views are at less singular, being uttered by a man who, with full reason, moreover, recommends the study of Biology, and seems not to have hesitated to hold the scalpel, in his words, "on the mar-

18 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

that it hardly benefited him. If I add that In another of these manuals, we see that we
we have the joy of descending – like Gauls,
– of Gomer, eldest son of Japheth, eldest son of Noah (1),
we will be fully enlightened about the value of these small books, worthy in every respect of approval
by "Archbishop of Tours".

It was up to such men to challenge
one of the most admirable achievements of science modern, of this comparative philology which, founded by F. Bopp, gave birth immediately to the Science of Religions, and provided to the Politithat scientific or sociological some of its strongest points of support. For the braggarts patriotism, incapable of suffering, that is granted to a foreigner the glory of a great discovery, and
In order to do justice to everyone, I will say that from

(1) Ethnography of France, p. 19.

oo ie En" + nn, mes ne die MT St ag = me EE

THE ARYAN RACE 19

In 1746, our brother had glimpsed the truth. I regret that Mr. Michel Bréal, who elaborates on a historical-a rather insignificant little joke about a Jesuit from Pondicherry {1}, did not think it necessary to cite, alongside named after the illustrious scholar, the phrase so characteristic-rhetorical form forming the conclusion of his dissertation.
"The first Greeks," said Fréret, "formed with different peoples of Asia Minor a single and even nation; they had a language that the Vulgar Greek seems to represent and which was a dialects of a general language that one spoke from the borders of the Celts to those of the Medes and Syrians (2). » The idea of a language once common to the peoples called today Indo-Europeans or Aryans is certainly glimpsed here. However, and despite further information provided by William Jones and F. Schlegel, the honor goes to Bopp definitive conclusion of a discovery so rich in important consequences.

There are only orientalist, or anthropo-

to be surprised by the importance given to language

(1) Introduction to Comparative Grammar by Bopp, p. XV.

(2) Summary of a memoir by Fréret, from 1746, on the Origin and the ancient history of the first inhabitants of Greece. – Hist. from the Academy of Inscriptions and Belles-Lettres, vol. XXI, p. 18. 1754.

20 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

in ethnic classifications. Because, after all, what

Did we know, what would we ever have known about kinship in-questionable which unites, at a given moment, the ancestors

very much of the Greeks, Latins and Hindus, without the discovery of the relationship between spoken languages "Today by their descendants"? "To philology compared, writes Friedrich Müller, we owe the distinction of the Indo-Germanic and Semi- branches tick; through it, we know that the Bantu peoples constitute an ethnic unit and we were able to distinguish between Malay and Polynesian populations the Ural-Atlaic (1). »

"After so many truths brought to light by the Linguistics, as H. Vambhéry so aptly put it, per-sonne will no longer dare to attempt a classification large human groups, without recognizing in language the indispensable factor of all Determination of the main breeds. It would be necessary to be completely blind to the point of being unaware – in despite the differences, especially regarding color from the skin, to the shape of the skull, to the physiognomy that we observe between the Hindus, the Persians, the Slavs, Germans, and Romans – for to ignore, I say, the close family bond which brings together members who are currently scattered and...

(1) F. Müller, Allgemeine Ethnologie. 1878. p. 8.

wind under different climates, from the large family Aryan (1).

Undoubtedly, language is not the universal criterion. that; and who, moreover, has ever put forward this absurd-said? Everyone knows that the Bulgarians, for example, do not. They no longer speak the language of their ancestors. But the Exceptions have only ever confirmed the rules. and there was only one other orientalist, like the (C(Reverend » A. Sayce to affirm with the beyond-cunning of a reader of cuneiform inscriptions that languages have nothing in common with ra-these. This "Reverend," by the way, is cares about literature as if it were a straw. The lan-The wager, he repeats, at every moment, consists of sounds, not letters. And on the other hand, what does it mean? this superiority that people wanted to attribute to the races

(1) Die primilive Cultur des Turco tatarischen Volkes. 1879. I I know very well that in his book on the origin of the Magyars (der Ursprung der Magyaren, 1882), this author issued a a different opinion, making, in this case, quite cheap of the lauwue. But that's what he wanted, by virtue of a preconceived idea, due to considerations of a completely different nature Order, to attach the Hungarians to the Turkish family. I have specifically wanted to show that Mr. Vambérv, free from every concern, every particular tendency, had pronounced in favor of the truly scientific doctrine, which he has deserted – I grant it in all honesty. – but ultimately, because it contradicted his new views, of a completely questionable nature, of the stay.

22 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

Aryan? The Mongols are just as interested– "sants; and who knows what the future holds for them?" Moreover, we know nothing specific; the language tells us nothing about race, and the mo– will come when the world can enjoy the benefits of a universal language – which will not be the Vola– Puck, alas! It hadn't been invented yet. No! It will be English, but not Sha-'s English James Pearee or Stuart Mill: that's too much of an idiom. refined, suitable for literary types, and which has nothing to do with common with the rules of good philology. It will be "Pigeon English", the simplified jargon

Brittany, it seems, manages to reach an agreement with the Chinese. Mr. Sayce states this in his own words.

my: "English has made itself suitable to become the

a universal language by making an effort to adapt to the requirements of the Chinese language (1).

What a dream! And as we can clearly see that this cler-Gyman will never be able to understand anything, indeed.
to the superiority of the Aryan race! The most fâ-
The crux of the matter is that scholars of the same caliber flour beat the bass drum in honor of This friend and they cited him as an oracle. That this While the Assyriologist may have merit in his field, one does not Don't deny it; deciphering cuneiform inscriptions is

(1) AH Sayce, Introduction to the science of Language.
London, 1880; t. XI, p. 377.

THE ARYAN RACE 23

a job like any other, and in which one can
to render services; but it is madness to imagine that one becomes a serious critic and a philosopher
having read two or three terracotta cylinders
from the library of King Sargon.

All these linguists, Assyriologists and others – who deny it with the self-assurance that ignorance gives them or dry erudition, the importance of language from the point of view of racial distinction, – from-could well have, as some craniologists,
take the time to read and understand the pages
written on the subject by true scholars, by anthropologists worthy of the name. While that MM. de Rosny and Sayce exclaim that the languages and literatures have nothing in common with the question of races, the illustrious Broca, the true founder of modern anthropology, while taking care to guard against the causes of error and the exaggerations, he does not hesitate to declare that "Linguistics returns to anthropology the services–

These are the most notable. – the characteristics that it quable {}.)»

E.B. Tylor, the eminent author of Primitive Culture, is no less precise. "In general," he said, a common language indicates at least a certain

(1) Broca, Art. Anthropology, in Diction. encycl. des Medical Sciences, vol. V, p. 291.

94 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

proportion of common ancestors. One can hardly to suppose that one people enters into close relationship enough to change one's language, without that a mixing of races will take place in the next generation. Moreover, language can establish the real-nature of connections between races, where the characteristics . physical properties, while not being contradictory, are, however, insufficient. Let us compare, for example, the dark-haired Andalusian woman and the Swede with a fair complexion, wondering if there is a way to to discern any trace of kinship between these two varieties of the white race. The anatomist could hesitate; now, even, the physical problem, is almost solved. But at least one solution partial is contained in the philosophical proof It makes sense that the two peoples speak the same language. which came to them, at some distant time, of a common element of heredity, of descent-dance, – of an element at least strong enough to to impose the language with him (1). »

If the author of the Origins of Ariacae, a rather recent, which has generated a lot of noise for nothing, – had taken the time to study these mai- He was very knowledgeable about science, he would have spared us the trouble to read, among so many others, sentences like This one: "It's a rare occurrence– of our knowledge such as Ethnology, having with the aim of discovering the origin and relationship of each people according to its physical characteristics and psychological, its social and political institutions, based on his religion, his language, his history, be subjected to the direction of a science that does not studies that one of these elements – language – at the exclusion of the others (1). » Mr. Penka does not forget only one thing: that through language – and through the language alone – we were able to discover and appreciate this unity of the Aryan family, for example, that neither craniology, nor psychology, nor my- Neither theology nor history had been able to raise suspicion. ner(2). And when he comes to tell us that languages They have no persistence; they replace each other. constantly, he makes a purely gra-

(1) EB Tylor, art. Anthopology, in Encyclopedia Britannica, ® ed. London, 1875. t. II, p. 119.

(1) Karl Penka, Origines Ariacae. Vienna, 1883, vol. 1 in-8, p. 5. See also, by the same author, Die Herkunft der Arier, 1886

(2) Mr. Hovelacque himself, who too often tends to diminish the importance of linguistics relative to Ethnology recognizes that "the study of languages has been of a considerable help for the history of racial lineage. We know very well, he adds, that the Madgyars are linked to the populations of Central Asia and it is thanks to It is through linguistics that their origin has been established. It is also through the means of linguistics that we have managed to reconstruct this ancient Indo-European civilization which once existed in Asia." (Linguistics Course at the School of Anthropology- (Gie. Lesson of January 26, 1881; unpublished.)

26 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

tuite and against which all of the recognized facts and the reasoned opinion of anthropologists gists proper. "(We gave a lot "It's been bad for twenty years," Haeckel added, "for to study and measure skulls with the greatest A possible clarification, without the result having been answered to so much effort. In the same variety the form the skull can vary within the most extreme limits more valuable characters for the classi-. fiction of human races are provided to us through hair structure and tongues, which are transmitted much more reliably by heredity (1). But Mr. Karl Penka wants nothing like language; even religion is more stable.

Thus, for example, if we are Catholic for us, as well as the southern Germans, it's thanks to our quality of brachycephalic, brown and of the "Turanian type"; the blond dolichocephalic people and of Aryan type, from England and Germany are Protestants (2) (!). And the unfortunate critic-who doesn't realize that he is referring to people continuing to speak of Aryan languages, well that for nearly two thousand years, their religion

(1) Haeckel, Naturliche Schopfung Geschichte. 7th edition. 1879,
p. 626. (See the translation of the 4th edition by Letourneau.
Paris, Reinwald, 1874.)

(2) Penka, loc. cit, p. 118 sq.

THE ARYAN RACE 27

formerly polytheistic, was replaced by the Semi-Christianism! And here is the man whom in turn the Reverend A. Sayce is simply praising him to the skies.
because it agrees with his point of view and also because that Mr. Penka is trying to establish using arguments of the same strength as Scandinavia, and not Asia Central Asia was the original homeland of the Aryans. (About)
From the theory above, Mr. Sayce, who adopts it, makes However, the author has a rather strong objection, in reminding him that in England it's the small race
brown "of the Turanian type" and not the Aryan blonde.
of, which is dolichocephalic (1)!

I would regret having held on for so long the reader's attention on the Ariacae Origins, if this book, however devoid of any critical spirit-that, had not been touted and exploited in an independent way-centered by all those who try to cover themselves with cloak of science to deny the reality of race Aryan.

To all these Judaizers, to all these Protestants, to | all these stragglers in the scientific army, it is necessary to join the writers who, in our country, under the pretext of some sort of hodgepodge patriotism, join in the chorus with this group. There are already more than one century that a thinker like Herder fought the flanks, to establish a philosophy of history,

(i) The Academy, issue of December 8, 1883.

28 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

and the whims of geography. "Change the form from these lands, he said somewhere, extend here a strait, there run a canal, the pro-sandstone and the devastation of the world, the fate of all countries and all peoples would follow during centuries an essentially different course" (1). Which doesn't stop him from exclaiming later: "Populate Greece with Chinese, what will become of Greece?" of Homer (2)? » But then, the contradiction is to the extreme, and theory to the devil. Herder, Do you think he's going to abandon her? Not at all; this is but a glimmer, a break in the clouds in this high intelligence, haunted by a false idea that holds – Ja corde etne la lâche plus ce maintenant. «Nul Furthermore, he said elsewhere, the peoples have not been as much mixed than in Europe... in many countries if they were stranded, it would be quite difficult for the inhabitants to say To which race, to which nation do they belong: Goths, Jews, Carthaginians, Romans; if they descend-teeth of the Gauls, the Cimbri, the Burgundians, Franks, Normans, Saxons, Slaves, Finns or Illyrians. In the succession- The development of centuries, a hundred causes have shaped the character native to the various peoples of Europe has altered

(1) Herder: Ideas on the Philosophy of History, trans. Quinet. TomI, p. 47-48.

(2) Ibid. Tom. IT, p. 511.

THE ARYAN RACE 29

speak of mixture; otherwise it would have been difficult that the general spirit of Europe never developed(1).

Again, these variations on a familiar theme, that do they date back to a pile of contradictory assertions from the year of grace 1784, which is in a certain Herder's excuse is valid. But what about the

The Burnoufs and their imitators serve us at-Today, dishes seasoned with this anti- sauce
"What?" What, for example, can be said about the article devoted to... in the Dictionary of Medical Sciences, at the ethnography of France by a writer dis-Distinguished, certainly, and often better inspired? And This leads to the following conclusion: "It appears-anthropological researchers aim to show that among the numerous ethnic elements contributed to the formation of most of our European nations-born, if there are some special ones at such or of these nations, many of them are common to several neighboring states. So tenant just contempt for the ambitious protests of ne-lavish heads of state, far from finding in the diversity
the city of races, a motive for mutual destruction, the Neighboring peoples may see in their ethno-
a more or less common logic, a motive for alliance and concord, and will increasingly feel the ne-
the need to annihilate borders that are too often enshrined

(1) Herder, t. ILE, p. 200.

30 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

bloody, which limits and separates them (1). »

But we will achieve the desired result through a
a much safer method, because it relies based on science, not fantasy and confusion.
by simply proclaiming the reality of this Aryan race which unites in splendid unity ethnic, with the Neo-Latins like us, the Germans and Slavs – and not by showing the population of France as constituted by I don't know what awful mix of canni- breeds prehistoric whales, the lamentable posterity of humankind my Neanderthal and Cro-Magnon ancestors. We will be able to
I would even add that, with this characteristic generosity...
tics of the noble Indo-European family, we Let us open our arms to all humankind.
happy to defend ourselves to the extreme, for example
against all Jews and all Semites who,
after infecting us with the religion of obscur-Anti-racism and intolerance have further burdened us of the capitalist exploitation system applied by they, shamelessly, to the working class who 188 keeps them alive and they hypocritically call "their

"1

(1) Encyclopedic Dictionary of Medical Sciences. Art. France, by M. Lagneau. 4th series, tom. #4 and 5. 1881. Cf. The History of French Civilization by Professor Rambaud (Paris, 1885), who based himself on the same strange and erroneous data, found the move to corrupt his work in its very principle.

THE ARYAN RACE | 31

It is also important to have a clear understanding of the value of the terms. This expression of Race does not should not be taken in the narrow sense that it gives him- some scholars of anthropology and the linguistic, little knowledgeable about Phi- Social philosophy. That in the description of Mincopies, Papous and others, hardly rose above ordinary animality, we study on- all anatomical and physiological characteristics Strictly speaking, nothing better. But the man whose what we have to deal with here is the being freed from this formless, unfinished state – from which nothing will ever emerge – but the wretched tribes mentioned above – and already elevated to the dignity of Politicon dzôn, of a social animal, to use the apt expression of Aristotle. No doubt race is just a family immense, branching and prolonged over time; but here, among the superior races, not very distinct from from the point of view of anatomy and physiology, in In general, sociological characteristics play a role predominant role for differentiation. Furthermore, as in the old days among the tribes and peoples, one included individuals admitted by adoption and considered designated as family members, of which they pre- ideas were born and interests embraced, of Even the races we are talking about can sit- miler a number of extraction topics different, whose posterity is linked in the long run, also by some degree of descent, basically

32 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

common ground represented by language, by the way

Aryans, for example, some have rounded heads,
the others the elongated skull; the uniform language
an undeniable result of sufficient common existence
A well-extended period is still the best guarantee.
of the uniformity of ideas and aspirations, given the well-known effects of physiological heredity. For those who know, on the other hand, that the faculintellectual matters are in an intimate relationship with the physical qualities of the cerebral organ, that
The soul is merely the brain in action – language, intellectual and moral habits, in a word Sociological aptitudes characterize the race
in an equally positive, equally subdued way rielle and often more precise than the form of the skull or skin color (1).

I don't mean to say that these "adoptions" are without drawbacks; for if there is a benefit for the individuals of inferior variety, it's the opposite for the others. Let's not forget, in fact, that the idea racial equality is a chimera, a dream of metaphysicians of the absolute and which has nothing to do with-common, with the doctrines of democracy. Equality
What we want is the Eyalité soriale, that is to say-to say an equality of goods, if not complete, at least () Cf. A. Regnard: The State. Paris, Derveaux and at offices of the Socialist Review. Year 93-1885. p. 40 sq.

THE ARYAN RACE 39

sufficient to ensure that equality of rights does not become not a mystification. Never has socialismtifique did not claim to make a goiterous cretin neither the equal of a reasonable man, nor of a Papuan the equivalent of a Parisian (1). It is important, at the con-to treat, to send back to their dear studies the far-their malicious actors who use these as a pretext natural and fatal inequalities to deny the principle of Democracy and that of Social Equality at civilized nations.

In any case, when these assimilations are restricted and especially when they concern individuals belonging to a sufficiently diverse variety
Given this, it is absurd to claim that they do
The race may disappear. It is possible that there are some among us, for example, remains of the descendants of the Iberians

The first ones were able to adapt, more or less successfully, to our civilization; the others, fortunately the exceptions, are likely, it is true, to prove to be occasionally in the form of some Trogg coming to re-enact before our eyes the scenes of car-Stone Age swimming. But neither the criminals hereditary, neither idiots, nor even simple "Innocents" could not possibly give the idea of a va-human identity or nationality. The character

(1) Cf. G. Deville, in his preface to Karl's Capital Marx. Paris, Oriel, p. 31.

34 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

The essential characteristics of a breed are concentrated in the types which remain quite numerous and quite influential to determine the nature of the mass...When- The fact that this is no longer the case means that the mixture has been pushed far enough to profoundly alter the intimate nature of the superior human variety, originally dominant in the country; that is The time has come for degeneration and Irremediable decadence.

This essential characteristic, perpetuated in the types, is the property of the Race; it was created by it and does not can only be modified in a completely secondary way affected by time and environment (soil and climate). Recent scientific discoveries have ruined,

In this respect, the theories of Buckle and Herder (1).

(1) It is not possible to expound here the theory of the origin of races. Let us simply recall that according to the Darwinian doctrines, that is to say, according to the data of science, the different human varieties that emerged, probably by several pairs, of a transitional form (homo primigenius, Alalus, of Haeckel, anthropopithecus of M. Mortillet), intermediate between the most anthropoid ape and man, were formed by the fact of natural selection especially, and by the secondary influence of the environments to across endless stretches of time. These differentiations-racial divisions took place - let us not forget that, at one more rudimentary, would not allow him, as the fact Note A. Wallace, to accommodate his kind of viectses

THE ARYAN RACE 35

Only sociological circumstances can,
by modifying ideas and the brain, producing serious alterations as is the case with regard to Look at religion, for example. And see, however—Damn! After so many and such great disasters, after centuries of Semitic obscurantism, after the Middle Ages and despite the Inquisition, the race
Aryan was able to emerge, at least in its types
the most eminent, and find herself at the Renaissance and, above all, the Revolution.

This does not mean, of course, that the races persist indefinitely; they are subject on the contrary to the great law of Evolution and of transformationism which governs the formation and disappearance species formation. Only, as with the rest of living beings, these variations only occur in the course of considerable periods of time; — to fewer repeated and widespread crosses, which is the main cause, in general, of decadence habits to changes resulting from his stay in new lands. Among the ancient nomadic peoples, for example, child mortality exceeded anything we

one can imagine: only those survived whose cons—
The institution was likely to take advantage of the benefits of the soil and climate and to resist their harmful influences bles. In fact, Races have their origin in the depths prehistoric times and are even likely—ment prior, generally speaking, to the appearance of the articulate language. (See Büchner, Man According to Science, translated. Letourneau, p. 170 sq.)

30 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

and the disappearance of superior varieties. From—
On the other hand, it is a law of nature that species
The more perfect, the less durable; the intensity of the life and splendor of its manifestations superior providing excessive support for continuity over time.

These preliminary considerations and the refutation

adversaries, finally allow me to formulate this precise conclusion:

Yes, there is a remarkable human family—comparable above all others by the beauty of its forms and the whiteness of the skin, still distinct from the others varieties with more or less white skin, and in part—ticular of the Semites, through language and through the master qualities of the brain. We know it under the name of Aryan Race, or Indo-European (1);

(1) Geography and even general history textbooks too often, those who complain in our country are content with the old and rudimentary subdivision of humankind into black races, yellow and white — to which we sometimes add the “race red.” This “chromatic” classification is insufficient even for the anthropologist, for the naturalist properly said, has no value when it comes to “historical” races “que” or civilized. In the current state of science, these The latter can be categorized under four main groups, and in the following order, starting with the lowest level laughing:

4° The Turanians, also called “Mongols”, according to the the most strongly characterized group, “Ural-Altaic”, according to their place of origin. Despite attacks not the Greeks and Romans, the Hindus, the Iranians, the Celts, like the Germans, the Slavs, and the Modern Neo-Latins are diverse branches gents of this illustrious lineage. “For the conform-physical information, as Mr. de Gobineau so aptly put it, There is no doubt: it was the most beautiful breed

THE ARYAN RACE _ 37

Justified, moreover, I prefer the first determination as being the most understanding. I would add that she is not not at all arbitrary; for it derives from the name used by Historians of Iran (Persia) use this term to refer to the region inhabited by their turbulent neighbors. “Feridoun gave to Tour the land of Touran, said Firdousi, and made him master of the land of the Turks and China.” (The Book of Kings, trans. Mobl, vol. I, p. 139.) The Turanians recognize themselves, in generally, with a matte, often yellowish skin tone, the protrusion and spacing of the cheekbones, the flattening of the nose. The skull is usually brachycephalic; the niennes are agglutinative, that is to say, not knowing not the bending (declinations proper, etc.) they They compensate by sticking together, by agglutinating the roots. to others. Even when physical characteristics or The exterior features are partly erased, as with the Hungarians. (Madgyars) or among present-day Turks, the race, indicated Through history, it is easily recognizable by language. These peoples are subdivided into five main groups; the Samoyeds, Tungus and Manchurians, Finno-Ugric (Finnish, Madgyars, etc.), the Mongols and the Turks or Turco-tartars. (CE Vambéry: Das Türkenvolk, p. 59, 1885.)

There is reason to link the Turanian family to Mongoloids, including Tibetans, Siamese, and Chinese, and mimics the Chinese. The language of these last-

38 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

of which no one had ever heard. The nobility of his features, the vigor and majesty of his stature Their slender build is attested to by testimonies. which, being subsequent to the time when she was Combined, they nonetheless have an irresistible weight. The basic nature of the type remained the same everywhere, and it

niers is monosyllabic; it's like the first degree of agglutination. Tibetan forms the transition between monosyllabic languages and agglutinative languages. We can even, with O. Peschel, draw parallels between the Mongo-The Malays, along with the Polish, and the Americans (Indians) with the Eskimos. I would add that the Dravidians, In Hindustan, they speak agglutinative languages.

Let us recall from a historical perspective that the Huns, belonged to the Ural Altai family. I would also have to return, regarding the civilization of Chaldea, to the Touranian populations.

2. The Libyans: I include under this name the populations of North Africa, populations designated by the authors under the overly varied names of Hamites, Proto-Semites, Dysmites, etc. Their languages are not true-Semitic languages, although they are similar by more than one side. The physical type differs significantly. of the Semite; the nose is not curved, generally; the eyes are deeply almond-shaped, the cheekbones slightly prominent yours, the full lips but not turned back like those Black people. Besides the ancient Egyptians, including the fellahs family includes the Libyans proper, described under This name comes from Herodotus, who distinguishes them as Garamantes. Nasamones, etc. These Libyans were known in part, by the Romans, under the names of Numidians and Moors; more

THE ARYAN RACE 39

It is hardly debatable that the strain which, even degenerated-born of its primal beauty, provided types like those of present-day Kashmiri, like those whose representation has been depicted under the first successors of Cyrus, finally that the men whose physical appearance inspired the Later still, the Arabs gave them the name Berbers. Currently, they are called Kabyles, Tuaregs, etc., and they- They themselves boast of the titles of Amazigh and Imoshag. that is to say, hibernating men.

8. The Semites (Jews, Arabs, etc.)

4. The Aryans, or Indo-Europeans. I will simply note Here is the place of these latter families, who are the subject of a A more in-depth study can be found in the following pages.

Finally, to cut short the objections of historians of a meeting who, having vaguely heard of the Moulin-Quignon jawbone and Neanderthal skull deny the current reality of the Aryan race under the pretext of its absorption by the "natives", by the man of the Stone Age, I will repeat that our civilization does not pro- in no way comes from the "Troglydites". These races of the Those early times have left no other traces among us that the wretched criminals born or hereditary, among whose sad effects we can see today of such a deplorable atavism.

But the same cannot be said of the populations that we could be called protohistoric, having lived in the age of recent or Neolithic stone, the age of polished tools and lake dwellings. Neolithic man - what 'whatever its origin, - brown and small size, still reappears today in his descendants, in Spain, in Wales, in Ireland, in the sculptors of the Pythian Apollo and the Venus of Milo, formed the most beautiful species whose sight could have gladdened the stars and the earth.

"The color of the Aryans was white and pink; such appeared the most ancient Greeks and the Persians; such were also the primitive Hindus. Among the hair and beard colors, the blond was dominant, and we cannot forget the predilection that the Greeks bore him; they did not figure—Their noblest deities would not do otherwise. All the critics saw in this whim of an era when blond hair had become rare in Athens and on the banks of the Eurotas, a to remember the primitive ages of the Hellenic race nique (1) ».

Southern France, etc. This primitive population was identified by Professor Davkins (Early man in Britain, 1880), with the Iberians. The Ligurians of Southern Gaul and Northern Italy, the Welsh catfish, so well described by Tacitus (Agricola XI), would belong to the same ethnic group, to which we would even include the Etruscans, at least in part. The Basques would be the survivors, more or less pure. I would add that we admit still the presence of a Finnish, Turanian element, on several points in Europe, before the arrival of the Aryans. There are certainly many points that remain unclear; but there it is necessary to take into account this "anaryian" element in the history of civilization, and its often significant influence unfortunate.

(1) De Gobineau: On the Unequal Nature of Human Races. 2nd ed.,

THE ARYAN RACE 41

But the Aryan race is not only the more beautiful and more vigorous — qualities which are also virtues, aretai, in the Greek sense, in true meaning of the word: it surpasses all others others, as we shall see, by their abilities Sociological, through the properties of the brain. "It alone possesses the notion of justice, the feeling of Liberty, the conception of Beauty (1)".

on unshakeable foundations the concept of justice tice? Who then formulated this eternal axiom, that It took us two thousand years to rediscover, "The
The right must be the same for all, – to orthon Lepteon Isôs – who then, if not this Greek Aryan, the incomparable Aristotle (2)? And isn't that the Revolution which, since antiquity, has made the first not towards the realization of this principle really Immortal? Mr. Renan is free to worship whatever he wants.
had burned and to inform us that she had been 1884. Volume 2, pages 363–74. Once again, this is about "Types." No doubt, today as in the past, Besides Achilles and Helen, there is Thersites, with all the intermediaries. Similarly, from a sociological point of view, it

There is a chasm between the Spartan and the Ionian, that true Greek:
I will have to come back to these differences and to the causes that can produce them.

(4) Jewish France. Vol. I, page 6,
(2) Politics. III, page 7.

43 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

prepared by the Jews; these things can be good things to say in a synagogue, in a Assembly of Beni-Israel: They cannot stand the examination. As for Socialism – I mean the Scientific socialism with its application according to the formula of collectivism – no one will deny that it is not a Franco-German creation, that is to say Aryan in the full force of the term(1).

And besides, every scientific conception, every Doesn't true science also come to us from this?
immortal elite of the race, which gave its name to Hellas? Pythagoras, Archimedes, Aristotle, Hippo-crate, not to mention the others, are enough for us to remember that we still owe this to Greece invaluable service, the institution of all sciences on unshakeable foundations and according to coordinated principles, from Mathematics
all the way to Biology, via Physics.
The Arabs, in the dark ages, us
have passed on some of these treasures,
showing more than one time skillful commentators;

(1) It would be futile to object to Karl's Israelite origin Marx and de Lassalle. The argument would not be serious, these masters having specifically abandoned Judaism in what constitutes its essential characteristic – the Capitalist mode of exploitation and religion. No doubt. that two centuries earlier the synagogue had not acted on their with regard to Spinoza, whom she excommunicated and attempted to have someone assassinated.

THE ARYAN RACE 43

They were nothing more than that. They could very well have, for example, to give a name to Algebra; but it is to Dio-phantom that we owe the discovery to.

As for the concept of Beauty,
Is it necessary to mention the inimitable masterpieces?
tables of Greek sculpture and painting
the Renaissance, and, in the literary field, the prodigious geniuses who, since the time of epics
from India and Ionia to the present day, have made to stir the heart of man by singing his glory with its pains and its hopes? What is it, Moreover, what is Time in history?
that the place in relation to Race? Isn't it obvious-teeth that Orestes and Hamlet, Lady Macbeth and Cly-
Did the Temnestre come from identical brains? Yes.
Aeschylus and Shakespeare, Phidias and Raphael, like Lucretius and Diderot, like Goethe are well descended from the same blood, the same race, of which Humanity can rightly say: "That one is my beloved daughter, on whom all
. my hopes).

44 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

CHAPTER II

THE RELIGION OF THE ARYANS

The cradle of our ancestors. – Migration of the rains branches of the Arvenne family.– Des Relisions en

General.– Religious sentiment among animals.– The Fetishism. – Polytheism, superior to Monotheism. – Mr. Max Müller and the origins of Mythology. – The Rigveda. – The Aryan deities. – Origin of priests among the Hindus. – Rishis and Brahmins. – The doctrine of the Immortality of the soul; that of a Uric God, and the practice of human sacrifice are foreign to the pure Aryan religion. – The Druids, Artemis of Tauris and Semitism. – Lucretius and Leconte de Lisle. – The Twilight of the Gods.

"We live by light, and our legitimate Ancestor, it is the people of light, the Aryans, which, on one side towards India, on the other towards Persia, Greece and Rome, in ideas, languages, the arts, the gods, have left their brilliant mark as from a long escape of stars. Happy genius, fruitful, undiminished by anything. He still guides the world in the light of its Milky Way (1)".

What was the starting point, the cradle of the race? Bright? Most likely Bactria.

(4) Michelet, The Bible of Humanity, p. 25.

THE RELIGION OF THE ARYANS 45

"This famous region, present-day Balkh," says Pictet, has always been considered the most beautiful jewel of the Iranian empire. Located between the 33rd and 30th degree of north latitude, extending between the Hindu Kush to the south, Bulkharia to the north, Beluttag to the east and the territory of Merv and Herat to the west, it presents a very large surface area. It is watered and all the varieties of climate that belong to it are found in temperate regions. The powerful Oxus river separated it from Sogdiana, and by numerous tributary streams that crossed it descending from the Hindu Kush they carried the iron-utility within its valleys; hence, abundance and variety of its productions, already attested by the ancient authors (1)".

The cradle of our ancestors was therefore not, as one sometimes imagines, a plateau recent, renewed natives from Latham, for the

to be located in Europe, and especially in Scandinavia.

(i) Pictet: Indo-European Origins, vol. I. p. 39. 2nd ed.
1887. cf. Strabo, XI, p. 516, ed. Casaubon.— "The Bac-Triana, says Quintus Curtius, is a very varied country in its nature. In some places, trees abound and the
The vine produces fruit remarkable for its size and their gentleness. Numerous springs water the soil fertile. Where the climate is favorable, wheat is sown;

Elsewhere, the country provides pastureland for livestock.
(Quint.-Curt. vir. 4.) "

46 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

In fact, not a single argument was presented.
serious to refute the general theory-
. finally accepted. "It seemed appropriate, in these in recent years, says an authoritative scholar, of
to bring back to Europe the home of the Indo-Germans before their separation. I admit that the conclusions that we thought we could derive based on the lin-Guistics and research relating to time prehistoric people seem to lack a foundation and
"did not affect me in any way." (1)

We will therefore admit, along with the vast majority scholars, that this portion of Central Asia
later known as Bactria was the
The original homeland of the Aryans. This name must be given to them.
preserved, in preference to the designations of Indo-Germanic or Indo-European peoples,

(1) P. von Bradke: Dyaus Asura, etc. Halle, 1835. The author refers especially to O. Schrader's book: Sprachver-gleichung und Urgeschichte, Iëna 1883. See above a critique of Penka's Origines ariaræ, which pronounces also for its European origin. Mr. Sayce, in the preface from its 2nd edition of Introduction to the Simplicity of Language, adopts this opinion, while reprinting in the body of The book, the passages that condemn it! I've said enough.
of this eminent orientalist, not to dwell on it further
And it wasn't me, by the way, who first said that about him
"that he has a marked tendency to adopt a hypothesis" for the sole reason that it is the last one issued." (The Ujfalvy, The Cradle of the Aryans, 1884.)

THE RELIGION OF THE ARYANS 47

implying that both parties were partly responsible for the error. It is moreover, the one they gave themselves, as can easily be seen among the Persians and among the Hindus, who remained in Asia, not far from the original seat of the race. Whatever the primitive meaning of the word ärya (1), it is frequently found in ancient literature from India and Iran (Persia). "The Iranian of the inscriptions door Ariya, which is also the form mâghadi or prâkriti, that is to say popular, from the word in India. The inscription at Nach-i-Rustam quotes Darius's words: "Parça, parçahyä puthra, Ariya ariya cithra, – Persian son "of Persia, an Aryan of Aryan race." (2)

The primitive Aryans, speaking the same language and recognizing themselves as members of a single community, inhabited for centuries their fertile cohtrée, until the moment they arrived at to constitute a considerable nation. At one time which must date back at least 3,000 years, before the vulgar era, a vast movement of emigration occurred in this mass, which had become too numerous–

(1) Generally speaking, and most certainly in the In Sanskrit literature of later periods, erya means man of good family, noble, honorable (Benfey, Bopp) etc.); others, like Grassmann, derive it from art (devoted) and take it in the sense of "faithful, sincere".

(2) Schæbel: Research on the First Religion of the Race Indo-Iranian, Paris, 1874, p. 7.

48 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

breuse, or pressed by turbulent tribes from Touran. The tribes that left first, They went, under the name of Celts, to populate Spain, Great Britain and Gaul; others came in Italy, founding the city of seven hills, origin and center of Roman grandeur, while the tons, Deutsch}, and the Slavs with the Lettes settled in the lands they occupy even today. Besides these five main branches—primary, to which the West owes its civilization, Two others should be mentioned, the Iranians (1) or Persians, and the Hindus, who remained in — Asia: the first ones remained focused initially on the high plateau of Pamir; the Hindus crossing the passes of the Hindu Kush, established themselves in the "land of five rivers" (Punjab) to expand from there, little by little, into the Ganges basin. I have summarized the physical characteristics above. of the Aryan race, tall, with a rosy complexion and the blonde hair, like that of the Venus de Milo and the Apollo Belvedere remain the types accomplished, and of a beauty that will never be surpassed past. Among the sociological characteristics, one must to speak, first and foremost, of Religion, which plays a fatal role playing such a large role in the history of all peoples, while at the same time leaving the best

(1) or Eranians, according to the ancient pronunciation.

THE RELIGION OF THE ARYANS 49

to appear, in the very nature of its elements, the aptitudes and tendencies of each of them. Here again, I will open a parenthesis; I ask for My apologies to the reader, but since in a studies like this one examine all the factors of development Social factors need to be analyzed, it seems It is essential to recall the ideas on occasion general or abstract without which it would be It is impossible to properly assess the facts. concrete.

The reason for the existence of religions, I have written elsewhere, is not only in disordered need of the ideal, but also and primarily, to em—to bend Molière's beautiful expression, in this "desire for clarity in everything" that one finds at the bottom of the the heart of man. Religious systems satisfy, In general, they address this need and provide an explanation. tion of the Universe {1}. It is, I suppose, by se placing oneself at a similar point of view, but in moving away from the exact meaning, which Mr. Guyau has one could say of religion that it is the science born—health (2); for, in truth, if it holds — very poorly civilizations, it is, from the very beginning, the the most irreconcilable enemy and constitutes the most a major obstacle to its development. Whatever the case may be ER –

(1) A. Regnard; Atheism, London, Year 86–1878, p. 7.

(2) Guyau: The Irreligion of the Future, Paris, 1887, p. 52.

50 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

So, cosmogonic theories only come in second order and later, and by this we must understand the A word from Religion, taken in general and in its meaning proper (1): the set of relationships that connect man with so-called natural powers.

Materialist Philosophy no longer loses its It is time today to fight the ancient "proof" drawn by spiritualists from the consent of the united Versal of men in favor of the religious idea.

She readily admits it, and even demonstrates the universality of this idea, a fatal product of the mind human in its childhood. Yes, Religion is certainly universal, meaning here not not a coordinated set of dogmas and rites, but indeed, to use the scholar's expression E. Tylor, the minimum of religious sentiment.

Only the author, in his remarkable work, defines this minimum as "belief in beings" intangibles" (2) (animism); I believe there are

(4) Let us derive religio from religere with Cicero, or dereligare with Lactantius, it is always a divinity, of a supernatural power in its relations with man. It is only by diverting the word from its true meaning, as we understand it today, in certain in this case, as a synonym for common faith and center of ral-connection, outside of any spiritualist or deist idea. Cf. Cicero, From Nat. Deor., 11, 28, and Lactantius, Div. Inst. 1v, 28.

(2) E. B Tylor: Primitive culture, London, 1871, tom. 1 p. 383.

»

one degree prior to that one and the mini-
The question of religion seems to me to consist in "the belief in superior and all-powerful beings
"sants" (1). The fear, the feeling that man a of its dependence in the face of Nature are the
The primary motives for this belief are respect,
Then hope, sometimes love, gratitude,
Then things get complicated.

If it is true that man is the result improved from previous animal species,
some trace of religious sentiment in its early stages
This degree must be found in his predecessors.
the most gifted. "We recognize some something analogous (to this feeling), said Darwin,
in the profound love of a dog for its master,
accompanied by perfect submission, out of fear and perhaps other emotions" (2). And in truth, Is there no complete analogy between the faithful and dragging himself on his knees in front of his idol or his
The Blessed Sacrament and the guilty dog, crawling at his master's foot awaiting correction deserved, which he clearly hopes to avoid by His repentant attitude? It is quite right to say so.
to say: the master is a God to his dog (3).

(1) Afheism, p. 60. |

(2) Darwin, The descent of man, 4th ed. 1877, p. 96,

(3) Atheism, p. 61, Cf. Braubach, Religion, Moral und Philosophie der Darwinischen Artlehre, 1869.

52 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

In this first degree of Religion, man primitive, closest to animality, adores objects, stones, trees, animals, stars
etc., which he considers to be analogous beings
to him, but without animating them by a principle distinct (animism) or personify them in any way way (anthropomorphism). It's the religious idea in all its deplorable simplicity, – the feeling of fear and dependence – a feeling that can only become more pronounced as Reason, gradually awakening, allows the individual to better appreciate the terrible power of the phe–

means of protecting oneself from it. Such must have been, according to for me, this primitive religion of pre- humanity historical, including present-day savage peoples As the learned C. P. Tiele so aptly put it, cannot- The wind can offer us nothing but ruins (1). We can to designate this first term of the religious evolution gious under the name of Primitive Naturalism, the The word "Fetishism" seems to me to require to be definitively abandoned, due to the confusion of disparate ideas that it represents today (2).

(3) CP Tiele, Manual of the History of Religions, trans. Maurice Vernes. Paris, 1885, p. 16.- Cf. A. Lang, art. Mythology, in Encycl. Britannica, tom. XVII, 1884.

(2) "Once again I call by that name (Fetishism)

THE RELIGION OF THE ARYANS 53

This minimum of religious feeling, this pre- The first degree of Religion is followed by a second, the Tylor's first, which he refers to as Animism. This is the belief in imma- beings terial, to the spirits, understanding here not the quintessential abstraction of the spiritualists, but a? extremely tenuous substance, different yet coarse material, and which would give To all bodies, life and movement. Like the respiration, - breath, - is the characteristic the most striking of life, like the moment of said de Brosses, any religion whose object is the worship of "Animals or inanimate terrestrial objects" (From the Cult of fetish gods, or parallel to the ancient religion of Egypt with the current Religion of Nigritia. Paris, 1760, p. 61). But in this remarkable work, de Brosses describes in at the same time the religion of the blacks and that of the ancients Egyptians, and encompasses under the same title not only the Primitive naturalism, as I have just indicated, but again what Tylor so happily specified under the name of Animism, and in general, all degrees of Religion prior to Polytheism proper. In this respect, the Cumtist theory, which generalizes even further, if is possible, the meaning of the word Fetishism, is no longer at current of science. Here now is Mr. Itéville, who they understand it differently. It is therefore better, in the description of the phases of religious evolution, renounce to such a vague term, lending itself to such wide interpretations various, and limit its use to the designation of certain well-defined facts.

54 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

Its definitive elimination is that of death;
It is not surprising that, at first glance, this was seen as the principle of existence (1).

In this very simple way and without any revelation-lation, primitive man gradually managed to throw the foundations of the theory that was to take place between the hands of priests of such gigantic proportions.
"Since we are not surprised," said de Brosses, "by seeing children not raise their minds higher than their dolls, believing them to be animated and acting in Consequently, why should we be surprised to see... peoples who spend their lives in a continual

It doesn't matter, moreover, that the root of the word feitiço is fatum or factitius. This means enchantment, spell, Similarly, feiticeiro means sorcerer, and it is in this sense that the Portuguese sailors applied the word with full accuracy to the objects considered by the negroes as endowed with magical power. "Fetishism" considered at This point of view, which is the true one, therefore stems from both Animism and Shamanism; it is only a partial case-culinary arts of one or the other, or better yet, of both together, constituting, moreover, only a fact of order Secondary, from the point of view of classification. (See the Tiele's embarrassed explanations on this subject, loc. cit. p. 17 sq.)

(1) This is how the principle of life is designated in all languages by a word that immediately detects its origin; wang among Western Australians, nephesch In Hebrew, dfman and prana; in Sanskrit, psyche and pneuma Among the Greeks, anima and spiritus, and among the Latins, mean breath, soul and spirit all at once.

THE RELIGION OF THE ARYANS 55

childhood, and who are always four years old, reasoning

nent (1)? This trend was further increased by the effect of dreams: the primitive man who, having Having lost a relative or friend, I saw them in a dream. Some time later, he imagined himself, like the savage of today, to have been visited by "the shadow", the "breath" or the "spirit" of the deceased. This also contributed to the state- the rise of ancestor worship; but it is false to claim with Herbert Spencer that there alone- where the origin of the religious idea lies.

Some characteristic features of the first two degrees of religious evolution, can be to find, let us not forget, in the post- phases These complications, which they often make more complicated, are thus that, without even mentioning the Christmas Tree (2), we recognize- traces of the ancient veneration for trees. Similarly, Ancestor worship continued, albeit in a purified form. among the Greeks, and especially among the Romans.

Animism is succeeded by a third degree which forms the transition between the previous one on the one hand, and the more refined religious forms, the Mono- Theism and Polytheism, on the other hand. That's the

(1) De Brosses, loc. cit. p. 185

(2) Christmas tree. This custom, of Germanic origin, it was only introduced into England at a fairly early time recent, during the reign of George IV.

56 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

religion of the people of the Turanian family and It can be characterized under the name Poydémónism or shamanism (1). It consists in widespread belief in spirits: all the things of heaven and earth are endowed with their good or bad genies, subject to the control of priests and magicians. In my study on Atheism, I included here not only the religious group of modern Ural-Altaic peoples, but still the ancient cult of the Chinese, these proto-Turanians, and the ancient religion of Chaldea. These conclusions, also indicated by Max Müller, were recently adopted by the learned professor- Sister of Leiden, CP Tiele, who brings in

While the Turanians stopped at Polydemonics, the Semites arrived at the Mono-Theism. As a result of a preconceived idea but radically false, and in the face of which the succession of historical events appears as a bloody protest, they persisted in to consider this religious form as superior laughter at Polytheism proper. Such a

(4) Shaman or better (for our pronunciation) Shaman, the name by which the Samoyeds refer to their priests or magicians, who claim the power to evoke the spirits.

(2) See his interesting article "Religions" in the volume XX of the Encyclop. Britannica. London, 1886.

5 THE RELIGION OF THE ARYANS 57

interpretation, natural on the part of a Jew, of a Muslim or Christian, could we sur- to rightfully take from a philosopher like Auguste Comte, if we did not know to what extent point c2: great man allowed himself to be led astray by the neo-Catholic theories of his time. For me, I have always held the opposite view; the religion of Torquemada and St-Labre seem to me a sad progress on that of Hesiod and the Homerides, and I can only curse the day when, abandoning the The brilliant gods of the Aryans for the Jew of Golgotha, our Roman ancestors substituted for the worship of Nature and Beauty, that of Ugliness and of Death. Monotheism is strength brute force and despotism deified; that is servitude religious and political in its most degrading, and without hope of salvation.

That's why I place it at the top of the scale, and far above Monotheism, Polytheism anthropomorphic of the Aryan race. Here, everything is God, and therefore the moment is not far where nothing will be. "The design of the mul- "Typicality in the Universe," as Mr. Renan so aptly put it, This is polytheism among childlike peoples; this is science among peoples who have reached maturity." (1)

In summary, all men started by primitive Naturalism and Animism; but

(1) History of Semitic languages, p. 9.

58 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

while some savage tribes are still in this last form, the Touranians are raised in Polydemonics and have remained there, in the event that their religion has not been supplanted by some cult originating from a foreign race (Islam among the Turks, Buddhism among the Chinese). (1) On the other hand, the Semites have spent very easily from the complicated Animism of a Polyde-rudimentary monism to Monotheism, while

(1) The diagram of the evolution of religious in its broad outlines: Polytheism

(Aryans)

Monotheism
(Sethites)
Complete Polydemonism
(Turanians)

Animism (with Poly-rudimentary demonism)

Primitive naturalism

THE RELIGION OF THE ARYANS 59

that the Aryans came from the same starting point to Polytheism. Such is the religious form characteristic of this latter race and of which I need now give a quick idea.

"If I were asked," said Mr. Max Müller, "what is the discovery of the 19th century that I consider as the most important from the point of view of the following line:

"The Sanskrit Dyaush-Pitar = the Greek Dzeus
pater = the Latin Jupiter = the Old Norse Tyr.

"Consider what this equation implies! This:"
that not only, our ancestors and those of Homer and Cicero spoke the same language as the Hindus – a discovery which, incredible as it may be as it appeared at first glance, does not surprise per-souds – but it still implies and proves that they had the same faith and worshipped for a
at the same time under an exact name
the same, and meaning "Heaven Father"...And if we do we want to realize this completely?
as much as possible of the uninterrupted continuity, in language, thought, and even the words of the principals to the main Aryan nations, it suffices for us to throw a look at the role of the accent in the series
next:

Sanskrit Greek
Nomin. Dryaus Dzeus
Gen. Divas Diôs

60 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

Locat. Divi Dii
ACCUSED. Divam Dia
Voc. Dyaùs Dzeù

"This proves to us that in an era where the Greeks had become so Greek that they suspected
People knew of India's existence at the pool.
The Athenians emphasized oblique cases of Dzeus, exactly on the same syllable as Îles Brahmins in Benares; with this difference that
The Brahmins knew why, while the
The Athenians were unaware of the reason (1) » And more far away: "When we can show that the name Sanskrit for dawn Ushas, is the same as the Greek Es: that the Sanskrit word for night, Ni, is just a variety, based on the same principle as Nyxet Nox (Noc-tis), that Dyaus is Deus and Agni, Ignis, What else have we learned? First, we have irrefutable proof that all these names existed
before the separation of the Aryans; secondly,
we therefore know that whatever the character

at a later time, their initial design must agree with their etymology; in third place, that everything that is reported about them in the form of story or legend and which is found in the

(1) Max Müller: The lesson of Jupiter in the Nineteenth Century; October 1885 issue.

THE RELIGION OF THE ARYANS

Mythology from different countries must have existed. before the final dispersal of the family Aryan »

These are undeniable truths, and there is only just to acknowledge Mr. Max's share Müller in their discovery and popularization. Does it now follow that the process of the The formation of myths and religious ideas was completely different among the Aryans from this that we have observed so far, and that the Polytheistic mythology, or a simple creation misinterpreted language, or as the emi-Oxford professor: "a disease of lan-" "Pledge"? "That's a false and disastrous theory." exclaims Mr. Émile Burnouf, for it reduces science religions to a simple application of philosophy "Sophie, the materialist."

Much to the chagrin of the author of "The Science of religions", Materialist Philosophy sees more higher and further. She first acknowledges the role of truth contained in Max Müller's theory. is perfectly certain that the names thus formed, Dyaus, the bright sky, Agni, the fire, etc., were gradually diverted from their original meaning and ended by designating distinct personalities by virtue of the undeniable action exerted by words on ideas. There is also no doubt that a great Many myths have not developed from this In a way, and I believe very well for my part, that the fable of Endymion and Selene, for example, represents the appearance of the moon opposite the setting sun, just like the pursuit of Daphne by Phaebus is in principle only the disappearance (1) of dawn in the presence of the rising sun. But it is impossible to give an account of all the Myths of antiquity. MG Cox, applying with Max Müller's theories were overly enthusiastic. has graced us with two compact volumes where

G2. ARYANS AND SEMITIS

(1) Moreover, Mr. Émile's attitude is difficult to understand. Burnouf's stance towards Mr. Max Müller, when one knows the latter's recantation regarding the feeling of the divine or of infinity, placed by him – out of respect for the School and The Church – the source of all religious concepts. Mr. Salomon Reinach, too, makes sure to take his precautions. "This point cannot be overemphasized," he said. he, that religious sentiment preceded all forms religious, which are merely more or less translations of them less crude, more or less anthropomorphic, and that any theory which fails to account for this feeling ment, nc could not claim, without scandal, to explain the The genesis of religions. For us, the feeling of the divine It is neither fear, nor astonishment, nor ignorance: it is the product and as the result of two factors, the The feeling of our imperfection (!) which comes from the consciousness, and the idea of supreme perfection, imprinted in our minds through the memory of what we have lost and the premonition of what we must achieve– dre(!!) » {Manual of Classical Philology, 1380, p. 344.) He doesn't It took a Jew to find this "without scandal," which seems to be the ultimate in academic orthodoxy and Spiritual platitude.

THE RELIGION OF THE ARYANS 63

the Iliad and the Odyssey, the Argonautica and the Nicbelungen and I don't know what else, are pre-felt as the image of the perpetual struggle between Day and Night, Spring and Winter, the Light and Darkness(1). This is a manifest abuse-festival, which has since been renewed, that one should It's good to quote sometimes.

The truth is that the influence of language is widely accepted, the need to do of the Gods, that is to say, here to personify the forces of Nature, s2 gave a career among the Aryans

the creation of the most luxuriant mythology, the more harmonious and at the same time the most The most kindly human being who ever lived. Arvens made the gods in their own image, good, generous rich and beautiful; their religion is essentially theanthropic, according to Tiele's expression and the gods appear there as fathers, brothers, companions gnons, – against the theocratic religion of the Hebrews, in which they see themselves compared to their singular and fierce divinity, as slaves in the hand of a master and a tyrant (2).

It is through the Rigveda that we can to get an idea of the primitive religion of the Aryans.

(9 G. Cox: The Mythology of the Aryan Nations.

(2) Cf. Tiele, Eneyclop. Brit., loc. cit.

G4 | ARYANS AND SEMITIS

The hymns that make up C2 Recueil have been improvised and praised by the Hindus in their march towards the southeast, when after separating of their fellow bears, they were heading towards the Punjab first, then to reach the basin of the Ganges. The date of their composition was fixed around the year 19 BC. But, Naturally, this ancient origin has been contested. those concerned always tend to present themselves as those of, prior to any other tradition Iebrous. "However," says the learned author of the Gazetteer of India, the antiquity of the Rigveda, well which is difficult to specify, is abundantly established. The first hymns show us the Aryans on the northwestern borders of India, at time to set off on their long travel. Prior to the Greek embassy Megasthenes, towards the end of the 15th century BC vulgar, they had extended their influence to the Lower Bengal Delta (1).

The Rigveda is certainly the document older than we possessed on civilization primitive, not only of the Hindus but also of our entire race: it is to him that we must resorting, as Bradke so aptly puts it, to all the

born

() W. Hunter: art. India in the Encyclop. Britan. tom. XII; 1881; from the same: The Imperial gazetteer of India. Tome IV, 1831.

THE RELIGION OF THE ARYANS 6)

times when we want to shed light on the origins of the Indo-Germanic language and culture niques (1) This collection is much closer of Aryan origins than the Avesta,—that does not no doubt — and even that the Homeric epics—that, although in the latter, religion appear in its primitive and natural aspect, that is to say, not modified by speculation priests or metaphysicians. What we find there Let us discern very clearly, it is first and foremost the adoration of the sky considered in its luminous aspect, Jyaus, from the root di (div, to shine; compare deva, Adili, Dine, Pan:dior, Dyonisos, Dianus (janus), Dianv, Juno).

The term in use dates from this primitive period. from among the various Aryan nations for designating the entity "God": Sanskrit Deva, Iranian dueva, Latin Deus, Lithuanian Dewas, old Norso livar, and perhaps the Greek Theos. Next to Dyaus, also called Dyaus pitar (the sky father), who produces rain and life-giving springs, finds Prithnvi, the "earth goddess", the alma mater who bears on her breast the immense weight of mountains and from its powerful womb springs forth "These thick trees" (2). Then, Varouna, the sky considered as the vault of the world { Var, cover:

(1) Bradke, loc. cit. r. 1.

(2) Rigveda, V. 84.

66 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

compare the Greek Ouranos); Muūra, the daytime sky, hot and bright; Parjanaya, the God of Thunder. All these deities belong to the religion Vicilla Aryan, prior to the dispersion; we find them found in other branches of the family sales: because it is not always easy to do the part, for these, between what belongs to the past and what should be attributed to a more rapid evolution recent. Among the deities more specifically Among the Vedic peoples, Indra, who from the middle, must be mentioned above, must be mentioned. The air pours down beneficial rains; Vayou the god of the wind; Sourya the sun, the dazzling one, also called Adilya, as son of Awiti (originally the goddess of twilight); Soma, the god of the sacrificial drink, and Vishnu, that of the solar disk, which was later to be, by the Brahmanism, to place oneself in the foreground (1).

(1) Tiele, Manual of Religions, p. 149. – The meme: art. India, loc. cit. – A. Lefèvre, Religion and Comparative Mythology. 18:8.– Review of the History of Religions 1880–87. passim.– There has an excellent German translation of the Rigveda by H. Grassmann: lg veda uebersetzt etc. volume I–IV. Leipzig, 1816–1877.

We can only indicate here the elements of the religion Aryan considered in its most general features, and as much as possible in the cradle of the rare species. These elements are found, as we know, among the Greeks and the Romans, the Germanic, Slavic, and Celtic peoples: although more difficult to discern in the latter due to the inve–

THE RELIGION OF THE ARYANS 67

For centuries, from Bactria to the Indus,
Then at the Ganges, the Aryans went off in chan–
So many gods. And what songs, beside them.
from which the bitter poems pale miserably
Biblical! And how many earlier than those! There you have it.
For nearly four thousand years, the ancestors of our
The race celebrated these friendly deities, and the only ones helpful, the truly living forces of eternal Nature, in verses that are second to none not to those of the Homerides; nearly four thousand years that in their naive enthusiasm, they shouted
to the goddess of the dawning day:

O Morning Redness, wise and powerful Dawn,
Splendid, and something we always want to invoke,
Rich in wealth, full of years, and yet still young,
You who give us everything, you come at the appointed time!
Immortal! Let a cloudless morning shine forth.

With your chariot of fire, awaken our accents;
Guide these proud horses, your splendid team,
Your horses, golden in color, resplendent in the distance;
O redness of the morning, torch of all beings,
You rise again, O light of the Gods!

Shining brightly for us as it did for our ancestors,
Lead your steps towards us in the radiant furrow. (1)

rapid sion of Christianity and also, I believe, by the fact of contact and more pPSIoneE mixing with the Iberians and others.

(1) Fragment of a hymn to the Dawn. Mig Veda, III 6. See the German translation by Grassmann, vol. LI, p. 104 (loc. cit) and the English version of Keary (Outlines of primitive belief).

68 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

Thus sang the Rischis, those rhapsodes, improvising or reciting the hymns entrusted to the memory of successive generations. The castes, in the recent sense of the word, were then unknown; despite the authors' self-serving claims Christians, there were no priests; each father family in their home. Chiefs, often elected, were to the tribe what The father was for the family. The woman occupied an important situation: the marriage was considered reserved as sacred; the bride and the wife, both heads of the household (Dampati) offered together. The widows did not burn themselves with prayers to the gods. not on their husbands' pyres: Here passage diverted from its meaning by the Brahmins for justify such a custom, developed later- rement, means the exact opposite (1).

Such was the primitive Aryan: such we find him again in Greece, with a few modifications. The regime castes, unknown in their essence, whatever one could have said to the other Indo-Germanic nations, originated in India due to circumstances incidental remarks, completely unrelated to the imposed it, and fortunately so, because of

(1) "Rise up, woman," says the sacred text; "return to the world of life, come to us! You have faithfully fulfilled your duties as a wife." (W. Hunter, art India. loc. cit.).

THE RELIGION OF THE ARYANS 69

the presence of these lower-order peoples, the Dravidians and Kolarians, whose blood flowed Without this precaution, the rabble would have infected from the outset At the beginning, the Aryan genius, dried up at its source. Michelet, with his admirable intuition, he grasped the in fact, in one of his finest books, too little reread today: "The resistance of the Aryans, it says— He, such a high victory of the spirit, is one of the most great moral events that have taken place on the land. They found their salvation in the barrier castes (1).

As for the origin of the priests or Brahmins, it's easy to see that. Writing was unknown, and hymns as well as The words of the sacrifice were transmitted orally. From father to son, in the families of Rishis. Little to few, some of them hereditary owners of the liturgy — if one can use that word — were chosen to lead the great sacrifices of tribe; the name of the prayer being Brahma, they called Brahmins and soon we heard celebrations their power in the Rigveda. "This king before He who walks, the priest, he alone remains steadfast.

(1) Michelet: The Bible of Ifumania, page 40. "Remark— Let us say here, says Schœbe! (loc. cit.), that the word varna, color, which later took on the meaning of caste, received it because of a different color than the Aryaset and the Aboriginal people. In the hymns, we can already see the definitive use of the The word: it takes on the meaning of race or tribe.

5)

prostrates himself before him. The king who enriches the priest,
 "He will be victorious and the gods will protect him."
 Thus we see the beginning, under the influence of Brahmins, now organized into an order then-health and hoarding, the sad evolution destiny
 to gradually transform religion in its natural state realistic and luminous depiction of the primitive Aryans (1). From
 At that time, some rhapsodes were not mistaken not, and the famous hymn has often been cited, – pre-the first protest of the Free Thought movement at its dawn, – in which the poet mocks these first priests: "a After remaining in the af-doing for a year, like Brah-
 Frogs, who grant a wish, are like spirits.
 They began to croak, excited by the abundant rains from the sky" (2) etc. "11 there is an abyss, he said excellently Mr. Talboys Wheeler comparing the
 There is a chasm between the Rishis and the Brahmins.
 the joyful singers who poured out their souls
 in sincere and manly prayers to the Vedic deities for the material prosperity of this world, and the sad breed of priests, who proclaimed the principle of asceticism and transmigration in view of a future life (3)".

(1) See my study on Afheism, p. 76 sq.

(2) Max Müller: History of Sanskrit Literature, p. 494.

(3) T. Wheeler: Illstory of India, volume IT. p, 434.

THE RELIGION OF THE ARYANS 71

The truth is that the dogma of Immortality
 the soul, which has only ever created unhappy people and dupes, much to the chagrin of the literary figures who declare-against the so-called pessimism of the material-Religiousists and Polytheistic Religions – the truth is that this dogma, foreign to these religions, has never acquired consistency and precision except in Monotheistic peoples; faith in one God,
 "rewarding and vengeful" is the indisputable postulate.
 conceivable, the sine qua non condition of belief to the reality of personal existence after the death (1). The tributes paid to the Pitris, or spirits of deceased ancestors, were not among the Hindus of Vedic times, as among the Greeks and Romans, a mere memory of the cult primitive ancestors in the period of Animism.

is just as vague as that of hell in the Homeric poems, and the last word of the Aryan wisdom on this sinister joke of the future life and the "happiness of the chosen," that is the sorrowful words of the ghost of Achilles, evoked by Ulysses in the meadow of Asphodels: "I would like better till the land, mercenary servant of the

(1) I will have to come back to this question, to the influence of spiritualist philosophy, on the one hand, and on the other, on the origin and development of this dogma among the Hebrews.

72 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

It is more wretched for men to reign over all the dead who are no more (1). »

It is true that the same fanatics, determined to
to find everywhere the dogma of immortality
the soul, also discovered Monotheism in The Aryan nations! For them, Jupiter is the Supreme God, and as the "one God"; in India is Indra according to some, Agni according to others others; among the Germans, Odin and so on (2).
Mr. Max Müller once remarked that in the
In the hymns of the Rigveda, a god is often invoked.
as the not only supreme God, but unique, abstracting from others, of which he is it attributes all the qualities and even the names.
Very inappropriately, and without any regard for the apho-
rise: entia non sunt multiplicanda, he lives there

(1) Odyssey, XI, 488. Which did not prevent those concerned to cite this passage to prove that the author and his contemporaries were familiar with the dogma of immortality
the soul, in the supposedly moral sense in which it is taken today of today! Plato, however, the great abstractor of quintessence, he was not mistaken, he who, after having mentioned these verses and others of the same kind, hunting Homer of his Republic. – Cf. A. Lefèvre, Religion and Comparative Mythology, p. 185, 29.

(2) Mr. James Darmsteter, a Protestant and a Jew, has everything On the contrary, it is of interest to adopt this dual perspective.
to proclaim this truth; he readily acknowledges that:
The "supreme God of the Aryans was not the one God."

a new thing, he baptized it with the name of Henotheism (1). The individual in this case, worships according to him, not this or that God, but "God", the "Divine." This is not precisely Monotheism; since other deities will be invoked by the same individual, in the same way; but this is the outline and like the premonition (2). That's it where the mania for dentistry led a thinker distinguished, unfortunately coupled with an orthodox dogma. It seems much simpler to recon- to be born only in these enthusiastic hymns, the faithful does not shower the God with so many honors that he invokes, that in order to better seduce him, by putting him

(1) Cf. Introduction to the Science of Religion, London, 1873.

(2) Cf. E. von Hartmann: Das religiöse Bewusstsein der Menschheit, etc. Berlin 1882. The author of the philosophy of The unconscious mind took it upon itself to complete this astonishing theory. For him, everything begins with natural Henotheism- List: things remain as they are until the moment where the individual becomes aware of the contradiction that exists in the act of worshipping several Gods successively, considered One after the other, like the one divinity. Then, from One of two things will happen: either Henotheism will become Nonism abstract as in India; or, among the peoples who feel a greater need for a plast- representation tic, it arrives at the Individualization of concrete Gods; in the latter case, where the original identity will be obs- "increasingly curcising and losing itself in pulytheism, or it leads to exclusive monotheism (p. 58). Unnecessary. to add that it is a set of assumptions completely free.

74 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

above its rivals, completely neglected in the present moment; just like our days, a pious gardener or an edifying shoemaker, They implore, this one St. Crispin, and that one St. Fiacre, by each accumulating epithets on their own the most flattering comments about the name they revere, to

to discover the Monotheism behind the Poly-Theisms have now fallen into disrepute deserved, and there are only extreme pietists left.
like the astonishing Mr. Gladstone, to persist to be found in Jupiter, Apollo and Minerva, the vestiges of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit – being
Of course, as the catechism says, that "these three people are one"
God" (1).

Similarly, the Aryan race, resistant in its essence in Monotheism, is very concerned
little of the Immortality of the soul, concerned before While enjoying the present life, it is hostile also to the bloody sacrifices, and especially to the most appalling of all: human sacrifices.
I can already hear the snickers of the Semitic people that, at the same time as a thousand shrieking voices
the names of Iphigenia and of Polyxene and that the outstretched arms show me the Druidic forests cluttered with sacred corpses

(1) WE Gladstone: Studies on Homer, 1858, volume II.

THE RELIGION OF THE ARYANS 75

and the altar of Artemis of Tauris, flooded with bloody dew of these sacrifices.

Just a moment, my masters! Let's take, if you please pleases the Aryans still pure of any mixture with The cursed races. Let's see them in the time of the Old Aryan religion, and even Vedic religion, such that we can very well imagine them
According to this invaluable document, the hymns from the Rigveda. Undoubtedly there are sacrifices, a natural element of any religion; but which ones?
Especially the offering of the sacred beverage, the liquor of Soma – Soma being taken as personification of the god of sacrifice; beside and on solemn occasions, the great sacrifice of the horse, aṇvamedha. "They slaughtered it positively"
In ancient times, human victims
"It is true," wrote Professor Tiele; "but in good hour, thanks to the softening of manners, this
The practice fell into disuse (1). It's a mania common to all Orthodox Christians writing on the
the matter, let us say in passing, of pointing out to among the Aryan nations. They hope manifest-how to mitigate the sinister effect produced by the stories of human massacres that abound in history of Judaism, by presenting these horrors as a general fact, common to all

(1) Handbook of the History of Religions, p. 117.

76 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

religions and to all peoples. Again, Mr. Tiele
Is he impartial enough to note the disappearance?
rapid development of these sacrifices among the Aryans, where the hor-Practical, yet always exceptional, does not appear hardly more than as having reigned in the high eras, in relation to the phase of Animism,
if, however, they did not borrow it from someone another race.

As for the spread of these bloody rites among the Gauls and the Germans, among the Romans and the Greeks themselves, one must see in this the contribution of the races foreign, especially Semitic, as this re-results from a careful and impartial examination of the facts observed. "If the destructive instinct is the characteristic undeniable of all humanity as well as of all this that which has life in nature, said Mr. de Gobineau, is certainly among the lower varieties of the species that he proves to be the sharpest. In this respect, the yellow peoples possess it just as well as the blacks. But given that the first ones manithey are using a special sensing device
in matters and actions, it was also practiced among the Galls (or Celts), infected by Finnic blood,
in a different way than among the Semitic nations, imbued with the Melanesian essence. One could not see in the Celtic cantons, things will happen as on the banks of the Euphrates. Never, on the altars publicly erected in the middle of cities, in the center of the squares flooded with the light of

THE RELIGION OF THE ARYANS 77

sun, the homicidal rites of the Druidic priesthood
were not carried out shamelessly, with a sort of noisy, solemn, delirious, joyful rage priests in Europe did not aim to feed the ardent imaginations through the intoxicating spectacle of refined cruelties. A spirit of dark superstition, a lover of taciturn terrors, demanded scenes that are more mysterious and no less tragic. To this end, an entire people was gathered at the bottom of thick wood. There, during the night, howlers—The sounds, driven by invisible forces, struck the ear. the faithful. Then, under the consecrated vault of the leaf-damp age that barely let fall on a terrible scene the dubious light of a waning moon dentalium, on a roughly granite altar fashioned from, and borrowed from, ancient barbaric rites, the sacrificers brought their victims closer and silently plunged the bronze knife into them in the throat or in the flank. Other times, these priests were filling gigantic mannequins of wicker, captives and criminals, and they did everything blaze in one of the clearings of their great forests. These horrors were being carried out as secretly; and while the Hamite was leaving his hieratic butcheries, drunk on carnage, the Gall was returning from his religious ceremonies, sou-heavens and stunned with terror. That's the difference: to the active and burning ferocity of the principle

78 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

Melanesian; on the other, the cold and sad cruelty of the yellow element (1).» To one, we will say, rage bloodthirsty, theological Semitic: to the other the cruelty of the Finnish, Turanian and without element doubt also about the primitive man still represented here by too many descendants: if provided that we do not also see in the ferocity Druidic, an effect of the influence exerted by the Voyages of the Phoenicians, those maritime peddlers Semitic gods, rites, and foodstuffs. As for the bloodthirsty deity of Tauris, who doesn't know that this is the Asian Artemis, one of the forms of the great goddess Nana, Mylita or Ishtar, common wife of all the gods Assyrians and Babylonians, in some respects, the Asherah of the Hebrews, which represents in turn Fertility, love, and war? It's a deity. Semitic, which the Greeks could never de—to strip entirely of its odious character, reduced to representing it in its most favorable light favorable like the goddess of Light Noc—

patron saint of old maids and old bachelors, and

(1) De Gobineau, loc. cit. tom. II. p. 172. The author
He attributes, in part, the cruelty of the Semites to their mixture with the Hamites and especially with the Negro element or Melanesian. Whatever the truth of this debatable theory, the facts remain admirably presented in the beautiful page reproduced here.

THE RELIGION OF THE ARYANS 79

who spends his time piercing the beasts of his Arrows in the forests (1). How after this
For example, and this is not the only one, can we persist in see in Greek religion "the first and magnificent-fique fruit of the mixture of Semitic elements and Hamitics, and the dawn of a new era" (2)?

All this, moreover, to highlight two or Three pages later, the deplorable aspects and sinister effects of Semitic influence (3). In vain,
As a good example of the mixture, we would cite-on Aphrodite: if the source is Phoenician, the
The Greeks transformed the original so well in accordance with their genius, that it becomes impossible to find its remains, no more than one can recognizes traces of the ignoble Cypriot idol in .
The Venus of Praxiteles, a true creation in short, eternal and all-Aryan symbol of Love and of Beauty. The truth is that Greece, infected with the surface by the Semitic poison, he smelled it very well
all the horror and soon lived among real monsters.

(1) It could also be that the chaste Artemis was not even a Greek deity; but nevertheless it would be a Aryan goddess. Her name indicates a Phrygian origin.
(Tiele, Manuel, p. 298). I distrust this goddess "phry-"Gienne." In any case, the Aryan element, if it is real, disappears completely under the Semitic element whose
The reality is undeniable.

(2) Tiele, loc. cit. p. 293.

(3) Ibid, p. 296.

as G. Tridon said, in all these machines of destruction, the Artemises, the Minotaurs, the Cacus and others of the same kind. "Such a cult adds— He did it excellently, but could not weigh on it for long. Hellenia; from all sides rise the Greek heroes, illustrious humanitarians, who destroy monsters horned with a bull's head. Theseus kills the Minotaur; Perseus, the sea bull. But the expression sublime of the Hellenic race, he is the son of Jupiter and of Alcmene, Hercules; he purges the earth of Semitic monsters, the Cacus, the Geryon, the Antaeus of Libya, the Nemean lions. The twelve works are pushing back the Tyrian Hercules, the Melqart, and his latest effort opens up to the ancient world a world carefully hidden by the Phoenix races ancient in the legend of the Strait of Atlas (1). »

Whatever the true causes and foreign influence, these horrors of the times the old ways already justified the verse without-glant of Lucretia.

Tantum relligio potuit suadere malorum!

Alas! What would the immortal poet have said, if for his Unfortunately, he would have been given the chance to live after the Inquisition, after Torquemada, after the St. Bartholomew's Day Massacre, and the charred flesh in all the auto-da-fé, and the streams of blood piously shed over all the points of the Semitic world | He was unaware, moreover

(1) Jewish Molochism, p. 25.

THE RELIGION OF THE ARYANS 81

that the same virus had already poisoned in its from the very sources, the entirely naturalistic religion of Aryans. And see, however, how with the intuition— A genius, he knows how to make the difference, he who... beginning of his poem, a masterpiece of the Aryan spirit, does not hesitate to launch the splendid invocation to "the Mother of the Aeneads.

Aeneadum genitria, hominum divumque voluptas.
Alma Venus.

and of the gods, by whom the sea carries the ships and the earth produces harvests; that which gives life to all beings and calls them to the light (1)!

That's how, just yesterday, a French Aryan sang in unison the Rischis and Lucretia, a magnificent and splendid hymn—pagan ment, in honor of Sourya, the dazzling, the sun, which very truly gives strength to our sublunar and assager world:

Resplendent warrior who walks in the sky,
Across the vastness and eternal time;

You, who pour forth into the heart of the robust earth

The fertile river of august heat,

And seats around noon on the burning peaks:
King of the world, hear us and protect us forever

Pure-blooded men, peaceful races
Who sing to you on the shores of the ancient Oceans (2).

(1) Lucretius Carus, De Natura rerum, 1.1, p. 9.

(2) Leconte de Lisle, Ancient Poems: Curya.

82 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

"Although religion has not failed to advise many crimes in Greece itself, said Mr. Jules Soury in his remarkable book entitled the A breviary of Materialism, it had nothing that resembled the dogmas of the Semitic nations. Not only are the Gods of the Hellenes more human beings than those of other peoples; but, far for having created this world, for having conjured it from nothingness, Before them existed the fertile chaos of the universe. eternal, and above them hovered the dark well—The power of Destiny... . The poets, from Hesiod to Pindar said that the gods and men had a common origin, that some and the others were the children of the same mother, "the "Broad-bodied earth." Thus understood, theology it was becoming almost a natural science, the gods

horses {1}. »

Much more! Like "oaks and horses"
men and the earth itself, like everything else who is born, in short – they must perish. If the idea of the death of Olympus, latent among the Greeks and relegated to the background, it can nevertheless be discerned in the myth of Prometheus, it bursts forth in all its strength among the Germans in the conception of Ragnaræk, "the twilight of the gods," is over.

(1) Jules Sourvy, The Breviary of Materialism, Paris, Charpentier, 1881, p. 122.

THE RELIGION OF THE ARYANS 83

by the general conflagration of Valhalla and the world (1). Everything must be reborn, it is true, the "Valhalla," men and gods; but the analogy is all the more striking with what actually takes place in eternal Nature, within of which – as Materialist Philosophy has always proclaimed and as science demonstrates Today – worlds are born, live and They die, only to be reborn and die again, and so on.
in succession, indefinitely, in the circular course of uncreated matter.

ER — I ED

(1) See the poem of the Voluspa in the Old Edda, or Edda of Saemundr: 11 there is an excellent translation German by Simrock (Stuttgart), 1863, and an analysis
very interesting in the book already cited by Keary; Outlines of primitive belief; p. 346 sq.

The great musician and poet Richard Wagner gave further proof of the truly universal nature of his genius, in knowing how to choose as the theme of his incomparable masterpiece "the tetralogy" of the Ring of the Nibelungen, the great Scandinavian epic, entirely Aryan, and so interesting, in what we find there, although so far away
The origins, the essential features of primitive beliefs of our ancestors.

CHAPTER II

THE SEMITIS

Noli me Tangere! – The cradle of the Semites. – Characters Physical characteristics of the race.– Anthropology of the Jews. – The Semitic languages. – The Semitic race, a combination inferior aspect of human nature. – Identical judgment
by Lassen and Mr. Renan.– The Assyrians. – Origin non-Semitic of the Babylonian civilization and of Assyria.– MJ Halévy and the puns of the Talmud.
– Kanaan.– The Phoenicians, Jews of the sea. – Their nullity as inventors. – The so-called civilization of the Arabs. – Messrs. Perrot and Chipiez and "Hebrew art-
that ".

There are state pardons. If a professor insults,
From the height of his pulpit, the Renaissance or the Revolution lution, Socialism and Materialism; that a a boorish, barely clean-cut fellow, fresh out of school
come to drag Democritus and Lucretius through the mud, Euripides and Tacitus, and attempts to prove to us that the language of the Romans, our ancestors, is good at to know at most for Germans or Poles; and the stunned public, upon leaving the Mass, sermon, or synagogue, applauded at These self-serving detractors of the glories must be silenced.
Aryans. The Bourgeoisie fawns over them, the Press favorite , and if so, they have all the chances in the world of obtaining some professorship

THE SEMITICS 85

new creation in the schools of the Republic.
But the Bible! But the Jews! But the Semites!
– It is forbidden to touch it: Noli me tangere, as said the "Resurrected One" of Calvary. That if, by
By chance, one of our "authorized" men... risking speaking about it, it is only by "protesting"
of a respectful attachment to the great religious tradition under the auspices of which Civilization was born and continues to develop.
of the West {1}. » Ah! misery! and that we
We are indeed far from "hateful" criticism.

hardly, upon hearing such words resound right in the heart of the Sorbonne, the world is preparing to celebrating 12: centenary of a Revolution that almost to deliver us forever from religious fanaticism |
The truth is that, if we get rid of
From the throne, we still feel on our shoulders
the full weight of the altar and the safe, this double yoke forged primarily by Semitism; the truth is, that these great critics of the 18th century – slander-denied by so many people who think they are very strong and claim to be impartial, – their main objective was the triumph of justice and the happiness of humankind
nity, quite different from our modern exegetes

d) Maurice Vernes, professor at the École des Hautes-Studies, near the Sorbonne (section of religious sciences):
History of Religions, Paris, 1887, p. 5 6

86 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

who, while demolishing the Bible with one hand,
like a jumble of contradictions, of interpolations and falsified texts, rebuild it from the other as the source "of all morality and all religion."
"Hateful criticism!" they say; – we must come to an agreement.
No doubt it is easy to declare at the threshold of a book, which will be written calmly and studiously, without anger and without bias, even if it means subsequently raising the right
the reader's indignation at the depiction of the atrocities from a disastrous era. If partiality consists of to invent documents and distort the facts,
This is certainly a detestable way of proceeding.
table, and that is the essence of apologetics. But If it is being biased to reveal the vices and the weaknesses; if pointing them out is hateful, then so be it.
to public outrage the infamies of history and the horrors of the "True Religion", then we will not be able to say anything about the pages that follow.
that they were written "sine irà et studio". The so-called impartiality is too often only the mask of skepticism, when it does not appear as the effect of a culpable indulgence, or even of a secret and unavowable sympathy for a A disgraced cause. It is time, in truth, to to revive the traditions of the century to which we
We must Diderot and Voltaire, and commit ourselves fran-the sacred path that leads to the discovery of the Truth. Enough of compromise, enough of this baseness!

THE SEMITICS 87

We must tear down the veil of the temple, and without losing his time to ask forgiveness for great freedom, to enter the sanctuary and to remove the Holy saints to display to the world his horror and its entire vanity.

But before talking about the Bible, Judaism and of Christianity, it is essential to go an accurate account of the nature and aptitudes of the Semitic race, the true source of all these evils

The name "Semites" is taken from Chapter X from Genesis, where it is written: "These are the generations Noah's children: Shem, Ham, and Japheth. That's Eichorn, who introduced it into science (1), and although the classification of peoples, "revealed" in the chapter in question is only a mixture a jumble of names of men, cities, and tribes having only very distant relations with the linguistics and ethnology, it is necessary to preserve it—because of its convenience and its long usage (2).

As for the cradle of the race, the authors do not They disagree. It used to be placed in Armenia, for no other reason than the memory of

(1) Eichorn, Einleitung in das alte Testament, Leipzig, 1787. 2nd ed. I, p. 45.

(2) It is not clear, for example, what advantage there is in it would have to replace it, as Mr. Marius Fontanes wants, . by the far too broad term "Asians".

83 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

legendary tale depicting Noah's Ark as if stopping at "Mount Ararat." A man The authoritative E. Schrader published a

From linguistic considerations, he believes he can to designate northern and central Arabia as the original homeland of the Semites (1). According to Kremer, This should be postponed to Central Asia. next to the cradle of the Aryans, to the west of the plateau of Pamir. From there, they would have followed the course of the Oxus, then the southern edge of the Caspian Sea, to then head towards the mountainous regions women of Media, from where they would have entered in the plains of Mesopotamia (2). Finally, It is in these very plains that F. Hommel places the original abode of the Semites (3). The opinion Kremer's made few converts; that of Schrader, much more likely, met-very many members among the scholars no longer authorized (4).

(1) E. Schrader, Die Abstammung der Chaldaer und die Ursitze der Semiten, in Zeitschrift der Deutschen Morgenländischen Gesellschaft, tom. 27, p. 397 sq. Leipzig, 1878.

(2) A. Von Kremer, Semitische Culturentlehnungen etc. in das Ausland, 1875.

(3) F. Hommel, Gli Atti del IV* international congress degli orientalisti. Florence, 1830. t. I, p. 217, ff.

(1) Cf. A. Sprenger, Die alte Geographie Arabiens als Grundlage der Entwicklungsgeschichte des Semilismus. Bern, 1875.

THE SEMITICS – 89

One fact that seems certain is that the Semites developed at some point of the vast peninsular space they occupied later-ment and which includes, besides Arabia, the part of Western Asia, bordered to the north by the Taurus Mountains, and to the East by the mountains that border the basin of the-Tiger. Moreover, it is also constant that the Semites from the North stayed together for a long time blue, before their final separation, in the plains of lower Mesopotamia (1).

The Semitic race is subdivided into two groups principal: – {0 The southern Semites, that is to say the Arabs (2); 2 The northern Semites, who are are of particular interest and are: a) said; b) The Kahanes, including the Hebrews and the Phoenicians; c) The Assyrio-Babylonians. We know that the Carthaginians were colonists Phoenicians and that, on the other hand, the words "Hebrew",

(1) Gerland made an interesting attempt, but hitherto unjustified, in wanting to group as members of the same Arab-African race the populations of Africa and the Semites. See his Atlas of Ethnography. Leipzig 1877, and his Anthropologische Beiträge, p. 395, ff.

(2) Besides the Arabs of the central and northern regions, one can to mention as secondary groups and especially at From a linguistic point of view, the Sabaeans who spoke the Himyarite, in the south of the peninsula, and those who emigrated in Abyssinia, and whose dialect is Ghez, also called Uppelé Ethiopian,

90 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

"Jew" and "Israelite" are synonymous in the ordinary language; however, let us recall that "Israel" remained the usual name of the people in question until captivity, the period from which the expression "Jew", taken from Judah, won on the first designation (1).

Superior races are distinguished above all from each other, as I mentioned, by their sociological skills much more than by their physical characteristics. However, there are a Semitic type, very easy to recognize in our Hebrew community, and without needing to cross the sea to find him among the Arabs from Algeria. "The population group that Biblical ethnography brings together under the name of Sem, says F. Lenormant, a group whose representatives The main actors nowadays are the Jews and the

(4) Hebrew, Latin Hebræus, Greek Hebraios, is a trans-Hebraya description, the Aramaic equivalent of the original word from the Old Testament: Jbri. |

The name Hebrews, those from beyond (the Euphrates?) found in Heber, grandson of Shem, by Arphakshad and ancestor of Abraham (Genesis 10:21, 25; 10:16). This is especially the term by which neighboring nations designated

This last expression, Beni-Israel, means, sons of Israel (or house of Jacob, house of Judah). However, in their dealings with non-Israelites and In contrast to them, they also sometimes took the name of the Hebrews (Gen. 41:15).

THE SEMITICS 91

Arabs, is remarkably a double point from a physical and linguistic point of view. It presents a type of the white race purer and more beautiful than that of the Hamitic populations (1). The beard is better endowed, the complexion much clearer, the taller, more complexion dry. The face is usually long and thin. the low forehead, the aquiline nose, the mouth and the receding chin, which gives the profile a contour rounded rather than straight; the eyes are sunken, black and shiny (2).

I would add that when considering them in relation to Aryan nations, the Semites present at the con- milking a type of the white race infinitely less handsome. The size is smaller; the complexion, less light, can range to dark brown; the hair often curl, but instead of being blond or brown-haired like the purest Aryans, they are generally black like those of the Libyans and the Turanians.

With regard to Jews in particular, astonishing preservation of their primitive type and so distinct can no longer be contested except by the ignorant-rancid or fantasy. Abundant hair

(1) Or Libyan (according to the expression I prefer), represented mainly by the Egyptians.

(2) F. Lenormant: Ancient History of the Peoples of the Orient, 9th edition. Tom. I, p. 291. Paris, 1881.

99 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

black (1). large eyes, also black, slanted in almond-shaped and shining with a steely sheen, the nose is long (2) bucket of prey; thin lips (3), all framed within a very pronounced oval shape, – these are the characteristic traits of individuals the most favored. Horace Vernet has a very good one summarized the whole thing in the head of his Judith in train to assassinate Holofernes; deplorable painting, . Moreover, and which they undoubtedly wanted to place in one of the most beautiful rooms of the Louvre in the sole purpose of teaching the masses a lesson of anthropology, with the identification of the Jewish type. In fact, all you have to do is take a walk for a while. in the vicinity of the Place des Vosges, to ren- to counter this Judith whose features seem to reproduce exactly, three thousand years later- tance, those of the Shulamite. At a certain number of individuals, the lips instead of appearing like a simple "thread of purple", are a little thick and slightly inverted, although tou- red days and a correct design; hence, at

(1) "Her hair curls are flexible like palms and black as the raven. » Song of the Hymns v. 11. trans. Renan. |

(2) The Jews share with the Patagonians the specialty the longest noses in the world.

(3) "Her lips are like a thread of purple." Song of Songs. of the fx. Cant. 8.

THE SEMITICS 93

the women, with their large Egyptian-style eyes, Black and glossy, this kind of beauty has a charm strange and of a particularly sensual nature, that is usually attributed, but in a beautiful way- too general a blow, to the women of the Orient (1).

The type I just described, certainly the noblest and most beautiful, belongs above all to Portuguese or Spanish Jews (Sephardim). Originally established in Spain, they have widespread in France following the Inquisition, in Holland, Turkey and the ports of the Mediterranean; they are also found in Morocco, in Tripoli, Algiers, Egypt and as far as Samar- cande (2).

Alongside it is the less pure variety, although very numerous, German Jews (Ashkenazim) (3), or German-Polish, including the Jews of Russia's offspring are nothing but offshoots. Those ones have enough

(1) Let us not forget that beautiful Greek girls were often introduced into Palestine through "trade" Phoenician."

(2) Cf. D' Bleckmann, Ein Beitrag zur Anthropologie der Juden Dorpat 1884.— Robhis, Errer Aufenthalt in Marokko.— Radlof, in Zeilsch. der genel. für Erdkunde. vi. p. 409, Berlin, 1871.

(3) From Ashkenaz, one of the sons of Japheth, considered by the Jews as the ancestor of the Germanic populations; of even that some orthodox scholars, already mentioned, we they descend from Gomer.

94 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

often with a short, upturned nose, particularly unsightly, prominent cheekbones, eyes Small, though always bright. The hair are often red-haired, sometimes blond (1). It's all well and good—a heated discussion ensued regarding whether these "Blonde Jews" constitute an original variety, dating back to antiquity, or if they were not rather the result of crossbreeding with the populations of northern and eastern Europe. Whatever in itself the reality of a primitive blonde variety, which is, moreover, highly problematic, it is not It is doubtful that the vast majority of these Semites blond hair does not come from a mixture of Jews with the Germanic and Slavic peoples, due to the conversions to Judaism, which took place until towards the end of the 10th century. Moreover, as Île does Pruner-Bey noted that the Jews kept long—time, in Poland, a high influence, and it is necessary to believe that they often married Christian women, since in 1092, King Ladislaus forbade these marriages He even forbade Jews to take... Christian servants (2).

In any case, it is Semitic blood that He prevailed in these mixtures, as always, and

(1) Cf. Drumont. La France Juive, vol. I, p. 56 sq.

(2) Bulletins of the Anthropological Society, vol. II, p. 10, and Tom. VI, p. 515. — Revue d'anthropologie t. VIII, p. 645 sq. 4885. Introduction to the anthropological study of the Jews, by E. Goldstein.

THE SEMITICS 95

in the most decisive way, as well as the fact note Richard Andrée in his interesting, work (1), — at least, and very certainly under the report of deplorable sociological aptitudes.
Even from a purely physical point of view, all Jews
Germans are not characterized by a nose amazed, above a reddish beard. Dr.
Bleckmann, from Courland, who argued on The anthropology of the Jews: an interesting thesis inaugural, found, in more than half of the individuals subjected to his examination, the hair black, oval face, black eyes, rather large, with characteristic thin lips (2).

(1) Richard Andrée, Volkskunde der Juden. Bielefeld and Leipzig, 1881, p. 24.

(2) 64 out of 100 had dark brown hair, 88 medium or large eyes (small in only 12); 57 the had black, 10 blue, the others light gray; 52 had thin lips, 69 oval face. Bleckmann, loc. cit.
p. 31 sq.— I would not speak of the cephalic index, if I I found in this further proof of its little importance and the variability of this factor in superior races laughers; for while everyone agrees on the Given the consistency of the characteristics stated here, the results are at on the contrary, as divergent as possible with regard to this particular point. If Dr. Bleckmann has found his Welcker classifies Jews among the brachycephalic subjects
mesocephalic and Weinbach states that dolichocephalic
There are more of them, there's something for everyone.
(See Weinbach, Körpermessungen verschiedener Menschen- rassen, Berlin, 1878. p. 212 ff.)

are very easily recognizable in all the countries of the world and distinguished from the rest of the inhabitants. "Under the African sky," said Berbrugger, Just as in Europe, the Jews have their type Special features: aquiline nose, black beard, magnificent eye Although always fake, with a white and smooth complexion. He is It's easy to recognize them by that air of deceit and of humility, to this inclination of the body bent in before, with these severe features and semicircles which frame their dark eyes and which are a distinctive signs of their race (1). » « A Suriname, writes Professor Duttenkofer, when A Black man sees a European and a Jew approaching, he Don't say: Here are two whites, but rather: Here "Come, a white man and a Jew (2)."

We could multiply the evidence and the citations. That's enough corn, I think, to bring it to nothing. the self-serving claims of certain people who persist in denying the reality of a difference any, whether physical or psychological, between the Aryans and the Semites.

The fact is that this difference is becoming even more pronounced. From a linguistic point of view. If languages spoken by these two varieties of humankind

(1) Berbrugger, Algérie lustorique, etc. 5th part, p. 4. Paris, folio, 1843.

(2) Duttenkofer, Ueber die Emancipation der Neger, Nord-Lingen, 1885. p. 12.

THE SEMITICS 97

are, in both cases, languages with Flexion, this mechanism is, among the Semites, essentially rudimentary. Conjugation seems particularly strange to the student who opens a grammar for the first time Hebrew; for example, there is no shortage of ways No – there are seven of them! – But the subjunctive mood and, what is more serious, the present time, does not exist-try not; so that we will never know with accuracy, as Mr. Renan points out, whether it concerns the present or the future, a truth Conditional or subordinate clause. "Grammar" Semites, he adds, are almost entirely ignorant of the art of in the race that created it an obvious inferiority reasoning skills, but a very strong taste vivid realities and a great sensitivity to sensations. Perspective is completely lacking in Semitic style; one would search in vain for these protrusions, these setbacks, these half-days that give to the Aryan languages as a second power-expression session. Flat and without inversion, the Semitic languages do not recognize any other procedure that the juxtaposition of ideas in the manner of Byzantine painting or bas-reliefs of Nineveh... Finally, the general construction of the The phrase offers such a character of simplicity, especially in the narrative, which can only be compared to the naive stories of a child, instead of these learned ones sentence windings (circuitus, comprehensio, (as Cicero calls them) under which the Greek and Latin assemble the members with such artistry Despite their differences and the same thought, the Semites do not know what to do, following one another in succession of proposals others, employing as their sole artifice the simple copula ef, which serves as almost all of their conjunctions (1).

98 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

However, we have done and are still doing all the days of considerable efforts to bring the two systems and attribute to the Aryan languages and Semitic, a common origin. "The spirit The biblical text has decided that until further notice, it says very well Abel Hovelacque, that Hebrew and Sanskrit had common roots, that is: we do not discuss point with people who claim to be enlightened. Moreover, one can quite understand what sort interest drives these last proponents of the Holy-Writing to be assigned to all languages of the universe a common origin, and how much it gives them It is particularly important to attach them more or less directly to the alleged language of the pre-mother of the Jews. Let's leave, as the same said, "Writing, let the dead bury their dead(2)"

But if the gap between the Aryans and the Semites,

(1) E. Renan, General History of Semitic Languages, 5° edit. p. 20.

(2) A. Hovelacque: Linguistics, p. 240. 1877.

. +

THE SEMITICS 99

is already quite valuable in the field of languages
And from a physical type standpoint, what a gulf!
a gap widens between them when we compare the sociological skills! He will remain as a indelible stigma, Renan's word in his admirable book on the history of Semitic languages ques:

"That would be pushing Pantheism too far."
In history, it's better to put all races on a
on an equal footing, and, under the pretext that nature Humanity is always beautiful, to look within oneself.
various combinations the same fullness and the same wealth. I am therefore the first to recognize that the Semitic race compared to the
The Indo-European race, truly represents an inferior combination of the human nature Maine (1).

A curious thing! Mr. Renan, who wrote these lines in 1855 sincerely ignored, as he states in a note – that a few years Previously, the eminent Indianist Lassen had arrived to formulate the same opinion and to develop it in two or three remarkable pages, of a in almost the same way. Because of this coincidence and especially because of the importance of this fragment which, often mentioned, has not never, to my knowledge, has it been translated into French;

(DE. Renan: loc. cit. p. 4.

100 Aryans and Semites

It seems essential to me to reproduce its principles.
main passages.

"History," says Lassen (1), "is there to attest perfect of the psychic faculties by which one distinguishes oneself

The Indo-Germans are ringing. The heart (das Gemüth) and passion, the feeling of personality with an energetic will and great finesse pre-
- dominate in the Semite; he cannot isolate from his "Self," the existing relationship between the world and man and he is incapable of bringing thought back to .
Pure objectivity. His way of conceiving the Everything is subjective and selfish. (2)

"His poetry belongs exclusively to the genre"
lyrical; it is therefore entirely subjective;
It is the heart that recounts its joys and sorrows.
his loves and hates, expresses his admiration or his contempt. The epic, in which the person-
The poet's identity is relegated to the background, is not

(4) Christian Lassen, Indische Alterthumskunde. Bonn, 1847, 4 vols. in-8°. Tom. I. p. 414 sq.

(2) Cf. Renan, loc. cit. p. 15. "The Semite does not know scarcely any duties except to himself. To pursue his vento assert what he believes to be his right, is his eyes a kind of obligation. On the contrary, asking him to keep his word, to administer justice in a way
To ask her to be selfless is to ask her for an impossible thing.
Nothing holds sway in these passionate souls against sentimentality.
"untamed word."

THE SEMITICS 101

not at all his doing; and even less the tragedy which demands even greater selflessness from the writer
more complete. The Indo-Germans (Aryans) possess-tooth all genres of poetry besides the genre lyrical; only in their case is there a national tragedy;
In their souls, one encounters these great poems heroic figures who, reflected in songs of triumph, the exploits of ancient times recounted through tradition, they reveal to us all at once the
the particular genius of an entire people and appear as the fruit of the nation's poetic efforts whole (1)... As for the rest of the

(1) Cf. Renan, loc. cit. pp. 10-11. "The themes of poetry
Among the Semites, they are few in number and quickly exhausted.

poetry: parabolic poetry, Hebrew maschal, including
The books attributed to Solomon are the most perfect type, and subjective, lyrical poetry, as we would say, represents conveyed by the Hebrew psalm and the Arabic Kasida, forms short, never exceeding a hundred lines, expriexpressing a personal feeling, a state of mind, and of which The author himself is the hero. This eminently subjective of Arabic and Hebrew poetry holds itself has another essential trait of the Semitic spirit,
I mean, the complete absence of creative imagination and consequently of fiction. The Semitic poet does not never resigns itself to taking seriously a subject foreign to himself. Also, no trace of narrative or dra- poetry matic, none of these great compositions where the poet must disappear; the fiction of the Semites never rises to above the apologue; the tale came to them from India and "It only developed among them quite late." 7

1402 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

Fine Arts, the Semite prefers music, which expresses in the most immediate way the feelings
The stirrings of the soul. The great creations of the sculpture and painting belong only to Germanic peoples and, again, to some of them only (1).

"Philosophy is also foreign to Semites; they took a pension, – and still the only Arabs, – among the Indo- Philosophers Germans. Their own ideas dominate so much so that it is impossible for them to to settle quietly in the field of pure thought and separating abstraction from order general and necessary, of their individuality and of the contingent facts relating thereto (2).» |

(1) CE. Renan, loc. cit. p. 12; "From there also among these fewples, the absolute lack of visual arts. Illumination manuscripts, where the Turks and Persians have deployed such a vivid feeling for color is antipathetic to Arabs and completely unknown in countries where the spirit –
Arabic has been preserved in its pure form, for example in Morocco.
Music, the subjective art par excellence, is the only one that...
"Semites may have known."

(2) Cf. Renan, loc. cit. p. 10: "If one objects to the development philosophical and scientific development of the Arabs under the Abbasids, the response must be that it is an abuse to give the name of Arabic philosophy refers to a philosophy that is not that a loan made to Greece and which never had any This philosophy has its roots in the Arabian Peninsula. It is written in Arabic, that's all; it only flourished in the par-

THE SEMITICS 103

I wanted to quote the verdict in its entirety.
overwhelming, rendered in almost identical terms
ticks, by two illustrious Masters who, without having Those consulted arrived each from their own direction, by the sole study of the facts, to the final conviction of the Semitic race. Nothing happened.
for forty years, which allows those concerned
to appeal this judgment.

No doubt, there is Mr. de Rosny and the people of its sequel, which tells us about the splendors of Babylon and Nineveh, and ask us how-one can, after that, contest the existence of the Aesthetic sentiment among the Semites (1). M.
Renan, with the intuition typical of men of great talent had already answered this question;
the sole fact of the remarkable development of the arts and of civilization in Babylonia and Assyria, had been enough for him to deny the exclusively Semitic culture of the populations of these regions.
subsequent discoveries of MM. Oppert, Sayce, Rawlinson and others have since provided the elements
positives of the demonstration.

the most remote territories of the Muslim empire, in Spain,
in Morocco, in Samarkand, and far from being a product the natural state of the Semitic mind, it rather represents the reaction of the Indo-European genius of Persia against Islamism, that is to say, against one of the most pure of the Semitic spirit."

(1) From Rosny. loc. cit. p. 55.

cuneiform writing, the arts and civilization of The Assyrian empire is the work of populations distinct from the Semitic race, which they have preceded in the lower basin of the Tigris and the Euphrates. "That the peculiarities of the writing cuneiform, says Professor Tiele in a work recent events can only be explained by this fact. that it was designed for a different language Semitic languages, and by the vocabulary and through syntax; that this language belongs to agglutinative varieties, and that it was, before the expansion of Assyrian, the predominant language, at least in southern Mesopotamia, that's the case. which is accepted by all Assyriologists (1).

The Assyrians themselves were indeed in in fact a Semitic people, speaking a language similar to that of the Hebrews and Phoenicians. They later spread into Babylonia; but the original inhabitants of this region, with which they mingled were by no means Semites. "(is in the lower basin of the Euphrates, says MAH Sayce, that was the point the starting point of the civilization that then spread throughout Western Asia. The first inhabitants- of this region, which we will call Acca- diens, reported their origin to the districts

(1) CP Tiele, Babylonisch-Assyrische Geschichte. 1 Theil. p. 61, Gotha, 1886.

THE SEMITICS 405

mountainous south of the Caspian Sea, from where they had spread over Elam (Susiana), over the shores of the Persian Gulf and in the fertile plains from Babylonia. Their physical type had peculiar. They had small eyes, cheekbones prominent, slightly upturned nose, beard long and steep. Their language and dialects were agglutinative, closer to the The Ural-Altaic group, more than any other... hieroglyphs which later became the characters cuneiform script was invented in Elam, as This results from the absence of characters for design the palm tree, or the use of representation of a mountain to indicate the idea of "country". In Babylonia, however, the civilization brought was divided into two halves, one in the south, comprising nating Sippra and Babylon, and known as d'Accad (Accad, the mountains, or better, the country of the mountain peoples); the other to the north, under the Sumer's name, along with Erech, Larsa and perhaps,

Our. The country west of the Euphrates was given the name of Edinna, the desert (the Eden of Scripture), – the sacred grove and garden in the vicinity of Eridou, at the confluence of the Tigris and Euphrates being the
The "Garden of Eden" of Genesis... Babylon consisted of two Akkadian cities, built on the two banks of the Euphrates, Ça-dimirra "the "God's door" and Din-tir, "the place of the tree"

106 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

(of life); these two cities, after the semi- conquest ticks were united into one under the name of Bab-ili or Babel, translation of Ça-dimirra in the language of the victors (1).»

It was Mr. Oppert who first reported, in 1854, the existence of cuneiform texts written in a language which appeared to him to be non-Semitic (2), to which He first gave it the name Cashdo-Scythian.
later substituted for this name that of Sumerian, while abroad Mr. Sayce and Others preferred the terms "accad" or
"Acadian", both of which are borrowed, to the early history of Chaldea, revealed by the reading the inscriptions. Whatever the name that this ancient language is given the name Baby-Ionie, it is a certain fact that, when she came to
to die out, the Semitic conquerors held it, with good reason, in such high esteem, that they all their care in preserving it and making things from it translations; it was the scholarly language that all

(1) AH Sayce, Herodotus I-III. The ancient empires of the East, p. 353, ff. London, in-8° 1883. The criticism that I focused on methodology and, above all, generalizations.
The hasty pronouncements of the learned professor do not prevent me in any way from
to recognize and proclaim its competence as assiriologue.

(2) Oppert, Archaeological Bulletin of the French Athenaeum, of the October 21, 1854.

An educated Babylonian would have known, as in-Today we know Latin in our country.

Well, a Jew came along!
to contest, after twenty years have passed, the results undeniable. of all these works. How So! We had discovered the Assyrian language.
noted its essentially Semitic character,
its close relationship with Aramaic, with Hebrew and the Phoenician; therefore the Assyrian civilization Babylonian, the arts of Nineveh and culture
all of it from ancient Eastern culture, all of it was Semitic. What a triumph, and what a resounding rebuttal!
inflicted on the Lassen and Renan families! And then, there you have it!
that at the last moment intruders would decide to make new discoveries and push the boundaries of im-modesty to the point of recognizing beneath the cunei- writing form and alongside Assyrian, another language and another civilization of a completely different character and having absolutely nothing in common with the Semiism! That was unacceptable, and Mr. Joseph Halévy undertook to demonstrate that the language
Akkadian was actually a Semitic dialect.
It was impossible, absurd; it was a matter of doing to believe people who speak in this so-called dialect, phonetic signs designate something other than what they mean.

If I have thought it necessary to have what-that knowledge of the Jewish language for the studies that I am currently pursuing, I must con-

108 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

spank my absolute incompetence in what concerns the reading of cuneiform inscriptions.
But in truth, even the most illiterate of men is able to comment on the value of Mr. Halévy's objections. This Jew, driven into his last resort, has gone so far as to support that if Akkadian writing differs from the texts
Assyrians, that's because the authors wrote
This is based on a system of rebuses and puns.
in a word, in a positively "tintama-" style
"It remains established," he declares, "that the so-called Akkadian or Sumerian texts do not that by a particular reduction process, in which hieroglyphics becomes considerably more complicated with the rebus and wordplay so sought after by popular sentiment." It seems that similar events were observed among other peoples, notably among the Syrian Gnostics, and that the doctors "Talmudic" scholars also made use of an artificial language they called "language of Wisdom" (Kakma lesson). "The language of wisdom," continued Mr. Halévy, was often just a simple schoolboy slang, consisting of the use of circumlocutions and sometimes biting imagery (?). A doctor wanting to order that the As soon as possible, two roasted roosters, he says: Arrange (light) the charcoal, place the golden pieces on top (spread the embers well) and 'make me two heralds in the Darkness (Talmud of Babylon, Erubino, fol. 24, b.). But at other times, to better conceal his intentions, or rather to to be witty (?), one made extensive use of the pun, and especially puns by synonyms, which form a kind of riddle the explanation of which requires some thought. (In effect! example:}.. A doctor wanting to order from sorrel to mustard, disguised his thought in this phrase: give me a judgment ox with the poor man's mountain. That's the word for The word "sorrel tardim" is composed of two syllables. (Lar (= tor) and din}, which mean respectively beef and judgment; likewise, the word hardal, mustard, broken down into two syllables, rap-close to the Hebrew har dal, mountain of the poor. It should be noted that these puns are limited to superficial analogy and do not aim at an absolute identity neither in the vowels nor in the consonants. The preceding explanation is sufficient to give an idea of natural walking (!?) although of increasingly complicated hieratic system Assyrian. Certainly, convention and the individual spirit-The duel between the scribes played a large part in this, but it It must nevertheless be acknowledged that the persistence of Given hieroglyphics, cunei- writing This form could not have developed otherwise. Issue of priestly genius, this writing has not ceased to be lovingly cultivated by the priesthood which,

THE SEMITICS 109

in the playful form of the pun, has often he deposited his religious and social ideas. (1)

Let's stop there; this last sentence
It's worth a whole poem. If the reader were tempted to criticize me for these quotes because of the place
And regarding wasted time, I would reply that, firstly,
These things were communicated to Pacadémie
of Inscriptions and Belles-Lettres (2); that afterwards, since this concerns character and abilities sociological studies of the Semites, he wasn't bad to exhibit this remarkable sample, at one of them, with a fierce stubbornness combined with a faith almost "Punic".

As for the question of which race
these pre-semi- tribes definitely belonged to, to which not only Babylonia and Assyria, but the whole of Inner Asia
They owe their civilization, it does not seem clear-cut.
I would be inclined to find there a mixture of popula-Turanian and Libyan (Hamites, (Kouschites of the authors) analogous to the one that must have to exist in Egypt. Despite the nonsense spouted recently on so-called Monotheism and the the "pure and elevated" character of the Egyptian religion

(1) J. Halévy, *Mélanges de critique et d'histoire relatifs aux
Semitic peoples*, 1883, p. 405 sq

(2) Session of July 12, 1882.

THE SEMITICS 411

tienne (1), this one seems to me to be nothing more than a Polydeperfected monism, persistently, at a high degree, of primitive naturalism, manifested here in the worship of animals; magic is not for him either more foreign.

However, the religion of the Proto-Chaldeans (Akcadians) or Sumerians), with its 300 sky spirits and its 600 earthly spirits is, in its essence and in its origin, a type of the Schama-

a type of religion specific to the Turanians (2). A Alongside these, it is reasonable to assume that he has Libyan tribes existed from the beginning (3).

In any case, it is up to the race to stay civilizing, in the plains of Chaldea, that Babylonia owed its superiority over Assyria;
It is thanks to their more intimate interaction with her,
not, as Tiele claims, because of their less harsh climate and more fertile soil (4), that the Babylonian Semites, profoundly modified-

(1) See, for example, the lesson of Mr. Pierret, in discours
Opening of MAY. The Professors of the Louvre School. Paris,
1883. pp. 41-59. |

(2) See F. Lenormant, Magic among the Chaldeans. Paris, in-8° 1874, - Maspero, Ancient History of the Peoples of l'Orrent, 3rd ed. p. 139, sq. 1873.

(3) See at the Louvre Museum, the very curious collection-
t on d'antiquités chaldéans due to M de Sarzec.

(&) Tiele, Manual of history. of Religions, p. 112,

112 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

trusted by the crossroads, they so greatly surpassed their neighbors in terms of general culture, of the gentleness and refinement of manners. "The
The Babylonians, a mixed race, were farmers and friends.
Letters and, in general, the arts of peace.
Assyrians, those pure Semites - that's Mr. Sayce
he himself who proclaims it, - were on the contrary
a nation of soldiers, caring only about war and trade. Their literature, their civilization, their arts, everything was borrowed by them from the Babylonie, and yet they never took much interest in it.
Even under the magnificent patronage of Ashurbani-
The literature was "exotic". The small number he alone took care of it, while in Babylonia the most a large part of the population seems to have been capable of reading and writing. If the Assyrian was less more voluptuous than his neighbor in Babylon, he was less humane, too. In truth, the annals Assyrian women glorify atrocities, the account of which was not as superstitious as the Babylonian, although he attributed all his successes to God Assour, and hastened to impale the inhabitants of cities taken or to burn them alive, because those—"They did not believe in his national divinity (1)." To massacre people and burn them alive because

(1) Sayce, Assyria, they princes, priests and people (B\--paths of Bible Knowledge). London, in-18, p. 24. 1885.

THE SEMITICS 113

that they do not believe in your "national deity", That's quite Semitic and complex. MJ Halévy can be satisfied; this trait is sufficient to characterize—to subdue the Assyrians and classify them among its fellow creatures; only civilization and the arts As we have seen, they come from Proto-Chaldeans of Babylonia.

Essentially Semites as well, and very Semites pure, appear the Phoenicians, who could not to mislead about their identity only because countless loans made by them to neighboring civilizations. The Bible also contributed to mislead the orthodox, even the consequent researchers—meticulous like A. Lenormant, while tidying "Kanaan" among the sons of Ham, Kanaan, the cursed, destined to become "the servant of the servants—"the parents of his brothers." The reason for this is Yet it's quite simple: the author of chapter 1X of Genesis, destined for general execration and stigmatized as a race of slaves, these Kananites, these inhabitants of the "promised land" constantly at war with the Israelites who, having come The last ones took centuries to exterminate them or to subdue them. This constant enmity that one wanted to invoke it as proof of the non Racial identity obviously has no value in this point of view. "These hatreds between brothers," he said very Well, Mr. Renan, they have nowhere been stronger that in the Jewish race, the most contemptuous and the more aristocratic of all. Much later, and fraternity with the Samaritans, and to treat them with disdain.

1414 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

gneusement de Cuthéens, this less pure branch,
less noble, it is true, of the Israelite family (1)?

The land of Kanaan (exactly Kanaan (2), (which can mean "Netherlands"), including,
at its greatest extent, between the sea and the desert, on the one hand, and Aram or Syria proper said and the Sinai peninsula on the other, gave asylum actually with three branches of the same Family: the Phoenicians, settled on the coast
between the Carmel and the mouth of the Eleutherus;
the early Kananites of the interior, Jebuzeans, Hivites, Amorites, etc.; finally the Terahites(3), including – besides the Edomites, the Moabites and the Ammonites–the privileged people, the cherished children of the God of armies, the Beni-Israel or Israelites.
Now, all these peoples spoke Hebrew. This point has

(1) Renan, loc. cit. p. 188. |

(2) Also called in the Old Testament, land of Hebrews (Gen. XI, 15) and the land of Israel (I. Samuel XIII, 19), after the Babylonian captivity, the land of Judah, from whence the
The name of Judea, used by Roman historians.
name of Palestine (from the Hebrew Peleschet, Philistia, land of the Philistines) was only used later by the Greeks, the Romans and Arabs (Filastunu) to designate all the country located between Lebanon and the Sinai Peninsula

(3) Descendants of Terach (the Thare of the translations).

THE SEMITICS | 415

has been put beyond dispute, at least as far as concerns the Moabites through the discovery of the ins-Description of Mesa (1). Isaiah, moreover, calls Hebrew is the "language of Canaan," and that's a fact.
recognized that the Israelites never experienced the less difficulty in understanding their neighbors.

As for the Phoenicians, they themselves... same name, Canaanites. This does not appear Hardly debatable, whatever MP Berger may think,
who absolutely wants to make them into Genesis Cushites, 'sons of Ham (2). Hecataeus of Miletus from the Greek Phoenike (3). They spoke a language Semitic, belonging to the northern group; In fact, Hebrew and Phoenician were merely dialects of the same language (4). Furthermore, the absence of any trace, among them, of a non-Semitic language that, does not allow for consideration of a substitution of language; it is absolutely necessary, despite the

(4) The stele of Mesha, king of Moab, now at Louvre, found at Dhiban east of the Dead Sea, was first mentioned in a letter from Mr. Clermont-Gauneau to M. de Vogué, in the Revue archéologique (vol. XXI, p. 384 sq.) in 1870.

(2) Art. Phoenicia, in the Encycl. of Religious Sciences. (Encycl.. Lichtenberger t. X.)

(3) Hecateus, fragment, 254.

(4) Cf. Nöldeke, Die Semitischen Sprachen. Leipzig, 18x6.

116 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

Genesis, by Mr. Lenormant and Mr. Renan, see among the Phoenicians, pure Semites.

He was deceived by appearances.

The major role played in the ancient world by the inhabitants of Tyre and Sidon, it seemed to him incompatible with the character proper, essentially negative of the Semites; he could not, on the other hand, reconciling Phoenician religion and mythology with monotheism and the "purified worship" of these last. The learned professor establishing between the Assyrian-Babylonians and the Phoenicians one an analogy that has no reason to exist, had no given that the role played by the latter is only one borrowing role (1). He didn't know either, – and This was generally unknown in 1855 – that if the Monotheism is truly the essence and the the point of arrival of the Semitic religions, these religions have nonetheless begun, like the others, through Naturalism and Pandemonism. If the Phoenicians, like the Assyrians, did not have Having barely gone beyond this starting point, it is only because time was short, as we will be demonstrated later.

Therefore, there is no link between race and language.

GRR em

(1) Renan, loc. cit. p. 183. He had, however, glimpsed the Done, but without dwelling on it and without drawing the consequences: "The Phoenicians," he very rightly said a few pages later higher up, there are generally only the brokers of a civilization which has its center in Babylon." (bid. p. 115).

'THE SEMITICS 117

Phoenicians, on the one hand, and their civilization of the other, this antinomy that Mr. Renan considered, Until further notice, it is considered insoluble. It is a It is now recognized that these Kananeans, that these merchants (1) did not invent – glass which they took from Egypt – neither the embroidery nor the purple, which came from Babylon – neither the weights and measures, conceived in the same country (2), nor even the alphabet, borrowed by them from cursive writing in use among the Egyptians (3)..

However, they have more completely isolated the meaning of ideograms and syllables properly (4) they simplified Egyptian writing in order to make keeping their accounts easier, – the only kind of "literature" they were given never known. The service rendered here consisted of everything to appropriate a discovery due to strangers Gers and to peddle it. That's all we can what to expect from this variety of the human species which belongs to Shylock; but still, it

(1) The two inots had become synonymous in Hebrew (Hosea, XII, 8, Ezekiel, XVII, +).

(2) Movers, art. Phônizien, in Ersch und Gruber Encyclop. Section. III. Tom. 24, p. 386 sq.

(3) De Rougé, Memoir on the Egyptian origin of the Alphabet Phoenician. 1874.

(4) If indeed it is them, because there are still doubts.

See. Profes, A. von Gutschmidt, art. Phœnicia, in Encycl. Britan. tom. X VIII. 1885.

M8 ARYANS AND SEMITHS

It's simply a matter of not ignoring the fact. We mustn't exaggerate the point of view, nor imagine, when one speaks of the negative characteristics of the Semites, that they have played no role apart from religion in the world. The Phoenicians specifically carried out, before the Jews, the two great apti-sociological studies of race, represented through adaptability and the genius of communication trade and exploitation – I mean exploitation The human race. Active and enterprising, eyes always fixed on a practical goal, dearsing their good by all means, without in- to consider the effects of their actions on happiness from the others, they took advantage with an undeniable- table skill and unwavering perseverance the discoveries of neighboring peoples. It has been said and repeated that they had become navigators and traders citizens in their capacity as residents, like the Jews They would have become usurers out of necessity. These are the banalities, with no other basis than negligence a group of writers who copy each other others and the statements of those involved. As if there had been a shortage of "residents" on the coasts of Asia Minor and Greece, and the islands of the Aegean Sea, without these having become Never pirates like the Phoenicians! The The truth is that among these people of Tyre and Sidon,– "It was in their blood"; they scoured the seas in antiquity, like their cousins, the Jews, have

THE SEMITICS 119

Since then, he has scoured the continents. Wine and honey, the Styra and the balm of Gilead, dates, spices, cotton, linen, gold, silver, tin, slaves, – all materials and all countries were included to the contribution of these enraged merchants, that the lure of profit led beyond the columns of their Hercules, on the coasts of Africa and on those from Spain and the British Isles, and as far as the ultima Thule. And what a good time for the "af- to do," when we went to Baetica, in found such rich silver mines, where the "natu-

"rels" had no idea of the value of metals and where there was no competition! If Although, upon their return from Spain, one often saw,
According to the story, the Phoenician ships ren-to enter the port with silver anchors (1). And this Easy trade was not enough for them; these mar-Chands were also thieves and they never missed the opportunity, upon landing on some secluded beach, to remove the herds
and even the inhabitants, especially the young people,
when they could do so safely.

In their work on "the history of art in antiquity," Messrs. Perrot and Chipiez, while recognizing-thus emerging the nullity of the Phoenicians, apart from their acting as peddlers, they complain that they are not given the role of peddlers.

(1) Divdor. Sicul. V. 35.

120 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

does not do justice, and they add: "It is also a
It is largely their fault if, even today, we have It's so difficult to react against these prejudices.
to recognize the rights they have to respect and to Humanity's gratitude meme. They never had neither the passion for truth nor that for beauty; the only one that "If you know them, it's the passion for winning (1)!"

In truth, gentlemen! And this repulsion is too much justified by the Aryan world for these merchants, and for these thieves, for these Jews of the sea, you the Call it prejudice! It is so true that this infiltration-
The incessant spread of Semitism corrupts everywhere.
by distorting them, the simplest notions of morality and justice. Besides the fact that we have greatly exa-managed the indirect services provided by these Kana-Neens, we don't really see what respect or what They have the right to demand gratitude from us. Everything at most one could grant them the alms of Virgil's words to Dante about the angels who do not were neither faithful nor rebels "ma per se foro" -
but which were for them:

Misericordia and Giustizia gli sdegna;
Non ragionam di lor, ma guarda e passa.

Let's not talk about them, but look and move on (2)!

(1) Perrot and Chipiez, History of Art in France.
III. 1885, 1869.

(2) Dante. Inferno. cant. IIT. v. 50-51.

THE SEMITICS 121

The same can be said of the Arabs, who dazzled the world at a given moment, by a civilization borrowing These northern Semites compete with the people of Israel in relation to "this extreme selfishness and this exclusionary preoccupation self-confidence which forms the basis of character Semitic (1)." And as for their role in the evolution- In terms of general knowledge, it has, in reality, also been as little personal as possible, despite their renown- Myth is so surprisingly overrated. For centuries We admire the Arabs for their work and their scientific discoveries like those of the Ancients they admired the Phoenicians with confidence for "their inventions. Now, firstly, with regard to the so-called "Arab philosophers," I reported Above, Lassen's opinion and that of the author of Averroes and Averroism, of which we do not suspect- He will not have the skill. And not only will he not This is nothing other than philosophy. Greek, presented in a Semitic language, but most of these commentators are not Not even of Arab origin (2). It's absolutely as with "Arabic numerals" and the Thousand and a Nights of "Arab Tales", the first having

(1) Renan, loc. cit. p. 306.

(2) Al-Farabi, Ibn Sina, Al-ghazali were. from Khorasan, from Bokhara and the provinces located on the border northeastern Persia.

199 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

the elements borrowed from the Aryans of India, the second old book of tales composed by the Aryans of Persia (1).

As for matters concerning the mathematical sciences—that, they were founded and constituted in their essential principles according to the Aryans of Greece, and the Arabs did nothing but march with difficulty following in the footsteps of Archimedes and Diophantus (2). That would leave "Arab architecture." However, it is not in doubt today, for people com-brilliant, that art to which we owe the minarets from Cairo, the Alhambra in Spain and the houses that of Algiers is not entirely based on that of Byzantium and Persia (3). "To understand

(1) Von Hammer reproduced this valuable testimony from a 10th-century author: "The first who composed The Persians told stories and turned them into books. tales were amplified and augmented during the time of the Sassanides. The Arabs also translated them into their language; Some of them embellished them and composed others on the same model. The first book of this genre was the book called Hezsar afsan, which means "the "A thousand stories." See the article in the Edinburgh Review, in issue no. from July 1880.

(2) Algebra, as I mentioned earlier, does not give them must be his name.

(8) Prof. T. Lewis and C. Street, in Encyclop. Brit. (art. Archilerture). tom. IT. 1875.

THE SEMITICS 123

the history of Muslim art, Fergus said very well—its, it is important never to forget that, if the impul—The first Zion came from Arabia; it is not a reason for attributing to these primitive populations the evolution of the facts subsequently produced; at On the contrary, conquered countries were never seriously depopulated areas; there were never any great racial substitutions. All of this is especially evident—tooth for architecture. The Arabs, by them—same, never had architecture, to pro—speak first. Their only temple is the Kaaba From Mecca, a small square tower, without any its sacred character as well as for its artistic merits ticks (1).»

I think I have reduced the pre-scientific and artistic intentions of the Semites and having demonstrated, with evidence in hand, the character essentially negative aspects of their entire civilization

(1) Fergusson, History of architecture in all countries. London: 1867. vol. II. p. 371.

The eminent, and too little known, man who was my pro-history teacher at the Lycée Charlemagne, L. Toussenel, while praising the Arabs to the highest degree, cannot to refrain from proclaiming it: "What we call civilization—the Arabs' sation was less their work in fact than that peoples subjugated and rejuvenated by them, inhabitants of Roman, Greek, and Persian provinces." (L. Toussenel, History of Europe, Third Grade; Paris, Delagrave.)

194 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

"Second-hand." I'm not talking about Jews in particular, their invalidity in this respect being beyond any dispute (1). Despite the large volume entitled Judea (and according to its own data) that Messrs. Perrot and Chipiez only published in red-health and profuse apologies – a volume which dishonors, as they rightly sensed, a work interesting – "Hebrew art" remains a mystification. The last word on the matter was said again by Mr. Renan, – the Renan of the good days, – in his beautiful book about his mission in Phoenicia (3):

"Palestine bears the brunt of the main flaw" of the Jewish spirit, I mean of its lack of taste for the visual arts. Two thousand years after inter-valley, the lands once inhabited by the races Artistic works still benefit from their past. It is necessary months to get to know Rome or Athens; in "Jerusalem was exhausted in just a few days."

(1) Nor am I speaking of the Hittites, of whom we have made... There's been a lot of noise lately. Besides the fact that it's not

It remains a given that the civilization of the Empire, which had its formerly based in Kadesh and Carkemish, was derived from that of Babylonia. (See Sayce, Herodotus etc. p.429 sp.)

(2) Perrot and Chipiez, loc. cit. tom. IV. p. 125 sq.

(3) Mission to Phoenicia, 1 vol. in-4° 1864. p. 785.

THE RELIGION OF THE SEMITICS 425

CHAPTER IV:

THE RELIGION OF THE SEMITICS

The "unknown god." -- Monotheism, a religious form characteristic of the Semitic race. – Monotheism and Deism. – The religion of the Semites complicated by that of the Akcadians or Proto-Chaldeans. – Shamanism or Acadian polydemonism.– Ea, Moul-lil and Ana.– Bel, Semitic deity, sun god of Babylon. – Adar, God of Nippur, and Samas, god of Sippra. – The god Assur, worthy precursor of Yahweh, – Origin acc-dynasty of the Semitic goddess. – Ishtar and Tammuz; Venus and Adonis. – Predominant role of the goddess Ishtar. – Her transformation, by the Semites, into a goddess of fornication. – Direct passage from Animism to Monotheism, an effect of the intellectual inferiority of the Semitic race.– M. Kenan and Gustave Tridon.–Astarte "Name of Baal." – The Monotheism of the Phoenicians, Syrians and Arabs,

#

The author of the Acts of the Apostles recounts that "Saint Paul," having arrived in Athens, went to the Areopagus, where he spoke thus: "You are indeed the [most religious of men, to citizens of Athens] Because by coming here and looking at your sacred objects I found an altar with this inscription: To God unknown. Now, this God whom you honor without the "To know, I come to reveal it to you" (1).

(1) Acts XVIII, 23.

The descendants of Pericles and Phidias did They certainly did not know the God of Moses and of Jesus. In the broad spirit of tolerance and universal benevolence that distinguished them, them for whom religion had been only one aspect patriotism and one of the forms of the spirit of family, they had erected altars to all the gods known and unknown {1}, anxious not to to offend no sect in its beliefs or its superstitions. But what would their superstitions have been like?
their grip and their indignation, if they could have foreseen that on one of these altars would one day stand, at the
the voice of a Jew, the fierce idol of the Semites, the God of Monotheism, that is to say of fanaticism and of intolerance, the future destroyer of all glories and all the conquests achieved,
of Aryan civilization |!

For it is decidedly the Semitic race which established Monotheism throughout the world.
Demonstrating this fact would have been easy a few years ago.
that thirty years, in the wake of the appearance of Mr. Renan's excellent work on the subject; I
I would only have had to summarize them, even if it meant making corrections.
certain details, taking advantage of the latest discoveries. Unfortunately, the author of the history-
The history of Semitic languages has ceased to be as firm on this ground of racial distinction, which

(1) See Renan, Saint Paul, pp. 173, 174,

THE RELIGION OF THE SEMITICS 127

provided him with the most solid point of support – ground on which I myself established myself in the preceding pages, further fortified by the con-
the most recent quests in science. On the other hand, adversaries from the most opposing camps
These came in the name of Revelation {1}, those in the name of Free Thought (21, to fight
the doctrine whose indeundeniable reality. For both sides.
The Hebrews were as "pagan" as possible.
and it is up to individuals, whether supposed or not, to direct communication with the divinity, which it is necessary-would attribute the development of the cult of a One God.

I intend to establish that Monotheism, far from to be the product of daydreams or of cunning some, developed spontaneously in a particular breed, which then inoculated it with others. I explained earlier how this form religion seemed to me, in reality, far inferior – with regard to the progress and interests of humanity – to anthropomorphic polytheism of the Aryans (3), and I have risen up against the opinion

(1) Max Müller, Der Semitische Monothéismus, in Essays, Volume I, 2nd edition. Leipzig, 1876.

(2) E. Ferrière. The Paganism of the Hebrews up to the Captivity-City of Babylon, 1884.

(3) See chapter II.

198 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

so unfortunately widespread, who considers, at this From the same point of view, Monotheism as a higher and subsequent religious phase Polytheism. First of all, let us be clear, to stop confusing the history of religions are linked to philosophy. deals with problems of thought and con- birth in what they have that is most arduous; although Breed traits play a role here, the principal- pal, however, belongs to individuals, and these high questions have always remained the property exclusive to sages and researchers. The Raeli- gions, on the contrary, evolve in the spirit of the masses: they are truly the defining characteristic of the the entire race, and rightly so, that one speaks of their natural history, an expression which would be much less suitable for the study of theo- philosophical questions. No doubt, I regret to with all my strength the detestable influence exerted by spiritualist doctrines; no doubt the” The reveries of the deists have corrupted some good spirits, trained and lost in the labyrinth of metaphysics, where no Ariadne's thread allows one to to find each other again. But, I ask, which path would ever have conceived in the world the theory of God One with the chimera of Immortality, outside of the Mortality of the soul?

I am very sorry to find myself in contradiction

THE RELIGION OF THE SEMITICS 129

with such a distinguished thinker as Mr. Ernest Havet (1); but these reveries of Spiritualism have only ever given birth to the so-called "Natural religion" – essentially, the most artificial-cie of the world – and which, if it has had unfortunate- sement for Levite the Savoyard Vicar and Robes- Pierre, for the High Priest, hardly counts anymore today there are no other members besides Mr. Jules Simon. Let us therefore no longer mix facts of such a distinct nature. and let's avoid complicating things with the introduction displaced from metaphysical doctrines, history already so confused about religions (2).

(1) "Monotheism is a philosophical idea, which only became a religious belief at the time when the philosophy has entered into religion, that is to say, into the Christian era. » Ernest Havet. Christianity and its (Origins, vol. III, p. 11.) But no! Monotheism is a The religion is Deism, which is a philosophical idea. distinction, which may seem trivial at first glance, is capital, on the contrary, from the point of view of religious science- gieuse.

(2) Cf. Renan: "Let us add that an abyss separates the mono- Semitic theism of philosophical deism. Deism has "never succeeded in establishing a lasting cult among the people." (New considerations on the general character of peoples Semitic cultures and in particular their legacy to Monotheism (Journal Asiatique, 1859; 5th series, vol. XIII, p. 221.) I do not I didn't know this passage when I wrote the pages that preceding; I declare it, in turn, in all sincerity, and much less to boast about the encounter, although honorable, only to show the concordance of

1430 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

Once this distinction is established, it appears clearly that Monotheism has never developed as a natural phase of evolution- religious tion, subsequent to Polytheism (2). The establishment of the cult of the One God in the world whose victory was aided by an unfortunate confluence of circumstances; and even this cult would have—it was unable to perpetuate itself among the Aryans in its Jewish simplicity; it required, in addition to the Virgin and the Saints, —the Father, the Son and the Holy-Spirit.

On the other hand, it is not a question of denying the great law of Evolution and to contest its reality in this points of view, thirty years later and after reading the most important and recent works on the material. I would add that Mr. Renan, in his History of the People of Israel (vol. I, p. 59), saw fit to contradict himself again, and more inappropriately than ever: "A kind of deism "Without metaphysics," he said, "that's what the fathers of..." Judaism and Islam inaugurated, from that early age (that of the patriarchs) with a sound and sure instinct. This God, formed by the fusion of nameless gods, will become I The absolute God who loves good and hates evil, the God who "One serves through honesty of heart." This is the absolute negation. Having read the previous thesis — which I now take up again for my account.

(2) There has not been, as Mr. Renan very rightly said, a single example of a polytheistic nation that arose from it—even to Monotheism. (cited memoir, p. 419) which concerns the development of what Mr. de Hartmann calls the "religious conscience of the "Humankind." Certainly, Monotheism does not did not appear immediately among the primitive Semites hairs: but it was in germ, in potential within their brain, and then the essential phases of Naturalism, Shamanism and a Poly—poorly defined demonism, having nothing in common With Polytheism, it appeared — when the There was no shortage of time, — as the term inevitable and the flourishing of their reli— evolution gious.

THE RELIGION OF THE SEMITICS 131

According to the method used previously, this is not not only among the Jews, but among all their conspecifics, that this evolution will be studied, But first, there's one point to clarify: I

Proto-Chaldeans, which appeared first in the lower basin of the Euphrates and Tigris, where The Semites came to settle later in the middle of instead of them: some – like the Assyrians – to settle there permanently; the others, –as the Hebrews, the Phaeacians, and the Arameans – to move away from it after a more or less contact prolonged.

Mr. Renan, in his early works, had clearly foresaw the possibility of an influence being exerted on the religious evolution of the Semites, by a race established before them in Lower Chaldea; race on which, at that time, we had not yet that the information was quite incomplete. Today – now that the facts are better known, and that one can even go and contemplate, at the museum of Louvre, samples of these Accadians, contemporary, it seems, of the 4th Egyptian dynasty yours; when, moreover, the reading of the inscriptions cuneiform confirmed, by complementing them, the already so precious accounts from Berossus and Philo of Byblos, and that finally the materials are accumulated, – 'the illustrious scholar evades the question and gives us in his latest book, about the ancient influence Babylonian, a chapter which does not constitute, for the researcher, that a bitter and complete disappointment. These are certainly not the difficulties, although enormous, which blocked his path; it's the astonishing theory according to which he considers today the Semite, the nomad, the Bedouin, like the receiver, so to speak, of Monotheism – me in the most remote and almost pre-historical. – Also, the sedentary Semites They matter little; at least one cannot explain otherwise the straightforward way in which he treats their history.

132 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

It is certain, however, that the Hebrews and the The Phoenicians took something else from the Babylonians that their cosmogony: their religious evolution does not can be understood without prior knowledge in-depth study of the theological system of the latter.

However, as we saw earlier, religion
 The Akadians, or Proto-Chaldeans, is a type of Shamanism, or better yet, of Polydemonics characteristic of the Turanians. In times terrifyingly remote – at least 4,090 years (2)
 before the common era – where these first inhabitants
 Those known from Chaldea were the only ones occupying the country.
 before the invasion of the nomadic Semites, they worshipped
 the spirits they considered to be animating all things in heaven and on earth. There are had everywhere. There were no priests in the
 The word means what it is, but only for sorcerers.
 or magicians with the power to exorcise these spirits. The institution of these exorcists constitutes Strictly speaking, the point of transition of the ani-

(1) History of the People of Israel, 1887. Vol. I, p. 64.

(2) A recently deciphered inscription dating from The reign of Nabonidus, the last king of Babylon, recounts the discovery of the "first stone" of the temple of the god solar of Sippara, raised by Naram-Sin, successor of Sargon of Agadhe, a stone that had not been seen by his predecessors for 3,200 years, or 3,750 years before our era. Furthermore, the comparative study of dynasty lists on the cylinders and tablets, that of the curious statues discovered green at Tell-loh, in southern Chaldea by M. de Sarzec, leave little room for doubt that it is necessary to postpone the reign of Sargon by some six thousand years, that is-that is to say, the definitive establishment of Semitic domination in Babylonia. (See E. de Sarzec, Discoveries in Chaldea, folio. 1887.

134 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

simple miasm to Shamanism proper;
 spirits can therefore isolate themselves from the bodies they animate or natural phenomena to which they president and thus enjoy a separate existence.
 They are not gods, however; their power is too limited since that of man can to control: they are geniuses, demons (hence Polydemonism), if you will, but taking this word in the general Greek sense, not in the one of the evil spirit that is usually attached to it.
 Naturally, geniuses, "Zi" types like to take on importance in the eyes of others considerable, but, remarkably, it's the water, the sea, or more precisely "the abyss of the waters" which plays a key role among the Proto-Chaldeans. Thus, precursors of Thales. Did this come from the Eridou's situation – then on the Persian Gulf and almost surrounded by the Euphrates – mentioned in which region did the cult of the water spirits develop? Nevertheless, this "Zi" was adored from the very beginning. high times and in a very special way by the inhabitants of this city. Known as Ea, we see him successively described as a "spirit" of the railway and the rivers", of "king of the abyss of waters" and "king of the river of the great serpent" (1).

(4) WAI 11, 56, 17. I use here the usual abbreviation by English scholars to designate the great work

THE RELIGION OF THE SEMITICS 435

The "great serpent" was in a way the Ocean, which was thought to surround the earth and who was identified with Innina or Nana – the lady, considered to be the daughter of Ea, with whom she He was somewhat confused. That's what one might notice. well, was the same as that Oannes or pea-god the sound that Berosus speaks of and which came from the sea to teach men the sciences and the arts; he was therefore also the god of wisdom (2). "His daughter Innina was represented by an ideogram that brought her from the abode of the god-fish, although she herself was one of the reptiles that swarmed in the marshes at the mouth of the Euphrates. That is how the serpent was tied to the god of wisdom, the serpent, "more cunning" than no beast of the field"... No doubt, the god The serpent of the primitive Sumerians did not, to the point From a moral point of view, it has a completely negative character: if it he punished his enemies, he was favorable to his teenagers fail. But very quickly, the goddess Innina lost its reptilian attributes," and even vanished as-completely, while the serpent became what it begun under the direction of Sir Henry Rawlinson and published by the trustees of the British Museum, a work intended to reproduce the text of cuneiform inscriptions found in Western Asia. The cuneiform inscriptions

1866.)

(2) Bérose. Fragment 1, Lenormant edition.

130 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

seems to have always been an element among the Semites, incarnation of evil and perversity (1).

If the Sumerians of Eridou honored principal-Ea, the great spirit of the fertile waters (2) from where the universe had come – in the North, among the Akkadians of Nipour, Moul-lil (3) the lord of The world of shadows was preferred. There The belief in evil spirits is the most dominant. the lower regions and that whole magic system and magicians who left such a profound mark on imprinted the religion of the early Babylonians.

(4) AH Sarvce, Lectures on the origin and growth of Religion as illustrated by the religion of the ancient Babylonians. London, 1887, p. 282. I will have more than one occasion to cite this important work by the eminent Assyriologue. Mr. Sayce, tasked with conducting the conferences in 18%7 well known in London as the Hibbert Lectures, in took the opportunity to give us the complete picture of the most recent discoveries in Assyriology. His book was of great help in the writing of this chapter. This subject of the primitive religion of Chaldecem is so obscure and so complicated that Mr. Sayce – he himself – declares – would have given up on treating it if he had known about it all the difficulties before being bound by a promise. I will cite it under the abbreviation Babyl. Relig. (Babylonian religion).

(2) Professor Tiele, in a recent memorandum: From Beiekenis van Ea en zijn Verouding tot Maruduk en Nabu a tried to show that Ea is originally linked to fire.

(3) Formerly read "Moulgé".

THE RELIGION OF THE SEMITICS 137

Finally, the local god of Erech was Ana, the sky, but the visible and material sky – or at least con-

throughout Chaldea, his cult having spread more easily than that of Ea and Moul-lil, and that, It seems, for a reason that is easy to grasp, the conception of the spirit of heaven being, so to speak, a common heritage, a much easier idea to realize than that of a "Zi" from the abyss of the waters or the world of shadows. The importance of Erech must also have contributed to this result.

In any case, these three main minds, Ea, Moul-lil and Ana never appear in these high periods, as constituting one of these triads or trinities, as later writers, Damascius in particular, seem to have shaped – partly imagined–according to the documents of the time perhaps, but certainly in the putting in unison with their own digressions on the One, Being and non-Being (4). Other Mr. Sayce – whose book contains so much pre-heavenly information – seems to me to have good-

(1) See Doules and solutions on first principles text Greek, edited by J. Kopp, Frankfurti ad M. 1826, chap. 124 and 125, p. 384 sq. It is really strange to see most writers on the subject, reproduced like documentaries serious matters, reveries on Chaldean cosmogonies ennes, edited by this Neo-Platonist philosopher of the 5th century fifth century AD.

438 __ ARYANS AND SEMITIS

too much emphasis was placed on the local character of these. Proto-Chaldean "Gods." Although the cult of one of them may have predominated in certain cities, it seems to me no less certain than the a more exclusively local character belongs to sur-all to the Semitic deities, because of the a particular mindset among their worshippers. The religious influence of these newcomers is marked for the first time by the substitution from Bel to Moul-lil, and this at a certain time–inferior to Sargon, that is to say more than four thousand years before our era. It was around this time It was at this time that the bands of Semites appeared. nomads, who far from transporting goods with their tents the worship of the One God, of this "El" of the "puritans" Mr. Renan's, are still in this form of Animism, which was formerly referred to as...

the name of Sabaeanism. This is by no means about this learned and much later astrology, in by virtue of which the spirits of Polydemonics The Akkadians were identified with different planets. The Bel in question – in Kananite, Baal, that is- . that is to say "the master", a Semitic import into the Chaldea is a solar god only insofar as he represents force, power as it reveals itself primarily to nomadic populations through the presence of the king of the stars. If this power appears especially in Babylon, in its aspect beneficial, this is due to the influence of ideas that... diennes, which are essential at the beginning. She will become _ later both good and bad, beneficial and terrible, as the Semites, by isolating themselves, will increasingly enter into the reality of the con-religious concepts specific to them. If Bel is also the "bull of light", it is still an Akkadian idea that prevails here; I insist on this fact, because it is in this line of thinking and not in Semitism – no more than in Egypt – that it We need to find out the origin of this bull and of these "bull horns" that we see appear if often as a symbol of the terrible God One of the Phoenicians and Hebrews, that he shows himself under the name of Baal, Yahweh, or Moloch. Only the The sedentary colonist, and not the nomad, could com-to adorn the celestial plain with the fertile fields of the Chaldea and see in the Sun-God the "Bull" of light tracing its dazzling path across the heavens furrow (1) Later, this beautiful old style fell into disuse. overshadowed by the junior Bel or Bel-Merodach (2), who became the deity of Babylon itself. It doesn't matter.

THE RELIGION OF THE SEMITICS 439

(4) Bel-Merodach is named in astro- literature primitive nomical "Goudi-Bir", the bull of light. Sayce, Babyl. religion, p. 290 and Ibid, p. 48, 397.

(2) Merodach may have been an Akkadian deity (Sayce, loc. cit. p. 105).

that the Chaldean astronomers and astrologers identify it in the following with the planet Jupiter(1); Bel remained essentially the sun god and the The quintessential patron saint of Babylon. It is in this capacity that, to bring him up to the level of Ea, the demiurge Eridou was also made into a demiurge who, in because of Babylon's very importance, it came about to play a pivotal role in the cosmogonies of time.

At the cost of Bel-Merodach, it must be noted that another solar deity, but having a character quite different. Adar, honored in Nippur, is the sun harmful scorching heat; to him should be referred Lera later, in a way, the terrible side of the cult of Baal (2).

I've followed this far, with too much speed Large, no doubt, but inevitable in this species, the evolution of this beautiful thing, whose location in the middle the "geniuses" of Soumir and Accad, brand

(1) Baudissin, lahve and Moloch. Lipsiae, 1874, p. 20 sq., and E. Schrader, Stud. and Kril, p. 32 and 19. 1874.

(2) Cf. Baudassin, lahve, etc., p. 21. "Adar," says this author, has the same astrological rank as Bel in the list of Assvrian gods and the bull is its symbol, likewise that bull horns are the symbol of Bel." Iden- Later combined with the planet Saturn, and consequently with Kronos by the Greeks, he often takes the name of Malilk (in Assyrian Moloch, meaning the King). We will have Let's return to this interesting point.

THE RELIGION OF THE SEMITICS 141

the emergence of Semitism in Chaldea. It is necessary to... now returning to some of these minds main ones, whose trace will be found in the Semitic religion, so frighteningly complicated through this mixture.

Special mention must be made of the spirit or God of the Moon, worshipped especially in Our (1), the homeland of the legendary Abraham. He was known there, under the Nannar's name and, according to the official religion of or sun god. So it was indeed, in the spring-acipe, an Akkadian deity, such a descent-dance being a formal opposition to worship of Baal among the Semites, who consider the god of the sun as the supreme lord, and the moon,

at most like its reflection. But the name prithe myth of the lunar deity was later changed into that of Sin, a term probably of Semitic origin, according to Mr. Sayce. This word was found in a inscription of southern Arabia, and Sinai itself-even the sacred mountain would only be the sanctuary "dedicated to Sin" {[2]}.

(1) Ur, which I write Our, because of the special way which we pronounce. The vowel, in almost all languages, has the sound of or.

(2) Sayce. Babyl. relig. p. 155 sq. and 164. The author makes Note that Abraham, according to Genesis, emigrated from Our in Harran, a city in northern Mesopotamia, also-dedicated to the worship of the Moon God.

142 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

A sun spirit was particularly worshipped.
in Larsa from pre-Semitic times, another at Sippara. We don't care which of the two were sons of the moon; the fact is that the god of Larsa was quickly eclipsed by that of Sippara (1), a city founded by the Proto-Chaldeans.
but which was the original seat of supremacy Semitic in the country. It is in its vicinity that Sargon had the city of Agadhé built or restored (Accadhu, in Semitic texts), hence the
the northern part of Babylonia took the name Accad. The Zi of the sun then became, under the Semitic name of Samas (or Samson), the god
Sun whose cult grew with the empire of Sar-
gon. "Both, the cult and the Empire," he said
Mr. Sayce, were also Semitic; everywhere where the Semites settled, the Sun God was adored in one form or another" (2).

That is precisely the truth, and Mr. Baudassin has It's a mistake to torment oneself trying to understand and explain how Samas can reconcile with Beautiful and how the first is the solar globe

(4) There were two Sippara, quite close to each other. In the Old Testament, the name of the city always appears in dual – Sepharvaim.

(2) Babyl. relig. p. 170.

(3) Loc. cit., p. 17.

THE RELIGION OF THE SEMITICS 143

Samas is the solar god of Sippara, like Bel-Merodach is the sun god of Babylon, as Adar is the sun god of Nippur. Multiplicity of names even seem to originate from here, in part. the number and variety of the Accadian deities.

This tendency to worship a single god and local or national, – we even see it to be done here, not in Babylonia, it is true, but among the Assyrians proper, population much less mixed and almost exclusively Semitically. Undoubtedly, we find in them the Chaldean Pantheon. "But above," he said Mr. Sayce, in a page too remarkable for not to be quoted in its entirety – above this In the Pantheon, the figure of a new God is erected. of the personified national deity of Assyria in Assur. Assur is not a primus inter pares to prepare, the president, like Merodach, for a court of gods, he is their lord and master in a completely different and more autocratic direction. Like the Yahweh of Israel, he is the "king of the gods" and no cannot be compared to him. In his name and with his With help, the Assyrian kings march to victory; the cities they burn, the people they massacre, the prisoners they take – all of that belongs to him that they owe it. It's to exterminate the enemies of Assur and to subdue those who do not believe not in him, that they carry their country's weapons in country: it is its decrees and laws that they enshrine on the monuments erected by them among the invoked, it is true: they are granted their former titles, but it is Assur alone that the monarch Assyrian invokes in times of distress, it is in the name of Assur and Assur alone that he subjugates the infidels. He still resembles, under another From the point of view of the Yahweh of Israel; there is no goddess at his side. If someone called Bilat or Beltis is invoked as his wife, she is a simple literary formula; nothing indicates that Assur had a "face" or a "reflection," and when a divinity The feminine appears; it is the independent goddess. Ishtar or Ashtoreth. He is essentially a god jealous. Without a wife, without children, he is more powerful-less good than the Baalim of Babylon; perhaps less good. being, less close to its teenagers than These, but more formidable and more powerful. We can, in fact, find in him all the elements with which one could have, in other conditions for building a religion as well purer than that of the God of Israel (1).

144 ARYANS AND SEMITICS

Certainly, I am not the one who will dispute the real- the quality of this painting, drawn by a master's hand, and which highlights the characteristic facts of Monotheism. But the last trait, above all, is worth its weight in gold: omnipotence and despotism the most absolute ism, jealousy, cruelty, the constant terror and the extermination of the infants These are the elements with which we could have established a cult as pure as Yahweh's! That had always been the opinion emancipated thinkers, based moreover on the precise scientific data; the verdict lies confirmed now by the reasoned opinion of a scholar of the most orthodox.

(1) Babyl. religion. p. 122, 127, 129.

THE RELIGION OF THE SEMITICS 145

Assur, like Yahweh, we are told, has no goddess at his side: or at least, when he appears one, it is never anything but in a completely accessory. What, then, are these Astarte, that these Beltis and other female deities- nines that we see featured in the theology of Semitic peoples? Were they born in the course

As I believe, from a foreign import?
This is, for the doctrine I support, a point of extreme importance; because the presence of goddesses, existing as distinct personalities and revered as such in Semitic religion pure, would constitute the elements of a true polytheism, the existence of which I specifically deny autonomous among the peoples of this race.

Let's leave Arabia aside. When the nomads, ancestors of the future Assyrians, Canaanites and Others abandoned their deserts, to spread, over time, across the plains of the Chaldea, they were still in the period of Animism. Let's not talk about the three lunar goddesses of early Arabia (1): Amūat, the bright moon, Manat, the dark moon and Al Uzza the union of the two. The cult of that era did not it hardly rose, as Mr. Tiele himself acknowledges— even (2) above fetishism — or better of Animism. The Arabs worshipped in the same way. In a way, the stones, the mountains, the stars, the June in particular, in its various aspects, but without recognizing gods or goddesses distincts, in the real sense that we mean by these words. We do indeed find them among the Sabaeans, inhabitants of southern Arabia, the goddess Ishtar in its two forms (the male Athltar and the female Athlarel); but, as among the Hebrews and among the Phoenicians, it is here only an import of Chaldea (3).

146 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

However, in these fertile plains that are irrigated

(1) If we must refer to the theory generally accepted today and which, moreover, appears to be in compliance with the facts.

(2) Tiele, Manuel, etc., p. 94.

(3) Let us not forget, moreover, as the Tiele, that the Himyarite (or Sabaean) inscriptions that we know all belong to a relative date—

p. 115).

THE RELIGION OF THE SEMITICS 447

the Euphrates and the Tigris, the Akcadians possess Long before the arrival of the Semites, a Polyde-complicated monism, confining walls to the Poly-Theism. They have chief minds, almost gods, Ana, Ea, Moul-lil, etc.; they have goddesses, one in particular, Ishtar, destined to play a considerable role in the theology of Asia Minor exterior, from where it will then pass, transformed and regenerated, in Greece and in Rome. It is in effect at Eridou that we must go and find, in the most distant eras, the origin of this myth so charming, so closely linked to humanity and to nature, from which the Aryan spirit drew the fable of The love affair between Adonis and Venus. Adonis is a name of Semitic origin; it is the Adonai (1) of the Bible, the "Lord". But this name was applied utilitarianly-lauding at the sun god of Eridou, in Doumouzi, son of Ea (2), the spirit of the wet abyss, and of Davkina, the spirit of the earth; the Semites of Baby-They made Timmouz or Tammouz out of it; the character The solar deity is indicated by an ideogram-signifying to me the "Creator of fire" (Tim-izi) (3). All commentators agree on recognizing in Tammouz the spring sun whose dis-

(1) Exactly "Monsignor".

(2) Sayce. Babyl Relig. p. 232 ff.- WAI 11. 56, 33, 38 and 47, 29.

: (3) W. À I. 11. 55, 31.

148 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

The event plunges nature into mourning, and it is It is very remarkable that Macrobius was already able to discern-to start, from the fourth century AD, the origin of the myth. "There can be no doubt," he said, "that Adonis may the sun not be, after careful study of the religion of the Assyrians, among whom flourished currently held in honor among the Phoenicians (1).

This goddess, lover of Adonis, prototype to the times of Aphrodite, of Artemis of Ephesus, of Astarte, of Atargatis and, more generally, of the goddess Syrian, – it is indeed among the peoples from the Euphrates basin, where it originates, not among the Assyrians themselves, but among their Akkadian predecessors. This is the great deity that the Semitic scribes of Babylonia have made known under the north of Ishtar, – although the word itself bears the mark of its origin Non-Semitic (2). Ishtar is the lover or fiancée

(1) Macrob. Saturn, 1. 21.– Cf. Movers, Die Phoenizier, t. I, p. 207. Bonn. 13#1. After the rise of the 26th Dynasty, The cult of Adonis was complicated by the introduction of Phoenicia, from the Egyptian myth of Osiris. It was then that, in Because of the god's resurrection, rejoicing ensued. to end the celebration that began in mourning and in the lamentations.

(2) Sayce rightly points out that this name, although indicating a female deity, is devoid of Ja grammatical marker of the feminine, which we find in all the Semitic goddesses of an indisputable authenticity: Beht, Zarpanit, Tasmit, etc. (loc. cit. p. 252).

THE RELIGION OF THE SEMITICS 449

of Tammouz: she is also his mother, as can be seen from several texts, and to this title she is identified with Dav-Kina, the spirit of the earth, and with Tillili, the "primordial earth (1)". Tablets recounting the short epic tale of his descent into the lower regions, to rescue Tammouz, "the fiancé of his young-ness." The poet describes in very beautiful verses the the goddess's journey "towards the abode of the dark-bres, the seat of the god Irkalla, – towards the dwelling where one enters without being able to leave, – towards the a path that one does not cross twice, – towards the a dwelling whose inhabitants do not see the light, etc. (2). I cannot insist on this epi-so interesting from the point of view of mythology-Comparative gy. This legend does not appear to be, as Professor Tiele indicated that the painting at

(1) Babyl. relig., p. 251.

: (2) See. E. Schrader, Die Hollenfahrt der Istar, Giessen, 1874. This distinguished scholar declares that there is no longer any need
The question now arises: do the Semites have an epic poem?
or if they are likely to have one. But it doesn't seem
There is no doubt that the legend is of Akkadian origin;
Moreover, Mr. Schrader himself acknowledges that "the epic" the question arises from the encounter and mixing of Semites, along with the first inhabitants of Babylonia.
He doesn't find epic poetry – he himself creates it
note – neither among the Hebrews nor among the Arameans, nor among the Arabs.

10

150 Aryans and Semites

veiled pain of the earth goddess going dear.
dear, in the lower regions, the mysterious waters
the secrets of life, through which the god of sun, and all of nature with it, will awaken from sleep of death (1),

The original center of the cult of Ishtar was at Erech,
where it was originally known as "Nana" or "the lady, the mistress." But this
The cult spread rapidly and the goddess occupied still a considerable rank in the Pantheon Babylonian, in hymns and prayers, where She is invoked alongside all the gods.
truth, in none of the major religions an-
In ancient times, we don't see a female deity playing a role.
equally predominant role. This fact, on which I allows us to draw the attention of researchers, suffwould alone be enough to dismiss the idea of an origin Semitic. On the contrary, it is perfectly compatible with with the exceptional importance given to the woman among the Akkadians – characteristic trait and which brings them even closer to the Tuareg populations raniennes (2).

(1) Proceedings of the sixth Congress of Orientalists, vol. 11. p.
195, s'1.

who was the head of the family. In bilingual texts, we always find the woman mentioned before the male in the original Akkadian, while the translator "A Semite never fails to place it in reverse order."

THE RELIGION OF THE SEMITICS 451

Not only was Istar further identified late with the planet Venus – the evening star and the morning star—but other female deities Less important things were absorbed into it. One anthem copied for Assur-bani-pal on a tablet Written in Babylon, it places Nana on the same level, – that is to say Ishtar – and Bahu, the wife of the god Kis solar. "This was undoubtedly the Gourra d'Éridou, the grandmother identified with "the abyss" and representing the waters of the abyss itself, in their primordial state of chaos. It appears to have been also the Bohu of Genesis and the Baau of Sancho-niaton (1)." |

In any case, this female and other deity—many still lost themselves in personality of Ishtar, who remained predominant as a goddess (Sayce, Babylonian Religion, p. 176.) New research would certainly lead to discoveries on this point interesting.

Matriarchy, or "gynocracy," this form of family, usually coinciding with Polyandry, and in which kinship is transmitted primarily through the women, is still mainly observed today, among the peoples of the Turanian race (also called Mongoloid). It is a fact that I believe I was one of the first to highlight in my thesis on Polyandry (or Polyandry, etc.). See my book on the State, p. 31 – and Letourneau, La Soctologie, 1880, p. 371, sq.

(4) Sayce, Babyl religion. p. 262–263.

152: — ARYANS AND SEMITIS

of the earth and of fertilization. The scribes. of Babylon regarded her as the mother of humankind.

"The virgin Ishmael, ornament of the heavens." We know that what sacred debauchery later gave rise to the worship of this deity, considered much less as a virgin as well as a goddess of fornication – I'm not talking about love. But what we don't have What is quite remarkable is that this cult did not take its well-known characteristic of frenzied lust that under the influence of the Semites. This is a fact of of extreme importance, which Mr. Sayce recognizes like me, and his opinion is, here again, of a priceless (1). Only, he is mistaken in attributing this deplorable development to religion naturalist who would be hiding beneath their design of the Baalim. Nature and Naturalist Myths have nothing to do with this; it is only about "nature" Semitic." It is in Syria, in fact, among the Canaanites, among the Hebrews, among the Phoenicians Ciens, that sacred prostitution, male and female, displayed with the utmost shamelessness. From there, the cult passes with that of Atyr-Adonis, in Phrygia, and All these horrors will remain forever stained. like "Phrygian women" and like "Baby-Lonian"; so much so that the inhabitants of the countries purely Semitic, like Palestine, apparently

(1) Babyl relig. p. 265–266.

THE RELIGION OF THE SEMITICS 153

They rise–despite the curses of the prophets. – as if absolutely pure in the midst of this mud called Asian or Oriental, and which is not in In reality, that Semitic. For, the race of Shem has always– days had this astonishing fortune, to hoard at His profit came from intellectual and moral conquests. of his neighbors, and to place his pro– near infamies. The truth is that the Astarte of Phoenicians, the Ashtoreth of the Hebrews, the Atargatis of Hierapolis, the Phrygian goddess, and in general, all these deities having priestesses prostitutes – and for priests, galls or sacred eunuchs, often dressed as girls, – ne are fundamentally something other than the old Istar of Accad, but transformed and spoiled by contact with Semitic populations. Later, divine Ionia will take back Tammouz's lover and strip her of her possessions of the Syrian frenzy and the "abominations" Phoenician and Hebrew, to make her Aphrodite Beauty – and the goddess of that power by whom preserves the eternal universe, – Love.

But Istar, under his various names, was not only for the Ancient Near East the goddess of easy love affairs. She still appears in an aspect belligerent. The myth of Semiramis is conclusive in this regard. The dove into which she was changed this fabulous queen (1), is the sacred bird of Ishtar;

(1) Lucian, the Syrian goddess, 14.

154 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

his passion for his son Ninyas is an echo of that of this goddess, the Dav-Kina of Eridu, for Tammuz. The warrior queen of Assyria, in fact, was the great Babylonian goddess, her martial aspect (1). It appears under the name d'Anat in Syria (Anaïtis to the Greeks), under the name of Thanata or Anaïta in the modified Pantheon of Mazdaism. A very remarkable drawing, traced on a cylinder in the British Museum, it represents standing on a lion, "dressed in Assyrian costume, wearing the tiara adorned with bull's horns and surmounted by the radiant disk of the planet Venus; in her left hand, she holds a bow and two arrows; attached to his shoulders are two quiver; at his right side hang a sword and the sacred axe or harpè (2). »

If I have insisted for so long on the "great Goddess," that's what her cult seems to explain everything that is inexplicable at first glance, strange and contradictory things in religion Semitic. Mythology is not the work of the sons of Sem, – the vast majority of scholars are agreed on that point – and yet here we are Assyria, in Palestine, in Phoenicia, we find the myth, very beautiful and as naturalistic as it is possible the possibility of Adonis and his lover. Moreover, far from conceiving the multiplicity of gods, of forces In nature, the Semites only have the idea of the Force, which terrifies them, and which for them boils down to a single god, an all-powerful monarch, whom they they call Baal or Bel, that is to say "the Master", and sometimes Moloch, that is to say "the King". Each tribe or each nation has its own; but that is, after everything, the same solar god, dispenser, at the same time, of good and evil, and for each tribe, for each-nation, it is the one god, the only one that we must invoke, because he is the only one who can to grant (1); – and yet beside this god, des-friend and jealous, we find almost everywhere a goddess who seems to have no place in a similar design.

(1) Sayce, Babyl. religion, p. 271.

(2) Count of Vogué, Mélanges d'archéologie orientale. p.45. 1878. It was among the Assyrian Semites, so well known for their ferocity, which led to the development of this belligerent character of the goddess. From Assourbanipal, especially, Istar d'Arbela and Nineveh is invoked as "the terror of the Priams, the lady of war", etc.

Mr. Sayce explains this by a circumstance "grammatical": there is no terminal special place for genders in the language Akkadian; the Semites, on the contrary, have endings for masculine and for feminine

(1) Whether one wants to call this "Eingöllerei" with Schelling, or Henotheism with Mr. Max Müller, I maintain-keep in mind that it is still and above all about Monotheism; At most, one could describe it as rudimentary.

156 ARYANS AND SEMITICS

nin. They also introduced into the religion of country, a new idea, that of sex, and next to it Each of them placed a goddess in the god's place; was endowed with her "female reflection", being found in relation to him in a woman's report vis-à-vis her husband. But, first, if the Accadians did not have an ending for the feminine, that did not prevent them, however, to have goddesses, wives of the gods. The Semites therefore brought no new ideas there-velle, not to mention that it seems quite strange to to consider the idea of sex as such. Other feminine qualities are not lacking, they have not imagined, However, to give a wife to each of their gods (2).

Mr. Sayce's theory must therefore be dismissed. Now, the explanation of the origin of the deities females among the Semites, drawn from considerations transcendental and mystical questions about the existence of a dual principle in the universe, whether it be the dry and humid, or sun and moon, etc.
– this explanation, borrowed from the daydreams of

(1) Sayce, Assyria, etc., p. 56 and Babyl. religion, p. 108.

(2) The fact that, in Semitic languages, the feminine even marks itself in the verb's inflection, adding nothing strength in Mr. Sayce's argument.

THE RELIGION OF THE SEMITICS 457

metaphysicians of another age, cannot, no

Furthermore, to be taken seriously.

– As, after all, only one has been issued in this regard hypotheses, all less than satisfactory one than the other, I will undoubtedly be allowed to propose my own, by submitting it, moreover, With all due modesty, for the attention of researchers. It is the great Akkadian goddess who, in my opinion, due to the predominance and generalization-tion of his cult in Chaldea, made an im-such pressure on the Semitic invaders that the the reality of a female deity eventually prevailed their imagination. But the idea of brutal forces and all-powerful, which, in their culture, is the equivalent of the idea of god could not be reconciled with the existence-collateral damage of an equally powerful goddess and independent. Therefore, each Baal or Bel was endowed with a Bilat or Bellis, his wife, his "lady" at first, but soon simply her reflection, its "manifestation". In vain would one argue-only in Babylon, next to Zarpanit, wife of. Bel-Merodach, we still adored Istar as independent deity; that is, the influence acc-Dienne's influence can still be felt in this venerable seat. of ancient culture. But with time and under

was soon confused, like Anunit of Sippara, in the crowd of Ashtoreth, that is to say Identified with Istar. |

158 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

The Semites, as they moved away from Mesopotamia, they took with them only the memory of the great goddess. She is Ishtar, the evening star, — later identified with the moon (1); — she, the multifaceted deity, goddess of generation and war, which we find associated to the one god, to Baal, among the Phoenicians as with the other Canaanites and the Arameans. Regardless of the name: its character constant does not allow us to ignore it, and that it She is called Tanit in Carthage or Baaltis in Byblos, it is still Istar, "the Queen of Heaven", whose the name, moreover, is found in its entirety in the Ashtoreth or Astarte of Sidon and Jerusalem.

We are now able to come to take on the true character of the religion of Semites, freed from Akkadian complications. From primitive Naturalism, that is to say from the cult of stones, mountains, etc., including the Kaaba of the Mecca, the "Beth-El" (2) of Kanaan, the tree sacred sites of Chaldea are the most striking examples striking, they move on to Animism and Polyde-rudimentary monism, characterized above all by the worship of the sun as such (Samas), of the moon

(1) Cf. E. Schrader, Zeitsch. der deutsch. Morgenland.Gesselsch, tom. 27, p. 401 sq.

(2) Or Betyls, which literally means "house of "God."

THE RELIGION OF THE SEMITICS 1459

(Sin) etc. This phase relates, as for Originally, the bulls with human faces, a kind of household gods guarding the entrance to temples and Assyrian palaces, the Teraphim or idols of the Hebreux, the Ephods, etc.; on which we will have

As it develops, it rises slightly above these primitive conceptions, and without it being need to invoke a poly- transition phase theist, -which would only further confuse the question, far from clarifying it - they concentrate all their terrors with all their hopes on the personality of a unique being, elevated above all these fetishes.

Animism thus arises directly among the Semites, to Monotheism, and in a very easy to design, given precisely the state limited by their general conceptions. It is a This fact has already been very well pointed out by Mr. de Baudassin. that the Semites against the Aryans, far to identify the divinity with natural objects, considered as their substratum, tend to the separate from the object and designate it by the whole of its properties (1). Also what happens to them to deify, emerging from the period of Animism

(1) by Baudissin, Studien Zur Semitischen Religions Geschichte, Leipzig, 1876, p. 31. - Cf. the cited memoir by M. Renan in Journal Asiatique, 1859.

160 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

to which we must refer the worship of the sun and From the moon, it is the terrible power of nature, The Force, terror itself - El - generic name for God in Semitic languages. We know Petronius' famous saying:

Primus in orbe deos fecit timor.

which can be translated as:
Fear, in the Universe, created the first gods.

But what we know less about, what we don't have Quite remarkably, the Semites erected in God the Fear, the Terror itself (1).

(1) From its original meaning, fear, says Mr. Max Müller, Eloah (derived from El) came to express the object of fear or adoration, and thus became the name of God.

used as a synonym for God. "And Jacob swore by the fear of his father Isaac (Genesis 31:53). In Aramaic, dachla (fear) is the word used to refer to God or a idol." (M. Müller, Introduction to the science of Religion, London, 1873, p. 180).

Mr. Friedrich Delitzsch, I am aware of this, believed he could to establish that El, in Assyrian /lou, derives not from a Semitic root, but from an Akkadian radical and that it has the meaning of "very high up".

Although this interpretation was copied with its ordinary eagerness by Mr. Sayce (Herodotus, p. 416), I don't believe it should be considered challenging. Besides the fact that the god of the pure Semites appears today as the personification of Terror and of Force, the other examples cited by Mr. Max Müller conserve their full value. (See Friedrich Delitzsch, Wo lagl das Paradies? Leipzig, 1881, p. 164 ff.)

THE RELIGION OF THE SEMITICS 461

Mr. Renan is absolutely right to say that they were monotheists by the deepest instincts of their intellectual constitution; it is in them, as he so aptly points out in his remarkable memory, a trait of race, and of an inferior race in every respect. "Above this which I call the monotheistic instinct, he said excellently, there is a more general principle of which this Instinct is just an application: it's the lack of fertility in the imagination and language (1). That's the real formula, and it goes straight to... lying against the unfortunate and excessive proposal famous: "The desert is monotheistic" – proposition that Gustave Tridon so happily rectified by saying of the Semites that "the desert was in their brains" (3).

That's the theory; now for the Demonstration by facts. Let's take the tribes Semitic languages as they move away from the center of Acadian Polydemonics. We have cited, as Evidence of Polytheism: the various names of Baal-Sidon, of Melkart, of Chemosh, of Milcom, of Assur, of Yahweh, etc. But Baal-Sidon is the

- (1) Renan, cited memoir, p. 496.
- (2) Jewish Molochism, p. 10.
- (3) Cf. M. Müller, Das Semitische Monotheismus, loc. cit.

(4) Melkart means exactly "the king of the city".
 inscription bears: to Lord Melqart, Baal of Tyre" (of Vogué, Mélanges d'archéologie p.52.) . |

162 ARYANS AND SEMITHS -

The sole god of Tyre, Chemosh the god of the Moabites Milcom, that of the Ammonites, like Yahweh that of the Israelites. They may have rivals passengers like Assur, so close to Babylon, but they all tend, each in their own tribe, to to establish themselves as sole and absolute kings, and one can see already the moment when the most vibrant tribe and the more persistent, managing to impose its domination
 tion to others, will want of the national god and one,
 to play the God of the Universe.

It is impossible to go into detail here about all these religions are diverse in form, but essentially the same: the reader will have to be content of a few examples. The one god of Carthage was Baal-Hammon, and a number were found a considerable number of Punic inscriptions with a dedication "to Lord Baal-Hammon" and "to the lady Tanit face of Baal": faciem Baalis, reflection or manifestation of the god. It was M. de Saulcy who thus rendered the word "phen" first and of a in a very happy way, according to all the oriental-lists (1). Istar d'Accad is, as I indicated higher up, reduced to the insignificant role of a mere reflection or manifestation of divinity, of the one god of Carthage. This role diminishes even further at Sidon, if possible; in the inscription of Esch-

(1) Cf. the "Corpus inscriptionum Semiticarum, Paris, in-fol°
 1881, part I, volume I, p. 288.

Mounazar, Astarte (Istar) associated with Baal-Sidon is simply referred to as "Name of Baal" (1). It is now only the verbal form, in which- that the "word" of divinity may come forth.

This attenuation of the great Akkadian goddess, reduced to the state of a "reflection," or simply of "Name" thus reveals the essential character semitic(2), Morotheist of the religion of the Phoenicians. In every city, in every The federal state is the sole and unique solar god, to bull's horns, which is worshipped, sometimes under its benevolent aspect, as dispenser of the light and life, and so we call it rather Baal; sometimes under the name of Moloch, like the god of fire and sun with devouring heat, that they try to appease by burning people alive, in the white-hot bronze idol that represents him, the firstborn children of citizens of all class. We will find these horrors among the children of Israel (3').

(1) Cf. de Vogué, loc. cit., p. 54.

(2) Sayce, Ancient Empire of the East, Herodotus, p. 414.

(3) Let there be no objection regarding the religion of Phoenicians, nor the Cabiri, nor the triads of the oath From Hannibal to Philip of Macedon, the sun, the moon and the land, – the rivers, the meadows and the waters (Polyb. VII, 9, 2). These are either deities of a secondary order, and, partly, imported from abroad, or remnants of Animism and primitive naturalism – phases that must have to traverse the Phoenician religion.

164 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

Similarly, the inhabitants of Syria – by what I only mean the country located north of the sources of the Jordan – worshipped a single god, the all-powerful Baal, known as Hadad, who appears to have also been the deity of Edomites. We know of two Edomite kings from this period. Name, Hadad, son of Bedad, and Hadad, the adversary of Solomon. But here again, in pro- Syria As stated, we find here a trace of the in- Akkadian influence. In the time when the future Ara- My people stayed like their fellow citizens ennes, they must have been greatly impressed by the existence of an Akkadian deity. Meri, the spirit air, but air considered primarily as the atmosphere illuminated by the sun's rays, According to Mr. Sayce, "Meri" means the Most High. The Sublime (the exalted one) or the Radiant. The Semites translated this word as "Ramanou" which has the same meaning, but that the ulté- generations rieures attached to a root meaning "ton-ner"; hence they came to write it "Ramanâänou" that is to say the "Thunderer" (1). The Hebrews in later became "Rimmon". In any case, The Arameans identified their sun god with this

(1) Sayce, Babyl. religion, p. 202. The attributes of the god, or better, the spirit of the wind was then associated with him.

THE RELIGION OF THE SEMITICS 465

Rimmon: hence the complex name "c Hot Rimmon » (1).

I would still need to talk about the Arabs and the }sraélites. For the former, I can only point out Incidentally, the undeniable and exclusive nature of their monotheistic worship. They had, like the others, their phases of Naturalism, of Animism and Polydemonism, phases which have prolonged-kept longer due to the rudimentary state to silence their civilization. To say that they owe to Muhammad and Monotheism, it is stating a proposition in formal contradiction with the data
the most positive aspects of the science of Religions and the philosophy of history. I am not one of those who deny the influence of great men on the progress of nations; but this influence does not could only be exercised within certain limits, and we could assert a priori 'that she never had resulting in changes to the fundamental characteristics

(1) Cf. E. Schrader, Keilinschriften und Geschitsforschung,
p. 371. sq. Giessen. 1878.

Similar, though not identical, ideas have been recently issued by Mr. Baethgen in his Beitrage zur Semitischen Reliionsgeschichte (Leipzig. 1888). The author does, Moreover, the Semitic religion evolved from Polytheism to

The other, to any accusation of plagiarism, I remind you that the
The first chapters of my book appeared in the Review
Socialist since the end of 1887.

11

466 ARYANS AND SEMITHS:

rate of a race, if the evolution of the human mind were it not for the striking demonstration, the proof to a posteriori to this truth. Not to mention the sect the Hanifs who, even long before the appearance of the prophet, was decidedly monotheistic, he is certain-
It was certain that the Arabs would have arrived, even without
He has a similar conception of divinity.

As for the people of Israel and the evolution of its religious awareness, it deserves special study
the preceding considerations of which constitute the
An essential preface.

THE GOD OF ISRAEL – 167

CHAPTER V

'THE GOD OF ISRAEL'

Willpower, the defining quality of the Jews.— Criticism of 18th century and current exegesis.— The eternity of ma-third in the Akkadian cosmozones.— The chapter Bereshit, or creation in Genesis.— “And the earth
“It was chaos.” — Mr. Renan, the nomadic pastor and the “Father Orham.” — On the composition of the Pentateuch.
YHWH.— Development of Yahwism.— Baal-Moloch-
Yavsh.— Gehenna or the Vale of the son of Hinnom.—
Christian Hell.— Sacred Prostitution in the Temple of Jerusalem.— Sodom!— Circumcision.— The Pro-Phèces and Mosaicism.— Synthesis of Yahweh.

A ragtag group of Bedouins who came from the deserts from Arabia, settled for a time in Our of the Chal-deans, then established for many centuries — after having wandered from Mesopotamia to the borders of Egypt — in the Jordan Valley, finally the Assyrians, the Babylonians and the Romans;

that these deplorable nomads, I say, are parve-naked to inflict upon the Aryan world and their religion and the a system of usury and capitalist exploitation that is clean – that is certainly an astonishing fortune,
and that charlatans of every kind could easily-
how to present and have accepted as a miracle leuse. Researchers, emancipated from the point of view

168 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

theological thinkers, like Mr. Renan, wanted to see there, regarding the religious question which we currently occupies the accomplishment alone
of a kind of providential mission: the Semites,
completely foreign to literature and science,
to the arts, to philosophy, to politics and in general to everything that contributes to greatness or to the well-being of humankind, they gave it, in
On the other hand, religion, rightly considered,
as the characteristic element of this race (1).

The fact itself is undeniable. But,
for those who consider this gift as absolute
The success of such a "mission" is a disastrous outcome.
cannot be explained by its very nature (2).

The reason for this lies, on the contrary, in part inherent in the very nature of monotheistic religion, with its dogma of a terrible, unique, and all-powerful, the terror of peoples and the support of kings; of the other, in this firm and constant will, no
not to give each their own, but to do triumph, for better or for worse, their ideas as they are

(1) Renan: On the part of the Semitic peoples in the civilization-tion. This idea is constantly repeated in every moment in everything the works of this author.

(2) Cf. Gelion-Danglar. Les Sémiles et le Sémitisme, 1882,
p. 57: "the great Semitic anthill"
took it upon itself to supply and poison the world
of religions."

and their own individuality, including the Jewish Semites offer us, from one end of their history to the other, a striking example. The will—that infants Eclecticism persists in confusing with the The chimera of Free Will, — the will is a immense force, the importance of which is too often underestimated tance and which too often appears as an element— considerable disruption in the tangled— The management of human affairs. By will alone, a man like Napoleon, who had "nothing "in the gut," was able to impose itself for a moment on all of Europe and, what is more serious, to stop the Revolution itself. Thus, the Jewish people, having His most notable asset is his remarkable ability to adapt. continuing through the centuries, with a unwavering tenacity, the enslavement of gender human, managed to get him to accept his religion bloodthirsty and his idiotic fables, as if he had not sought only to dumb him down first, in order to better strip.

I said "idiotic fables" and I stand by that word. despite the admonitions of our modern exegetes, who, moreover, will not have enough contempt for this a "superficial" genre of criticism, renewed from 18th century. I do, however, have no difficulty in recognize the services rendered to religious science gieuse by contemporary researchers, by a Graf, a Noeldelke, a Renan, a Kuenen, a Wellhausen; I am only mentioning the elite, because their number is legion. But I wonder if those interested did not exaggerate its significance. The essential point, For example, with regard to the Pentateuch, was to establish the approximate date of its composition sition. Now, Spinoza (1) had already demonstrated that This date, as far as the whole is concerned, cannot to be prior to Ezra; Astruc{2) had distinguished two documents of different origin, in the seï— saying books of Moses; Voltaire, finally, that these gentlemen deal with the informality of people who They hadn't read it, Voltaire was aware of these work, and it's a mistake to believe that everything limited in his work, to an amusing banter or to bloody sarcasms — moreover almost always deserved.

170 ARYANS AND SEMITICS

Mr. Wellhausen, the eminent historian of Israel, is Spinoza decided the question of composition too quickly.

the sition of the Pentateuch, far ahead of the

() Spinoza, Theological-Political Treatise, chap. 7. Cf. Hobbes Leviathan. Chapter 33.

(2) Astruc, Conjectures on the memoirs of which it appears that Moses used it to compose the book of Genesis. Brussels 4757. Let us add that Volney, if he was wrong to attribute to High Priest Helkiah, the compilation of the Pentateuch, all entire, was able to attribute to the reign of Josiah, at least, the Chapters 27 and 28 of Deuteronomy. See Volney, Recherches
News about Ancient History. Part 1. Chapters VII and VIII.
Paris, 1814. 7"

THE GOD OF ISRAEL. 171

laborious and detailed investigations are essential:
for such a result {1}. But in truth, the day where the Bible was submitted by a man of a spirit free and sufficiently lit, according to the criterion of the reason, she appeared – to use the expression d'Holbach described it as "like a formless compilation," interspersed with obscure and disjointed oracles" {2}).The commentators today, who never cease to to bestow upon the god of Moses and his book the assurance rancid of their respectful consideration, no.
they all arrive at the same conclusion;
and people like Mr. Maurice Vernes, full of them.
of an uncontained admiration for the "imperial-
"sands, monuments of Israelite genius" and who wish-should introduce a history into our schools saint "secularized"{3} do not hesitate to point out to us
–like d'Holbach– the "repetitions, the incoherent-
"The contradictions and contradictions" of Genesis (4). I do not does not dispute, once again, the relative importance results obtained by the men of the School of Tübingen and their imitators; but I asks if these results are indeed related to the immensity of the effort, with the incalculable sum

(1) Wellhausen. Art. Pentateuch. in Encyclop, Britan, tom.
XVIII. 1885.

(2) D'Holbach, Christianity Unveiled, Ch. IX.

(4) The same, art. Genesis, in Lichtenberger Encyclopedia,

172 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

accumulated work, and especially with boasting, more than Ciceronian, of these gentlemen. They would do It's good to turn inward a little and to
to show more justice with more respect, to with regard to Voltaire and Spinoza, their masters in all respects, and their predecessors in a a path where they could only drag themselves painfully to their sequel.

In fact, the most serious element that emerges
modern research in the field of execution biblical geography, stems from the discovery and the reading cuneiform inscriptions.

Today, there can no longer be any doubt that the cos-the Mogony of Genesis, for example, had not been borrowed from the Akkadians of Chaldea; but, reworked and disfigured by the editor of this part of the Pentateuch, it only appears again like the deplorable copy of a remarkable original ginal. |

What the Baby- bricks actually proclaim lone and the long-known fragments of Berossus and Philo of Byblos on the origin of things, that's the irrefutable dogma of science.
Throughout history, there has been a belief in the eternity of the world.

George Smith discovered, among the debris of the library of Nineveh, several tablets telling-containing fragments of a kind of poem or epic

THE GOD OF ISRAEL 173

of creation ({}). This cosmogonic narrative begins Thus :

In those days, the sky above had no name

And the earth below had no name;

The boundless abyss (Apsu) was their generator,

The chaos of the sea (Hammu-Tiamat) was the mother of all things.

At that time, none of the Gods had yet appeared.

Another tablet, a copy of a text composed at a very distant era for the great temple of Nergal, in Cutha, presents similar ideas and speaks of "warriors with bird-like bodies and men" "crow-faced" nurtured by the shadowy Tiamat (2). All this agrees in every respect with the A fragment from Berossus beginning thus: "There was a time when all was darkness and water, and in this animals spontaneously generate in the environment monstrous and the most peculiar figures: men with two wings and some with four-legged men with legs and goat horns" (3) etc. Similarly, the first cosmogonies known as those of Sanchuniathon, reproduced by Philo of Byblos, thus gives the origin of the world: "In the beginning was chaos and

(1) G. Smith: Chaldean Account of the PU p. 62 sq.

(2) Sayce: Babyl. religion. p. 372.

(8) Fragm. Historic. græcor. ed. Didot. 8 II. p. 496. Ci.F.

Lenormant, Essay on a Commentary of the Cosmogonic Fragments de Bérose. 1871. p. 11.

174 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

The chaos was dark and terrible, and the breath hovered over the chaos. And the chaos had no end. And so it was for centuries upon centuries. And the Breath and chaos mingled, and Mot (the element) muddy) was born; and from Môt came all seed of creation and generation of all things" (1), etc.

The fundamental nature of all these cosmogonies can therefore be summarized in these two propositions: lions, as Mr. Jules Soury so aptly puts it:

"4° Eternity of an uncreated primordial matter, from which the current universe, the Cosmos, with its its starry skies and its sun;

"20 Spontaneous generation within the element"
damp, in the fertile mud of chaos, not alone—
the gods' ways, but with the gods themselves, of the first living beings, the first formless beings and monstrous, most of them incapable of adapting to the changing conditions of evolution of the world, perished or were driven back in the struggle for existence"(2).

However, should we attribute to these cosmogonies
A Semitic origin? I don't think so. The Although cuneiform texts are written in Assyrian,

(1) Philo of Byblos, supposed editor of the problematic Sanchoniaton, in Fragm. Hist. Greece. Joc. cit. t. III. p. 565. One
A little further on we read: "From the wind Kolpia and his wife
From Baau were born Aon and Protogonos.

2) Jules S. a. " 22
7 "Soury, Breviary of Materialism, p. 11.

THE GOD OF ISRAEL 475

This in no way prevents, in this case, as in many others, to disentangle the origin accdienne through Semitic words. Tiamat, by
For example, the chaotic and generative sea is certain-certain one of those words; "he has, however, a "Akkadian origin." The belief that relates to "Abyss of the waters," the origin of things, goes back to the worshippers of the water god, Ea, of Eridou.
The abyss among them was called apzu, from which they made abzu and that the Semites borrowed under the apsu form. Now this apsu, or abyss, was adored rather under the name Zikum, described somewhat part in a tablet, like "the mother who has pro-led heaven and earth"{1}. Moreover, according to Hommel (2) this Zikum would have been honored in the southern Babylonia from the earliest times priests of Tel-loh, under the name of Bohu, — name preserved, as we have just seen, in the Phoenihika of Philon of Byblos, and that we will found in Genesis.

This idea of the eternity of the world has always been,
Moreover, profoundly foreign and unsympathetic
to the spirit of Shem's race.

The cosmogonic conception specific to the Semites,
On the contrary, it is the one we are going to see emerge–

(1) Sayce, loc. cit, p. 374.

(2) Vorsemitische Kultur, p. 380.

476 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

to sine, with its absolutely anti-scientific character fique, in the first verse of Genesis. The
The Elohist editor would never have found, in the traditions specific to the Hebrew ancestors, the eleelements of any theory on the emergence beings: the Semites, at no time, have thought, of themselves. To those things, which are of the domain exclusive of the mind, without positive and lucrative interest appreciable. But with that practical common sense that never abandon the Jew, the scribe in question understood that it wouldn't be a bad idea to give as preamble to the history of his peers, that of the
the whole of humankind, with an exposition of its origin even of the universe; not, of course, in a philosophical purpose, but to show how God and Creation together do not actually no other objective than the people of Israel.

[therefore borrowed from the Akkadian cosmogonies]
the story of the gradual and spontaneous origin of beings; but, by sticking the famous label on everything– Semitic quette: "Bereschit barà Elohim, etc.
– In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth.
he completely eliminated the evocative character
the lutionist of the ancient narratives to substitute for them the Theory of creation ex nihila, arbitrary work of the one and all-powerful god. In vain have we wanted to make everything agree, by saying that bar
does not have the meaning of "to create", in the sense of everything

THE GOD OF ISRAEL '477

abstract where we take this word today (1).
"Creation," Reuss so aptly put it, "has drawn the universe of nothingness; it did not consist of a operation performed on a pre-existing material, and it

the world of realities, of the divine substance itself-even. It is true that the word hébreu barà that we Let's translate this as "create," "doesn't understand," "by him-" even this metaphysical notion, but the whole The narrative does not allow for the acceptance of another. We will also point out that this same narrative, without explicitly stating it, has as its premise the mo- the most absolute notheism, the idea of a personality unique and transcendent, which, in no case, "does not become one with the world." {2} Next to the Exegete Christian, here is Rabbi Hirsch, who is exactly of the same opinion: "Reschit," he said, "expresses the com- beginning of an action, both in space that in time... Thus the fact is noted of creation ex nihilo, a truth that constitutes the basis of religious consciousness that the law of God has built for us. The opposing view, that of the eternity of the world, which represents the creator as having simply shaped an existing material aunt, and which has always constituted the basis of the cons-

(1) Barà has a sense of carving, shaping, and making. The Septuagint translated very well as epoiese (fecit).

(2) Reuss, Pentateuque and Josué, 1879, tom. I.p. 276

178 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

Pagan science, this thesis is nothing but a lie metaphysical; moreover, it is extremely pernicious, destructive of all morality, by implying the denial of freedom, for God as well as for men" (1). This excellent rabbi speaks like an inquisitor and like a philosopher "Eclectic"; he is nonetheless right in the bottom.

The Jews of the 5th century CE expressed already very clearly the same opinion. Here is what we reads in one of the strange treatises called "midras-shim": "A philosopher said to 'Rabbi' Gamaliel: - your god is a great builder, but. he found excellent materials to put into work.- What did they consist of?- In "desert" (chaos), "emptiness" (void), "darkness", "Wind," "water," and "abyss."- But, cried Gamaliel, in relation to each of these things, there

Jeremiah 45:7; for the darkness and the water, to Psalm 148; for the wind, in Amos 4:13; and for the abyss, in Proverbs VIII, 24» (2).

(1) SR Hirsch, der Pentateuch übersetzt und erlaulert. Frankfurt am Main (text, translation and commentary) 1867. p. 3.

"

(2) Der Midra Bereschit raba (or the Haggadic Explanation) from Genesis, translated for the first time into German by A. Wünsche) Leipzig, 1881, p. 4.

THE GOD OF ISRAEL 179

Nothing could be more accurate. Yet, if the "philosopher" the person in question believed he had discovered some ten centuries before some contemporaries, the so-called carac-materialist or pantheistic nature of cosmology Genesis, it's because of carelessness, or rather from the ignorance of the editor "Elohiste", who has allowed to continue – without noticing the contradiction,— the all-too-obvious traces of the theories Akkadian. The second verse, so interesting to all In this regard, it is thus conceived: "And the earth was {oh bohu (literally tohu and bohu) and darkness were on the chaos of the waters (thom) and the breath "of Elohim hovered over the waters."

The first part is usually translated as: "And the earth was deserted and empty" which is not the meaning; I followed Voltaire's version (1) which reprop- simply and with full reason the words Chaos and chaos. If the first one does indeed appear in other parts of the Bible with the meanings of "desert", The same cannot be said of the second one, which is not found than in this verse (2). "Bohu" in reality, it is the Baau of the Phoenicians, and originally the Bahu of Kis, still worshipped under the name Zirkum, to the apsu origin, the humid and primordial abyss of which

(1) V. The Bible Finally Explained, in Complete Works, ed., Lahure in 35 vols. in-i8. volume XXIII p. 61.

(2) In Isaiah 34:1 and Jeremiah 4:23 it is not a question than the reproduction of the expression of Genesis.

180 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

This has already been discussed. As for Thom,
It is obviously liamat, the sea, and Mummutiamat the chaos of the sea, the primordial abyss of which it is stated in the fragment of Babylonian inscription-nienne quoted above "that he was the mother of all things." | |

It is therefore absolutely impossible for me to share
Mr. Renan's enthusiasm for this "beautiful page, the obligatory heading of any sacred history." But The one he wrote himself on the subject is too surprising, too characteristic of his style for not to be reproduced here.

"We must not forget," he said, "that the chapter
Bereschil was science in his day. The old
The Babylonian spirit still lives there. The succession of creations and ages of the world, this idea that the
the world has a future, a history, where each state has emerged from the previous state through a development organic, was a huge step forward on a platform theory of the universe, conceived as a ma- aggregate
The story's false simplicity biblical, the exaggerated horror that one notices there for large numbers and long periods, (1) have

(1) "Exaggerated horror for large numbers and_ the "long periods" is a rare find, one of those for-mules that Mr. Renan excels at discovering. But the truth pure, it is simply that the creation story has been arranged over six days – with a rest day on the seventh – for a people who knew the week and the Sabbath. And since

THE GOD OF ISRAEL 181

marked the powerful evolutionary spirit which in fact the foundation, but the genius of the unknown Darwins, that Babylon possessed it four thousand years ago, if always recognizes. The beautiful page "at the beginning-
"How God created heaven and earth" was like the
The cold mistral wind cleared the sky, like a blow from which obscured it (!} A free will like that implied by the word "created", substituted for ten a thousand fantastic desires, is a progress to its way. The great truth of the unity of the world and of the solidarity of all its parts, which is often overlooked through polytheism, is at least clearly perceived,

in a story where all parts of nature arise from the action of the same thought and the effect of the same verb, » (1) |

I don't know if the "lack of habitual criticism"
tuel in France and England, to the scholars who deal with physical sciences, made him spout off about
"This point is full of childishness"; but what I maintain that it is impossible to make fun of the world with a more astonishing nonchalance. Without Doubtless the biblical creation narrative bears the trace of the genius of the unknown Darwins of Babylon; but the most remote times; for this institution, as well as

Mr. Sayce demonstrated this, going back to the Akcadians, to whom
The Semites borrowed it (Babylon, Religion, p. 76).

(4) Renan, Jsraél t. I.p. 79–80.

12

182 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

thanks, above all, to the carelessness of the scribe who con-
The second verse was served. As for the rest, how do you want to establish any kind of relationship between the grand Darwinian theory and this ridiculous scene of magic tricks where we see Elohim pull the

A world of nothingness in six days? Well, that's my "res-"
"Pectuous," who all seem to be in on the same thing to disregard what is truly respect-table, eager to honor only what does not
It is not. For centuries, they have not run dry.
on the famous "Let there be light! And light!"
was." And the astonished crowd admired this with trust.
"Go nutmeg!" by Robert Houdin mons-poetry, but something incoherent, in the a kind of collection of stories emerging from this chaos compilation which is called the Bible (1).

But all of this pales in comparison to blasphemy.
from the eminent writer addressing Polytheism,
who could have failed to recognize "this great truth of unity"
of the world and the absolute solidarity of all its "parts" – which is precisely the opposite of the truth, polytheistic religions admitting eter-
unity of the world and thus resulting very clearly

(1) How much more admirable, from the point of view of the imagination-nation and poetry, the splendid interpretation that The Aryan Milton gave us the original Semitic text! Read it again in the VIIth song of Paradise Lost, the story of creation.
(v. 194. sq.) |

THE GOD OF ISRAEL 483

to Pantheism and Materialism – that is to say to the theory of the unity of the universe and solidarity of all its parts; which you know better than no one, you who have so clearly demonstrated the incapacityirremediable city of the Semitic race, in that concerns the understanding of the nature of things and Science in general.

"The nomadic shepherd," you add, "would not have invented these amazing stories; but he made them the success. » The nomadic pastor spoiled, once again
more, what he touched, and, of these beautiful cosmogodenies, he constructed the tall tale that
As we know, it's a silly fable, I repeat, a "chaos" whose primitive chaos could only give a imperfect idea; and it is the iron and fire of the inquisi-
Christian authors who made it a success.

This Akkadian origin of the creation story
in its original content, is one of the rare discoveries green, I repeat, which is later than the 18th century century; yet the glory returns to it entirely to the Assyriologists. As for what concerns the god
We know very little more about Israel as such.
-today than in Voltaire's time, and we know Enough. Voltaire himself calls him, not Jehovah, But Jaho, like Mr. de Hartmann. As for his qualities, he does not appreciate them with more severity-

tions, in turn, for this "jealous, selfish" God. and staff."

184 ARYANS AND SEMITHS.

But the new historian of Israel separates himself well quickly, and very unfortunately, criticisms of the grand siècle, by imagining the most astonishing theory—A nante that one could dream of. Completely abandoning—In the scientific field, he assumes that the very real predisposition of the Semites to Monotheism has been evident since the earliest times, and for so to speak, from the very beginning of this race. The teenagers—Those who defy Yahweh are superstitious and miserable; But tell me about the nomads, their predecessors. of these ancient patriarchs of the Syrian deserts "Corner columns of humanity, — the trimegists" of religious history. Those people do not worship the idol of Moses, but a single god, formed by the fusion of nameless gods, prototype of the "god" absolute who loves good and hates evil, of the god that "We serve through honesty of heart." These "pious" "People" don't want to call upon the Supreme Being, summary in Elohim, that El or El elyon the most high god or Shaddai, the Almighty God. In the midst of Israel, conceived "as a kind of Genesis, a rendezvous—" "You pure ones," rises the figure of Abraham, a a Muslim before his time, "a believer, a hero" pious, a kind of Ali, brave, generous, polygamous, gallant man" (1).

It's unbelievable! But that's not all. Do you know— You know where the popularity of this "gallant" partly came from

(1) Israel L. p. 64, 59 and 109.

THE GOD OF ISRAEL 185

man" and this "good man" identified with a fabulous Orham, king of Ur, Abraham, that is to say say Father Orham, paler Orchamus (1)? Her main title, in the eyes of its peaceful worshippers the raters, was to have substituted the sacrifice of the she—proving the use of human sacrifices: "sometimes even, He substituted a kid goat for his son. (2) This is how the author of the Life of Jesus knows to Rousseau's theories on the excellence of the state of nature, represented here by this "beautiful ideal of the nomadic life, which will remain for Israel as a kind of magnetic pole, towards which it will gravitate always." (3) In fact, religious progress consists—tera to return from Yahweh to Elohim, that is to say to God of humankind. (4)

Serious criticism from all countries could only to deplore this aberration of a great mind, of a a first-rate scholar for sure, but also more skeptical than idealistic, and who persists in wanting to The dormouse must satisfy "everyone and their father."

(1) According to Ovid, Metamorphoses, IV. 212, where it refers to the Leucothoe's father. "But," said Mr. Renan, "the expression Pater Orchamus nevertheless appears to have been imposed on Ovid, according to tradition, "Israel p. 75." Who the hell would have expected to find Leucothoe's father in this affair?

(2) Israel, I. p. 77.

(3) Ibid. p. 110.

(4) Ibid. p. 86.

186 ARYANS AND SEMITHS:

That Movers, in his work so aptly famous, had expressed similar ideas on the excellence of primitive Elohimism (1), there is some Fifty years, that's a mistake that could be excusable at that time; it is no longer so today. today, after modern works and discoveries concerning the respective age of the various documents of the Pentateuch.

Here are the precise results of the research. the most recent ones, affecting this essential part of the Bible which contains the Torah (the Law). The five books known as "of Moses" which make up the Pentateuch, must be gathered at "Joshua" to constitute a work in six parts (Hexateuch), from which Deuteronomy is easily separated. One can to state with certainty, as far as this is concerned last book, whose composition is not ante-earlier in the reign of Josiah (around 621 BC Christian). Among other elements, the most

(1) El is first and foremost the supreme and unique divinity, certainthe El elyon of Melchizedek, sitting above the visible world as a luminous being... 1] avenges the trans-aggressions of his law on humanity without God, but preserves
The good ones, like Xisuthros, in the time of the flood. This is where the El Shaddai identified with the El Elyon of Melchizedek. His ultoe was preserved in the families of the Israelite patriarchs, lan-said that it was becoming increasingly altered through contact with national religions
"nales de la Syrie". Movers, die Phoenisier, tom. 1. p. 313.
Bonn. 1841.

THE GOD OF ISRAEL 187

characteristic, constituted by the work of a compi-
the speaker called Eiohiste – because it designates God
under the name of Elohim – relates primarily to the pres-descriptions relating to cults, to the functions of priests, to the tithes, (1) etc.

That is why this part was designated by Kuenen and by Wellhausen under the name Ghoul Priestly Code (2). Deuteronomy and the Priestly Code
With the dowry removed, the Jehovisle document remains, thus called because of the name Jehovah (Yahweh)
in which the deity is designated, document written according to the spirit of the prophets and which is concerned-cupe much less of the Law and worship than of the traditions and past of Israel 3).

To Graf, the master of the authors previously cited, the credit goes to having demonstrated that these three documents followed one another in the following order-

(1) Especially Leviticus, in its entirety, then Exodus, 25-60 (except XXXIII and XXXIV), and Numbers IX, XV-XIX, XXV and XXVI.

(2) Kuenen, de Goasdiets van Israel, Harlem, 1869-70 and Historisch-Kritische Enleitung in den Büchern des Allen Testament
t. 1. p. 62 sq. – Wellhausen, in Prolegomena zur Geschichte Israels. Berlin. 1886, 2nd edition. and art. "Pentateuch" in. Encyclop.
brilan. tom. XXX VIII. 1835.

(3) Cf. Noeldeke, Literary History of the Old Testament (trans. Jules Soury and Derembourg). This Jehovah's Witness made borrowings from an early Elohist, but modifying them before: 1. Jehovah's Witness; 2. Deuteronomy; 3. Priestly Code

dotal (Elohist). (1) |

It is impossible to go into detail here about a
A more thorough examination. I will simply add,
Regarding the dates, the sacred code—
The dowry or Levitical dowry dates from no earlier than the year 444.
and to Ezra — who is undoubtedly its author — and that the Jehovah's Witness could not have been composed before the turn of the century. Moreover, an undeniable fact is that we do not know the ancient Elohim, as well as
As one critic rightly points out, by documents written according to the spirit of the prophets.
From what these efforts were making to purify the primitive religion, do we have the right to know about it?
concluding that this religion was similar to the ideal
what were they proposing? "What reason do we have, apart from these self-serving testimonies, for to admit with M. Renan that the Jacobites (Israe(lites) may have taken the Tera- from the neighboring tribes phim, the offering of the firstborn, the Rephaim, and did not experience these superstitions in the same way than tribes of the same race? (2) » None, in truth; at least as long as one takes refuge—will, according to unanimous critical opinion, share the

(1) KH Graf, the geschichtlichen Bücher des Allen Testament:
Leipzig, 1866.

(2) Review of the History of Religions, November–December 1887, Volume X VI, p. 357,

THE GOD OF ISRAEL 189

special views of the same Mr. Renan, which rejects the association established between the Elohist narrative and the code priestly, and finds that "the sacred history of Elo-
"Histe is nonetheless of a beautiful antiquity." (1)
In fact, the religion of Israel is only one particular case.
particular, though remarkable above all others, of that Semites. Far from having begun with the worship of a
the "pure" and unique god, called El or Elohim, first natural objects, and particularly the trees, rocks and stones, including the tree famous from the Garden of Eden, the sacred stones or "Bethel" (2) and the High Places (Bamoth) remain-

(1) According to the author of the Life of Jesus, the Jeho- document The visit would have been written in the Northern Kingdom around the va ou leix° siècle. The writer would have used two older works, the book of the wars of Yahweh (Sepher Milhamot Yahweh) and the Book of Ishachar (title of which the (meaning is entirely doubtful) written towards the end of the 10th century, as soon as possible. As for the Elohist narrative, it would have been composed in Jerusalem in the twentieth century, perhaps between 775 and 750 BC J.-CMRenan therefore disagrees with the conclusions by Kuenen and Wellhausen, accepted by everyone, but which completely ruin his prodigious theory of "beautiful ideal" and the "exquisite" Elohimism of the nomadic pastor. (Cf. Renan, The Origins of the Bible in Revue des Deux-Mondes) of the 1st and 15th of March 1886. See also his article entitled "Hebrew Philology" Journal des Savants, 1886. p. 201 sd.

(2) Genesis. XX VIII. 18. See on this subject, Kuenen, Religion of Israel, ch. V. '

490 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

rent, even in a more advanced phase, the indisputable remains. It doesn't matter that they fired of Chaldea, one or another of these superstitions, like that of the Tree of Life; this is, in fact, phenomena observed in all peoples the beginning of religious evolution, and particularly in the period of Primitive Naturalism, to which to which the facts in question belong. Then comes the phase of Animism, in which they start to carve out idols for themselves, more or less crude, which can be found even in the time of David under the name of the Teraphim, more precisely "images of deceased ancestors (1)" These are Good heavens, Rachel had no scruples at all! to steal by leaving, with Jacob, the house of his Father. She put them under her buttocks, on the camel. which served as his mount; and when the old Laban approached to search the travelers' luggage geurs, she apologized for not getting up "having this that women are accustomed to having" - and Laban did not find the "marmosets." (2)

At what time did this horde of wandering Arabs appear?

(1) Assyrian farpu, synonymous with Acadian dimme
"Weak" is the root of the Hebrew Teraphim, ratlaché, as Dr. Neubauer notes this, referring to the rephaïm or "shadows" of the dead" and meaning "the dead ancestors." (Sayce, Babyi.
(relig. p. 143).

(2) Genesis XX XI. 34. 35,

THE GOD OF ISRAEL 191

— as Voltaire calls them — did she arrive to the conception of God so truly made for his Image? It's not a specific date; but given that the Israelites stayed there successively tively in Chaldea, in Mesopotamia super-higher and on the borders of Egypt before to settle in Palestine, one might wonder in the-which of these stations did the cult of a special and unique god to whom they necessarily owed to arrive, as Semites, and upon leaving of the indispensable phase of Animism and Poly-rudimentary demonism. Egypt must first to be excluded, and this is in the opinion of all men
the most competent among recent historians of Israel(1). Whatever Mr. Renan may say, she has not even given the "golden calf, the eternal stone"
"of stumbling blocks for the masses," nor, most likely,
the brazen serpent "that the Puritans hated"
(2). It is quite certain that the God of Israel com-threatened to appear with all its importance at the time of the final settlement of his people in the land of Canaan, that is, in the time of the

(1) Cf. Kuenen, National Religion and Universal Religion, traduction Maurice Vernes, 1884. p. 47 — Vellhausen, article Israel in Encyclop. brilan. Vol.XIII. 1882.— See also A very interesting work by Mr. Le Page Renouf: Reading or the origin and growth of religion as illustrated by the Religion of ancient Egypt (Hibbert Lectures, 1879). p. 245 square meters.

(2) Renan. Israel, 1. p. 252.

The legendary Moses, around the 15th century BC era: this god, national and unique, could not truly—could take shape before the nation had constituted. Had the Abrahamic tribes already had one? some notion in the early periods, at the time of the stay in Chaldea? We know very well that the Phoenicians and other Canaanites drew their Baal of Assyria and Semitic Babylonia, of even that the Arameans took their Hadad—Rimmon. That's pretty much the only clue, not without importance, moreover, that could make us believe to a similar origin for the god of Israel, to less under his special name of Yhwh: for, under those of Baal and Moloch, this origin is evident—toothed.

I wrote the name "ineffable" the tetragrammaton famous Y HVH, as it is found in the old Testament, without the indispensable vowels (1) and about whose nature we are not entirely sure Okay. The "Jehovah" lesson, which doesn't go back

(1) Spinoza points out, among several others, these two causes of the ambiguity of holy names. "The first," he said—11. The reason is that Hebrew has no vowels; the second is that it provides no sign to separate the sentences and pronounce the words. I know very well that all of that has been replaced in the Bible by periods and accents. But we do not Can we trust them, knowing full well that they were imagined? and introduced by men of a later era.
(Theological and Political Treatise, Chapter VII)

THE GOD OF ISRAEL 193

that in the 16th century, is today condemned without call (2). Saint Jerome (3) the Gnostics (4), Voltaire, F. Delitzsch and M. de Hartmann read Jaho (5). According to Theodoret, the Samaritans artiwashed (6); it is also the pronunciation which prevails today, and we will adopt it in retaining, moreover, the four consonants of the tetra—

(1) Gesenius, Hebraïsches Handwörterbuch. 8th edition, article Jehovah's key.

(2) And with full reason, since this vocalization is

Jews encountered in the Bible the sacred name, which one does not should not pronounce, they substituted Adonai for the reading. The Lord, in Greek Kyrios, in Latin Dominus, etc. It is even thanks to this substitution that the God of Israel has partly lost its distinctive character, no longer being represented understood among Christians only by this vaguer formula.

Later, when people wanted to interpret the tetragrammaton, they attributed to him the vowel points of Adonai (with the change—the first a becomes e according to the rules of phonetics Hebrew) and we obtained the version Jehovah.

(3) Hieronymus, (in. Psalm. VII.

(4) See the interesting article by Baudissin, der Ursprung des Gottesnamen 1a6, in Studien zur Semitischen Religion Geschichte, 1° fascicle.p. 15. Leipzig, 1876.

(5) Pronounce Yaho, the j no longer having the sound in our language the consonant y, which he retained in German.

(6, Theodoret. Quest. I. inI.

194 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

gram in the form Yahveh (1). Jaho (Yaho) was certainly an abbreviation of the same Tetragrammaton, as well as Yah, in Halle lu – Yah (Hallelujah – praise be to Yah!)

This Supreme Being, this Yahweh, is the same God that the writers of the Old Testament attribute—will be on the occasion of the title of El or Elohim (2), title generic term for divinity among the Semites; the same which the prophets will also call 'the sebbaoth – the same one, finally, that the Israelites worshipped, to the occasion, in the form of a bull or "calf" of gold," and under the names of Baal and Moloch. (3)

This is the important truth, glimpsed by Movers, and that Gustave Tridon established some time ago Twenty years already, based on irrefutable evidence,

(1) Cf Kuenen, National Religion, note 4 (p. 242).

(2) It has been said that this plural, Elohim, was the undeniable from the primitive belief in the plurality of gods. It must be understood that this refers to the plurality of minds, not gods proper: this is a vestige of Animism, no to Polytheism. "Like all anti- peoples that, as Mr. Renan so aptly put it, the nomadic Semite believes to live amidst the supernatural. The world is surrounded, permeated, governed by the elohim, myriads of active beings very similar to the spirits of savages, living, trans-Jucides, inseparable from each other in a way lacking distinct proper names like those of Aryan gods, so much so that it can be considered to en-seem and confused." (Israel, p. 30).

(3) Cf. Renan, Israel p. 87.

THE GOD OF ISRAEL 195

in his Jewish Molochism (1). If he had had the leisure to finish it and publish it at that time, he would have provoked a general madness, a concert of evil-pronouncements and denials, even among exegetes emancipated, or at least considered as such. It is a sign of the times that these gentlemen, at the present time, they must have agreed with him on such a serious matter. Here, for example, is how the author expresses himself the article "Moloch," in the latest edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica: (2) "The horrible ritual, – he said, speaking of the children burned alive in the honor Moloch's nemesis; – had so closely associated to the worship of Jehovah (Ezekiel, XXXIII, 9) that Jeremiah believes it necessary to affirm more once it's not actually an institution of the God of Israel (Jerem. VII, 31 – XIX. 5). Similarly, the idea of the sacrifice of the first-born to Jehovah is discussed and condemned in Micah (VI)» By virtue of one of these astonishing turns What Mr. Renan excels at giving to his thought is

(1) Jewish Molochism, critical and philosophical studies by Gustave Tridon. Brussels, E. Maheu. 1 vol. in 8 232 p. 1884. Let us recall that the author, who was a member of the Com- The mayor of Paris died in 1871.

This encyclopedia is a veritable collection of memoirs. originals, due to the most eminent scholars and of any nationality.

496 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

"Yahweh" who corrupts Israel (!); it is he who makes cruel, unjust, exterminating, treacherous for his interest. "Ezekiel (XX, 25 ff.) claims that Yahweh, wanting to punish his people, commanded him For a time, child sacrifices were practiced in order to To make him punish him with his own hands. Surely. At that distant age, Yahweh did not differ much. of Moloch (1).» Whatever the theory of the au- The confession is good to record.

Even Count Baudassin, who, in his an important study on "Jave and Moloch" is being proposed nuncio for non-identity, cannot help but to recognize that the worship of the ancient Hebrews does not does not differ much from that of Moloch (2).

_ There is therefore no need to engage in a discussion here- sion regarding a judged case: Yahweh, Baal or Moloch is all one. That the last two have were later considered distinct and identified. This one with the star Saturn, that one with Jupiter, It doesn't matter: they appear at the beginning, like two sides of the same solar God, worshipped rather under the name of Baal, like the life-giving sun, and under that of Moloch, like the star of passions devouring and deadly.

(1) Renan, /Israel, I. p. 175.

(2) See Baudissin, Jave, p. 39. "Quodsi Baal deus solis est, tum etiam Moloch qui primus certe cum illo unus erat. Verumn eo Moloch differta Bsale quod cum hic repræsentet vim solis generantem, illi ascribitur vis evertens. »

THE GOD OF ISRAEL | 197

The Israelites knew these two names originating from Semitic Chaldea (Bel and Milik), well before that of Yahweh; in any case, it was only, I repeat, when they began rent the b:soin to find for their one god a special name (1). Yahweh appeared as the synthesis of Baal and Moloch, reunited as they had been at the beginning, – dualism being the absolute antithesis of the Semi- religious system, in which the Superior Being accumulates all the attributes, those of Evil in the same way as those of Good. I never understood for my On the other hand, the assimilation that a superficial critique has wanted to establish a link between Yahwism, even "post-exilic" and Mazdaism. The sad mania that drives the Orthodox writers to be found in all the religions the idea of a single God – a vestige more or less erased from Revelation – has brought down

(1) According to Mr. Wellhausen, Jehovah (Yahveh) must be regarded as having originally been a tribal god. He made no distinction, he said, between Jehovah and El, no more than between El and Assur. Jehovah was just a name particular of El in a powerful tribe, perhaps in Joseph's.

According to the same author, the meaning of the word Israel would be:

El combat, (art. Israel, in Encyclop.Brit.) Cf. Renan, Israel, p. 206. The etymology that this author proposes is entirely problematic, as he himself acknowledges. 43

ns ne 7 PR AE

198 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

in the trap a few independent scholars that we have seen people raving about "pure Monotheism" Iranians.

It's pure fantasy. Ahrihmane (Anra Main yon) is indeed, in the Zoroastrian religion, the author and the God of evil, and the very real purity d'Ahoura Mazdä, (Ormuzd), comes precisely from that this conception frees him from all responsibility in this respect (1). This triumphant objection of physical and moral evil, stumbling block- The nature of deism throughout history is found thus suppressed – but along with deism itself, since thus the unity and omnipotence of God They go to hell. Yahweh remains contrary and as Evil, as is all too evident, tends still predominates in the world, it appears rather like the ferocious and "vengeful" Being by excellence, that as the symbol of life and of the blessing. This sinister character, he owes it all to himself. entirely devoted to his status as a god, an arbitrary autocrat and no, whatever Mr. Renan may say, to his role of national deity. He is Baal, agreed; but he is especially Moloch. "Like all bad things solar deities, says Mr. de Hartmann, Yaho is also the god of flame: he himself is a fire devouring, » (1)

(1) See A. Hovelacque, Avesta, Zoroaster and Mazdélsmus, p. 151. sq. 1880. a

CEE vi ee dr PR TREIRE

THE GOD OF ISRAEL 199

And it is indeed to this Yaho, or Yahweh – Baal – Moloch, whom the Jews have for centuries immolated human beings, especially children, burned alive in the furnace, in the bosom of the hor-a reddened bronze idol, with a bull's face (2) white-hot, where the victims were being consumed. Good souls claimed that it was only a matter of them to be cooked over a fire, like a chicken being "flamed" before skewering it. But the Hebrew word used in this circumstance, and who is the hipnil of abar to get through, is undoubtedly taken here for to refer to the murder of children by fire; Moreover, on occasion, the writer uses the term "island".

(1) Das religiöse Bewusstsein der Menschheit etc. Berlin 1882. p. 372.– Isaiah XXXIIL. 14; IV.5 – Exod. XXIV. 17 – Deuter. IV, 24.

(2) "Although the Old Testament is silent on this matter, "It is certain," said Mr. Baudassin, "that the idol of Moloch had" the shape of a bull." (Jave, p. 45) – Cf. Gesenius Monument. Tab. 21; Silius Italicus, Punica, III. v. 104 sq.

The bull, as we saw earlier, was the symbol of the sun god. The Semites had appropriated in Accadians, and which has nothing in common with the notion of Apis bull. The identity between Yahweh and Moloch is established. the most striking way through the Bible itself, Exodus. XXXILI, 5: "Seeing this, Aaron built an altar to the tau-cast iron and he cried out: Tomorrow is the solemn feast of Yahweh!

200 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

The verb seroph, to burn, to designate the same order of fact. (1) The very defenses of the Pentateuch, as Tridon points out, are a new This is further proof, along with so many others, of the identity of - Baal - Moloch - Yahweh. "I will stop the eye of "My anger against this man," we read in Leviticus, and I will cut him off from my people, because he has given of his race to Moloch, and that he defiled my sanctuary (2). » From which it appears, according to the pro- According to the words of Yahweh, child sacrifices took place on his very altars. Ezekiel is even more explicit, if possible: "Because they had not practiced my judgments, he had Yahweh say... So, I too have gave precepts that were not good and judgments in which they should not have to live. And I defiled them in their gifts when they offered me the firstborn of the vulva because of their sins (3).

I ask this, moreover, of every man who is not pre-having arrived, free from religious prejudice: is it possible to simply leaf through the Bible without being horrified and distraught, gripped by a true nightmare, upon reading all the abominations which

(1) Movers, Die Phœnizier, II p. 327, - Cf. Deut IX, 31; XVIII, 10; Kings XVI. 33. XXIII, 10; Jeremy. VII, 31. XXXII,, 35; Ezek. XVI. 21; XXIII, 37: Il Chron. XX OLD 3; Ps. CVI, 37.

(2) Leviticus XX. 2 sq.

(3) Ezekiel 20:25

of its history? Priests, pastors and others Rabbis may try to explain to you that it is not a matter of idolatrous Israelites: it appears all too clearly that they all are and that at every moment, the little- The king and the king return to the atrocious idol, to the One God, Baal-Moloch-Yahweh, the worship that suits him. The apologists, moreover, have feelings towards them even the writers of the Old Testament: that of Ezra and the Prophets who, humanized to the tact of the Babylonian civilization and perhaps of Egypt condemns these horrors of Yahwism national which they aim to reform and which they try to make people believe, contrary to the facts, for a derogation from the worship of the God of Israel. That's why they spoke out in such a way. so unfavorable, as rightly points out Kuenen, on the background of their own people (1); hence this tangle of contradictions seemingly inextricable situations, but whose key is given to us by the compromising verses of the kind I just mentioned.

Solomon's Temple itself received consecration tion of these implacable rites. "Everything there speaks of the Moloch and its dreadful mysteries. Its furnishings of bronze, cast according to the models and by workers of Tyre; its hollow horned altars, its vats, its cauldrons, pots, forks, seas Made of bronze, everything recalls the bloody battery of "cuisine of the Melkart Tyrians or Carthaginians" (1).

[1] See Kuenen, National Religion and Universal Religion Trans. M. Vernes, 1883. p. 54 sq. |

202 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

But outside the Temple, the preferred place- tion, in Judah, for child sacrifices, was the high place of Topheth, near Jerusalem, according as written in Jeremiah 7:31: "And they have built the high places (bamoth) of Topheth, in the valley of the son of Hinnom (gey ben-Hinnom) for "burn their sons and daughters in the fire" (2).

"This valley," said Voltaire, "is a dreadful place." where there are only pebbles. It is in this solit- The horrible study of Jews sacrificing their children

Learned scholars claim that he was the Lord of Fire and that for this reason they burned their children in the very hollow of the idol. It was a great copper statue, as hideous as the Jews the pou- were going to do. They were making that statue blush at one big fire, and they threw their little children into

(1) Tridon, Jewish Molochism p. 72.

(2) Jeremie adds: "that which I did not command them". But Ezekiel said, still in the name of Yahweh, and doing alluding to the same events: I gave them precepts which were not good." (XX. 25 quoted above). Each The prophet gets by as best he can. But Yahweh remains with his child sacrifices; that is the most certain thing. tain. 2 the belly of this God, as our cooks throw live crayfish in boiling water their boilers" (1).

THE GOD OF ISRAEL 203

It is the memory of these atrocious scenes that, per- passed down from generation to generation, made the "Valley of Hinnom's son » of the gey ben hinnom » (ge hinnom) – "gehenna" – that is to say, the proto- a type of Christian hell. These devouring flames, these cauldrons and these spoons, and these pitchforks or forks to turn over patients, including still feeds the frantic imagination of the simple of mind, – all of this really existed and functioned set in the accursed valley, where the Jewish priests of the time appeared as the most terrifying The most wicked and the most real of demons. There you have it – between other gifts – what Judaism has bequeathed to Christianity, which has elevated these atrocities to a eternal institution, for the punishment of sinners.

And to think that sinister scoundrels, Jews or Semi- tisé, have the audacity to accuse of immorality and of pessimism among freethinkers who do not believe to the irony of future life [as if pessimism The most detestable thing was not that of the people who, not content with condemning men to death- fiction to renunciation and all the torments of social misery in this life still condemns them

(1) Voltaire, Diclion. philosopher.. art. Topheth.

904 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

"to the small number of the chosen" – to the unspeakable horror from the blazing furnace, where without ever being able to die, they will endure for eternity, the agony of death by fire (1).

This is one aspect of the God of Israel; he yena others. I said previously that Yahweh, as Assur had no consort, no "feminine face". But this only concerns the reformed divinity of Prophets and the Priestly Code; the first Yahveh tif, the one that prevailed until the time of the "captiv-
"Vitality" of Babylon, this god identified with Baal and Moloch also has his "aspect" or his "double". feminine, her Istar or Astarte, who appears here under the name of Ashera. "And the sacred temple of Solomon, said Tridon, was not only a a human slaughterhouse, but a hideous brothel. The Jehovah, sung about at length by classics and novels – ticks, is at once a Moloch of murder and of orgy. Her pomegranate, the love apple of Dionysus, in all its forms, she marries in the temple

(4) The objection that it is claimed that per-no one is doomed from the start and everyone can be saved, is just as strong as the argumentation of the apostles of Capitalism, claiming that under this
With this diet, anyone can become a millionaire. We con-
The results are quite promising. As for the small Regarding the number of the elect, the doctrine of the Church is constant.
Rereading the famous sermon that contributed most to the celebrité de Massillon.

* THE GOD OF ISRAEL 205

to the cauldrons and the ox heads and is printed even on the high priest's robe. All around.
From the Temple extend the sacred groves where the courtyards Priestess herbal teas and impure galls give themselves up to the believers. The Asherah itself, this ancient com-
Jehovah's loincloth, from the judges, throne with him

indeed, "the Syrian or Phrygian goddess" who reappears here with her retinue of holy prostitutes killed (Kedeshoth) and sacred pederasts, "these ignoble monks of Molochism," of which we had not I haven't been able to clear the Temple yet. even of Josiah's reform. In truth, the Jewish- laughs, always so prudish and so indignant when he This concerns the customs of the "pagans" and the so-called Socratic love, the Jewish community should return in itself and remember that vice in question- tion is essentially of Semitic origin as well

—

(D) Tridon; loc. cit., p. 74.— Gen. XXX VIII, 21; Want, XXIII, 18; I Samuel II, 22; 1 Kings XIV, 24; XV, 12; 11 Kings XXI,7; XXII, 4, 7. "Ashera" is a different name for The same divinity, called Astarte in Sidon, Tanit in Carthage, etc., as I indicated in the chapter previous. "Ashera" seems to me to have been the reflection or the special feminine manifestation of Yahweh as Astarte was more like the Baal of the Sydonians. See the article on Astarlé, by M. de Baudassin in the Real-Encyclopaedie fur Protestant Théolog, und Kirche by Herzog and Plitt. Tom. 1. Leipzig, 1877.

206 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

Although in name only: Sodom! One might think what one wants Jupiter and Ganymede; but the height of it of the kind — and which will never be surpassed — is is certainly found in the memorable case of inhabitants of this famous city, who wanted to all force to sleep with the angels sent to Lot.(1) If we recall that, according to the exegetes the most competent, the angels of Yahweh are not that its visible representatives, and, in many In some cases, Yahweh himself in an apprehended form ciable (2), we will realize the enormity of Ia design.

Before concluding this already overly long chapter, and without claiming to exhaust the subject, I nevertheless want to say a few words about the religious rite of the Circumcision decision. Writers, eager to explain by the the most reasonable motives the least absurdities justifiable, claimed that this was a

Semites having such long foreskins that it resulted an obstacle to the regular fulfillment of the reproductive function-. But, in this hypothesis, it is not clear how the semi- race The tick could have perpetuated itself over time paramount and certainly very long where she does not

(1) Genesis, XIX, 4-9.

(2) See. Furst, Hebrew Worterbuch, art. Maleak. 3° ed. vol. 1, p. 737,

THE GOD OF ISRAEL 207

He wasn't yet performing this minor procedure. I... I would say the same regarding the point of view pure hygiene; for the undeniable filth of the Semi-Your [feelings] had never seemed so desperate, that they were reduced to cutting off this piece of skin otherwise the essential part will putrefy and underlying. Well-informed people have given up, on the other hand, to go back to the stay in Egypt the origin of such a custom, where it did not exist Moreover, this only applies to certain specific cases.

It seems certain to me that circumcision generally lise, peculiar to the Semites, is one of the effects of their Religious conception. The astonishing episode reported Chapter IV of Exodus seems decisive in this regard. regard. (1) "Now, one day it happened in a Khan that Yahweh attacked Moses and sought to kill him. And Sippra (Moses' wife) took a stone, and She cut off her son's foreskin and threw it to the At her husband's feet, she said, "You are for me." "a husband of blood." Then Yahweh released Moses.

Circumcision is indeed a form of Molochism in disguise: Failing the child's life, Yahweh is content, on occasion, of this lambean chair and the brand indelible from this bloody sacrifice (2).

(1) Exod. IV. 24-26. Renan translation.

(2) Cf. Ghillany, Menschenopfer, p. 597. Bottiger, Kunst-Mythology, vol. 1, p. 375. Baudassin refutes this opinion without

That this God and this cult, equally atrocious, have been humanized as much as possible by the Prophets and Scribes of Babylon, That is something that cannot be disputed. Without injustice. Again, the Prophets, whose work is, moreover, a mixture, harmful in some respects, they did not succeed—they, however imperfectly. The hard lessons given—born from the Assyrians and the Babylonians, the destruction—successive divisions of Israel and Judah, but above the forced stay of a portion of the Hebrews in middle of the populations of Chaldea (Captivity of Babylon), accomplished what they had not been able to fulfilling Jeremiah's threats: a softening in worship and in customs. Then appears the Commandment relating to love of neighbor — that is to say, in this case, of the fellow citizen, of the "brother"; — but while this maxim of general goodwill, essential to the constitution tuition of societies, spontaneously manifests itself in the Aryan race peoples as flourishing rapid moral evolution, it bears here the characteristic the principle of constraint. The principle on which it Rest is neither sympathy nor the general interest: This is the "heteronomous" will of God, of the Master. "You shall love your neighbor as yourself; for I am Yahweh (1)." "Mosaicism," said Mr. de

(1) Exod. XIX, 18.

THE GOD OF ISRAEL 209

Hartmann had no idea what a good deed in itself. The fear of God, For him, this was the beginning and the end of everything. Wisdom, like all virtues: The commandment is only carried out because Yahweh dictated it, and It is only because he dictated it that he wears a moral character, and not because it is moral himself: from which it follows that every commandment must be kept in the same absolute manner, and that Disobedience always carries the same seriousness. whether it relates to moral law or to ceremonial—nes (1) ».

This is the doctrine that has prevailed in what the Christians call this "religious morality," and who condemned to eternal flames, like a cut-wounded by a mortal sin, and the freethinker who has ate a bacon omelet on a Friday, and the wretch who murdered his father or sold his country.

As Tridon so aptly puts it, in pages admirable ones that one should be able to cite at all whole, this God, this Moloch, thoroughly cleansed with difficulty, could not get rid of his original pillowcase-specific and essential: the one that attaches itself to all monotheistic religion and the worship of one God unique, necessarily arbitrary and bloodthirsty. The Even prophets, despite noble efforts, in

(1) Hartmann, loc. cit. p. 445 sq.

210 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

despite some maxims borrowed from civilized peoples non-Semitic sations, the Prophets fall back at every moment in the bloody rut of their deplorable religion. "Look!" cries Jeremiah, "behold!" the day Yahweh Tsebbaoth takes revenge on his enemies put, and the sword divides them and he is satisfied and envious-"blood stain" (1). The morality of these zealots, not does not extend beyond their peers; all the other nations, the Gentiles, the "goyim" are anathemas, devoted to the Cherem, that is to say to the ex-Termination. "Come, nations, and listen! Peoples, Listen closely, and the whole universe, even the plants, will hear. because Yahweh is angry with all the people They were furious with all the armies, and he has data to be anathemas (Cherem) and he has delivered to be killed. And the lifeless bodies are thrown here and there; a stench rises from the corpses, and entire mountains melt into the blood. And all the heavenly host vanishes, and the heavens are rolled up like a book, and all their legions are precipitated like a leaf falling from the vine and like the ripe fruits of the fig tree. The sword of Yahweh is drunk with blood, etc., etc. (2)".

Blood! Always blood! That's all they have. Word on his lips, and even the Crucified One of Calvary will feel obliged to repeat it, as if to remember

- (1) Jeremiah XLVI, 10.
(2) Isaiah, XXXIV.

THE GOD OF ISRAEL 911

dreadful times when the Molochist Passover was celebrated was fed by a cannibalistic meal, after a sacrifice human flesh. "Eat! For this is my flesh!" Drink! For this is my blood! A)

And here is the God who is about to descend upon the world Aryan! Here come the poets and naturalists who will supplant Homer and Lucretius, Aristotle and Democriticize, and ruin the civilization of Greece and Rome, – while waiting for the squares and the crossroads of Semitized Europe, emerge, new Topheth calves, the pyres of the Inquisition, where The resurrected and regenerated Moloch will be able to feed, as in the good old days of the valley of the son of Hin-name, fat and blood of the victims human.

That is why we will tell the generations
news, so that they may engrave them in their memory and learning for future generations
the inspired pages, and at the same time so terrible reality, where Gustave Tridon, this martyr of Socialism and Free Thought, summarized the just curse of the ages: (2)

"Come then, Jehovah, and be judged by the law."
you did. When in the ideal walk of the desert, you wanted to make it your own for all the

(1) See in Tridon's book, the remarkable eha-clown entitled: The Molochist Passover. loc. cit. p. 124 sq.

(2) Loc. cit. p. 142 sq.

92192 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

crimes, when amidst the murderous flashes you launched the reformist Decalogue, did you ever think to be subject to it – did you think your faithful servants would serve loss, and that you would appear as an accused person in court-

The end of Reason?

"You say: 'No, you will not kill';
and your hands are full of blood and you have nothing but Murderous thoughts. You take responsibility for the disasters.
and plagues for your work. You did not know how to make Your people are a band of assassins, and you...
boasted of trampling nations underfoot, like the Grapes in the press. Your Prophets deposit against you. Your very name accuses and proclaims you murderer, whether you massacre with the sword, that you destroy by fire or poison by the plague.

a You say: "Non furtum facies, – you steal-
"Don't worry," and you only speak to your family in that language.
It's theft. You're only giving them what belongs to others.
Did you not deliver the land of Canaan, homms3s and women, children and animals, to share the gold bloody, like a gang leader with his -c2maccomplices? Isn't it you again who, extolling their lust, was unable to offer them anything in the future
only one ideal: Spolialion |

"No concupisces – you will not covet," and not one of our joys, not one of our glories, and of Our superiorities, which you should not envy. Crouching

THE GOD OF ISRAEL 213

In the sky, you gaze with rage upon the triumphs of the earth. Intelligence, freedom, civilization, the stings of your burning regrets, are your enemies
You put your fist on Babel and your foot on Nineveh. You get along with all despotisms.
as with all plagues...

"A gigantic incarnation of evil, Gargantua" celestial and fierce, a god that Rabelais could not have dreamed of;
murderer, hypocrite and pervert, accomplice and instigator perpetrator of all crimes, that the most ardent
A curse, part of your lips, falls upon you.
Humanity, bloody and slain from your claws, you
It repels you and condemns you to contempt and hatred.
Dark avatar, pilloried through the ages, be Damn it!

CHAPTER VI

THE ARYAN SOCIETY IN GREECE

Mr. Havet and the Origins of Christianity.—The "Anti-City" that of Mr. Fustel de Coulanges—Mr. Jules Girard, on "Religious sentiment in Greece."—Plato and religion

Delphic. — Social life in Greece. — The family.
Alceste, Antigone, Iphigenia. — Euripides and Racine. — Panthea and Bathsheba. — Superiority of the morality of Greek Aryans. — The greatness of the Athenian woman. — Aristophanes and the Rights of Women. —The true cause of the death of Socrates. — Democritus, founder of Philosophy Materialist philosophy and scientific morality.
Aristotle established the definitive foundations of Ethics. — The Philia or the Brotherhood. — The last dream.

Let's look away from these horrific scenes and leaving the "Promised Land," which appears Rather, like that of the Curse, let's address these happy shores where, under the gentle sky of Athens
Nes and Ionia, flourishes in its purest form
The Aryan race's civilization shines brightly above.
from her already hovers, ready to strike, the horrible
the specter of Semitism, the vampire that will soon run dry at home, for many centuries, the sources of life. It will not be difficult to show that this the company owned, before becoming prey to Jewish and Christian world, qualities and virtues,

THE ARYAN SOCIETY IN GREECE 215

which they tried, against all justice, to bring back
the source to the doctrines of Moses and Jesus.
But here again, and right from the start, I must point out the regrettable error of one of our scholars, who, in despite his good intentions, and as a result of a Insufficient definition of terms has been too often against the goal he seemed to have set for himself. The spirit from Mr. Havet's well-known book on the origins

phrase: "I still believe that something great whatever the role of Galilean Judaism in the The Christian revolution, that of Hellenism, is 'much more considerable in the Christia- nism once established, in the one who fulfills history, and in the midst of which we still live today." (|)

If the author here took the word "Christian" in the human sense – as it is done in a way common in England, and sometimes in our country, – that would be much less unfortunate: again He should have explained himself. But he goes much too far. far, certainly, when he claims to find a part of the Christian aberrations in the Thought and Civilization of the Aryan World. In In any case, it was absolutely essential not to write that "The Christian world is better than the world

(1) E. Havet, Le Christianisme el ses CE 4 vol. in-8. Paris, 1874-1884 t. L p. XV.

216 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

pagan, although we shouldn't exaggerate this improvement and even less the opposition supposed- due to these two worlds".(1)

The truth is that this cannot be exaggerated opposition, comparable only to that of the day and of the night, of life and of death. No! We don't will never prove that the Christian world is better than the pagan world. All that one is entitled to To assert this is that the current Aryan world is worth better than the old one, of all that the human mind was able to achieve this despite Christianity, and that he worth less than all that Christianity and the Judaism caused him to lose either positively or in a negative way, by the obstacle presented by- during the course of centuries to its free development. This formula, an undeniable expression of the the reality of things, is more than enough to safeguard the grand doctrine of Evolution, whose laws, of the rest, do not in any way result in, not more in the world of ideas than in the world of natural things, continuous and indefinite progress.

A glance at the state of society in Greece and Rome, before the time of Paul and perfection had arrived in the Aryan race, when the invasion of Semitism plunged it back into... centuries in barbarity.

(1) Loc. cit. p. XX VI.

THE ARYAN SOCIETY IN GREECE 217

Let us first turn our gaze towards this land truly blessed by art, science, and the justice, where the elite of our race knew how to create, in a Such a short time, so many wonders yet unseen – léés. And let's make that perfectly clear: in this Greece itself, so small in appearance, so great in reality, since it still fills the world with its There are still memories and lessons from it. a choice to be made. It's not up to the Dorians, it's not not to the hardened Sparliates that all these are due conquests in such diverse fields, but well at the Ionian branch, including "divine Athens" appears as the most perfect and brilliant incarnation (1)

The reader should first consider the theories presented in the book are not valid scholarly, but absolutely flawed to the point of

(1) I don't even stop at refuting the opinion a mo-predominant ment – thanks to the erudition of semi-scholars, exploited by Jewish criticism, and which traced back to the East–meaning the Semites, Phoenicians, and others–the sources of Greek art and civilization. May the Phae-nicians brought to the coasts of Hellas and into the They, samples of Egyptian and Babylonian art, That is undeniable. But what is even less debatable is... this is due to the spontaneous development of the work admitted the rable of the Greek Arvens, who could only find in themselves are the elements of this perfection, so well made for. to give a resounding rebuttal, with regard to aesthetics tic, to the theory of indefinite progress.

918 __ ARYANS AND SEMITIS

sociological view that Mr. Fustel de Coulanges has published under the title "The Ancient City." The author

all social life in Greece and Rome, to a A series of religious practices. This is not serious.
and in the absence of a precise definition of the terms, this gives rise to the most misinterpretations. The Ancestor worship and worship of protective gods
the city were merging – he himself admits it even – with the idea of family and homeland, made in absolute contradiction with what we hear today, we speak of "religion" and "religious duties."
Furthermore, the ceremonies of this cult no longer,
in civilized Greece, a secondary importance
daire, as it is easy to establish in a few words.
Because, finally, there is a man who wrote a treatise on moral and political issues, in Greece itself, and for his compatriots; he cites the constitutions of a
a large number of states; he studies morality thoroughly, property, government, family, education
tion, etc. Nowhere does he concern himself with this religion which, according to our author, would have everything dominated. This man is Aristotle, to whom Mr. Fustel de Coulanges would have done well to borrow some information. In all cases, the theories that he emits, assuming they are even accurate
From this point of view, they relate much less to the
An ancient city, as it is usually understood, only in the origins of civilization, in prehistoric times

THE ARYAN SOCIETY IN GREECE 919

and fabulous tales of Erechtheus and Romulus (1). Certainly The Greeks were a moral and pious people, in the sense human in the sense of the word. "But this morality and this piety, Mr. Adolf Holm said excellently, they are at home the expression of everyone's instinctive agreement, and not the manifestation of a theory taught by a superior authority. Morality is, for them, the product of the State, much more so than of institutions religious. From there also arose the possibility of a independent science. (2)

In a slightly different vein, but in taking a different, no less expansive, point of view
Mr. Jules Girard wanted to represent the Greeks, like the apostles of religious melancholy-joy and pessimism. "There is in reality among The Greek, he said, was concerned with himself, with his condition-tion and of his destiny, which awoke at the same time that his brilliant imagination, which he put into his early works, however energetic they

Among modern writers, it has not surpassed the pathetic force. and who, later, succeeded through a doubling of passion, to bring out the ideas it contained. He is It's true that religion couldn't support him, nor even the to follow this intellectual endeavor to its conclusion and

(1) See my observations on this subject in Atheism, p.71.

(2) Adolf Holm, Griechische Geschichte, tom.1°*", p.2, Berlin 1886.

920 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

morality towards an ideal of serenity. It was the spirit so Plato's Greek, who collected these ancient con- Conceptions about human destinies, the ports in a decisive surge right up to their end; and in this way, religious tradition entered directly into philosophy" (1)

Well, no. There was no Greek, no real Aryan in Plato, that brilliant imagination, that admirable style, whose enchantments have hidden from the dazzled eyes of generations later, the dryness, the ascetic character, – Dorian perhaps, – but certainly anti-Hellenic– Nonsense, such ideas.

It is possible that, according to Mr. de Laprade, it was not necessary for his disciples and the apostles of Jesus "that the time to talk to each other and to to understand each other in order to embrace in the name of the Logos eternal" (2). But the fact is that the true "tradition" The religious "of the Greeks" is simply the sum of the beliefs expressed in the Homeric rhapsodies

(2) Jules Girard, Religious Sentiment in Greece, from Homer to Aeschylus. Paris 1879, p. 6.

(3)V. de Laprade, On the feeling of Nature before Christ–

anism. Paris , 1886, p. 254. Yet the formula is still erroneous; Plato's disciples are truly slandered here in a good measure I will have to come back to this book which ren- firm, alongside a few bright glimpses, the germ of questions of Christianity.

THE ARYAN SOCIETY IN GREECE 294

ques, in accordance with the myths of the Indo- race European; and the truth is also that, among all the poets, Homer was the first to be expelled from the Republic- Plato's philosophy (1). The "ancient conceptions on the human destinies" to which Mr. J. Girard refers allusion, and this so-called spirit of antiquity "the most powerful auxiliary of Christianity" according to

Mr. de Laprade, are merely formulas of a entirely subjective in nature. This is not about than a corruption of thought and belief these primitive Aryan women, mainly due to the priests of Delphi under the influence of delusions Egyptian and Pythagorean women, as well as Brahmanism was a corruption of the doctrines all naturalists of the Vedas under the influence of Brahmins. They are the priests of this religion delphic, dear to Otfried Müller (2) and to Mr. Curtius (3), who will make every effort to ensure- to undo the triumph of the aristocracy and to ruin the Athenian democracy: it was they who, with the Aristophanes' competition will attempt to kill me

(1) Precisely as too Greek, too enamored of the Nature, respectful of the flesh and the senses. See Plato. Politeia. 11 and III, p. 377-398 (ed. by Étienne).

(2) O. Müller Dle Dorler, Breslau, 1824. See especially Volume I. p. 365 sq.

(3) E. Curtius. Greek history. Book II. ch. 4. (Translated- tion Bouché-Leclercq. tome IT, p. 4 sq. and p. 64-65.)

the atheist philosophers, the Protagoras and the Prodicus, and will not arrive, as a result of the most strange confusion, which precisely exterminates their his own friend, Socrates. This religion will favor in the In the same vein, the introduction and the propagation- tion of mysteries, sad harbinger of the Semi-ism. But, I repeat, it has nothing in common with the Hellenic spirit properly speaking, that it does not never penetrated, as is clearly apparent from the study of Part's masterpieces and of philosophy Philology of Hellas.

What primarily characterizes the Greek Aryan is The love of Beauty, Nature and Freedom. No people were more concerned with beauty harmony of forms and integrity of faculties physical; none understood better how the mind cannot fully develop than in healthy and well-formed bodies. And indeed, the race that knew how to admire and reproduce by the chisel of types like those of Theseus of The Parthenon and the Venus Callipyge were alone capable of producing, and in such a short inter- valley, the greatest geniuses of whom Humanity is proud- unity, in the threefold domain of Philosophy, of Letters and Arts, at the same time as she created the most perfect political form, destined to appear- to be eternally like the prototype of all a truly democratic constitution.

Only the Jews and the Christians were able to support

THE ARYAN SOCIETY IN GREECE 293

that such an accomplished nation was, however, to them inferior from the point of view of feeling and Morality. I'm leaving aside slavery, the interests of which... These people constantly raise an objection: I I will return later, contenting myself with observing ver qué this institution, in honor formerly among the Hebrews, it is still in force today today among Christian nations with the approval- tacit association of the Church, which never formally- I am condemned; I only wish to declare that following the Proletariat, this scourge of societies modern, is just another form – and not preferable – of servitude.

In fact, the social morality of the Greeks, to say the least the "Reverend" JP Mahaffy, author of a cons-

A scientific and very interesting study on "life
"Social" in Greece, cannot in this regard retain a a cry of admiration: "I confess," he said, "that in comparing the religion of Christ on the one hand, that of Zeus, of Apollo and Aphrodite on the other, and in consideration-
Given the enormous contrast, I can only express my astonishment.
not of importance but of the significance of progress made in the field of morality public. It is in this order of events, where the gap should have been the greatest, that we are led precisely to amaze us the most by face of Greek genius, which, despite a theory immoral and worthless, culminates in its most

294 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

high-level demonstrations, to a morality that does not yields in no way to the finest examples of Christianity modern" (1). The author would have been less surprised if his status as a clergyman had allowed him to simply recognizing the superiority of the religion of Zeus and Athena over that of Jesus.
His testimony is all the more valuable, then-
that it is wrested from an opponent by the study biased account of the facts. We must cite a few examples.
ones.

The main focus was on the constitution of The Family in Ancient Greece. While recognizingnascent, which it had as its basis, as with us Monogamy, we shed crocodile tears on the fate of women, "relegated to the "gynaeceum" as in a kind of harem, in at the same time that people were lamenting her absence of this chastity, this modesty, this devotion.
which, according to those involved, would be the prerogative exclusive to the Christian woman. Now, if ever sect or community had a duty to remain silent on Such a subject is certainly that of the Judaized
as will be demonstrated later in the pages dedicated to the Christian family. But, apart from

(4) Rev. JP, Mahaffy, Social life in Greece, from Homer to Menander, London 1874, p. 8. A remarkable book for all In all respects, filled with interesting details, and making it full justice to ancient Greece.

even of any comparative study, and by placing oneself
 From the most general point of view, it suffices to recall-Let's look at some facts to establish the superiority of the Aryan family, in a society that has reached the state of full civilization and not yet contaminated by the influence of Semitism.

Where to find, for example, a more perfect model of conjugal love than in this Alceste, of which The inimitable Euripides has recounted for us the devotion
 And death? Admetus is doomed to a premature end.
 real, unless a human being consents to take his place to meet the requirements of fate. It is his young wife who offers herself in sacrifice, "the best of women who ever lived under
 "The sun!" cried Alceste's maid. "The impending misfortune did not change its appearance
 Sweet and beautiful. Entering the bridal chamber
 And falling onto the bed she shed tears and said:
 - O bed, where this man for whom I die untied
 My virginity, goodbye!... Another woman possesses you-Dera, no longer chaste, but perhaps happier!
 Throwing herself onto the bed, she kissed him and flooded him with larmy eyes. But having had her fill of tears, and, lowering her face, she tore herself away from the room bridal chamber, he entered several times and threw himself upon the bed, again and again! And the children suspended-because of their mother's clothes, they wept; and the Taking them in her arms, she would kiss one of them, then the other,
 One after the other, as if she were about to die. And all

226 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

The servants were weeping, lamenting their teacher. And she extended her right hand to each one, and none was so humble that he did not speak to him and that she did not speak to him. (f)

I know of nothing more touching in any language. This is nature captured in its raw state in this that which is most sublime about her: a young woman and beautiful, sacrificing herself for her husband, but weeping at the fatal moment for his youth and his children.
 No rigidity, no stoic harshness: she cries!
 but still, for the love of Admetus, she goes to Hades, certain that she will not find the Christian.

What to say about an Antigone, and where to find a mo-purest expression of brotherly love and piety

filial than in this noble daughter who, not content to go into exile to serve as a guide for his blind father, brave and suffered death, to give back to his brother
Despite the tyrant's defense, funeral honors due to the deceased?

A duty fulfilled makes death so beautiful!

To this beloved brother, in the same tomb,
I will go and meet, holy criminal (2).

(1) Euripides, Alkestis, vv. 173–195. Read in the absence of the text Leconte de Lisle's beautiful translation.

(2) Sophocles, Antigone, vv. 72–74, translation by Guiard, 1852.

THE ARYAN SOCIETY IN GREECE 997

Despite the so-called "moral progress" achieved folded since the time when the Athenians applauded
I defy even the most skilled and learned to interpret these verses.
to discover in any literature,
Christian or otherwise, nobler sentiments and equally well expressed. No doubt, and perhaps by In reaction against Hegel's partiality (1), we have found some harshness in Antigone's conduct with regard to his younger sister: there is, in fact, a
A bit too rigorous, and more worthy of Sparta than of Athens. But if you need true heroines—
"Angelic" paintings, according to the term used by modern people to express feelings
very ancient in our race, open again
Euripides, that exquisite poet so foolishly belittled
by the pedantic schoolboys, eager to copy each other
each other and to be reproduced without examination,
the self-serving calumnies of the reactionary Aris-Tophane. Never have more modest virgins appeared on no stage, uniting more grace
to greater dignity. "This Iphigenia, this Polyxena (Hecuba), this Macaria, (the Ileraclides), who devote themselves with such painful consistency or such

(1) Hegel, Aesthetik, in Sammil. Werke, volume X, p. 556.

"Among all the masterpieces of the ancient world and In modern times, Anfigone appears to me in this respect as the most perfect and complete. » |

298 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

generous training for a premature death;
this Evadne (The Suppliants), who rushes
in her husband's funeral pyre, whom she does not want to survive... There you have it, said Mr. Patin, paintings too
They are noble and touching. One cannot help but be moved by them.
to stop without the bitter tears that make spreading the appearance of misfortune, do not confuse immediately these tears, sweeter than one can to hold back in the face of representations of beauty moral. » {1},

But the rapid study of a subject treated at the same time by Euripides, and by a Christian poet, will do better.
to bring out the sophistry of the sacred preachers or secularists who praise us, whether through ignorance or by interest, the superiority of Semitic morality. I pray first to those who have been dislocated
my jaw from yawning so much at the performances of our classical tragedies, to hold for certain that these "machines" have nothing in common with the admirable spectacle, partaking of both our drama and our opera, which was just so captivating title the thousands of Athenians gathered on the island Dionysus' theater; this is said without meaning to diminish the merit of Racine's beautiful verses and especially Corneille, much more interesting Moreover, it is something to read in the silence of the office, that...
to hear declaiming in the emptiness of a stage

(1) Patin, Studies on the Greek tragedians: Aeschylus, p. 49.

THE ARYAN SOCIETY IN GREECE 229

French. These reservations made, and all things equal elsewhere, who doesn't feel at first glance the superiority of Euripides' Iphigenia over that of

Cyr, submitting to his parents:

My father,

Stop being troubled, you have not been betrayed;

When you give the order, you will be obeyed. (1)

What a doll! And that's the language!
of a young girl learning that she is going to have her Neck on the hour! The Greek, Aryan Iphigenia,
On the contrary, it lets out the cry of nature and
From the youth: "Don't kill me before my time!"
For it is sweet to see the light. On what Racine fils and the others did not have enough exclamations tions to condemn these "ancient" customs and this
"Cowardice," an inevitable consequence of the absence of virtues Christians. None of them points out how-
The distraught virgin, first overcome by The horrible news soon recovers and exults in facing inexorable fate, and holding his eyes fixed on the future, he cries to his mother in a movement sublime moment: "No! It is not appropriate that I love life so much. You gave birth to me for all the Greeks, and not just for you. What? So many men?
shield-bearers, so many rowers, because of the offended homeland will dare to fight against the enemies-

(1) Racine, Jphigénie en Aulide, act. IV, sc. 4.
15

230 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

I was put in and died for Greece, and my only life would prevent all of that! And as for this one (Achilles), he mustn't die... I give My life to Greece, kill me and overthrow Troy!
These will be my eternal monuments, my wedding,
"My children and my glory!" (1)

I was mistaken earlier. Someone has noticed this, – a fervent admirer of "Christian virtues" – and it was not touched;
On the contrary! For Mr. Maignon, the love of Glory spoils Iphigenia's devotion: "There is too much personality or, if you prefer, selfishness,
he declares, in this sublime ambition of the immortality, when it's simply a matter of giving up

"ment" is adorable. Certainly, that's one point of "Modern" view, which means, in this case, contrary to nature and truth, but in perfect harmony with the feelings of a catechism student schism.

Others are not afraid to criticize the most tragic for poets, what they call baseness of his conceptions. The truth is that Euripides without waiting for the so-called teachings of Christianity has manifested its sym-pathos for the poor and the disinherited, do not fear-

(1) Euripides, Iphigenia in Aulis, v. 1237 sq.

(2) L. Maignon, The Morality of Euripides, Paris 1857, p. 62,

LS -

THE ARYAN SOCIETY IN GREECE 231

not wanting to stage such a miserable scene as he made appear in rags with the heart of a hero. Nothing is more remarkable in this regard than the passage where he depicts his Electra married by her deplorable mother to a peasant who, full of consideration for her, does not want to "defile the bed of this unfortunate daughter of hapless heroes." (1) And the daughter of kings does not hesitate to give back to this poor man man, to this boor, the homage that is due to him: "I place a friend on the level of a god," she exclaimed. "like you." (2) It is in the same spirit that Orestes he exclaims a little further on: "I have seen misery!" reign in the body of the rich and generosity to inhabit the body of the poor... Look at this man, he is not of high rank among mortals, he is not proud of his birth; although he came from people, he showed the noblest sentiments." (3).

I don't want to insist: however, I cannot before concluding this list of examples, resist I am pleased to mention the touching adventure of Panthée and the assessment made by one of the women more distinguished than present-day England in a remarkable article, where the beauty of the form has equal to the excellence of the content, "It is one of the

(2) Ibid, v. 67.

(3) Ibid, v. 369–70, 378–80. See also the fine tirade of the slave in Helen (vv. 711–19, 730–34).

.

232 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

the most beautiful pages in the history of humanity, he said Mistress E. Lynn Linton, and who shows us the the magnanimity of the man and the nobility of the woman of the highest degree of perfection that can
to reach the human race in moral splendor.

This page inevitably brings back memories of the advent similar to the case of David and Bathsheba, while highlighting the contrast between the conduct of a king after God's own heart, in relation to Uriah, and that of an abominable pagan towards Abradate. For Cyrus possesses precisely this self-control even something that David completely lacks, and Panthea can tell her husband how, in
In her absence, the king, who held her completely in his grip, his power, showed himself to be "generous, loyal and merciful to her." When the denouement comes—ment, and the death of Abradate on the battlefield, Panthée will not seek consolation in new loves or a royal wedding;
She stabs herself on her husband's body, "pose
his head on his chest and dies. (1)

Thus, conjugal love and filial piety in this
Their most sublime qualities are modesty and chastity.
Example of resignation and gentleness towards death, delivered by virgins full of youth and beauty, and without the expected compensation of a

(4) E. Lynn Linton Womanhood in Greece (Fortnightly Review, May 1887); see Xenophon, Cyropaedia, book 8.

THE ARYAN SOCIETY IN GREECE 233

paradise in eternity – all these noble feelings
ments, the definitive manifestation of the most moral

What admirable terms! – among the Greek Aryans
from the 5th century BC. (1)

Yes, some might say, we grant you That. But love? Admit that pagan antiquity did not know its subtleties, – limiting everything to fornication.

O blasphemy still unpunished by ignorance or of Jesuitism! Hey! What, the homeland of Ilélène and of

(1) See for further details, in addition to the works already cited: Barthélémy, Voyage du jeune Anacharsis, a book too neglected yet still very valuable, due to the number and the accuracy of the information, with supporting citations;
– Becker Göll, Chariklès III. – Léopold Schmidt, Die
Ethik der alten Griechen, 2 vols. in-8° Berlin, 1884, volume II p.
175 sq. – GF Kolb, Culturgeschichte der Menschheit, 3° edition. Leipzig, 1885, t. I, p. 448, ff. – Honneger, Allgemeine Culturgeschichte, Leipzig, 1886, t. II, p. 237, sq. – Iwan Muller, Handbuck der Klassischen A llertums- Wissenschaft. North-lingen, 1887, t. IV, p. 445, ff. :

A Mrs. Bader published with us on the topic of "Woman" Greek" a book at the threshold of which she found a way to depositing garbage regarding the Commune, considered like "the last convulsion of dying Materialism"
(p. XI). This astonishing person, having had to observe the the grandeur and purity of the Greek woman, emerges in declaring that "even among polytheistic peoples the
The Word revealed itself to elite souls, until the day when "Humanity has received lofty notions," etc. (vol. II, p. 434)

234 | ARYO AND SEMITICS

Sappho, both equally real, since finally the great creations of the human mind come to an end
by appearing, and with full reason, as representations just as objective as that of Nature itself – ah! what, this marvelous earth –
Leuse has not known love in all its passions and all his torments! One shudders to think of what to what extent the Semitic spirit has penetrated and corrupted our conceptions, since he has managed to distort them to this degree Youth education and world opinion. I I cannot insist; I only ask the contradict-authors to reread Racine's Phèdre, and to consider that this admirable analysis of romantic passion –

from the original – from Euripides' Phaedrus. Ah! without Without a doubt, Greek theatre is not like ours.
full of love intrigues; it's the unfaitquires-emerges even better from the astonishment shown by

That is to say, all the good people of antiquity were Semites before their time. This eminently Jewish process could not fail to please the French Academy of 1872, which hastened to crown Madame Bader.

On the contrary, I will cite, as an excellent manual to consult MV Canet's book on "Institutions" of Athens (2 vols. in-12. Paris, 1888). Justice must be done, to who has the right – even to this professor from the Catholic Faculty – the Lille faction which, despite some orthodox pronouncements, moreover sparsely populated, he knew how to appreciate it worthily, in a
A work full of erudition, the grandeur of democracy Athenian.

THE ARYAN SOCIETY IN GREECE 235

we by a host of critics, eager to extaser on Racine's Athalie, because this
The tragedy was able to be brought to a successful conclusion outside of these intrigues. But, in truth, what is a exception in our theatre, appears as the rule among the great playwrights of all time.
Look at Shakespeare: apart from Romeo and Juliet and a few other plays, his greatest dramas, Macbeth, King Lear, Hamlet, Richard III, Coriolan, etc., are no more based on love than those of Aeschylus, Sophocles, or Euripides. That is only in our country, following the example of the Spanish Gnols, we indulged this passion in the theatre,
such a disproportionate place.

It would be pointless to allege, regarding all of the above, that these are borrowed types-linked to drama or epic, and not to characters real. Of course, we didn't see them every day in Athens, no more than today in Paris or in London, of Penelopes and Alcestis. But the
The painting of these sublime types reveals to us amply-
the idea that the Greeks had of morality perfect bed, while at the same time showing us how much, in this respect, they are superior to Christians, far from having been overtaken by them.

Look at the woman, she was there in any case, relegated to the back of the women's quarters in Athens, as in a harem, without rights, without honor, without

936 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

freedom. Besides the examples cited above, and drawn from tragic figures, they really could not have to produce with such morals, the absurdity of This opinion becomes clear upon first examination. Apart from ill will always at work Christian authors, the erroneous assessment of the
the situation of women in the city, at the time of Pericles, owes much to a mis-tense. Because "proper" women as we would say today, were not supposed to show too often in public, going to do their shopping themselves etc., we drew the consequences more unexpected. We did not consider that the Things are happening in much the same way right now.
in the wealthy class. But in Athens, the women
The poor or those of modest means continued to leave every day for their business, like today
those of London and Paris (1).

The truth is that the Athenians honored
as befits these women whose sons are called-Harmodius and Aristogiton, Miltiades, Themis-Tocles, Pericles, Aeschylus, Euripides and Phidias:
"Citizens! Listen all," sings the choir of Regarding the Athenian women in Lysistrata, I have some useful things to offer.
advice to this city, which deserves it for the ecla-

(1) Cf. Voyage d'Anacharsis, vol. II, ch. 20 – Becker-Goll, loc. cit., t. 111, p. 387 – Ivan Müller, loc. cit., t. IV, p. 447a.
– Aristotle, Politig. IV,15 – Aristophanes passim.

THE ARYAN SOCIETY IN GREECE 237

so many tributes with which she filled my youth.
From the age of seven, I carried the sacred vessels;
At ten years old, I was grinding barley for the altar of Athena;
then I was consecrated to Diana in the Brauronies.
Can I not give good advice to the city? Whether I was born a woman, it doesn't matter, if I Do I need to remedy your problems? I pay my share of

But even more importantly, the question of "Women's Rights-
"My" is found placed in the Ecclesiastical with an enthusiasm and precision that leave much to be desired back to the fantasies of aristocratic Communism-Plato's critique. I understand that the most retrograde poets mock here these aspir-tions; but he only observes the reality all the more clearly (2).

(1) Aristophanes, Lysistrata, c. 638 sq.

(2) Aristophanes is definitely a very good friend,
but a detestable citizen. I know, however, someone Something even more annoying, if that's possible, than insults ejaculated upon Athenian democracy and its great men, by this supporter of old customs and old tyrants: these are the praises heaped upon him, even to the point From a political point of view, the Academics' group. You see, like specimen, the notes of a man named Poyard, and especially the deplorable assessment of the infamous play by the Acharnians, represented at one of the most critical moments, for the Athenians, of the Peloponnesian War (Aristophanes, tra-(new translation by C. Poyard, p. 4). The preface to this "Professor at the Lycée Corneille" is one of the monuments
the most remarkable examples of the routine ignorance of cooks college level.

938 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

If we want even more precise proof, one only needs to consult this admirable treatise on the Politics, in which Aristotle determined all the elements of the most complex and the most important in science. Man and woman, both members of the family, said the older one philosophers also form the two parts of the State "so that where the constitution has not

"Not spoken of women" one can say that the me-

"The state is lawless" (1). And elsewhere: "If he
it is important to the greatness of the City that women and that the children be worthy and worthy, 11 must

Mr. Jacques Denis attempted to respond. But it is unfortunate.
that after having fulminated with as much injustice as

He can think of nothing better than to reproduce the ideas, and to a large extent, the argument of one of them (Mr. Müller Strübing, Aristophanes und die historische Krilik, etc., Leipzig, 1873). It is Mr. Denis himself who takes care of inform us (Jacques Denis, La comédie grecque, 1 vol. in 8°, Paris, 1886, t. 1^{er}, p. 242).

As for the author of The Clouds' mocking remarks directed at Socrates, they simply come from the fact that the first had no idea whatsoever of the true role of this ergoteur, no less retrograde than him. It does him the honor of to confuse him with those great sophists, Democritus, Protagoras and the others who were trying to penetrate the system of the world and were preparing science; in fact, he drew on a of his own. Aristophanes, as I have said elsewhere, was the Veuillot of Athens.

(1) Aristotle, Poetik. book. II, ch. 6.

THE ARYAN SOCIETY IN GREECE 239

to give them the education that suits them. However, This is obvious, since women make up half of the free people and that the Children are the citizens of the future" (1).

But that's more than enough to demonstrate the falsity of the generally accepted opinion, touchant the so-called insignificant and undignified situation that Greek society would have done to women. "The Paganism placed it higher than the "Christianity," Mr. Henri Houssaye said very well. We will see later how in the USA, in fact, the Christian society, whose constant motto has been the Saint Bernard's famous cry: "What could be more vile than the woman! (2)

Morals that were also perfect from the point of view of family and social life in general prove enough that, apart from the habits themselves, the _ essential principles of Ethics had been formulated- or could be. Hegel, in agreement with Platon, said of the Athenians, "that before Socrates, they They had customs, but no morals. (3)

In truth! As if the contemporaries of greater than any of the centuries, had needed to wait, To have a moral lesson, the arrival of this old chatterbox,

(1) Ibid. chap. 5.

(2) H. Houssaye, Athens, Rome, Paris, 1870, p. 86.

(3) Hegel, Geschichte der Philosophie, in its own Werke, Berlin, 1833, vol. I.p. 43. :

940 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

as little Greek as possible, who had to drink hemlock much less because of irreligion, than because of... the sound of his hatred for democracy and his liaison with the vilest of tyrants, murderers of patriots and destroyers of the liberties of Athens (1).

The truth is that the Athenians had a morality formulated before that of Socrates and in my concise notes, by one of the greatest philosophers of antiquity. Democritus had the glory of establishing the foundations of scientific or inductive morality, of

(1) This is now an established fact, recognized even by the most entrenched academics, who were forced to receive from abroad the opinion expressed as early as 1736 by our Fréret, in a remarkable memoir that the scholar Grote was for a long time the only one to cite it. "We see in the Aeschines' harangue against Timarchus, says the French academician that the death of Socrates was not attributed to another because of the one I alleged. Here is how it is expressed this speaker: "And you, Athenians, who put to death the Sophist Socrates, because of the lessons he had given to Critias, one of those Thirty who destroyed the government popular, etc." (Observations on the causes and some circumstances Constants in the condemnation of Socrates, by N. Fréret. Read in 1736, published in 1809 in volume 47 of the Memoirs of (Académie des Inscriptions et Belles-Lettres, pp. 209-276). This is what Mr. Ch. Benard translates when he says that "the Socrates' freedom of speech and action displeased the Athenians!" I wouldn't quote his book if it didn't belong to the series of blandly spiritualist manuals which at We corrupt the youth by stupefying them. (The philosophy-Ancient philosophy, 1st part, p. 169. Paris, 1885).

his needs, aims for his happiness and that of the Society. He is the one who deserves to be quoted.
 . as the leader of the "sophists", who, considered in their true form they appear in the in full light of the services rendered to Science, to Morality, to Philosophy, and not in this clarity sinister slander spread about them by Socra-Tic and Platonic. He laid the foundations of scientific materialism, that is to say, of the Science itself, by establishing that Nature is eternal, uncreated: nothing is made from nothing, and nothing cannot be annihilated. His theory of Necessity that So many fools have joked in imitation of scholars bad faith, is simply the idea of Law substituted for that of Chance and Providence.
 This concept of the ananke, of which he was the first given the positive demonstration, Aryan wisdom
 had long since discerned it in the inevitable game-the forces of Nature. It is she whom we found throughout Greek theatre, as we know recognizes in Shakespeare and in all the great poets of our race, uncontaminated by the incu-Semitic lation; Darwin merely completed it the demonstration. Call it "Gods," "Fata-"Lity," "Virtue," "Heredity," it remains acquired today, human life is dominated by the weight of previous generations, and that the Crime and misfortune are hereditary among us.

949 / ARYANS AND SEMITIS

as in the past in the families of the Atrides and Labdacids. Not to mention that to position oneself
 From a general point of view, one must never forget that human will, although it has its part.
 undeniable in the sequence of events,
 nevertheless remains determined by the sequence natural events "Tragic heroes," said excel-(Hegelian element), act by virtue of such a character, of such passion because it is character, the passions that are their own; there is no choice here nor indecision. Which is precisely what makes the strength of Great minds, that is, they do not choose;
 They are what they are, and that will be eternally so, and that is their greatness". (1).

In any case, it is to Democritus, I repeat, that the glory belongs to having established the scientific foundations ethical principles as they should be, not realistic and chimerical, but on the very nature of the man who commands him, in the name of self-interest general as well as particular, to seek his happiness in this life. Now, happiness is found, he said, in the balance of the soul (euthumia) liberating-shit of all disturbance; (2) we get there by the

(1) Hegel, Aesthetics, in vol. X, of the complete works, p. 533.

(2) See. Mullach, PERSENRE Abder. op. PO Berlin, 1843, octavo, fr. 1

THE ARYAN SOCIETY IN GREECE 243

Science, which delivers us from ridiculous fears and superstitious things (1), teach us to discern the genuine pleasures, to be enjoyed in moderation (2) and to limit our desires (3).

(There is no satisfaction, he had already proclaimed) Kapila, that when evils of all kinds come— This will continue to cease as a result of Science, which distinguishes things.” (4) Isn’t it an admirable spectacle— It is remarkable to see, in those distant times, these two geniuses separated by space and time, manifest in such a brilliant way their community Of origin? On the banks of the Ganges as well as on the shores From Ilissus, the Aryan sage glorifies nature and celebrates Science, the sole guarantor of happiness man.

Moreover, by establishing the foundations of morality scientific, also called inductive or utilitarian, Democritus, no more than the materialist philosophers later lists, did not appeal to the lowest inspirations rations of exclusively personal interest, or Misunderstanding. He too preaches love of one's neighbor. one of the necessary conditions, for any soul truly right, of this happiness that everyone owes

(1) Fragm. 119.

(2) Fragm. 47.

(3) Fragm. 24.

translation, by Ballantyne. Allahabad, 8°, 1852.

214 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

strive to achieve something in this life without a future. He proclaims, and in terms admirable in their precision, this great principle of benevolence or solidarity, so rightly praised by Hobbes (1) as one of the most indispensable elements of social life. "He who loves no one," he said, short, high risk of not being liked by anyone (2) "The unjust man is more unhappy than he who suffers injustice (3)". And finally: "He It is kind of heart to be lenient towards the fau- yourselves from others." (4).

This did not prevent one of the radicals from Eclecticism to speak its mind to the philosopher of Ab- dère: "The essential characteristics of the Ethics of Democritus, writes Mr. Renouvier, are the same which we have recognized in most doctrines from antiquity: they all boil down to the principle of Isolation and selfishness. This contempt for life common and vulgar men who were flowing in the symbolic tears of Heraclitus, we know that he exhaled mockingly with "Island of Perpetual Laughter" of Democritus; and this double myth of despair and

(1) Hobbes, Leviathan, Part, I. ch. 15.

(2) Democritus, loc. cit. fragm. 161

(3) Ibid. fragm. 224.

(4) Ibid. fragm. 149.

THE ARYAN SOCIETY IN GREECE 245

Disdain represents almost all of morality. from antiquity before Socrates. (1)

It was worthwhile to quote this remarkable exchange tillon of the spiritualist polemic and of the spirit I am a "liberal" advocate of free will. tempted to prefer their master to these gentlemen Plato, who, through the effect of hatred or jealousy, he never spoke of Democritus, so a rumor

Socrates, suspected of having wanted to burn the works of the one he despaired of refuting (2).

(1) Renouvier, Manual of Ancient Philosophy, vol. I, p. 261. 1844.

(2) Diogenes Laertius. Book IX. 8 (p. 237 of the Didot edition)

"However incredible such a thing may seem to us fanaticism, says Lange, is nonetheless consistent with the Plato's character; and as the guarantor of Diogenes Laertes For this story, it is none other than Aristoxenus, we are "Perhaps facing something more than a tradition." History of Materialism, translated by Pommerol with a introduction by D. Nolen, t. I, p. 447).

Zeller, it is said, did justice to Democritus. Yes, but For him, as for Mr. Bénard, who copies him, morality The philosopher of Abdera's work is an "appetizer" without connection with the system. Just think! A materialist would ask the the true foundations of ethics! This would not be suitable for these gentlemen, for whom atheism can only be the source of immorality... If Democritus's morality is good It's because she disagrees with its premises. Don't look- I don't know the proof of this baseless assertion; it's a

16

246 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

In fact, I wouldn't quibble with Mr. Renouvier about this passage, if it did not have the pretension of speaking in A philosopher, not just a writer. Laughter. Democritus's story has since become a myth. Horace and Aulus Gellius, and as in all the myths, there is a grain of truth here: this proves at least that the Master of Abdera did not belong not in the category of whiny philosophers and pessimists. But it would at least have been appropriate for a historian to indicate the reality and to pe point apparent to ignore this fragment of the same Democritus: "It is good, as men, not to "To laugh at the misfortune of others, but to grieve over it." (1) But what's the point of insisting further on the excellent- the inclination of Aryan morality from those distant times, in appearance – in reality so close to us – Wasn't it the abyss dug by the Semitic spirit? And competent men, to quote the "Morality of Aristotle » this admirable and profound book, this code perfect where they are formulated in broad outline All the laws of Ethics? Therein lies the establishment victoriously, the scientific theory of existence a simple sophism of the kind called ignoratio elenchi, – willful ignorance of people who turn a blind eye to the obvious dence. (Cf. Zeller, Die Philosophie der Griechen, Theil I, p. 630 19; t. II, p. 340 sq of the Boutroux translation).

(1) Ibid, fragm. 167.

THE ARYAN SOCIETY IN GREECE 947

human nature and its goal: happiness, "The man's own property – excellently said the philosopher of Stagira, – happiness, consists in the activity of intellectual and moral faculties, maintained to their highest degree of perfection in the course of a full and favorable life. For One swallow does not make a summer, no "More than just one more beautiful day." (2)

(2) Aristotle. Nicomachean Ethics. Vol. 7 (p. 1098, of the edition Becker). This is the true translation of the famous energeia kat'uretèn, etc., as I believe I have defined it – established in an unpublished memorandum presented to the Academy of moral and political sciences, in the 1879 competition. I didn't win the prize, naturally, although, according to the rapporteur, Mr. Havet, my victorious competitor had not I understood absolutely nothing about the entirely naturalistic nature of Aristotle's morality – that on the contrary, according to the same As rapporteur, I was able to appreciate it very well. Mr. Havet, I I hasten to acknowledge that it did justice to the "memorandum" No. 1 » mine, as much as he could, speaking on behalf of of a learned body, or so-called such, led by the Francks And the Jules Simons. But, one might ask, what were you going to do? In this mess? Here's the thing: exiled then to England and having no way of giving the necessary publicity For a job of this kind, I had wanted to make a date at regarding such a serious matter which I I believed, rightly or wrongly, that I had some original ideas. (See the Report presented to the Academy on behalf of the section) of morality on the 1879 competition for the morality prize. Sessions and proceedings of the Academy of Moral and Political Sciences

This theory is none other than that of morality utilitarian or scientific, which commands man to achieve his good on this earth, through development-contribution of its triple activity, physical, intellectual and morality. Also far removed from irritating pessimism than blissful optimism, it contains and uses all the energies of human life, and history even from Greece, with its cult of art, of the science and beauty, is merely the practical application of than of these true principles of which Aristotle has given the theory. Far from consecrating, as one He said it, the triumph of selfishness, in the contemptuous sense of the meaning of the word, it cannot be reconciled, on the contrary, with respect for the happiness and rights of others.

This purely human morality includes, moreover-theirs, even better than the most fantastical ethics transcendental quantity, all the sacrifices with all the dedication. There will always be elite hearts, as I have said elsewhere (1) for who has the glory of having served the good cause, although defeated, will be the most sublime happiness and the more real. "That does not prevent," said Aristotle, "that The perfect man is not ready to do anything for his his homeland and his friends – even unto death for them. will neglect wealth, honors, in a word all the goods that the crowd fights over, do not reserve for themselves

(1) Atheism, loc. cit. p. 103.

THE ARYAN SOCIETY IN GREECE 249

before honor and glory (to Kalon). He prefers intense pleasure, even if it only lasts a for the moment, to a life of mediocre and without pleasures glory. (1) This is the philosopher of Stagira, so badly commented on so far by his enemies, which gives to the morality of Atheism this brilliant consequence.

And not content with determining the foundations of Ethics, to define the concept of justice if

He appealed to the Brotherhood once again. Word
"New!" they exclaim, "a feeling unknown to..."
Ancient! A truly ancient sentiment, I tell you!
Aryan in its essence, rediscovered only after eighteen centuries by the Revolution, in this a time when, by an admirable instinct, no one could have imagined
Nothing better to embody a regenerated humanity, than to represent it in its various forms and appearances Remarks of Athena Promachos, the virgin of Parthe-no, adored once again like Reason and like Liberty |

Reread the two admirable books devoted to by Aristotle to philia, and also the passages of Politics, where he discusses harmony between the citizens, in their relationship with good orderpance and the interest of the State. "The State," he said, "has above all with the aim of the common happiness of families and

(1) Efhic., Nicomach. 1X.. (page 1168 b 26).

9250 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

individuals, united in the sense of a perfect and free life.
This naturally presupposes marital union, the phratries, sacrifices, occupations of life in common. All of this is the work of the Fraternity (philiias); it is this that disposes one to social life, whose end is happiness." (1) And this one too:
"The progress of morals will fulfill the saying, -
"Everything is shared between those who love each other." Isn't it?
It is not obvious that the word "friendship" is entirely insufficient to translate the Greek word philia here, and that it
It is indeed a feeling decorated with beauty
Title of Fraternity? |

But we must leave too soon, by sending him a final farewell, this land of Greece where under the flood-the elite of the Aryans flourished alongside the Science and Beauty, these delicate flowers that we
It calls for Kindness, Solidarity, and Justice.
When will the time come when the sun's rays weakening, on this already cooled globe, the 'Human-nity will sense its approaching end, and that it will be the consolation for the survivors of the last hour,
as is the case for all dying people, to think to great things accomplished and to beautiful days past, - no era will appear to them more gentleness and serenity at the head of Democracy Athenian, free and glorious; where the lover and

(1) Politics III. p. 1280 b. 29.

THE ARYAN SOCIETY IN GREECE 251

Wise Aspasia with hair the color of a ray of light honey, climbed to the Acropolis to pay homage to the only helpful deity, to Reason, divinized by Phidias in the "Temple of the Virgin", in the Parthenon; where, if there were slaves, there were none had no proletarians; where every Athenian was citizen: where the fortune of some did not form with the scarcity of others this appalling contrast created since then through the accumulation of common wealth in the hands of Jewish bankers. Yes, whatever It happened, and Jerusalem had to, – as this can be fear – to crush us and strip us of everything
In fact, Pallas Athena's vows in favor of her beloved city will be fulfilled even more surely than the promises of the Prophets, and Athens, crown-Born of olive trees and violets, Athens, the true City Holy, will appear eternally as the glory and the light of the world |

259 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

CHAPTER VII ROMAN SOCIETY

Rome embodies Strength, and outlines the political unity of the humankind. – The Arvens of Italy and the naiiona-Etruscan lity.– Machiavelli and Montesquieu.– Situation
Of women in Rome. – Their emancipation. – Juvenal, Tertullian and Victor Hugo. – Retrograde character
Satires by Juvenal. – Roman heroines. –
Pliny the Younger, Tacitus, and Propertius.– The Roman woman
according to the inscriptions. – Improvement of the lot of the eskey, stopped by Christianity.– The Proletariat, worse Slavery.– Emancipation.– The truth about Bread and Circuses. – Public assistance recognized at Rome as a social right.– The luxury of the Romans and Capitalism.– Rome and Carthage.– Christianity ruins the Roman Empire.

This pious enthusiasm that excites in every mind
cultivated, the in-depth study of divine Athens, unfortunately does not seem destined for yet to transcend the limits of a restricted circle, of a
For their part, the people are unaware, condemned to this meager existence.
dependency of such a basic and compulsory education to which some students from the École Normale Supérieure, servants Jews would like to reduce the entire nation;
The other, a different name emerged: that of a a unique city which, while belonging to Greece, for as regards the realm of Beauty and Truth, a

ROMAN SOCIETY 253

able, with the help of this virtue called Strength, organize the peoples and achieve an incomparable
an outline of the political unity of humankind,

Declaimers of all kinds, from the most radicals, even the most reactionary, have said of Ronie, she had been the "She-Wolf" of the world -- borrowing very inappropriately from Dante this harsh image which he uses to stigmatize the Papacy (1).
For me, without sharing the exaggerated enthusiasm
Positivists who, precisely because of this role organizers played by the Romans, put them unjustly placed above the Greek Aryans, I then, from no point of view, to subscribe to the judge-the ment of those who fail to recognize the immensity of the service rendered to humanity by the victors of Moloch carthaginois, by the civilizers of the Occident.

This is a fact that is now generally recognized,
contrary to an old and repudiated theory
by thinkers worthy of the name, that every great
The nation is one, from the point of view of race. No one no longer accepts the legitimacy of the ridiculous fable according to which Rome would have been founded by a rabble outlaws summoned from all corners of Italy in Romulus's asylum, not to mention the Trojans of Aeneas and the Arcadians of Evander. Ramnes and The Iliads, Latins and Sabines, the primitive inhabitants of Rome, from the ancient Septimontium, belonged Undoubtedly, like all populations proper Italians, to the Aryan family.

However, when we see how much some qualities of the master breed are lacking in Romans, such as, for example, the aesthetic faculty and scientific aptitude; when one observes other
On the one hand, how certain imperfections – if all-Sometimes we can call them that – very notable among our fellow humans, such as lightness, carelessness of the practical result and the excessive kindness going until weakness sets in, they are replaced at home, at
On the contrary, through tenacity in the pursuit of the goal, and above all by undeniable cruelty; when finally we observe the dark and childish character at the same time
time of their religion, almost completely Désarianysér, one is entitled to wonder if We do not need to consider a foreign element here.
added to the decidedly Aryan whole.

The question, once asked, immediately calls for
The answer: it is definitely about nationality Etruscan.

Whatever the language previously unknown to Rasennae (1), they certainly do not belong

(1) This is the name of the particular people, to whom the Tuscans (Tusci), Umbrians originally inhabiting the country, invaded since then, these foreigners transmitted their own denominator-nation in the altered form of Etrusci. See L. Lange,

ROMAN SOCIETY 255

to the Aryan family (1). In the absence of the characteristics philological sciences, anthropology, the whole of physical types can provide us with some information, albeit incomplete. Mommsen has already emphasized the profound difference, to this
From a point of view, between the Rasenes and the Indo-Germans, so evident in examples of Etruscan art,
as free from Hellenic influence. These broad heads and their frizzy hair, their pom-protruding features, their eyes like those of Mongols as they are depicted in Some paintings from Etruria have nothing to do with common with the elegance and delicacy of the forms, specific to the Greeks and Romans (2).

But certainly the "psychological type", the element

Römische Alterthümer, 1 p. 68, 3rd edition. Berlin 1876 (tom, I. p. 12 of the partial translation published by Messrs. A. Berthelot and Didier under the title of Internal History of Rome, etc. 1835).

(4) Corsen's important work, no more than the recent research by Deeck (Etruskische Forschungen, Stuttgart, 1880) were unable to establish the relationship of * Etruscan with Italian dialects. (See. Fr. Stolz, ar-the article Latinische Sprache in the 42nd fascicle (2nd section) of the Encyclopedia of Ersch and Grüber, Leipzig, 1888.)

(2) Mommsen, Roman History, 1 ch. 9 (vol. 1 p. 160 of the translation Alexander.)- Cf. Isaac Taylor. Etruscan re-searches, London, 1874, p. 61.

256 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

the most important aspect of racial differentiation civilized (1), has no relation to that of the Aryan race. Without going into details that will not would find a place here, I will simply content myself with to recall the dark and cruel nature of beliefs Etruscans. "It was a religion of terror," he said. Dennis. The most feared deities were those who received the most tributes and to... To reconcile them, they even went so far as to offer them sacrifices. "humans" (2), Among the subterranean deities, the hideous goddess Mania, that prototype of the vampire, appears as a creation of the most pessimistic panicked; Aryan mythologies do not offer natural-nothing even remotely resembling it. Under Tarquin the Superb, they were still sacrificing children for him (3). In the war against the inhabitants of Tarquinia, These people sacrificed three hundred and seven to their gods Roman prisoners (4).

children are not found, as far as the civilized races, such as among the Semites (5). However

(1) See ch. 1°.

(2) G. Dennis, The cities and cemeteries of Etruria, 2nd ed. London, 1878, vol. 1, p. 53.

(3) Macrobius Satires I. 7.

(4) Tit. Liv. VI 15. See also on this subject, O. Müller, Die Etrusker, ed. Deecke, Stuttgart, 1876, volume. II. p. 103.

(5) See above, p. 76 and 199 sq.

ROMAN SOCIETY 257

everything we know about the Etruscans, and especially the distinctly shamanistic character (1) of their religion would tend to make them return to the family Touranian(2)}. But, there was certainly here a import similar to that which must be returned responsible, as mentioned above, for the hor-teachers of the Celtic religion. In fact, the teachings ments, as far as the Etruscans are concerned, have a very precise character. Their connections with the Phoenicians, who made them, without too much difficulty, Apparently, a pirate people in their own image, their alliance with the Carthaginians is an established fact and brought to light by Mommsen (3). "The Etruscans, says a recent author, appear to us as intermediaries between the East and the West-

(1) Professor Tiele, in his classification of Religions (Encycl. Brit., vol. XX, art. Religion) rightly classifies that of the Etruscans in what he calls "the magical religions" than organized.

(2) Mr. Isaac Taylor, in his Etruscan researches, cited above, sought to promote this opinion, which seems the most plausible. Unfortunately, at the lieu de s'en te-to sociological characteristics, the only ones on which we has information as complete as some, he has. spoiled an excellent cause by forcing the analogies to the point

Etruscan deities with those of certain gods or goddesses of various Iranian peoples.

(3) Location. cit., tom. 1st p. 193, ff. and tom. II. p. 103-104.

258 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

tooth, between Asia and Europe. We will not know probably never their ethnic character; but There is no doubt that they gathered and spread These are elements of Phoenician-Assyrian and Egyptian culture. and Greeks" (1).

Let us leave aside Greece, to which they do not pray rentqueles principes de l'art, lequel estacul- their homes, as Lange so aptly puts it, to the caricature of Hellenic art proper (2).

As for Phoenician civilization-

Assyrian, that is to say Semitic, the author has Absolutely right. Fortunately, these influences,

Although deplorable, they were held in check in up e large mesure par l'genie proper de l'race

Aryan. The bloody horrors of the rites

Etruscans disappeared from the Roman religion, no

however, without leaving any unfortunate traces.

explain and justify Lucretia's indignation.

A large number of formalities relating to the division nations were also borrowed by Rome from Tyrrhenians. This quidemeura, for example, and without

The mitigating factor, it seems, is the taste for games.

bloody amphitheater, also from proven-

Etruscan nance.

But this formalism of Roman religion, which led the most

e— eu

(1) D'F. Ratzel, Volkerkunde. Leipzig, 1888, volume. IIT, p. 733.

(2) Lange, loc. cit.; p. 15 of the translation.

ROMAN SOCIETY 259

scholars, like Mr. Fustel de Coulanges, should not historical Rome, at least, religion is only the servant of the State, far from being superior to it, and Patriotism is its highest expression. Here, no more so than in Athens, there is no priestly caste; the Colleges of priests are essentially agents of public worship, of state officials; these are the principal magistrates, the generals having the imperium which "have the auspices" (1). "The soldier ro-hand, said Mr. G. Boissier, has never resembled the Jew, who had so much repugnance to taking the weapons on the Sabbath day; he did not wonder about presence of the enemy, if he had the right to fight and no scruple occurred to him, when The consul gave the signal for the battle. Moreover, theologians had decided that when one is attacked, every day is a good day to save his life and defend the honor of his country" (2).

This religion, which served only the interests of the State, so different from ours, which mainly serves those

(1) "Auspicia habere" Let us not forget, moreover, that at the time According to Cicero, "the auspices were no longer taken seriously by no one. Virtually abandoned by the generals, proconsuls and proprietors, they were now nothing more in Rome than a pure formality. Bouché-Leclercq, art. Auspice, in Dictionary Greek and Roman antiquities from Daremberg et Saglio.

(2) Gaston Boissier, Roman religion from Augustus to Antonins, 3rd ed., 2 vols. in-18°, 1884, t. 1°, p. 22.

960 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

of his priests, could therefore not place any obstacle on the development of the Roman city; other On the other hand, there is a taste, however deplorable, for fighting. of gladiators, tending to obliterate, unfortunately- The feeling of pity, further hardened the courage of the Romans, who had become all the less concerned about the lives of others, they did good market of theirs (1). This is how the Aryans

(1) It is a complete mistake to imagine the gladiators like a herd of wretches and slaves, forced to slaughter each other for pleasure spectators. Apart from the condemned men who were present

For a large number of people, this was the exercise of an honorable profession. "In the eyes of the masses, said Lecky, the considerable sums paid to the winner, the patronage of the great and even of emperors and more even more popular enthusiasm bordering on delirium, of which were the object of the triumphant gladiators, compensated "largely the dangers of the profession" (History of European Morals, t. 1°, p. 290). The admiration of the Spanish for their great bullfighters can only give a fair a good idea of the Romans' enthusiasm for their gladiators, enthusiasm justified in a certain sense, and which cannot, in any case, be blamed in any way. from the perspective of our modern duelists. We know the past-Cicero's age: "Has anyone ever heard the most lamented A mediocre gladiator? Have we ever seen one change his... face ? » (Tuscul, Quaest. lib. II).

That there was therefore a school of courage there, where a whole chancun was truly learning to brave death, that's what

ROMAN SOCIETY 961

of the Eternal City, with its own unique qualities
their race modified by those of nativity
The Etruscans were the best armed for to carry out, in the political order, this conquest and this civilization of the world, achieved by the Greeks
in the intellectual and moral order (f}).

These laws concerning race were indisconceivable to shed light on the history of the Roman people.
Of course, we don't presume to teach anyone a lesson.
Montesquieu, and especially not Machiavelli; they wanted only to complete, with the help of the conquests of the modern science, the views of these illustrious thinkers.
"If there has ever been a republic that has
"It has made the same progress as Rome," said the immortal.
author of the Speeches on Tile Live, it's that never which cannot be denied. It is a fact that had to be acknowledged.

_ ter: because it has its place in explaining the fortunes of Romans. Which doesn't prevent one from preferring once to plus the Greeks, among whom these bloody spectacles did not never acclimatized. We know the beautiful saying of the philosopher Demonax, which, during an attempt made in view upon their introduction in Athens, he exclaimed: "But he will
"Then we must overthrow the altar of Pity." (Lucian, Demonax.)

(1) I understand that Alexander's conquests were essentially political in nature. But this victor, at which the positivists rightly give one of the first places among great men, founded only royal – my of a passing duration: what persisted was the Greek culture, especially in this city of Alexandria, which appeared like a second Athens.

17

9269 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

The republic has not received institutions like it likely to enable him to make conquests.” (1) We we now know – what remained in the state of desideratum – that its institutions were the result special ethnic characteristics of the population. I am now tackling a very delicate task, by trying to present a picture of society It is Roman before Christianity. Yet it is much easier today, for those who like me, want to demonstrate that religion the news did not improve things any more in Rome than in Athens the fate of humankind; the truth lies even precisely from the opposite point of view. Not only Mr. Renan, in a few pages admirable, but pure Sorbonne students like Mr. Gaston Boissier, undisputed scholars like Friedlaender, have refuted the allegations. the arguments of Christian apologists as well as Juvenal's declamations. It was not so twenty years ago, when every academic... believed he was obliged to compete with the preachers of Notre-Dame, drooling over the things of that era, unfortunate enough not to have see not known the "benefits of Christianity"; not to mention that it involved a fine and a prison sentence. its for free thinkers, audacious and "sub-

(1) Machiavelli, Discorsi sopra la prima deca di T. Livio, Book II, Chapter 1.

ROMAN SOCIETY 263

"Versifs" to the point of demonstrating the superiority of the

However, the efforts of these impartial workers have finally made the truth prevail, at least in the an enlightened public; there are no more dissidents, at with the exception of certain positivists and a few anthropologists, who, not knowing how to position themselves at From a sociological point of view, they persist in confusing the doctrine of Evolution with the theory as well false as it is annoying, of fatal and continuous Progress. The idea we have of the Roman family in the bourgeois world, however, is still that of a miniature state in which the father exercises- had the most odiously despotic power. That this was the case in the early days of The Republic, unfortunately, is a fact. constant, and attested, moreover, by the laws which go so far as to give the father the right to life and He died on his children. We are no longer here. Let us not forget, among pure Aryans: we do not we are no longer in Greece, where paternal power was always temporary and where the greatest the strict measures permitted to the father of the family consisted of to expel his son from his home and disinherit him (4). But this barbarous legislation fell into disuse-

(4) Dionysius of Halicarnassus. Book II, 26 and 27. This author Moreover, he was careful not to miss this opportunity to exalt once again, and most inappropriately, the excellence of the cou- Roman texts. L

264 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

study with the progress of ideas and the perfection- moral development: and for a long time now, the execution Public creation and contempt had done it justice when the jurisprudence of the first emperors abolishes it definitively (1), This, to the great regret of Bodin, according to [unclear] very Christian and very orthodox which "it is necessary in the well-ordered republic- born, to restore to the fathers the power of life and of death, which the law of God and nature... gives {2?}).»

It is also very true that the woman could be treated as children, the husband also having on She had the power of life and death. But that hadn't only in the case where her family had put her in manu, under the power of the husband, either by the religious marriage or confarrealitio, either by the coemptio. Marriage by usus (3) was not sufficient

(1) Since Trajan, any father who mistreats his son is forced to emancipate him.

A father had killed his son while hunting. Because that he had committed adultery with his beautiful mother (nover'ca, the father's second wife). Despite these circumstances—constants very favorable to the murderer, Adrien the condemned to deportation: (Accarias, Précis de Droit romain, 4th edition. 1886. Tom. I.p. 188.)

(2) Bodin, The Six Books of the Republic, Paris. 1583. Book. 1. ch. 4. — Cf. Deuteron., XXI, 18 21.

(3) We know that through continued cohabitation, the husband acquires rait lamanus on his wife, even when neither the confarrealto, nor had coemptio placed it under his power. But

ROMAN SOCIETY 265

moreover, at the end of the Roman Republic, for to give the manus. It is an established fact that the Marriages without a mother predominate after the wars. Punic and were the only ones in force at the time imperial. But, in that case, one might say, the woman remained subject to paternal power, attached always to the family she had just left. Without no doubt; only like the power paternal, at that time was, in a way, Having fallen into disuse, the link wasn't really a problem. Moreover, there was always, for her, a way legal to evade even the guardianship of his own parents (1), so that at the end of the Republic—Republic, this Roman woman on the miserable fate of which so many people are still feeling sorry, was indeed the freest, most mistress of a wife of his actions that were in the world (2). “The rights by staying out three nights in a row in the same year, The woman was warning of this outcome. Besides, even the confederation. realio, which remained mandatory for the Flamens of Jupiter, of Mars and Quirinus eventually ceased to give the manus A senatus-consulte (Tacit. Annal. IV. 16) decided that the The woman of the flamen dialis would no longer pass under the power marital as with regard to worship (Accarias, loc. cit.

(1) The "coemptio fiduciaria, tutelæ evitandæ causa", Gaius, I. 105.

(2). Marquardt and Mommsen: Handbook of the Roman Law Allerthimer, Tom. VII. Leipzig, 1879, p.61 ff.

266 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

which she inherited from her own family, said the eminent jurist Sir Henry S. Maine, resided intact under the supervision of his guardians, including authority, in many respects, prevailed over that of the husband. 11 of this had resulted for the wife Roman woman, married or not, with a very strong independence great from the point of view of his person and his goods; for the latest laws tended to nullify in a way, the authority of the guardians, while that of the husband was in no way strengthened by the form of marriage then in vogue. The Christianity, on the contrary, tended to restrict from the outset. From the beginning, this remarkable independence. Guided firstly by their aversion to the practices of pagan world, then driven by their rage to a— This, the doctors of the new faith saw from a This form of marital bond, the most coward that one would have still observed in the world Western. Roman legislation of the last era, insofar as it is modified by the cons— institutions of the Christian emperors, bears the em. showing a clear reaction against the doctrines liberal ideas of the great jurists of the era of Antonines {1}." This is a decisive statement, emanating from an English scholar not suspected of being free Thought, and yet one who does not hesitate to observe, based on an impartial examination of the facts, the influence harmful and decidedly retrograde exercised by the. Christianity on the evolution of marriage and the family.

(1) HS Maine. Orient Law, p. 155–156.

ROMAN SOCIETY 267

Aryans do not consider themselves defeated. With the same zeal they put into pleading the case "unfortunate" Roman women, considered as slaves to their husbands, they deplore their extreme freedom and the debauchery that would entail was the sequel! a Juvenal appears here as their ba-size. However, it is a well-established fact today that this Tertullian without excuses – since finally he was not a Christian, – was merely a talented declaimer who composed in cold blood, long after the disappearance of tyrants, the salaries that immortalized him. The popularity enjoyed by this armchair buffoon in our country during the Second Empire, this was explained enough by what I would call the external elements of the cause. It is to these circumstances that one must to attribute the strange exclamation of Victor Hugo: "Juvenal is the old free soul of the republics" dead wounds: he has within him a Rome in the bronze of which Athens and Sparta are melted down (1). That's still acceptable for the oligarchic Sparta; but To speak of Athens here is to go beyond the bounds of the license, even poetic; and to add that Corneille

(4) V. Hugo, W. Shakespeare. Liv. II. $8.

268 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

is only a "spark" of Juvenal, it is to cross suddenly the limits of reason to enter into full in the realm of Juvenal's mental aberration, Moreover, talent is nothing ancient; would alone justify, if such a thing were possible, the claims of the misguided who assert that the Christianity emerged from Paganism. In fact, and despite one of the countless assertions par radical ideas of the author of The Donkey, this overly satirical Vanté was just a bitter bourgeois – we don't know too why (1), – who spent his time denigrating men and things without having had, it seems – Does he, like Rousseau, excuse madness by mixing-colic. He was an Aryan with a semi-tick – we see such things – and that's why the Church Fathers and other Christians, destroy-authors of so many literary masterpieces ancient, have carefully preserved this repertoire{{inscriptiones regni Nanolitani, n° 4312) leaves no doubt on the actual situation of Juvenal, in the society of his Time: "To Ceres, – D. Junius Juvenal, tribune of the cohort of Dalmatians, five-year duumvir, flamine of God Vespasian, dedicated and consecrated this sanctuary to his "Fresh." When this flamen Vespasian indulges in luxury to build sanctuaries at his own expense, sua pecunir, arises in unhappy (as in satires 1.135 sq. VI111 sq.), you can– You should be aware that this is pure declamation, as with the remains. See Hild, Juvenal, biographical notes, 1884, and G. Boissier. The Opposition under the Caesars, p. 320 sq. 1875.

ROMAN SOCIETY 269

a series of insults and slanders directed at the Roman society.

It is nature itself and life, the human being with its strengths even more than its weaknesses, that Juvenal cursed without pausing for breath; to on the side of his Pessimism, that of Schopenhauer and of the Imitation of Christ "is still good– "Happiness." Not only love, but grace, the beauty ({}), glory {/2\ are the object of his sarcas– my, – even this glory which is the first of virtues, when acquired through struggles for the fatherland and for the good of mankind. Do therefore from your sons of Demosthenes (3), so that they die miserably! Exnende Annibalem Weigh me, Hannibal, and see what's left of me. a topic for recitation, for children at school (4). Miserable rhetorician who does not realize that in these overhyped tracks where he "jokes" the Patriotism, courage, and talent–he only possesses them. to reissue himself the most hollow, the most detestable Recitations!

And how could anyone claim that such a
A man who most certainly loved no one–

(1) Juvénal, Sat. X.v. 289 sq.

(2) Ibid. v. 133, sq.

(3) Ibid. v. 114 sq.

(4) Ibid. v. 147, sq.

if it weren't for him himself – having been a democrat and a Philanthropist? It's fashionable these days to treat Tacitus of the aristocracy: but what to think of this Juvenal who only admires the murderer of Lentulus and Cethegus, champions however, of the people's cause, with Catiline, – and of me – taken only for the Gracchi? _ |
Quis tulerit Gracchos de seditione querentes? (1)

This is by far the most absurd and untruthful thing, the Gracchi, consecrated by legality and by the people, through religion itself as tribunes, having been specifically massacred in sieges lions excited by the Versailles troops of that time.

So this is the apostle of democracy and the avenger of virtue! Let him paint the flaws of The hysterical women of his time, that's his business: Nature has always produced such things, it will always produce. And after all, I still prefer it. Claude's Messaline, running to brothels without to never be satisfied, this Christian Messalina who made her lovers of each night, no more satiated than the other, endless corn – more malevolent (2). |

(1) Ibid. II, 24...

(2) Whether the woman in question is named Jeanne or Marguerite, whether it be "of Flanders" or "of Burgundy" the legend I am referring to has no fewer titles to the authenticity of Messalina: witness the verses known to Villon:

ROMAN SOCIETY 971

Moreover, his method may seem to less surprising. Than a Petronius or a Martial, who do not set themselves up as preachers, do not hesitate not, as that fool Boileau said, to "defy" "Phoneticity," that's what we cannot... to move; but that a paragon of virtue, a "The schoolmaster of morals like him, stops" on the mysteries of the boudoir and the aberrations of the

In the genital sense, that's what I call pornwriting, in the most detestable sense of the word – ascetic pornography, of Saint Anthony with or without pigs, and which for centuries would have done to raise the hearts of successive generations, if the Christian "hypocrisy" had not sanctified it, by hatred of the ancient world, miserably slandered.
In any case, it was this so-called moralist who was responsible.
above all, to put the lessons into practice Quintilian, responding to those who wanted to overuse graphic details: "For me, happy to conform to Roman modesty, as I
As I've already said, I will defend myself by my silence-
"Sister of public honesty." (1)

Similarly, where is the queen?
Who ordered that Buridan
Was it thrown into the Seine in a sack?
But where are the snows of yesteryear!

(1) Quintiliani De institutione oratoria Lib. VIII, cap. 3
"Ego Romani pudoris more contentus, ut jam respondi talibus, verecundiam silentio vindicabo".

979 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

The preceding lines do not constitute a digression; because the accusations of which society
Roman art was the subject, based primarily on the work
Juvenal's ideas fall naturally by themselves.
from the moment one demonstrates, as I have just done to do it, that the famous satires are only the declamatory amplifications of a retro- rhetorician grade (1). Messalina is undoubtedly also real that this Pontia (2) who killed her children: but wanting to judge the Roman family according to these examples to do so would be to commit such a monstrous error.
truer than that of people who would claim to appreciate-to examine the current customs of the French peasant according to Mr. Zola's "Earth," where one sees misery-they would set fire to their father to get rid of him
ser. The thing is, however, very real, in that sense that we saw in a corner of the Sologne region, not long ago
Sometimes, peasants would burn their mothers alive:
but the criminals, the degenerates of an era
any could ever be presented

era.

"Nowhere in antiquity was there such a strong presence as in Rome,"

(1) See on Juvenal: A Hild; Juvenal, Biographical Notes, Paris, 1886; – Junt luvenalis saturæ XIII, with introduction and notes by Pearson and Strong, Oxford 1887, and the A very interesting article on "Juvenal" by Professor Sellar. in the tom. XIII from the Encyclopedia Britannica, 1881.

(2) Sat. VI, v. 638.

ROMAN SOCIETY 273

said an author hardly suspected of bias towards the paganism, the public thing neither accepted nor glorified Roman virtue was challenged. Nowhere was woman more civic-minded, more involved with the dangers, with triumphs, to the interests, to the common glory... It is Hersilia who throws herself into the midst of the weapons to Reconciling her father and her husband is Clélie's mission. Courage terrifies Porsenna. The blood of Lucretia, outraged, had the Tarquins driven out of Rome; the blood of Virginia overthrows the decemvirs. A woman's prayer softened Coriolanus; the instant-these of a woman, aided by paternal love and the marital tenderness, conquer for the pl- The consular fasces. As a daughter, com- my wife, as a citizen, that's what can the Roman matron ({}),» But that does not concern only early Rome; during the imperial period it is still found in women and perhaps in greater number, accomplished models of all the virtues. How can one not recall a- Celtic border, an admirable family within which The two Arrias shine with such a bright and pure radiance, that their glory partly eclipsed that of their pro- ches, who were nevertheless called Paetus, Helvidius, Thra eas? The touching story of the first Ar- Mariane could not have been passed over in silence. "Her husband, Caeina Paetus was ill, as was her son, and

(1) Count of Champagnv, The Caesars, 3rd ed. 1859, t. ILE, p. 163,

Both were dangerously ill. The child died.
 a young boy of exquisite beauty, of fashionable...
 no less perfect tie, cherished by his parents au-both for his qualities and because he was their son. Arria prepared the funeral and celebrated the funeral arrangements were made in such a way that her husband was unaware of them.
 nothing; much more, every time she entered in her room, she made him believe that the child
 He was alive and even getting better. And when he in-
 He questioned her on this subject, and she replied: "Yes, 1 liter
 He slept well and ate heartily. Then, when her tears that she could no longer contain finally burst forth, she would come out and surrender to her pain; when she had satisfied it, she went home
 after drying his eyes and composing his visa-age, as if she had left her mourning at the door-
 No doubt, it's a beautiful trait to capture a dagger, to pierce one's breast, to remove the blade
 and to hand it to her husband, adding these words immortal and almost divine: "Paetus, that doesn't
 "He doesn't know any harm." But by acting, by speaking Thus, Arria had before her eyes the glory and eternity. Is it not greater, without hope of glory and immortality, to suppress her tears, to hide her grief and finally play the role of a mother in the time when we have just lost her en-
 "fant."(1) I wanted to quote the story in its entirety

(1) Plin. Second. Epist.lIII. 16. See. also, on Fannia, Epist. VII, 19.

ROMAN SOCIETY 975

of Pliny the Younger, not only because reported facts, but still due to the
 the very form of delicacy and sympathy
 the emotion with which Trajan's friend appreciates this exquisite action, and such, assuredly, that it could not be surpassed by a Christian woman.

The letters of this kind and profound man insane human, the very works of the severe Ta-cite are filled with sublime examples of selflessness tion and dedication shown by women. A Aside from the amazing chapter, a masterpiece of its kind, where the Latin historian describes the horrors of the wars full of exiles and the red rocks of blood, infecti cædibus scopuli, etc. – He also shows us good examples in this not sterile era virtues – mothers accompanying their children women on the run, following their husbands in Exile. (1) An inscription engraved on a tomb carved from the rock in Cagliari tells the story of a woman who followed her exiled husband there: he being fell ill, probably due to the unsanitary conditions. Because of the climate, she vowed to die for him, and truly died, a new Alceste, while

(1) Tacit. Hist. I, 3, 4, and Anu. XV. 10, 64. 30 sq. – Vellei., Pat. II, 67.

976 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

that by a singular twist of fate,
the husband survived (if).

"Perhaps," said Friedlaender, "these voluntary deaths" silences of women offering themselves as sacrifices for their spouses, did they occur more frequently than one one does not think, because of the belief one held, that the underground powers could accept To take one life in place of another. An inscription Greek woman speaks of another Roman Alceste who "died for her excellent husband Zeno, the only that she had ever pressed to her breast, and that her "My heart valued it more than sunlight (2)."

This did not prevent the pans from fitting together the not on occasion behind Juvenal, and to declare, like Propertius, whom neither Evadne nor anyone else could see, nor Penelopes: |

"Nec fida Evadne, nec pia Penelope" (3)

And curiously enough, – the same Propertius famous specifically in the preceding ode, a certain

(1) Corp. Inse. Graec. II, 5757.

(2) Friedlaender, Darstellungen aus der Sittengeschichte Roms, in der Zeit von August bis zum Ausgange der Antonine, 5th ed.

p.461. There is unfortunately a lot of translation too free from the 1st edition of this major work, by M. Charles Vogel, under this title: Roman Customs of the Reign of Augustus at the end of the Antonines, Paris, Reinwald, 4 vols. in 8 1865-74

(3) Propert. LIT, 13 v.24,

ROMAN SOCIETY 277.

Aelia Galla, bone of the "three and four times happy" Postumus, who, upon his return from the war, found a wife as faithful as Ulysses' wife:

"Vincet Penelopes Aelia Galla fidem!" (1)

This comparison seems to me entirely unreasonable.

tif, with regard to the role of declamation-
'tion, in this genre of literature, the most subjective of all, lyric poetry.

One might object that these illustrious examples
They are all taken from aristocratic families.
Let us first acknowledge that, in this case, and for at least once, the etymological meaning of the ex-
The pressure "(the reign of the best)" would be justified.
But a fairly large number of testimonies in-debatable, clearly concerning the classes popular, do not allow us to doubt that those-if they have not remained at the same height. The famous funerary inscription "she never me caused by grief only by his death"{2} remains as the ultimate tribute, which cannot be surpassed, of a husband towards his wife. It can be compared to this.
This one: "My dearest mother enjoyed a rep-
the tation all the greater, as it equaled the best of women from the point of view of mo-discipline, uprightness, chastity, submissiveness

(4) Ibid. 12, v. 38.

(2) Orelli, 4626...

sion and application to household chores" (1).
 In the funerary inscription of a woman from Numidia, after saying "that she only had one husband, that she was chaste, orderly, irreproachable," one He added that she was a mother to everyone. that she came to everyone's aid and that she did not afflicted person: omnium hominum parens, omnibus subveniens, sadm fecit neminem (2)."And Mr. Boissier, from whom I borrow this last detail, he himself adds: "it is a fitting epitaph-would be like a Christian woman" (3). Let's say, if you like, that the "Christian" women – in a good number of In any case, at least – they remained beneficial and good, as Aryans and despite the Semi-ism; but, let us note with the same impartiality than in their epitaphs. It is much less question of these qualities and of love for one's neighbor than the love of God, of Jesus, of Mary, of the Hello, from paradise and other concerns the most misunderstood form of self-interest.

But this is not only the situation of the woman in Rome who was presented in the light of the more false. The Christian apologists forced the _

fi) Orelli, 4860. This inscription appears to be from the second half of the first century.

(2) Regnier, Inscrip. de l'Algérie, 1897.

(3)G.Boissier, Relig. rom. loc.cit., t. II: p.230.

ROMAN SOCIETY 279

even more colors if possible, for what concerns the slave; and yet, it is now a It is an established fact that the Chnstanieme, far from the eman-Chir, rather, tightened his chains by con-sacred. Certainly, the condition of the slave was infinite-It was harder in Rome than in Athens. At the beginning Above all, he has neither rights nor family; he is the property-was his master's, one thing; but, towards the end of during the Republic and the imperial era, he saw gradually his natural rights are recognized and he becomes one person (1). We already see that Cato claves and that even his wife was breastfeeding their children to reconcile their affection for his sons (2). Later, Pliny the Younger allowed them to making wills. "They pass on their wills to me." their wishes, their desires, he said, and I conform to them as if following orders. They share their possessions, make donations, bequests, into the house tends. Because for slaves, the house is a republic and like a city"(3). The Petronia Law, at the beginning of the Empire, taken from the master. the right to condemn his slaves to the beasts. The Prefect of the City hears their complaints in the case

(4) Marquardt, loc.cit., t. VII, p. 185.

(2) Plutarch, Marcus Cato, 3 and 20.

(3) Plin. second. Epist., VII, 16.

280 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

of mistreatment, and when they are founded, He can sell the slave to another master (1). Under the reign of Claudius, the sick slave whom his Master neglects to care is held to be free (2). Under Adrian, the master was definitively removed the right to kill his slave, to torture him, to even sell to a lanista or a leno (3).

We do not claim to establish that the slaves The Romans were the happiest of men; There were undoubtedly cruel masters, such as... many acts of barbarity, though less atrocious than those to which the colonists were subjected on their blacks, 1 liter not long ago, in the meadow- the century of Enlightenment and Christianity, com- The reader will be able to convince themselves of this. But we asserts that, in all cases, the situation of the pro-

(1) Digest., 1, 12.1 and 1, 6.2.

(2) Suetonius, Claudius, 25.-Dio. Cass., 60, 29. See also the Codex Justinian, VII, 6. De libertate latina tollenda, etc., where Claudius' edict, restoring freedom to the slaves, is confirmed. ves that their masters would have dismissed or | neglected to treat illness, or to receive treatment in a hospital (æno);" si quis servum suum ægritudine periclitantem sua domo publice ejecerit neque ipse eum procurans neque alii eum commendans, cum erat ei libera facultas, if not ipse ad ejus curam sufficeret, 1n'xenonem eum

296 of the P. Krueger edition. Berolini, 1877.

(3) To a gladiatorial leader or a ruffian. Spartan,
Adrian, 18, Marquardt, loc. cit., t. VII, p.171, sq. S

THE ROMAN SOCIETY 281

The current letaire is no better than that of the es-
-ancient key. Moreover, I declare: if, by Impossible, transported to the land of chimeras and fairies, I was condemned to choose between these at both ends, I would still prefer to be one Roman slave, a miserable miner at the mercy
from a director of a Lancas coal mining company-hire or Flanders. I can already hear the "pure" ones,
The decadent Stoics cry blasphemy and remind me of the feeling of dignity and of freedom. But to hell with the dignity of the wretched.
who are treated like pack dogs and less than racehorses! (1). And,
Fie on! your freedom which is only that of creworm of hunger and toiling miserably for a Insufficient food – happy even if one does not Don't argue with her using a rifle, the day you
Try to oppose any further reduction of it!

Yet they insist, these austere bourgeois.
They repeat the old joke of the proletarians silent men who arrived in Paris with four pennies in their pocket money" and became millionaires.
capital, they declare from this point of view, between the
The difference between ancient society and our own is that in our country
Even the most wretched worker can always "rise up".
leaving his classroom to enter the classroom of

(4) Look at the paintings, so real, so admirably studied from Germinal by Mr. Zola.

089 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

rich, etc. A sinister palinode of incurable fools or exploiters aware of their wickedness!
Because first of all, it is easy to proclaim that the pro-
Members can always step out of the ranks of the dead-of hunger and to take their place in the class of the rich.
But how many are there? Two or three are mentioned.

my. And even these are not, in the immense
In the majority of cases, as I have said elsewhere, neither the Neither the most honest nor the most intelligent; that's good.
rather the opposite, and in the capitalist system, it
it can hardly be otherwise (1).

Furthermore, didn't the slaves have,
for them too, a way out of their condition
by emancipation? And isn't it true that at from the end of the first century onwards, especially, the free-
a process free from the complications that can-were going to hinder its effect, the former slave put it on the same footing as the citizen and led him to important situations in the family, in the commune and in the state? The names of Livius An-Dronicus, Terence, Publius Syrus, Phe-Epictetus's words clearly show what place they occupied positions in literature. Under Commodus, some libertini were introduced into the Senate. One es-Cleve, Cleander, brought to Rome to be a porter-Faix became the master of the empire. Under Caracalla,

(4) The State. Paris, Derveaux, Year 93-1885, p. 218.

ROMAN SOCIETY '283

a freedman, Marcius Agrippa, entered the Senate with praetorian rank; and the question arose as to whether the em-Father Macrin had not started out by being slave (1). I would like someone to quote the names of former proletarians who played a role analogous in the government of peoples.
But if the situation of ancient serfs was less deplorable than that of the modern proletariat nes, if it were even infinitely easier to get out of slavery than it is currently to af-to cross over from the proletariat: that is not to say for that slavery was not a shame and a misfortune, destined to disappear with the progress of time. Only, let's stop honoring to Christianity of this disappearance. "We are not no less surprised, said Mr. Gaston Boissier, to see that, under Constantine, in the heart of Christianity, the legislation which, since the Antonines, had become very softened, suddenly reverts to the old ways severe measures against slaves (2). And it is the same Gaston Boissier, whose remarkable book abounds throughout in support of the thesis

(1) H. Lemonnier, Historical Study on the Private Condition freedmen during the first three centuries of the Roman Empire, 4887, pp. 237–238. See also Lamprid. Commod., 6; Dio. Cassius, LXXII, 10, t2.and LXXVIII, 11, 13; Jul. Capit. Macrinus, 4. – Ci. Friedlaender, loc. cit. I, p. 173. |

(2) G. Boissier, Roman Religion, loc. cit. t. 11, p. 458.

984 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

that I am defending – it is he who, after having demonstrated that the Aryan world was going in of its own accord to the complete emancipation of women and of slavery, he suddenly declares to us – by making alluding to the religion of Christ, "that a change– such a profound understanding could not be accomplished without a of these revolutions, which renew the world (1)". Indeed! It took a revolution, but not that one which you speak of, – a revolution made necessary– precisely because of the detestable triumph of the a new religion and one that was able, fifteen centuries alone following Emperor Constantine, proclaiming the a– the abolition of slavery, which is the natural course of things would certainly have been accomplished a thousand years earlier early, without the invasion of Semitism.

I hasten to add that the parallel between the so– Roman society and ours would not be complete, if I neglected to mention that besides the slaves, and outside

among the customers, there were still craftsmen, and... vriers – the plebeians in a word, who alone correspond to some extent, it relates to the whole of our proletarians. But what about the fate of the plebeians? Roman was less miserable than that of the Ours! | E

No doubt, the voice of the tribunes had fallen silent; without No doubt, the Gracchi had rolled bloody under the blows of the triumphant aristocracy; but the

(4) Ibid. p. 360.

showed that she was a force to be reckoned with. Bread and "Circuses!" Juvenal exclaims again; and a heap of Rhetoricians have had a field day with this, at starting with the Church Fathers and ending with the sons of the university, – unaware of the enriddled with their joke and their recklessness Their disdain. Bread and circuses! Well, then! This means: enough to eat and enough to talk about. milking. Did you know that it's something in the life? And you others, Juvenals of encounter, who, with a full stomach and before going to the show, hurl righteous anathemas against this people Roman, who can't help it, but have you ever says that this plebeian class that surrounds you today and terrifies you with its just demands, precisely what is lacking is this essential thing "of the bread" and that other one which is no less so in A full life: pleasure? Fe — This is because the Aryan state understood things differently than the Christian state its duty towards the members of society. Public assistance, this great social function of which routine ignorance makes tracing the origin back to Christianity was applied found in antiquity as it has never been before— core été chez nous, et en forme qui seul la makes it effective; it had a mandatory character. I can already hear the objection: it wasn't from Charity was politics. If it was...

286 ARYANS AND SEMITICS.

Politics was good stuff! In any case, it was not alms – this disdainful form goeuse and interested in benevolence, widespread in our country through Semitism. That was the application of this great principle of Solidarity, of Fraternity nity (philia), already proclaimed by Aristotle and which the Revolution has brought back into favor after so many centuries. For make no mistake! – and all the The world was mistaken – these food distributions free, so foolishly tarnished by the retrograde Juvenal, were merely the result of the application, under the Empire, of the eminently social law of- crested under the Tribune of the Gracchi; with this The difference, however, is that the number of citizens taking advantage of these distributions, which have become quite free of charge, and which amounted to 320,000 at the end of the

The Republic was reduced by Caesar to 150,000 and did not did not exceed 200,000 under the Sui- emperors fronts. (1) |

(1) The first Lex frumentaria was promulgated under the Tribunate of Caius Gracchus, the year of Rome 621 (123 BC).
Every Roman citizen could receive 6 modi per month or bushels of wheat, at the ridiculously low price of 6 1/3 asses (approximately 0.25 cent. the modius). Abolished by Sulla, the bloodthirsty champion of the aristocracy, these distributions were reinstated.
by the Lex Terentia and Cassia in 681 (73 BC).

The distributions took place through the cura annonae, through the care for the administration of the annona (or subsistence) _ public.) Cf. Cicero, De Offic. 2, 21. 72 – Dio Cass. 38,

\

L4

ROMAN SOCIETY 287

Such was the verifiable nature of this distribution food distribution, presented until now under the guise of their most false and to the detriment of the people Roman, shamefully slandered. This will be understood.
his insistence, seeing such a man as
Mr. Gaston Boissier is competent, -- and usually much better inspired – repeat with all the world "by giving bread to the populace of In Rome, the emperors had no other need than to keep her in obedience"; so great is she
the power of hereditary prejudice! because some lines later, speaking of "food institutions-Commentaries » under Nerva and Trajan, for children poor families from Rome and Italy, the
The same author adds, this time paying tribute
In truth: "In Rome, the new institution did not that would be added to those that already existed; the framework
It had been traced since the time of the Gracchi; there were precopies and models, and nothing else was needed innovate ({}).»

Another prejudice, too widespread to ignore can avoid refuting it in passing, is 13; 39, 24 and 76, 1 – Suetonius. Augustine 40; Caesar 41 and 45 – and for more details, Marquardt, Loc. cit. tom. VII, p. 144, sq. See also Duruy, History of the Romans, new edition, vol. V, p. 425 ff. 1883. and Lacour-Gayet, Antonin le Pious and his time, p 66 sq. Paris, 1888.

(1) Roman religion t. II, p. 187.

288 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

The prodigality of a Lucullus and a Scaurus, the follies of a Nero and a Caligula have appeared like the normal effects of the most deplorable re-an economic system that never existed. However, from a On the other hand, the bad emperors, stigmatized as such as, especially by their compatriots – have been verified table of exceptions of this kind, such as in the rest. Tiberius, Galba, Vespasian, Pertinax, pushed the economy to the point of stinginess, and by- of the other Caesars, none of them actually appeared like a heat sink (1). |

On the other hand, as Fried- points out laender, who truly solved the problem – "the monstrous extravagances of a Scaurus, of a Lucullus, of a Caesar and a Pompey, were the effect of circumstances that did not recur more in antiquity... One can even remain in-

—

(1) One may even ask, says Friedlaender (loc. cit. t. III, p. 8) if the luxury of a Nero or a Caligula was more deplorable than that of some petty German despot of 17th or 18th century. When we see Augustus the Strong spending 80,000 thalers to stage an opera and five millions for his residence in Mühlerg, – Charles de Württemberg made its court one of the most brilliant of Europe and organize sledding parties for the- which snow had to be brought from very far away, – he It also seems rash to conclude from Caligula's luxury to that of the Romans, that of such small deportations the court of Germany in light of contemporary morals in this country.

decided on the question of whether the treasures amassed—controlled for centuries by the despots of the East and fell into the hands of the victorious Romans Asia, they did not yield to the spoils of conquerors Spaniards in America. The Inca's ransom Atahualpa was valued at 23 million francs. which would be worth 92 today, a sum based on the—Pizarro, for his part, received 1,500,000 francs. representing, in fact, six million (1)..... The most great fortunes known in Roman antiquity were between 3 and 400 million sesterces (81 to 108 million francs) and that's just two examples characters who possessed this last sum, the augur Ch. Lentulus, and Narcissus, the freedman of Nero (2).” If someone objects to me that some rich people The people of Rome counted their slaves by the thousands. I would reply that in "Christian" Russia, before the abolition of serfdom, the Cheremitieff family owned according to Mr. de Haxthausen, (3) 200,000 male serfs (others say only 128,000!) And what figure do the 100 million Lentulus or of Narcissus, — even doubling their value, which seems exaggerated — compared to 400

(1) Chaix, History of South America, in the 16th century* century, volume II, p. 67, sq.

(2) Friedlaender, loc. cit., volume III, p. 8.

(3) Haxthausen, Sfuudien über die innere Zustände Russiand's, 1847 Volume II, p. 226 and III p. 76. | L

990 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

millions of the Marquess of Westminster, of the 500 million Senator Jones' lions, of Mr. Jones' 1800 million Mackay and the two billion left by the baron James de Rothschild, at his death in 1868? (1) So much It is true that, contrary to the assertions of pedants of all kinds, the monstrous accumulation—true and persistent wealth between the hands of a small number of families, possibly essentially modern and due entirely to the influence of the Jewish spirit (2).

So, in summary, we can see how serious it is. the mistake of too many people who make a idea of the contemporaries of the Antonines and of Mark-Aurelius, according to the deplorable and all-too-famous painting that Couture titled "The Romans of the Decadence" and which in reality only represents the decadence of the painting.

How, moreover, can we reconcile this so-called corruption of the Roman world, with the pretension apologists who, overnight, and with the conversion of Constantine the Great, we present this same world as a gathering-a group of pure men, endowed with the most sublime qualities Virtues? Such a miraculous transformation,

(1) Cf. B. Malon, Manuel d'Économie sociale, p.191.

(2) Cf. Max Nordan. The conventional lies of our Civilization, translated by A. Dietrich. p. 221.

ROMAN SOCIETY 29!

and so flattering to the new religion, could not to find its place in historical reality, and the best is to recognize that the elements on which The Judeo-Christians who worked were not in themselves so bad that they were willing to die. In fact, this claim to the organization of a The universal state that was proposed after the fact by Christianity, Rome had even achieved it, and with this difference that she always reconciled with her their own interest, that of the assimilated peoples, while that the Church, almost constantly, did not seek that his own good, without regard for that of the nations. "Rome," said Mr. Gaston Boissier so aptly, did not have that childish habit that is supposedly in him of wanting to regulate everything, to destroy everything, in order to She did not seek to impose to the world a uniform constitution; she did not try not to violently force a return to the unity of peoples of diverse races. This unity was nevertheless achieved: but It would not be difficult to prove that she did without constraint, which the vanquished desired

"earlier the work of the subjects than that of the master (1)." What a difference from Carthage! And what a recognition!
birth, do we not still owe to Rome, di-let us mention it in passing, – to the superb City which embodied the world of Phoenician domination, in which it evi-EE.

1) Gaston Boissier. The Opposition under the Caesars, p. 31.

292 ARYANS AND SEMITIS

Thus, the horrors of an entirely semythical with its Molochism, its holocausts of children and his crucifixions, horrors of which the Christianity, which came later and under certain conditions less disastrous, could only give us one representation erased, although sufficiently effroyable encore (1).

Force and popularized Law, – for having saved
On the contrary, one could rightly praise,
the grandeur and majesty of the Roman peace – immensa Romanæ pacis majestas (2); we prepare occupied all of humanity from then on, "gene-
"ris humani" – and when the Church, hell and the Paradise had passed over that, it took fifteen hundred years, the Renaissance and the Revolution so that our Grand Anacharsis Clootz was able to revive the idea and to think again about the happiness of "humankind".
And yet the Roman Empire crumbled, but beautifully less blow under the blows of the barbarians than by the effect of Semitic propaganda "The Stoics masters of the Empire, said Mr. Renan, reinforced it and

(1) Cf. Montesquieu, Grandeur des Romains, ch. IV.

(2) Pliny, Natural History, XX VII, 1. Read in the admirable book:
Gibbon's painting of the felinerelative city of the world before Christianity; Gibbon, The History of the decline and fall of the Roman Empire. 1776–1788, Chapter II.

ROMAN SOCIETY 993

presided over the hundred most beautiful years in history

"From the time of Constantine onwards, they finished ruining it {1}."
We will see later how Stoicism works.
a pessimistic and eclectic philosophical system.
was unable to save anything; but very certainly,
as a master of authority proclaims Unchallenged, Christianity lost everything.

END OF VOLUME ONE.

(1) The Apostles, p. 344.

Digitized by Google

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Pages

PREFACE . .- . : Rs 7. 5

CHAPTER I.

BREEDS AND IN PARTICULAR
OF THE ARYAN RACE.

Opponents of the doctrine of Races.
Fantasies of ML de Rosny. – Freret, Bopp
and the Indo-European or Aryan family.
The importance of language in classifications ethnic. – Mr. Vambéry's variations. –
"Reverend" A. Sayce and "Pidgin-English.–Opinion of Broca, E. B. Tylor and by Haeckel.– Karl Penka and its Origins Ariacae.
– Herder and Patriotic Ethnography. – On the
a true characteristic of civilized races.– Excellence of the Aryan race. ' 13

CHAPTER II.

THE RELIGION OF THE ARYANS

The cradle of our ancestors.– Migration of the various

In general.— Religious sentiment in animals
— Primitive Naturalism and Animism.— Of Brushes and Fetishism.— Polytheism, sup—

— 99% —

laughter at Monotheism. — Mr. Max Müller and the Origins of Aryan Mythology.— The Rigveda.
— The Aryan deities.— Origin of the priests among the Hindus.— R'schis-et Brahmanes.— The dogma of the Immortality of the soul, that of a God unique, and the practice of human sacrifices are

— strangers to the pure Arvenne religion.— The Drui-of, the Artemis of Tauris and the Semitisine.— Lu-Crece and Leconte de Liste. — The Twilight of the Gods...

CHAPTER TII. THE SEMITES.

Noli me Tangerel — The cradle of the Semites. —
Physical characteristics of the race.— Anthropology
Jews.— Semitic languages.— Race
Semitic, inferior combination of nature human. — Identical judgment of Lassen and of
M. Renan.— Les Assvriecns.— Non-semi-origin
tic of the civilization of Babylon and Assyria.
— MJ Halévy and the puns of the Talmud.—
Kanaan.— The Phoenicians, Jews of the sea.— Their nullity as inventors.— The so-called civilisation of the Arabs. — Messrs. Perrot and nu and "Hebrew art": .

CHAPTER IV. THE RELIGION OF THE SEMITICS.

The "unknown god".— Monotheism, a religious form-
.gious, proper to the Semitic race.— Munotheism _and Deism.— The complicated religion of the Semites
— by that of the Akcadians or Proto-Chaldeans.— The Akkadian Shamanism or Polydemonics.— Ea,

Moul-lil. and Ana. – Bel, Semitic deity, god
'Solar of Babylon.– Adar, god of Nippur and
'Samas, god of Sippara.– The god Assur, worthy precursor of Yahveh.– Acadian origin of the Semitic goddess.– Ishtar and Tammuz; Venus and Adonis.– Predominant role of the goddess Ishtar.–
Her transformation, by the Semites, into a goddess of Fornication. – Direct passage from Animism to Monotheism, an effect of intellectual inferiority
'The Semitic Race.– M. Renan and Gustave Tridon.
Astarte, "name of Baal." – Monotheism
Phoenicians, Syrians, and Arabs... 125

\

LS

CHAPTER V. THE GOD OF ISRAEL.

Willpower, the defining quality of the Jews.– Criticism of the 18th century and current exegesis.– The eternity of Matter in Akkadian cosmogonies.–The Chapter Bereshit, or the creation in Genesis.
– "And the earth was a mess." – Mr. Renan, the
A nomadic pastor and "Father Orham." – From the com-Position of the Pentateuch.– Yahweh.– Gehenna or Valley of the Son of Hinnom.– Christian Hell.– Sacred prostitution in the Temple of Jerusalem
lem.– Sodom!– Circumcision.– The Prophets– Yours and Mosaic Law.– Synthesis of Yahweh . . . 167

CHAPTER VI. THE ARYAN SOCIETY IN GREECE.

Mr. Havet and the Origins of Christianity. – The "Ancient City" by M. Fustel de Coulanges.– M.
Jules Girard, on "Religious Sentiment in Greece. – Plato and the Delphic religion. – Life

social life in Greece.— The family.— Alceste, Antigono, Iphigenia.— Euripides and Racine.— Pantheus and Bathsheba.— Superiority of Aryan morals Greeks.— Greatness of the Athenian woman.— Aris Tophane and Women's Rights.— The real cause of the death of Socrates.— Democritus, founder of Materialist Philosophy and Scientific Morality tifique.— Aristotle establishes the definitive foundations of Ethics.— Philia or Fraternity. — The last-deny dream. CRC ss AZA

CHAPTER VII. ROMAN SOCIETY.

Rome embodies Strength, and outlines the political unity of the humankind.— The Aryans of Italy and the nation-Etruscan lity.— Machiavelli and Montesquieu.— If-
The killing of women in Rome.— Their emancipation. — Juvenal, Tertullian, and Victor Hugo. — Character retrograde satires of Juvenal.— The heroines Roman.— Pliny the Younger, Tacitus, and Propertius.— The Roman woman according to the inscriptions.— Ame-improvement of the slave's fate, stopped by the christianisme.— The Proletariat, worse than slavery.— Emancipation.— The truth about Panem and Circenses.— Public assistance recognized in Rome as a social right.— The luxury of the Romans and Capitalism.— Rome and Carthage.— Christ-Christianism ruins the Roman Empire. ; #4. 1092

PAGE

11 13
22
63
97
107 180 211

LINE

12

13

26

ERRATA

instead of Hunten

Pigeon

Pigeon –

From

Lanes

Inflicted

to

Naturalists

read

Hutten

Pidgin

Pidgin

from Dupuis

Voice

Inflicted

has

Moralists

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

Lo MR TT ER ge RAA

CARP

ni di Lmipe aan tt om

"ES Des

The | : PC = | L

prints LE date pe es mon nt on D _.

PE ÿ +

kr

mi: a":

ER ES À".

cipime Dm © ;

ve.

F T0

run

7.

AE: CT

ss" LA K, + _ | .t

Feed 3 ::

L HUE Fee

DEMC0 N0. 38-298

2nd go az

Mrs.

#

%

has fi

4

#s

£
|
4 iha
4
L
$
CI
TR
da
KE FAR TRES,
Dr.
5 4
"
5
" has î
5
Ar
3
CN nd

Tr te Eds"
"T
E

; +
t'ai ae -
. hr

Ge to
born.

FAN
"4 a
ae Era.
From 2 to The: - el
From D FRERES RME ére to START

CREATE 2 1 UNITED CET: hu

FN me. :

HAS

3

|

ab 2

LT ESA

oh

: sel ren Sel TE '4

ju « e . nx & 1 to bre ACT EN £ OA. AH EL TO 4: L

"_*«t : e ? THE # AND g2 4 Mother :* 7 x F Cod

ns eur pofemmetvane, BR LC the ' al Er miv sr

L

:

ROBSHERLIEGTE > MES REME Ze, 1 fl:

As a %

"+

RES Re to

And yes, on RTE!

btp" NET EN INTER

mn E. en ARE AT

LR

TEA ER LR LIT TE

a» "#5 n of 7 ;

; - RS

ler ind: dt nf tee DE

DS

ms

LT: +

to your anemne

NE |
CE D

Pu4 "HT RE EP ER

LE | A PEN E PR UNIEE RRANE SIENNE" « Ù | £ Ra Érerensesr
" PRE RLPAENS ER AE HIIRE NT .

QUIL (l

469457

Speculation in front of the courts, practice and Speculation theory: studies
on financial feudalism /
by |...

Source: gallica.bnf.fr / National Library of France

21118 Gallica

courts, practice and theory of speculation: studies on the | Duchêne, Georges. Author of the text. Speculation before the Financial feudalism / by Georges Duchêne. 1867.

1/ The content accessible on the Gallica website consists mostly of digital reproductions in the public domain from the collections of the BnF. Their reuse falls within the framework of July 17, 1978:

– Non-commercial reuse of this content or within the context of an academic or scientific is free and open to all, in compliance with current legislation and in particular with the content as specified below: "Source gallica.bnf.fr / Bibliothèque nationale de France" or gallica.bnf.fr / BnF ».

Commercial reuse of this content is subject to a fee and license. Reuse is defined as... commercial resale of content in the form of finished products or provision of services or academic or scientific), an exhibition, an audiovisual production, a paid service or product, promotional material, etc.

CLICK HERE TO ACCESS RATES AND LICENSE

2/ The contents of Gallica are the property of the BnF within the meaning of article L.211 of the Intellectual Property Code, for public figures.

3/ Some content is subject to specific reuse conditions. This includes:

- Reproductions of documents protected by copyright belonging to a third party. These documents may be reused, except for private copying, without the prior authorization of the rights holder.
- Reproductions of documents held in libraries or other partner institutions. These are indicated by the mention Source gallica.BnF.fr / Municipal Library of ... (or other partner). Users are invited to inquire with these libraries about their conditions of reuse.

4] Gallica constitutes a database, of which the BnF is the producer, protected within the framework of the following from the intellectual property code.

5/ These terms of use for Gallica content are governed by French law. In the event of reuse, If reuse is planned in another country, it is the responsibility of each user to verify the law of this country.

6/ The user agrees to comply with these terms of use and applicable legislation, particularly in the area of intellectual property. Failure to comply with these provisions is liable to a fine as provided for by the law of July 17, 1978.

7] To obtain a high-definition document from Gallica, contact usage.commerciale@bnf.fr.

Source: gallica.bnf.fr / National Library of France

a Fi PA

PAYING

THE COURTS

L |
THAT _ or +
I
: 1 3
1 1 ns
HAS
:
f LI
æ
LC]
1 l
Li
u.
CS

IT

J.

POISSY, = TNP; AND ST

ÉR. NE AUG, BOURET,

u
=
+-
_ : e |
:ny
- -
u
+ : "Fr
=
: |? : ,

: -
_ 17 _ ' 1 J " i 1"

' e ! r ' ' a [! ! T - -_ one! r

: us : _* : : : _ ... IT, [A _ . : _ : Li k = 1 1,
- "u : E : _ L : E : I : 1 :
- - Fr _

- rr ' ... = -
= Jr F = _
' = ! 1 - : - ! : pe nl sr _
17 7 a - = # : :

L=

=

HAS

STUDIES ON FEUDAL FINANCE

|, 4
AND 4
F

LA srécurano

IN FRONT

THE COURTS

RE EN
of Le: (TATIC AND THEORY)

| BE' AGIOTAGE

4
has
The f 1! nm a
- a dj À" 4 * LT
ES Fr TI = Fu

alter
++
pee

GEORGES DUCHÈNE

PARIS
CENTRAL BOOKSTORE

24, BOULEVARD DES ITALIENS, 24

4867
All rights reserved

1866

INTRODUCTION

FINANCIAL FEUDALITY

STATEMENT OF THE QUESTION

The Revolution of 1848 highlighted an eco- principle
pomique, which, while not entirely unprecedented at the time, nil novum sub sole, had never been formulated in such a way specifies: it is the egalitarian principle of the MUTUALITY OF THE CRE-DIT, as opposed to the feudal principle of credit granted.
The idea of mutualism was in its infancy, and, so to speak, at the latent state, in some disdained publications of the official school, as tainted by socialism and utopia.
As for the practice, the business world was fundamentally monarchist...The scholars, at the Institute, in the professorial chairs of The Conservatory and the Collège de France preached openly-and affirmed, as a fundamental dogma, the su-subordination of labor to capital, of commerce to the Bank, public services to companies: it was the glorification accomplished facts, the sanctification of the practice and of ja routine. The protests of the opponents, insufficient formulated elsewhere, did not exceed the boundaries of a small church "of faithful, often more believers than ecclesiastical.

2 INTIKODUCTION

explosion. Proudhon was its standard-bearer. Under the headings Exchange Bank, People's Bank, Pro- Solution
The problem of the proletariat, Summary of the social question, in
In brochures, in newspapers, and from the podium, he asserted outright, against school and routine, the exchange or the Free credit, The Representative of the People, the People, the Voice of the People, three newspapers where I had the honor of working Working with him popularized the idea of reform, which had been overshadowed.
for ten years, and more vibrant today than never, under the names of cooperation, mutualism, of mutuality.

We will not revisit the theories of 1848 regarding the Islands.

Arguments from eighteen years ago. We have materials newer, clearer documents, more aspirations specific, more general. We will only recall in what terms were and is still the subject of debate on both sides else.

In the feudal system of credit granted, every holder of Capital is, in fact and in law, the absolute master of his thing: he can Jarring fruitlessly in his hands, destroying it even or lease it to his convenience, if he does not prefer the exploit-ter. That the proletariat, to whom this capital is necessary for His work involves discussing rental conditions; nothing better.
Ultimately, he owes tithe and gratitude to him
which provides him with housing, regardless of the conditions.
Tools, raw materials, and working capital. Similar God be with you, the owner is lord and sovereign of his domain, and, according to the word of Scripture, the vessel does not have the
The right to say to the potter: Why did you make me like this? Bastiat compares the capitalist to the inventor of the saw and the plane.
"All the savings I bring through my discovery," he said,
It rightfully belongs to me. If I don't demand everything, it's so that the common interest will lead to the adoption of my innovation economic considerations, personal considerations of which I am Moreover, the sole judge and the landlord has no involvement whatsoever.

To this argument, the school of legal exchange objected:

FINANCIAL FEUDALITY 3

Modern society, thanks to the division of labor and the
the separation of industries is dominated by an economic fact superior mic, the exchange. 1 n'va jen de commun entre
the current capitalist and the owner of ancient Rome
From the barbarian era, this one drew everything from its own resources: lodged clothing, food; he kept slaves
all specialties, farmers, shepherds, cooks, barbers trade. The modern capitalist has or produces only one a very limited category of consumer goods. With its inagains, its cellars, its granaries, its barns overflowing with Goods, #4 wouldn't find credit for a dinner. Gest

It is only through exchange that products acquire value. However, between producers, there may be quantitative inequality of things exchanged, there can be no difference in the conditions of hierarchy or subordination on the part of the one who produces 1 towards the one who produces 5. We add-tions: The solidarity law, which we lack to have consciousness tells us that where the conditions between exchangegistes are not equal; here there is scarcity and there is congestion.
The proletarian, unable to buy back his product, as a result of the pre-emption exercised on his salary in favor of of capital, remains there, starving, ragged, barefoot, in front
the stall of the grocer, the tailor, and the shoemaker, whose shops are overflowing with junk without buyers, and which are heading for bankruptcy just as surely than the other to consumption. As for the inventor of the saw
And as for the plane, he did not, like God, create it from his brain.
and by the force of his will his new machines; others
Before him, men had been taught how to extract metal from its matrix, to shape it, to steel it. All work, he says
The school presupposes prior work – and, we added, becomes in turn previous work. Capital in a fila-
In ture, the steam engine is produced for the mechanic.
So, TO CREDIT IS TO EXCHANGE.

We know what became of the controversy. The world capitals
The list became frightened; he did not want to see in this plan of transorma-

4 INTRODUCTION

tion than a threat of spoliation: he responded to the proselytes by the defamation of all its spokespeople, by the trial, fine, prison, exile. Hourgeoise peat, Homebody, a creature of habit par excellence, an enemy of noise before everyone applauded the execution of those who, with a little study, of the first, of reflection and common sense, she should have honor and protect as its defenders and its warmest friends.

Soon, there was complete silence, and the restoration of the
A large-scale corporate banking system. Privileges were renewed, expanded, concentrated. The monopoly of the

The Bank's mandate was extended, as was that of the railways, from the Public concessions were abolished and replaced.

direct, One hundred scattered companies were gathered, amalgamated,

merged; . of industries, the most repulsive to the sponsorship, were put into action, and free labor,

autonomous, declared a suspect, For twelve years the high
The bank has shaken everything up, turned everything upside down: discount counters, insurance companies, credit companies, communication channels, metallurgy, docks, ports, car transport, marine, mines, pro-Built community, it covered the country with sponsorships and limited companies; she flooded all the paper marketplaces.

Capitalism has never had more energetic means at its disposal.
ques, of greater favors, of more jealous protection;
Even household associations and/or- were sacrificed to him vrières, although constituted in accordance with the law. Since In 1852, he reigned and governed without control, without challenge. without opposition. He alone has the floor, and even when he he lies brazenly, in front of France and the world, he
It can become seditious to reply to him.

The system operated to the full extent of its capabilities:
He gave all he could; he is at the end of his tether.
dients. What has he done with the country and his fortune? Time is He's just finished taking stock. There are already lawsuits between financiers.
have filled the courts with accusations of theft and 'e-5

FINANCIAL FRODALITIES

scams; the criminal courts have revealed unprecedented scandals, unbelievable depredations wounded, by their sheer enormity. The country, worried, is moved and wants to see clearly in this darkness; voices more authoritative than the Our chambers of commerce are demanding an investigation on the actions and statements of the Bank of France, on the rate of interest, regarding the methods of railway companies:
of iron. The nation must know what it has cost them.
for having disregarded and violated its economic law of equality exchange.

Meanwhile, credit economists have changed of tactics. Leaving aside the outdated bucolic views on the pro-

that of his children – one never spoke of the farmer who disputes his field with the usurer, – they have above all enamored with the love of small savings, swallowed up in ja Large sponsorship and anonymity. They demonstrated that The more a nation pays, the richer it is, since pro-duit net, through the fragmentation of titles, goes a little bit everywhere. This is still the belief of many people. Ausel, let us not Let's not hide it, starting with the general title of Financial Feudalism, a series of economic studies on contemporary events, we will, in the eyes of many people, to be seen as a friend of paradox. Never, indeed, We've only been talking about democracy for the last fifteen years. "The "democracy is overflowing," according to Royer- Gollard: this is the unanimous testimony of the press, conserv- supporter or opponent. National chauvinism finds solace in the postponement of certain political freedoms by cloaking itself in in his pride as an egalitarian. All peoples would be cn behind us by fifty and one hundred years, in this respect. Don't we have equality before the law, the admissibility of each citizen in the highest positions, the proportional tax- nel, universal and direct suffrage? | In political economy, it's even better: more pri- Vileness, no more corruption, no more monopolies. L:s what Some closed professions, such as printing and notary services, the charges of bailiffs, court officers, and stockbrokers, are made to A mere blemish in this admirable whole. Yet one could not have... to say that their cause is lost in the eyes of public opinion, and that their A return to normal law is only a matter of time. of opportunity or compensation.

6 INTRODUCTION

Land ownership is crumbling into an endless fragmentation- minimal; statistics indicate 7 million property owners raires, {2 million coasts and 130 million parcels, The Economists and agronomists are becoming concerned. from the point of view of the proper management of crops and da their productivity; the movement, in their opinion, would go too fast in the direction of division. According to the 4867 budget, the tax authorities receives annual transmission fees on film billions of bearer securities. Who could say in how many hands are these interest-bearing securities distributed and Dividends?

From 186 onwards, the 250,000 shares of the Strasbourg railway The towns were, according to the rapporteur, owned by 7,773 people, or an average of 32 shares per holder. The 400,000 shares in the North, as of January 31st of the same year, of 22 shares per holder. For a loan of 250,000 million, In 1854, 98,400 subscribers offered the State 467 million: in January 1895, for 50 million requested, 177,000 subscribers contributed 2.173 billion. Six months later, to the loan of 750 million, 316,864 sous-Scriptwriters have offered 3 billion 652,591,985 francs. All recently, when Crédit Mobilier doubled its capital, the The average number of shares did not exceed 19 per subscription. author.

Of all social interests, say the panegyrists of The most respectable system is undoubtedly that of the people who possess, amass, and hoard. Without them, the sources The jobs would soon dry up. What are we talking about, caste and of feudalism? Is it permissible to maintain such a thesis? faced with this fragmentation of land and mobile wealth Liaire? The railways, the banks, the mines, the factories, gas, ocean liners, cars belong to the shareholders, not the directors. If it were possible to Counting the co-speakers, both small and large, we would see that it is Already a feudal system in which three-quarters of the nation participate part.

FINANCIAL FEUDALITY 7

This is the reasoning of writers, philosophers, and economists of the east; and, at first glance, appearances are in their favor, but in social phenomena, such as In the realm of science, one must be wary of appearances. Who, at first glance, would dare deny that the sun revolves around the world? The functioning of society, by more than the laws of celestial mechanics, reveals itself to superficial observers, already, moreover, it runs through the air complaints, protests, and imprecations against the tyranny of monopolies and oppression of large corporations companies.

Then, the bondholders, dissatisfied on the one hand, did not are not alone in their friction with what we love. feudalism"; there is still the public, the workers, the employees and employees of all ranks, the State and taxpayers, Before that the clamor grows and takes on the proportions of a claim, let us seek what is founded in the satisfaction- the faction of optimists and the grievances of the discontented.

J. — FEUDALITY, MONOPOLIES: DEFINITIONS.

Anything placed outside is considered privileged.
Under common law, there are de facto monopolies and monopolies of law. "Monopoly is in the nature of things," he said, referring to the press.
M. Forcade de la Roquette in his reply to M. Brame.
The response from the Honourable Vice-President of the Council of State is not entirely accurate; the law establishes different sorts—your privileges.

First, there are the regulated professions, such as those of doctors, pharmacists, engineers, | like the entire teaching staff. The government demands

he

8 INTRODUCTION

candidates must complete certain registration and examination formalities, diplomas; he judges their aptitude, their competence
int, reserving here a right of control which, for the industry, agriculture, commerce, he abandons to the public,
As for the customers themselves, we don't have to judge the system.
That would take us too far from our subject. In these professors—
Let's at least say that the number of practitioners is not limited.
The State admits to the tests all those who present themselves, and issues certificates of competence to all those who meet the requirements feels the conditions of the program.

'2 There are, as we said at the beginning, the closed corporations, such as ministerial offices, the imprimerie, journalism. There, power, not content with imposing to set conditions for applicants, intends to choose the people.
Among a thousand individuals possessing the qualities required for to be stockbrokers, journalists, printers, the ministry to its elected officials. It seems that these functions are of a nature so delicate, so elevated, that one cannot refer to neither the public eye nor regulations were available to them.
official tion. The government seems to be saying: "Among all "Of equally capable people, I invest in the most worthy." We have not—We're not going to search, as for now, the choices have all—days responded to the thought of power; we will return to this in dealing with the intrinsic morality of monopoly.

30 Finally, there are the large companies, whether rightly or wrongly it is considered as a dismemberment of the national domain—
nal, which is granted to private companies, although it Whether it is a public service, among these are the paths iron, large credit companies, such as the Bank

These companies, on the one hand, have their own capital, and on the other hand, as annexes to the domain, they are specifications. It is this dual quality, incompatible in principle, of commercial company and of institute—a function of general utility, which constantly generates miscalculations magnifications of the system and the discontent of the populace tions.

FINANCIAL FEUDALITY Q

40. De facto monopolies are the result of antimony same as those of the social economy, since their point of starting with the principle opposed to privilege, namely competition rence,

In 1842, there was a re-service between Orléans and Nantes gulier ct quotidien de bateaux à vapeur, les /neaplosibles.

A rival company launched the Dragons on the same route.

Never the extravagances of unfair competition, anarchchicque, so vigorously denounced by social criticism—

The list, no longer went to extremes. Prices between Orléans and Tours

They went down from 6 francs to 2 francs, to 75 centimes. One of the competitors announced one day that he would take his free travelers; the other went further than offering free passage: he offered a small

A glass to those who would choose his ocean liner. What was it about?

Is it, in essence, of public interest? Not in the slightest. The

The combatants aimed only to destroy each other; the survivor, a

Once in control of the place, he would make the travelers pay the fees of the war, by raising the price of tickets from 6 francs to 10, 15 or 20 francs.

It is a sad thing to [undermine] the interests of the circulation and those of the capitalists given over to ambition and greed dity of such daredevils. Before founding the second company—

taken, astute shareholders would have wondered first

if there was enough freight for two liners a day, and they didn't have would have competed with their elders for customers based on moderation profits, not on the capital itself. From the instruction of

Furthermore, advertising and business habits will prevent the Future generations will see the return of these scandalous tournaments.

Meanwhile, the two rival companies could ruin themselves to destroy, to exterminate each other. It was the suppression of a essential service, He who would deny the right to the collective being, society, to intervene in such an occurrence, would, in our opinion, put the freedom of work on the same footing and that of piracy, a theory that is being actively promoted.

today, under the pretext of liberalism and the interests of

The Compagnie des Aines de la Loire had organised in 1847

10 INTRODUCTION

a veritable hoarding. Coal, "this bread of lindens-sorting, was threatened by a disastrous price increase: The government did not hesitate to break this alliance. with the aim of starving the country, and he succeeded. It's all well and good to write... repeat in every tone: "Freedom, freedom! Freedom from usury, Freedom to hoard! Hoarding and usury are two words that have never expressed anything but prescribed and punishable offenses enforced by law in all civilized nations.

Against de facto monopolies, born of competition, the inter-direct intervention by the State is always a very scandalous affair. breuse, very – thorny. Against legal monopolies, the Collective rights can never be prescribed. No alienation. of the national domain without specifications. The theory and the practice works, okay. The beneficiaries of the monopoly, thus bridled, regulated, kept under surveillance, de- They should therefore fall under common law. And so why To speak of feudalism? Hasn't the State put a price on the exploits of bailiffs, notarial acts, solicitors' acts, receipts currency exchange agents, transport prices on the canals and The railways? Doesn't it have its own supervisory commissioners? launches, its inspectors, its regulations, its courts?

– Perfectly. But suppose now that in our society, the beneficiaries of monopolies are strong enough to to evade all reservations, all restrictions, to all the special duties stipulated in favor of the domain and the public. And so, this coalition of monopolists, invested with extra-social rights, having their own uses, practices, and... jurisprudence, forming a state within a state, amounts to the han-member of a caste; we find ourselves under the yoke of a feudalism.

JT. – GENERAL CONSIDERATIONS: THAT THE FST MONOPOLY, DFE SA NATURE, UNWAVERING THE INTERESTS THAT ARE AT HIS OWN ENTRUSTED.

Where freedom of transactions suffices, the constitution of a Privilege is at least useless. Monopoly must be justified.

due to considerations of public order, security, or price judges to those that competition would give. Thus said the
In theory, practice finds much to be reduced to speculative theory.
lation. Let's take the humblest of ministerial officers:
the bailiff,

The exploits whose significance is entrusted to his diligence appeared to the legislator to be of such importance that one does not could not refer to their Guard, nor to the loyalty of a com-missionary, neither to the punctuality of the host, nor to the zeal of a interest<é, Also the imposed formula reads: "Where being and speaking to... » The wording must be completed on site, during-that the bearer of meaning knows to whom he is speaking. That Where does it happen, especially in Paris? A clerk writes in his office: "Where being and speaking to a woman or a person in his service, Every Parisian is supposed to be a potential concierge. Then one
The errand boy goes to each door, throws his belongings at the gatekeeper's.
a folded piece of paper, without any apparent distinguishing marks. Towards the end of
In December 186, it was deposited in this manner at my home.
a letter summoning me to the justice of the peace court of the fifth arrondissement-rounding up for January 6th. The exXploit remained confused with the thousand pieces of paperwork that industrialists scatter through the hands sounds around the first of the year. He was not found, by by chance, several days after the scheduled hearing.
The same shipment, placed in an envelope at the post office, did not Lost, for 20 centimes postage, it would have been delivered, as a registered letter, into the hands and received,
The bailiff's fee was 4.50 francs ©: but he was forced,
And that's why it would be an excellent reform "the 1st to be placed by the letter loaded, from the point of view of accuracy as in the economic sphere. Privilege no longer represents than a CXactio!r.

If we were to claim to include all officers
Ministers, in your financial feudalism, we would be simple ridiculous. However, when it comes to the agents of The change, the hypothesis is already plausible, The corporation furme the first rung of Jacob's great ladder. He is jaterdit à cvs iuessicurs d'opérer pour leur compte et de prè-

1. INTRODUCTION

Their role is limited to stock market games, rather than engaging in their ministry.
to act as an intermediary between a seller and a buyer. Thus says the law, and the explanatory memorandum adds: "If everyone had the right to broker securities, that of agio-
"Tag, what brigandage, what disasters!" But the practice-
What, what does she answer?

There has been much discussion, and ongoing discussion, about whether the mnur-
The long-term concerns regarding public effects are LEGITIMATE. The law and the Case law states that they are at least legal, when is proven that at maturity the buyer had the money and the
The seller sells the securities, the subject of the contract. Morality, no more that Ja loi, has nothing to do with the two following hypotheses sales:

A. – A private individual must receive, within twenty or thirty days, a sum of money for which he has no immediate use.
Unconcerned about running the "lea of a value likely to varying from 5 to 20 percent in a month, it stops in passing a
He considers the course sufficiently lucrative. He buys at this price.
rate, in the long term, by making its delivery coincide with its ene classification.

B. – Conversely, the security holder, obliged to realize-ser, preferring certainty to the problematic chances of more-value, decides on a price that suits him, and sells at the end current, firm, as many values as he needs for cou
to meet the requirements of his position.

Here are two people to whom the futures market would return a a genuine service; but the rules of the chamber have arranged otherwise: 10 the corporation of stockbrokers does not acknowledges that there are two liquidations, on the 15th and at the end of the month; 20 it ultimately only accepts round numbers: 2,250 fr, of annuity + 1/25 2,000 fr. of 4 p. 100; 1,500 francs. by 3 p. 100); 25 actions or obligations, either of the city of Varis, or of the compa-following: we only see serious swingers, including those available:
blue, silver where effects, ue cuiucide pus with [C5 cuts sacramentals, cannot profit from the market at the tear; 90 the

FINANCIAL FEUDALITY 13

The liquidation lasts four days: buyers and sellers must-
The wind will execute on the 1st, regarding payment and delivery:
They cannot receive: the first ones, their titles before the 5th, the latter, their money before the 6th; so that the market at the term is only accessible to players, to those who pick differences
The monopoly was supposed to banish speculation: it privileged it.
gie, makes it mandatory and discourages honest transactions.

The trade association stops at nothing, when it
It concerns his comforts and those of his caste, as follows from the following ruling, issued by the commercial court of the Seine, June 3, 1858:

"The deliberation of the Trade Union Chamber of Agents of charge, which decided that the reporters of the Saint-Rambert, at the end of January, would have to deliver new shares of the Dauphiné, number by number, cannot be opposed to the interested parties. The exchange of shares having taken place at a rate of six of the Dauphiné against five from Saint-Rambert, it is in these proportions

"These are the amounts that must be settled, including the carryovers on these assets."

Apparently the exchange is at par, number by number, Rene made the liquidation of certain gambling operations easier or more fruitful than the proportionality of six against five; and that is why neither the comparative value of the securities, nor the neither the decision of the shareholders' general meeting, nor the ministerial decree approving the merger treaty and its conditions, could not balance personal considerations of the trade union chamber, |

We will find an abundance of these coups d'état in the Feudal customs of finance. These are veritable decrees. crimes committed against the public. When they are reported to the authorities, The judiciary in the Îles region is handling this as it should. Abuse is not an issue. persists no less. Here is the moral of feudalism in such a way Subject: "Out of one hundred individuals harassed, ninety-Nine will be molested. The hundredth who protests ob- He will be right: he will only know what it will have cost him: The example will not be contagious. And that is why a hundred homogeneous, identical decisions on the same question, do not do not deviate one iota from the march of the barons of the third for One hundred: it has to be done again every time.

2

14 - INTRODUCTION

The government receives no more respect than the par-individuals. The privileged ministerial office is a mission of eminently personal trust. The minister, in choosing-sant, like the primus inter pares, such a candidate among a thousand conipétiteurs, only invests one person, supposedly extra-honorable. Now, the priesthood is indivisible; it is repugnant that The priest 'takes on associates.' Also, the CCM- The mandate for a stockbroker's position was it ri-surreptitiously prohibited. The law is corroborated by numerous stops:

"The operation of a stockbroker's office cannot to become the object of a company; such an association is contrary to the public interest and the law. » (Civil Tribunal of the Seine, 24 June 1859.)

"An association for the operation of an agent's position"

"The exchange is null and void and of absolute nullity." (Judgments of the 12th June 1861, and the following December 6th and 16th.)

Malgré, such precise texts, have always been the charges were formed into associations. And this time, it was the law that intervened. stipulated before the caste: a decree of October 1, 1862 is came to satisfy the need, when one cannot row- To ensure that single-rollers comply with the regulations, the best approach is to a- to repeal the law, if one prefers not to abolish the monopoly.

We are only at the beginning of our investigation, and already we we have observed that the privilege, whether de facto or de jure, is of its nature: expensive due to the high cost of its services, full of mis- taken for the interests he must defend, disdainful of the law and regulations that circumscribe it, invader, wear and tear Pateur, éguste à l'iniquité. And yet it is not a question of= core than intermedic. "are!...

Upon reaching the heads of employment, we will find the usur- pushed to the point of execution, contempt for the law bra-

FINANCIAL FEUDALITY 1

before the rulings of the commercial, civil and criminal courts, With fraud reaching the level of a public disaster, regulations of feudalism disrupting the established positions factors, geographical situations and work-life balance.

The subject is too vast to be studied in its entirety; we we are forced to divide it.

The entire nation, burdened by the caste, can be en- viewed from three points of view and classified into three categories ries: 1° holders of securities, shares and bonds; 2° the clientele; 3° the staff. The clientele of large companies gnies, that's everyone without exception, for parts more or less strong: capitalists and employees encompass a considerable portion of the population. We do not reason- Therefore, we will not, under any circumstances, focus on exceptions or on facts. isolated, but of course on a system, on a perfect organism and complete. Above all looms the State, which grants the mo-

The divisions of our study are therefore quite naturally Traced: relations of feudalism: 1° with its landlords of funds; 2° with the public which provides it with its elements of re-
These and benefit, as well as with the taxpayers, including
The State is the representative; 3° with its employees, workers,

Laborers and any other wage-earning serfs. We do not
In this book, we will only deal with the first point of view:
relations of financial feudalism with its shareholders.

To attempt to demonstrate that shareholders and bond-company directors are not considered associates of administrators.
members and council members; that these are not the simelected, recallable representatives, responsible for their leases their: that the directors have different interests from the sim-
the holders of securities; that they can enrich themselves by ruining the company; that the valuation of a personal fortune, of a-
Based on stock market prices and distributed dividends, constant
A hoax would have been, ten years ago, an act of madness;
the book would have been rejected as a dangerous, subversive, and controversial work.
erious, damaging to public credit. Today, public opinion

16 INTRODUCTION

has abandoned her preconceived principles; it has cost her dearly expensive to light. Immense disasters have come to throw Shareholders and lenders are vilified, without shaking the position of the general staffs; our opinion no longer needs to prove itself; everyone can experience it experimentally pointing. But how did the catastrophes come about? What complications in the financial world led him to the abi-
My? On what principles of violated science were they based?
Disasters? That's less well known, and it's our responsibility to address them.
to demonstrate,

And firstly, since, in the same case, there have been shareholders and directors flush with millions,
we need to ask ourselves: What is a simple lease-
Their funds? What is a board member?

III, – THE SHAREHOLDER PEBEUS.

Of all economic theories, there is none that has has made better progress and has become more popular than the
The theory of rent. This is the moral of Simon's catechism.
from Nantua and the almanacs of Bonhomme Richard, already

Last: Saving! Saving! To facilitate the accomplishment of the holy and sacred commandment, the State has made itself the custodian—to keep small savings; he sells, during the loans, the Annuity at 10 francs per coupon. A statistician, member of the Institute and senator, proved that the Parisian worker at thirty sous per one day could live, raise a family and become a capitalist. In 1848, it seemed democratic to Mr. de Lamartine to wear the interest rate on savings banks of 3 to 5 percent, and to make to pave the way for the mass of taxpayers, who have nothing, one more A strong reward goes to those who, in accordance with the pa— The role of the Gospel: "To him who has less, there will still be 'more' removed what little he had. The owner only aims to increase—to collect his rents, the merchant his commissions, the industrialist his profits, the boy his tips: the worker, in se8

FINANCIAL FEUDALITY 17

three Christmas wishes, requests for annuities, more annuities, Always income!

With the principle of the granted credit, nothing could be more legitimate. A principle is a terrible thing. The materials that Those who only believe in facts can do no matter what they do: principles lead the world; there's no detaching oneself from it. What is it about in The species? A populace of peasants, laborers, and men— my sorrows, my wasteful, my porters, my louts, my rabble Without fire, without home, without possessions, he asks to live: to live on what? From her job, naturally, since she has no choice. An elite nation, wealthy, thrifty, friendly of order, counting just and calculating, owns the land, the tools, the materials Firstly, the working capital. She said to the first one: work for me, and, whatever your salary, beware of don't complain; whatever my profits, don't go and recrimin— For without me there is no work, and therefore no bread. Profits and charity, that's my lot: I will give from my net proceeds after bonuses to the most deserving.

But why this distinction between workers and capital? Talists? It's a mystery; the theory of granted credit does not does not allow him to be probed; the search for paternity, in Matters of fortune are prohibited. — That's ancient history, reply the Saint-Si— Monians: we changed all that; democratized credit made savings and annuities accessible to all; he who does not Doesn't have it yet, will have it tomorrow. Just a few more classes of morality and sound economics, and every head of household will have some income, however small it may be.

This unanimity of aspirations reminds us of a

Once upon a time, there was a small, industrious town, especially favored, because it had neither rich nor poor, and everyone there He lived content with the fruits of his labor. Peace and harmony. They had taken up residence there; envy had never been known there; the inclinations of the betrothed were not thwarted by considerations of fortune. Then one day a

A shower of gold fell upon the city, and immediately the inhabitants rushed out
2

18 INTRODUCTION

outside, jostling, fighting to collect the precious manna. Yet everyone gathered some in their purses, what do you expect? because the downpour had been so heavy. But the next day, nobody He no longer wanted to work. The baker, finding himself quite rich man refused to knead; the butcher stopped slaughtering, the cordon-deny making shoes; the merchant dismisses his staff Landset closed shop: so much so that after a few days, the distress was at its peak... Finally, adds the fabulist, the citizens, disillusioned, returned to their occupations primary passions, understanding that there is no other wealth than work.

The same would be true for us if everyone had annuities. But we are still far from the ideal. The theory of the e- . Saint-Simonian Cole on what she calls de-nocratization- The theory of credit is only half true. On the one hand, it is certain- that the wealth, both movable and immovable, has been distributed, scattered, crumbled into an infinite number of hands; on the other on the one hand it is impossible to consider as capitalists, ren- third, privileged millions of small shareholders, especially that they bought at excessive prices the meager assets they hold. It has been said ad nauseam that there is no more money for agriculture, commerce, and industry. Indeed, vertigo Getting involved, savers demanded shares, nothing more. Shares. Scraps of paper, which are still traded. 40 francs, pending final liquidation, were withdrawn from the Prices of 600 and 800 francs. Where the founders did not ask That one billion, the bounty hunters offered three. The The swindlers pocketed the difference, and the onlookers remained there, demanding exorbitant prices in order to safeguard their investments, that is to say, plotting their own ruin with that of the public.

Let's clarify our thinking. It's important to understand that... We are dealing with three distinct categories of citizens.

from his work, from wages; the other lives, partly from work, partly from income bracket; a third, the elite, lives specifically from the annuity, the first only knows the income in order to pay it all along the ell; the second receives from one hand and pays on the other hand; the third receives more than it pays.

FINANCIAL FEUDALITY 19

So what, fundamentally, does the democratized credit of the saint mean? Simonism? That nineteen-twentieths of the bearers of titles are working people, laborers, industrialists, merchants, cante, farmers, who have saved a little money, rentiers for ten, producers for a thousand. If the world financial matters were governed by the majority of interests and votes. This population would soon understand that by raising interest rates, transport costs, bonuses through insurance, it generates dividend increases; but she would see that at the same time she was hindering her production, its workforce and overhead costs; that it draws from its crate (manufacturing compound) to put back in its crate ({full of profits}); that assuming nothing is lost in The transfer, at the very least, is a pointless move, "the grinding wheel that spins idle," according to the expression of J.-B. Say. Let's clarify this point of view with some examples.

The consolidation of the savings bank's deposits in 1848, popularized government bonds; the cuts have died concealed indefinitely, and the number of bearers has increased twentyfold since that time. Now, every rentier is at the same time taxpayer; he who is not subject to direct taxation cannot to escape the combined duties levied on beverages, salt, Sugar, coffee, tobacco. Let each person make a compensatory effort. tion between the income he receives and the contributions he pay. Four-fifths do not receive what they declare. stock market; so that they would benefit from an abolition of the annuity, offset by a similar deduction from their taxes, and all taxpayers not registered with the major- They would earn a fortune with them. - 400 million in annuities paid For 10 million families, that's 40 francs in expenses per family.

The liquidation of the public debt would be equivalent to 40 francs.

annual income for each household, and four-fifths

Those living off investments would lose nothing.

If they had kept all their buildings, they should, according to the theory

20 INTRODUCTION

feudalism of the highest yield, imposing high rents, in order to collect large dividends and drive up of their actions. What solution, if all the credit favorites democratized, they had a voice on the council!

An industrialist, living off his work and at the same time As a shareholder, he consumes coal every year. fabrics, gas; he pays rent; he travels and transports to carry goods; he bears his share of the bonuses perceived by the industries of which it is likely to become shareholder. Assuming the average of these premiums of 10%, and its annual consumption or expenses of 10,000 francs, that's 1,000 francs in bank charges, which is part of his budget. burdened each year. If he has invested 20,000 francs in shares or bonds, with an average income of 5%, he finds as a rentier his 1,000 francs: that is, on the balance sheet, zero, or rather deficit of the difference between 5%, the rate of its investment, and 10%, the interest rate to his detriment.

A trader discounts 400,000 francs worth of securities in a year. at the Bank of France; at 5% and with a three-month maturity, It costs him 5,000 francs. So that he finds himself in Balaue, he would need to have 100,000 francs in solid investments. capitalized at 5%; and then its capital would be completely Sterile and his income illusory. Offer him instead the es-accounts for 1 percent, that is, the prospect of doubling the his business figures, and you'll see which side he's on.

gera.

These considerations lead society straight to the mu-tuellism: goods, merchandise at cost price. Public services, new creations on which the feudalism, which based its raids on feudalism, no longer has, with mutual aid, on the other hand, a rational approach is amortization with a premium as moderate as possible. Borrowers at Crédit Landowners are freed from the capital and interest on their loans. by fifty annuities at approximately 6%. Suppose all Companies based on this principle. The public interest, like that of the security holder, it's the cheap option: In other words, speculation on funds must maneuver with a view to gradually reducing the annuities to 40, 30 and 25 years, or to reduce the rate to 5, 4, 3, 2 and 1 percent. The capital, as it is rebuilt, shifts towards new creations.

What have we seen, on the contrary, in the last sixty years?
To speak only of the last fifteen years, it has been an orgy of advertising, charlatanism, and unrealistic promises modest. No ordinary company founder would have dared 8th, to produce without guaranteeing its believers at least 20% of income.

Le Cheptel promised 25% to its shareholders: there is no afford that they could make them pay for livestock, butcher's meat, _ tallows and leathers are 40 percent more expensive than in the past.

The small cars of Paris did not pay on average 5 percent of income; they increased the price of groceries

30 to 33 percent; great consolation for shareholders who use it.

The departmental railways were to constitute a fortune to the wise people who travel and encourage others to travel products, provided that shippers and travelers are extorted merciless in their pricing.

We find in one of Mr. Millaud's journals the the following combination, marked in the corner of the healthiest doctrines:

To establish a land association with a capital of 6 million Lions: with this sum, buy 12 million buildings, on which we borrow 50% of their value, i.e. 6 million, repayable in 50 annual installments at 5.60 p. 100 one; taking advantage of the entrepreneurs' discomfort, cons-developers and owners; acquiring their houses at the most as low as possible, so that investments are never but less than 10 percent, that is, in favor of the shareholders, 4.40% difference with the Crédit foncier rate; combine reserves with amortization of shares in order to give shareholders three capitals for one, to to leave them with an income of 30% after fifty years of their capital, amortized three times, all at a minimum and without prejudice to the capital gains acquired in the large cities and built properties. The inventor of this system of an improved pump does not neglect a detail dear to Landlords, terrible for tenants:

"Furthermore, as we have said, it is customary, especially In Paris, to demand three months, six months and even one month's rent from tenants a year of love in advance, depending on whether it concerns apartments or mag::ins. This will result in capital for the benefit of the Company permanent of approximately 700,000 francs which, placed, on average, at 9%, will produce at least 35,000 francs in interest annually.

We wonder, in truth, who can subscribe to such a plan for a famine pact, by shares of 500 francs. We understand that a dozen Jews each place 500,000 francs in a company of this kind, in order to ensure, to them and their race, a basis for ruthless exploitation: and of the prevented builder, and of the burdened owner, and of the indebted entrepreneur, on the one hand, and the tenant, worker or bourgeois, manufacturer or merchant, on the other hand. But there is no There is no ambiguity here: the appeal, published in the political Journal—the weekly ticker, a branch of Le Petit-Journal, is aimed at to small savings; it is the tenants themselves that The call is to pass the halter: From the very beginning you will touch beyond 10%, and progressively 20 and 30% of buildings occupied by you. Nothing to lose, since you will be your own debtors and your income will have to base your rent. Don't be afraid of going bankrupt. yourselves. Don't be afraid to pay the terms Dear friends, your income will increase accordingly.

This is the wisdom that guides the world.

The same story applies to our main railways. The shares—Orléans' leaders have, over several exercises, affected 100 francs in income for 500 francs paid. But it must be said: The buyers who had paid 500 francs were no longer there; they had sold to 1,200, 1,500 and 1,700 francs. 20% for the porters. at that time only represented investments at 6, 7 and 8 p.

FINANCIAL FEUDALITY 93

100. Let's admit that Orléans would have known the fashions! sc Con—to try for 6 percent, or 30 francs per share of 5, that was 70 francs less per share, and on 300,000 shares, 21 million, to reduce passenger and freight fares: 21 million lions left behind, in a single year and by a single company,

In the pocket of the public! What would the shareholders think?
the plebeians who own fewer than twenty shares, if we reduced two-thirds of the transport costs by rail?

In 1866, the six major railway companies had paid to their shareholders, namely:

The Lyon.....0..0....
The North...soec.
Orléans.....,..... .

.

RELL IEEE III T 19,160,8410
159,510,810 fr.

TOGETHER.e..

Let's say, in round numbers, 160,000 million. That's what we calls for an element of the public fortune. The fortune of Who? Of those who, shareholders or not, paid on the transport, in just one year, this nice capital gain of 160 millions? Assume the stock compensation is limited to 5 percent; the shareholders of the railways, including the ver-
The figures are approximately 1 billion 477 million, would have They only received 70 million. We would have left it in the hands of travelers and shippers 90 million in the fiscal year alone 1865: That is to say, the tariffs could have been reduced.
MORE THAN HALF. – 50% discount on transportation,
with 5% placements: what does the public think?
What would the small shareholders themselves think?

The principle of workers' strikes is nothing other than this.
that a claim for participation in the net product, and ne-
He inevitably leads to the same inconsistencies. On the Island labor costs, the contractor deducts, let's assume-

2: INTRODUCTION

we, 10 per cent: when the work is worth 109 francs, he sells it for 110;

She only took 10; after the strike, she takes 12. That's a-Elementary arithmetic. Economists have never Disregard for this effect. But why, since they are so lucid?
when it comes to the worker, so zealous, so eloquent in the
Do they not generalize the propagation of sound doctrines, and What won't they tell the capitalist world that the principle is
The same, whether it's workdays or revenues?
We said it for them, and we conclude on this note.
accident:

The vast majority, much to the chagrin of the Saint-Simoniens, owns no securities or shares, pays without compensation sation;

A considerable portion of rentiers do not receive in dividends dens what it paid in bonuses, and remains in deficit;

Some are in doubt;

And the profits go to a small number of privileged people, such as we will uncover it by establishing the account of the spec-living producer especially of agio.

Mr. X... buys all the copper to be extracted within a period of... and sets his benefice at 20. However, he is interested in a metallurgical establishment where he earned 50,000 francs.
of actions, and which consumes bronze, brass. The pertur-
The increase caused by the rising price of the metal reduces profits from the factory of 5010.

Deficit for MX, on its 60,000 francs of shares... 2,500 francs.
Sale of ingots to the Company, 200,000 francs. at 20 p. 100. 40,000

Net profit.....,.... 37,000 fr.

Is this a fanciful hypothesis? Here is a note that emanates from a competent man:

"There are such railway companies whose administrations nistrators are not very willing to obtain bonus coinbusterbles, ils insist on using the one that comes from the mines they

FINANCIAL FEUDALITY 23

exploit; still, they sell the best qualities to industry

This can result in a malfunction in the traction. service; the slowing down of a train, which allows itself thus being caught by the next convoy, perhaps even on the same occasion—accidents have occurred. It has happened more than once that machines They, filled with defective coke, were forced to stop "on the track, for lack of steam." (Railway Journal.

Messrs. A, B, and C are neo-citizens and members of the board of directors. administration of a spinning mill with a capital of 10 million; they have Each person received 100,000 francs worth of shares. Then came a 4% increase. raw cotton. A council member proposes raising proportionally the price of the factory's products, the three Merchants and administrators opposed it and prevailed. election. This will represent a deficit of 400,000 for the shareholders. fr., and for MA. A, B, C, 4,000 fr. each. But these mes—gentlemen sell 2 million calicos each year, plain or printed. It's an increase of & o/o that they avoided. Profit 89,000 francs; less the 4,000 francs they sacrifice Comme shareholders, net remaining to their credit, 76,000 francs.

Is this still just speculation? The rest of this book will prove that, on the contrary, that is the law.

This monstrous clash of interests between the big players small shareholders of the same company bring—would inevitably lead to conflict sooner or later, if feudalism did not have—had taken precautions to prevent the vile multitude from to disrupt the established order. The shareholders' general meeting The Bank of France consists of the two hundred plus foris interested parties; same conditions apply at Crédit Mobilier. In the railway companies, you have to be a carrier of twenty to forty shares, according to the statutes, to attend the assembly—general wheat; each series of twenty or forty shares gives the right to one vote; the same individual can either five, or ten votes, depending on the company. Not one company where the precaution has not been taken to eliminate the small carrier in an absolute way; so that the more the liters are divided,

| J

26 INTRODUCTION

The larger the number of shareholders, the rarer they become. are the individuals invested with the right to express their opinion in their own affairs; more consequently, feudalism It concentrates and strengthens. We will see elsewhere how this forms a shareholders' meeting. In the meantime, we we can observe that, assuming the utmost loyalty absolute and exclusive masters of the situation.

The idea of applying electoral property qualifications to companies by actions, when in politics we have universal suffrage, is the most monstrous concept in modern finance.

If the Supreme Court were ever to rule on the

Regarding the legality of such a clause, we would strongly doubt that it approved it. In matters of property, in fact, the prohibition to manage or participate, in a legitimate proportion, in the joint management of a matter in which one has a stake, does not can only be pronounced by the Courts, at the request families. By what subversion of all the principles of

Have the boards of directors been subject to justice and law?

led to prohibit three-quarters – if the thesis

The Saint-Simonian view on democratized credit is true, we Should we say nine-tenths – of their shareholders?

How could the Council of State have given its approval to such ostracism?

Nevertheless, the stipulation was essential to the

the formation of an industrial feudalism; today the shareholders, interested in the reduction of all services

They, of all people, are delivered bound hand and foot to the caste.

holders of twenty to forty shares or more, living more–

With incomes higher than work, they will always vote for the maintenance high prices. It sometimes happens that a handful of cent–

sites, representing at most one-twentieth of the capital, made the law to the other nineteen-twentieths. Under these conditions,

The general staffs no longer have their share of the investment, but that of all the excluded, against their will and their interests. The little potters provided the halter with which They are strangled.

FINANCIAL FEUDALITY 27

The administrator positions are also reserved.

protected against invasion by the plebeians. The statutes require each of them to deposit fifty, one hundred shares,

More or less, as a guarantee of their management. Nothing more.

Wisely planned, at first glance. However, it is not without the reasons stipulated in Article 31 of the Commercial Code that "the public limited company is managed by agents"

on time, revocable, associates or non-associates, employees or free.

The ability to choose administrators from among non– associates implies that, in the eyes of the legislator, the quality of Being a shareholder is not necessarily a guarantee of good management. Indeed, in the matter at hand, incompatible accumulation, it is clear that the interest of small teurs, that is to say the greatest number, is in antago-formalism with that of the big capitalists, the only ones capable, by the statutes, to be part of the council; it is by this organization from which came to us the famous theory of the most high yield, according to which the more a nation pays, the more

She is rich.

However, if we consider that the boards of directors are in fact absolute masters of the company; that it is unheard of that no assembly had ever rejected a question put to the table
The directors' agenda of the day: if we remember that the Shareholders' meetings bind and commit: 1° those who came and voted out; 2° those who voted no;
3° those who, owning fewer than twenty or forty shares,
They had no right to say yes or no, it will be understood that The statutes, as they stand today, provide the public, the shareholder plebeians, three-quarters, perhaps the nine-tenths of those concerned, to an aristocracy of which he There is no legal way to break free. And as the interest of small shareholders who work is the same as that of everyone, namely the cheapness of services.
The entire nation is at the mercy of them. We see, pai"e first glimpse, that the privileged in favor of which

28 INTRODUCTION

The system works, but only a tiny minority of users are affected.
of securities, are found to be numerically only a fraction imperceptible in the nation whose destinies it arbitrates.

IV. – THE GENERAL STAFF

I, – We said, in the previous paragraph: A as a company's shares become dispersed into one greater number of hands, the number of shareholders said
The chances of appearing at the general assembly decrease, and the feudal-
The focus is on this. A day will come when, without fraud or interference, pollations, the administrators alone will constitute the inner circle sovereign, absolute arbiter of the Society's destiny. One
This fact was reported by the newspaper La Finance on April 26, 1866.
This already shows us the beginnings of progress in this direction.

"Crédit Mobilier," he said, "fell from April 30th to May 29th."
The ordinary general meeting of its shareholders. It has been alleged as a pretext, i.e., an insufficient number of shares filed.

tenth of the capital, This demonstrates, with sufficient clarity, or that the members of the board of directors, who usually are the largest shareholders, have sold their shares and have passed them on to the public, or that the members of the board of administration, which are usually the largest shareholders, are well guarded from depositing their securities, wishing to make impossible a general assembly that they would have an interest in re- to delay by a month. There is no way out of this dilemma, and we repeat it intentionally: or the members of the con- today they have retained only the minimum number of shares set by the statutes, or they did not want to deposit their shares at time. And that's perfectly natural. Thanks to the combinations of their statutes, all our public limited financial companies and industrial companies are indeed in the hands of their administrators. It is a combination of this kind that limits to two hundred, for example, the number of the largest shareholders called upon to be part of an initial summons, and which requires that these two shareholders own the divestment of 120 million, or 1? million, or 24,000 shares.

FINANCIAL FEUDALITY 29

"It is quite curious, moreover, that the administrators of the Crédit mobilier is currently showing itself to be so scrupulous in regarding an ordinary assembly, in which one must limited to reporting on the fruits and results that have occurred duits du 1er janvier 4865 au A Décembre 1865, quand qu'ils pushed the distraction, at the extraordinary meeting of the 1st? Last February, it was so strange not to notice that only ninety shareholders (not representing (twentieth of the capital) had deposited their securities, In truth, isn't it strange? And let's not forget that, at This extraordinary meeting of February 12th was not about nothing less than doubling the capillary, than legitimizing a A unique and unexpected broadcast of 60 million. Without the unexpected observation of a member of the assembly, one would have perhaps unintentionally overlooked, one might have perhaps, by Distraction, we forgot about the statutes. We were in such a hurry, such a hurry! Now that the 60 million of the new capital are collo- As for the public, we are less rushed, much less so, it is "We design it, and we have plenty of time to think about the form,"

How is it that ninety shareholders alone-

How did they register to attend the assembly of February 12, 1866?

Nothing could be more natural. If the titles were nominative, person-

In this scenario, management would have a list of prominent figures at their disposal at a of the Sanhedrin, but the shares are bearer shares; such as one who

that, out of a figure of 240,000 shares, I am one of the two Hundreds of dignitaries, and he gives no sign of life. The second assembly, convened due to the inadequacy of the first, full powers, regardless of the capital figure; so that it can, even if it represents only one-fiftieth, or less, interests at stake, engaging the forty-nine five-quantities that are excluded, or abstain, for lack of information.

We complete our quote, in order to show how,

3.

3) INTRODUCTION

Even among financiers, such maneuvers are appreciable.
cices:

"L'Epoque says on this subject: 'One always asks what " are the real reasons that led to the postponement of the as-general appearance. Some explanations were expected from the board of directors. The council of twelve continues to Keeping silent: that's Venetian; but the hotel on the square Vendôme harbors more indiscreet people than the Palais Saint-Mare.
and we will probably be able, one of these days, to explain the
a cruel rebuttal that the administration of "Money laundering,"

"In our opinion, this is the real reason for the postponement of The general assembly: Crédit Mobilier, an eminent institution fanciful, does not determine the distribution of its divisions dendes as a necessary, absolute and mathematical cosine-
the matic of a balance sheet mathematically predetermined by the 51 December of the previous fiscal year. We saw the Furniture department do nothing distribute, one year, under the pretext of putting 7 million to the extraordinary reserve. We saw it the following year, when he had not made a single cent of new profits, distribute those same 7 million that he had declared essential to keep in the report of the previous assembly. 1] results from these ante-transfers that, in all likelihood, if Crédit Mobilier postpones
He only postponed his general assembly because he reserved to distribute or not distribute a dividend, according to Pins-the inspiration that events will bring him. Politics is today in suspense. The problem of war or peace will be probably resolved within a month. Crédit Mobilier will settle.
the existence or non-existence of the dividend depending on the turn of events events. If peace, distribution of a dividend; campaign of an increase in value, only to find itself back in the losses of the

No dividend and continuation of the downward campaign
Company 1, six weeks ago.

EEC

The fanciful institution of Crédit Mobilier is not alone in c_ cas; here is a public service, representing 843 millions of committed individuals, without prejudice to the future, where things will proceed in exactly the same way. The company of the che-Western Iron Mines held its assembly on March 31, 1866.

FINANCIAL FEUDALITY 31

The meeting was routine, for the approval of the accounts.
extraordinary for the acceptance of new proposals
of the government.

"a Before addressing common construction issues
and exploitation, which form the main subject of our reports annual, said the rapporteur, we will inform you of everything immediately the purpose of the extraordinary general meeting to which You were summoned for today, and who will not be able to
to take place, due to an insufficient number of shares being represented, so that the assembly can deliberate effectively." – The following is the ex-
The question posed was: an agreement relating to the operation of the Beltway.

Article 28 of the statutes, paragraph 2, states:

"The ordinary general meeting is regularly constituted" killed when the number of shareholders present is {rent
at least, and represent one-twentieth of the social fund.

First, a word about the social fund. The capital account
The company's position is thus established in the 1860 report:

LET'S ACT. "get out sssssssesesece 150,000,000 fr. 00 c.
Subsidies allocated.... 84,727,049 fr. 06 c. |
Deducting those received... 95,644,3935 fr. 40 c.

LL +- the "l-

Amount to be received: 9,089,743 fr. 76c. 99,089,743 fr. 76c.
Borrowings, total. css. HELS rs 604,808,386 fr. 72cc.

843,891,100 fr. 48 c.

GRAND TOTAL...

Neither the state nor the lenders have any involvement in this capital. Whatever is done with their pledge; the shareholders represent only the social fund. Out of 843 million, they provided 150 million less than a fifth; it doesn't matter. Among this elite of capitalists, #n twentieth, or 7,300,000 francs, – one hundred twelfth of the funds committed, – constitutes the first assi-ordinary general beer by right.

3? INTRODUCTION

u In the event that, upon a first summons, says the article–Article 29 of the bylaws, the shareholders present do not fulfill the above–mentioned conditions imposed for forming the assembly gencrale, a second summons is issued eight days later interval. – The deliberations taken in this second meeting agreements are valid, regardless of the number of shareholders present and of the represented parties. v

So that fewer than thirty shareholders and fewer than seven one and a half million of the funds represented have sovereign rights. ment of a capital of 843 million, when it comes to approval Regarding the accounts, for extraordinary general meetings, there are a where the social fund must be represented at one–fifth, that is, In this case, 30 million; in others, a tenth is sufficient. 15 million. Whatever the financial newspapers of the new era say– Due to shareholder negligence and incompetence, it is clear that there is a shortage of dignitaries for the assembly; that the titles have scattered to the point that the carriers of twenty or forty ac– The meetings are becoming less frequent every day. Furthermore, the assemblies are... hold in Paris, and that those interested from the provinces no. 5 can to come easily whenever necessary.

It ranges from newspapers run by Mr. En's faithful disciples. Fantin, who, while admiring universal suffrage in politics, claim that the limited company, such

It would be ridiculous, after such figures, to enter into dis-percussion with them.

II. – Feudal concentration was accelerated by the State.

Before 1848, there was, in addition to the Bank of France in Paris and its counters, nine independent departmental banks, independent, in Rouen, Nantes, Bordeaux, Lyon, Marseille, Lille, Orléans, Le Havre and Toulouse. All have been brought together,

FINANCIAL FEUDALITY 33

merged with the Bank of France in Paris, whose nrivi-
The levee, by a law of June 9, 1857, was extended until 1897. The number of branches must soon be one hundred, namely: at least one per department, without prejudgment of large centers which, like Le Havre, Mulhouse, are not administrative centers. The administration consists of a governor, two sub-governors, fifteen recent, three censor, a general serf: in all twenty-two per-sounds. The operations, in their current state, reach each A sum of 7 to 8 billion, including 5 to 6 billion in discounts. There is no no rights for the discounters, who make all the fortune of the establishment and its clientele, the shareholders are represented by the two hundred strongest interested in the assembly general beer, and have no opinion to offer on the rate of The discount and the conditions offered to the public. Credit and the France's traffic is therefore in the hands of twenty-two pashas, several of whom themselves hold, for their pro-pre comple, a discount and limited partnership company in Paris.
In 1852, three land banks were created, one in Paris, another in Nevers, the other in Marseille. The three established-the vows were combined, in 1856 (decree of June 28), into one alone, under the title Crédit foncier de France. The capital
The share capital is 60 million, divided into 120,000 fully paid-up shares.
of only 250 francs. The land bonds amounted to to December 31, 1865, to. D71,013,460 fr. G4 c.
Municipal obligations at... 215,047,571 18

TOGETHER, 786,061,032 francs. 42 tbsp.

The company is administered by a governor, two sub-governors, eighteen administrators and three hundred members: a total of twenty-four people. The general assembly rale consists of the two hundred largest shareholders; it is legally constituted as soon as it gathers one-tenth of the shares issued, i.e. 6 million.

The Methodical Directory of Road Legislation
iron, published by the Ministry of Public Works, notes

x L INTRODUCTION

that the latest mergers have brought together into six quadruple bundles fifty-two companies, which themselves already included buybacks and amalgamations. So, instead of fifty boards of directors and more, we have six left: the North, twenty-five administrators; East, twenty-five; Lyon, thirty; Orléans, twenty-four, the South, sixteen, the West, sixteen. So that all the traffic in France, men and parcel, would be in the hands of one hundred and thirty-six podestàs, were not the cumulative effects that we will discuss below, and which reduce Again, this figure, in a few years, the capital of all origins, activities, obligations, subsidies, committed to the railways, will reach 10 billion. The share capital appears to be definitively fixed as follows:

North.....
Lyon.....
Orientans.....e

535,000 shares, 210 million.
584,000 2932 –

800,000
600,000

400

300
150
120

Totals. 3,059,000 shares 4.877 million.

West. 300,000
Noon...,...e 250,000

We'll skip over the doubling of ac- for the moment
tions, which we will appreciate later, and which reduce in-shareholders involved in the creation of railways such as Funds paid, and we say:

The shares alone constitute the social fund; they represent—they feel about one-seventh of the expenses, a proportion which will gradually diminish as new constructions are added;
one-twentieth of the capital of 1,417 million, or 73,850,000 francs, legally represents, at the first general meeting, the 10 billion (realized or to be realized) from all sources;
and at the second assembly, if the first does not bring together the minimum statutory capital, as is increasingly the case
More often than not, the decisions are sovereign, whatever let's consider the number of assistants and the amount of interest.

FINANCIAL FEUDALITY 35

grouped together. Are we definitely in a democracy or in feudalism ?

He — We talked about administrative overlaps, the
The reader would think they were reading a novel if we didn't introduce... evidence; we would prefer not to name anyone; but without proper names, it's impossible to prove. And then, if the
The plebeians are essentially anonymous, if it is true that some thousands of labor courts do not even constitute one unity, on the other hand, it is of the essence of castes to proceed by clans, tribes, and dynasties; each individual is a group, use community. We borrow our documents in pairs publications highly favorable to those who manipulate money:
Mr. Vitu's Financial Guide, and the Public Funds Manual
by Mr. Courtois, 1863–1864: we have no information

more recent items in their complete state.
Mr. Hippolyte Biesta is, along with Mr. Pinard, director of the Paris Discount Company, a company with a capital of 40 million lions, now doing two billion in business per year.

Such a function would seem, at first glance, to be sufficient—fire to the most enlightened, the most intelligent activity. However—and we find MH Biesta in the capacity of censor at Railway Sub-Department, as an administrator at La Paternelle, an insurance company; at Crédit Mobilier, at Swiss Central Railway, to the Transatlantic Company that, at the Decazeville forges (which had gone bankrupt), at the Paris Real Estate Company, Parisian Gas, Saltworks
from the South, together ten companies.

Nine to ten companies is the average total; there a taller and shorter than Mr. Biesta, who is occupied—by the middle ground with about twenty others.

MA d'Eichtal is vice-president of the board at Crédit Mobilier, administrator at the Railway Sub-Counter, in Réunion, an insurance company, to the railways of , the East, the South, Austria, to the Ebro Canal (today deposited), to the Compagnie Immobilière de Paris; moreover, he chairs the supervisory board of Salins du Midi.

30 INTRODUCTION

MF Bartholony is an administrator at Crédit foncier, an Crédit Agricole, Lloyd Français, Chemins de Fer d'Orléans, from Lyon to Geneva, from Paris-Lyon-Mediterranean, from the Southern Austria, Veneto, Lombardy and Central Italy, to The Union of Swiss iron luminaries, at the Four Canals, at forges and shipyards of the Mediterranean.

We are not writing the golden book of the new nobility; Therefore, we would not pursue our research further if... This was only supposed to result in a dry statistic. We will to dispose of Mr. Péreire's (Émile; His name appears in nineteen companies. We regret even though our information is three years old, that, ultimately, for the conclusion we wish to draw from it, The date is of little importance. Therefore, in 1863, Mr. Péreire administered the following nineteen companies:

SHARES. LOANS. TOTAL.

60 million. Memory. 60 million.

Personal property credit. ,...,....
Mortgage loan.....se 60 – 4600 million. 460
Crédit Agricole.,...., 20 – – 20 –
Spanish Furniture Credit... 120 – memorandum, 120 – Ottoman Bank.
Railway sub-accountant.
Railways: East.....
West... esse.

#00 million. 792

600

ns,
be

– Noon.....,....., – 479 –
– Austrians., – 460 –
– Northern Spain.. – 220 –
– West Switzerland 8.... _– 77
Central Switzerland... – 75 –
Ebro Canal. – 33 –
Compagnietransatlantique – 06 –
Warehouses and stores
– 12 1/2

Nationals of Paris.,
Real estate company...
Parisian gas.
Compaguiedes Aspbaltes.

48 72
24 – 108

TOTAL. CRE FETES 3.708 million.

THE HE0BALETE F'XANCIENE 7

1}

Since 1863, Mr. Émile Péreire has retired from the companies from the East and the West; the Ebro canal has disappeared from the coast: Ja Compagnie immobilière has merged with the Ports of Marseille; Crédit Mobilier de France has doubled its capital: the railway companies have issued new Loans, these are the main changes that have occurred. Let us add: that at the General Asphalt Company, Mr. Péreire is simply on the supervisory board. So we say that in 1863, Mr. Émile Pritreire had, on his own, control over 3 billion 700 million!....

more than camaraderie to support such a monstrous monopoly: it requires a family link, the coalition of a whole tribe. Next to Mr. Emile Péreire, his brother Isaac brings together twelve administrator positions; his nephew Lugène is already nine; the Péreire family is also allied to the Thurneyssens, in such a way that from brothers to nephew and son-in-law, the Péreire-Thurneyssen clan has a hand in about fifty of companies and on nearly " billions.

We find nine dignitaries in the Rothschild tribe, They departed for various European capitals. They have quality of directors in thirty companies listed on the Stock Exchange from Paris. They run our Northern Railway as a family: They have five board positions: James, \a-Thauviel, Alphonse, Anthony, and Lionel de Rothschild. These

The last two reside in Lonares; but the reader has already understood that distance and absence matter little for similar functions.

The Odier, Talabot, Mallet, Dubochet clans. Lehon, Darblay, Bischoffsheim, Gicbiel, Sartholony, Salvador, Bnoist-d'AZY, de Rainneville, etc., less well-known, less brilliant, hold However, a large role in the management of companies: financial. Mirès was isolated; that was his downfall. Above all, he He needed to put down roots and be content with a low-profile position. under the patronage of some high-ranking financial baron. Success would have arrived at the following generalization.

For the past ten years, one has been misled (cu

1

De is

| To

35 | INTRODUCTION

Dance, previously unknown, at MA, the financiers. There are some several times at the Senate. The Legislative Body gave entry to the three Péreire, to MM. Lehon, Calvet-Rogniat, d'Albuféra, Frémy, Talabot, K.E. André, Deiebevque, Bartüolouy, Darblav, Calle v-Saint-Paut, summer. Shameful newspapers have raised this issue. a question, very serious at its core, but naive in the circumstances incompatibility between the functions of administrator of a company dealing with the State, and the mandate of a deputy ap-Pelé to vote on the conditions imposed on said companies by the State. We hastened to move on to the agenda, conforming in line with the conclusions of the newspaper Le Siècle, which has de-showed that incompatibilities are an anti-democratic principle cratique. The fact is that public functions cannot that forcing the caste, [occurred in the discussions of the Legislative group of Uiinides observations about certain financial scandals. Immediately the troupe of adintnuistrators She had a body against the Enuclmi. The vigor with which she She has proven that she feels strong in her rights, and that she will not relinquish any of its privileges.

There is, necessarily and always, between the great fa Thousands, hatreds, struggles, battles. M, the partisan writer-cipait autrefois à l'administration du Nord avec M de Rothschild, as long as he occupied a subordinate position, he did not Not the slightest conflict died out, but from the day he became a power, capable of counterbalancing its former leader of file, he had to withdraw; and as a result of this revolution, fus rent Cvincôs the employees who had entered the service of the Moon under his patronage. They weren't even offered to rally and swear allegiance to the victor; the new Mr. [Name] would be more prudent to build a new house.

The common people sometimes get excited about these battles: that she remembers the fable of the two Bulls and the Gre-The powerful are fighting to seize the principality, Whatever the victorious neck, the little ones will always be Fouies, crushed: serfs of this one, serfs of that one, ta posiliun rest la inème, La caste, quels que soicnt ses

FINANCIAL FEUDALITY 30

family animosities will never destroy itself.
hands,

V. – INCOMPATIBLE ACCUMULATIONS.

We will not insult our readers with their demon-to tre, by "a plus b", the absurdity of the accumulations of which we have just To cite examples. It is clear that: the quality of administrator is a dignity, not a function. So multiple, so encyclo- Whatever their pedagogical abilities, the Picos de la Mirandola From the sponsorship, the anonymous Gargantuas come to to break them and their claims against the violation of a law

Scientific joy violated, it's upheaval, disorder.
The subversive one. At first glance, and without knowing anything about the e-
Based on this simple detail, we can assert, in the case of these companies, that they live in squalor and that they run to abysses. Incapable of following normal, regular development.
Linked, progressive, feudalism is forced to act by blows of authority. In order to maintain itself, it had to import the following system:
of the reason of state in industrial affairs.

Feudalism can only exist through monopoly. Under the Ja regime of liberty, a nasty sponsorship of a few millions, if well managed, would sink in a few years feudal principalities with capital of half a billion. Haven't we-we didn't see the railway companies tremble with-before river transport and haulage, and to use, in order to bring them down, all the forces that the law, privilege, subsidies
What were the state putting in their hands? When a company is at even to cut costs and operate at a loss for years:
during, with a view to ruining its competitors, it is not possible to fight against it, since it covers the contributors buables the deficit that it is momentarily experiencing in its traffic.

Let us listen to the energetic complaints of Mr. Borde, engineerhleur, in favor of the trade of Alarcilla,

"The Imperial Mail Service, subsidized and favored,

40 INTRODUCTION

do they achieve, in the Mediterranean, the political and commercial goal?
commercial that the government had in mind had honored them with His favor and his high protection? Here are the facts.

"In all the ports of the Levant, the Message- service
ries is utterly inadequate: to the point that 100 market halls
The cotou sometimes remain in ports for a month before being fully eXpedives, whereas there would often be something to to load three steamships rather than just one.

"Well," people will say, "let other companies organize themselves."
to remedy this deficiency! – These companies exist, and in 1R62-63, they sent their ships to the Levant.
What happened? They had barely appeared to be stranded when the agent Messageries des Messageries announced a 75 percent drop on île freight. Indeed, from Alexandretta, Thessaloniki, Aleppo (Syria), he has Summer imported cotton and wool at 4 francs, by 400 kilos in 1862.

The lioness had to lower her flag, as soon as she was mattressed from on the ground, the Compagnie des Messagries usually received, at its ease, a freight of 22 to 30 francs, and exceptionally "Up to 40 francs per 100 kilos."

This is how feudalism understands the application of subsidies. state-owned enterprises. Furthermore, all these monopolists proclaim themselves High and mighty free-swappers!... The same author, speaking of the Docks de Flasseille, adds:

"In the name of freedom, the administrators of the Docks" exploit for their own profit 42,000 porters and workers port, ruined an entire wealthy quarter of the city that served as a— A real treasure, shifting the fortunes of more than three hundred families And they ask for something else—What?—Let's You must have understood me, sir Minister: a little mono— pole, tiny, but finally a movopole, you can't believe it in France, in the world of Fa fintuce, that we may prosper by oneself, without being a little privileged, a little favored, a Little put in place to Pabri de Fa's competition from the visaire, despite having 20 or 10 million, it still needs to be worth their weight in peace. By

FINANCIAL FEUDALITY 41

Consequently, the real privilege of the warehouse is granted to the com—"Paguir des Docks et Entrepôts de Marseille."

After individual monopolies, coalitions of mono— Poles, incompatible combinations. Let's give them the floor again. To Mr. Borde:

"Considering only the present, the three companies of which we have just listed the privileges (Paris railway) in Marseille, Imperial Messageries, Docks) compress, cha— individual action, within its sphere, would still be evil. It may be less if, not belonging to the same group Financially, they did not offer each other mutual support. But, one They know this, they have common interests; they borrow from each other to each other their administrators, and obey in a defined— drawn from the same inspirations. This is how Îles Messageries, to obtain transport preference, they offer, by means of of an agreement with the Docks, to keep in Marseille, without fresh for a month, the goods coming from China, at destination England, — Thus, not content with oppressing French trade, they believe they should favor that of Free trade! Freedom! Democracy! What hypocrisy!

under these masks |

Let's take some less striking examples: it's always the Same thing.

The Omnibuses of Paris have a monopoly on all traffic
tion of a certain nature in the gutter. The old cars, before the merger, had seventeen temporary seats, at 30 centimes, or 6 francs 10 centimes. fully charged, The new-
These new cars have fourteen seats at 30 centimes, and twelve at 15 centimes, on the imperial: total 6 francs 30 centimes. While qne Free industry lowers its prices to an extent that its traffic, the Omnibus Company has toasted its receipts without ainais offer the public a penny of rabms, The monotonous should only operate for the benefit of the net product, the sergeants

HAS

[.

14 1N PRODUCTION

city officials are responsible for hunting, on Sundays and Holidays, cuckoo clocks, upholsterers soliciting on a pedestrian on the public road who could not find a place in the privileged vehicles. the actions of the Omnibus have affected
In the last fiscal year, 60 francs 50 centimes for 500 francs paid, a little over 12 percent. And the privilege judges that it has fulfilled its purpose.

The Parisian Lighting and Heating Company gas alone has, for fifty years, the right to supply the Gas in Paris. She charges 30 cents per cubic meter.
when there would be a profit in selling it for 10 cents, since the products of coal distillation cover the costs manipulation. The company is also insured against all improvement, any progress: it's pointless for chemists to ask-tooth to the science of perfected processes; they would not be not accepted, unless the Company finds a way to appropriate the invention and increase its net value. Its
The last exercise yielded 405 francs per share, or 24%.
What need is there to worry about anything other than acc-
to increase the income of the fortunate holders?

Iron? Originally, the state provided them with subsidies for the work. in cash, without prejudice to the monopoly. Thanks to the generosity Budgetary figures show revenues ranging from 8 to 25 percent. But the The swindler-directors had anticipated the future. So they are came to ask the government for extensions of leases, mergers and amalgamations of networks, offenses to the specifications, such as not having third parties classes in certain convoys and to increase fares on Sunday sleeve, interest guarantees, new subsidies, dividend guarantees, the logic of the system is good simple. You, the State, he said, you have spared us, by Your subsidies, revenues of 8 to 25 percent. This rate is our property: so that when the traffic is not sufficient no, you will tell us about our income guanfum on the im-pot, And that's how, in that same year 1888, when ten six major companies distributed to their shareholders

FINANCIAL FEUDALITY 43

150 million in revenue, the Legislative Body voted 31 million in order to come to the aid of said companies and help them to pay the interest on their bonds. Exorbitant prices and supplement to tax revenues: these are the points to which... editions the feudal system is sustained.

The Methodical Directory of Legislation on Roads iron states that at the beginning of 1864, "the whole * laws, ordinances, decrees, orders relating to these roads "The cost of communication amounts to approximately eight rents." Let's say eight hundred reorganizations with a view to new bonuses to the companies, to the detriment of the public, taxpayers and client. Such supports the ways and means of the administration feudal.

Look at this feudalism, when it is not supported through subsidies at the discretion of the Treasury or through a single-excessive pole. Ask her what she did with the paths of iron of the Italian line, of the Romans, of the Portuguese, of the Spaniards unols, from Turin to Savona, from Graissessac to Béziers, from Berge-rac at Libourne, from the Ebro canal, from the Decaze- forges city, electricity, etc.

This latest disaster unfolded before the tribes civil services of Paris.

"The administrators," said the newspaper to which this notice was borrowed. tons this summary, after having lost working capital and the loan of one million made by the State, resorted to a cireutamaneuvers protected by law and statutes. While that they were throwing the bankers' fortunes into the hazards of the company, fully aware of its position and its risks Gers, they did not impose any personal sacrifices on themselves to do Faced with the deadlines, they let the lenders know that Feurs advances were intended for the services of La main d'æ'ivre, then that their sole purpose was to maintain a flow dummy,

The public ministry has demonstrated that the administrators had, through their own fault, let down one of the major

44 INTRODUCTION

taken from the country, while today, by simple means and regularly, the bankruptcy syndicate is raising this issue daily in a day and makes it produce good fruit,

"I admit the best intentions on the part of the de-» splitters, said Mr. Deputy Vaney; but what I don't like
"I will never put it there, it's that, under the cover of an anonymous society, the island
"yme, a company essentially made of capital, it is possible for a » board of directors to carry out, without responsibility
"None, the acts and expedients that the law absolutely prohibits"
"A mare to all debtors, and who expose them to attacks"
"And in their persons and their property."

"The court jointly and severally convicted Îles" administrators Decazes, Geffard, Cibiel, Cabrol, Mussard, of Batmeville, Biesta, Delacoste, Guizard and de Rothschild, at to pay the bankers the sum of 850,000 francs, approximately, the further ordered to pay costs, »

Never has a stop produced a deeper impression in the world and in financial journalism. Wasn't the obligation to respect the judgment, gentlemen magistrates They would have heard some interesting things. Mr. Mirès, among others, took the pen in the Press; like a pious pilgrim who sits down noodle at the feet of the martyrs and kisses the chains of the cap-tifs, 1] began by covering the condemned with flowers;
Then he resolutely asked himself where a case law that treats them as if they were ordinary private individuals
the highest lords of finance.

Ultimately, there was only one thing to say in defense of the defendants: that is, Mr. Biesta, with his ten companies at to administer, Messrs. Cibiel, de Bammeville, de Rothschild and their associates, given their accumulated wealth, have other things to do.
than to take care of forges, and that they have, at the very least, acted

she will not be held to any consideration, and she will apply it to excess.
the principle of responsibility, then the accumulation of administrative duties

tration will be replaced by the accumulation of execution orders Loire,

FINANCIAL FEUDALITY 47

Violation of a social economy law is undoubtedly the most terrible pitfall of an industrial enterprise. But this is not what strikes the average reader the most, too
still inclined to see science as nothing more than abstractions, of ideology. Also the incompatibilities of combining which We will talk, will they better understand the minds?

In 1860, the Crédit Agricole company was founded, with the patronage of the Land Registry and the guarantee for five years of interest of 4% by the State,

"There was a choice between two systems," say the founders.
tenants: in one, the. Crédit foncier would lend directly to borrower and would have to appreciate the full extent of the France, the solvency of those who would resort to it; in The other, Crédit Foncier, would only give the guarantee approval to tickets already accepted by an intermediary who, chosen by the Crédit Foncier itself would have every interest in not deceiving him.
since he would be responsible. This system, which avoids the creation agents and savings of considerable fees, offers in addition the advantage of always placing an interlocutor opposite the Society a document that verifies the borrower's solvency.

We don't like the administrative system with its formalism, its red tape, its slowness; the entrepreneur res-
The manager will always do more and better than the stage manager:
we also give our full support to the principles which precede. But from theory to practice, there is, it seems, an abyss, for despite this stipulation of independence and of autonomy, the governor, the two sub-governors, the twenty administrators and the three censors of the Crédit Foncier, are invested with the same functions at Crédit Agricole, and on the 20,000 shares to be issued, 15,000 have been reserved by privilegal action was taken against the shareholders of Crédit Foncier. The same shareholders, same direction. How can we understand that Crédit Agricole, governed by MM. Frémy, of Soubeyran, Leviez, administered by MM. Barthalony, Benoist-d'Azy, Hfly«l'Oissel, Emile Pie reire, ele, peut avoir une initiative, uue per<onniulitr,

26 INTRODUCTION

a distinct responsibility towards Crédit foncier administered by the same Émile Péroire, Hély-d'Oissel, Benoist-d'Azy, Bartholony, etc., governed by the same Leconte, by Soubeyran and Frémy.

It is clear that, despite the declarations and principles, There is a single case here under two different names.

Yours. That if there were a bidding process, dispute, or lawsuit between the Islands companies and third-party holders or creditors, Messrs. Frémv, de Souhevrant, Leviez, etc., directors of Crédit foncier, would be ill-advised to say in court: We are not—my steps responsible for the imprudence and frights of Messrs. Leviez, de Soubeyran, Frémy, etc., directors of Crédit agricole.

The Maritime Services Company

Imperial: had a large part of its equipment built by the Koriété des Forges et Chantiers de la Méditerranée.

Four directors from la Première are part of the board administrative of the second. Here is an accumulation that cannot be expressed The citizens of Free Industry will never explain: How to conceive, in effect, that prices could be rigorously debated fortunately between MM, V. X, Y, 4, equipment buyers, and The same V, X, Y, 2, manufacturers of said equipment?

And yet, this incredible accumulation is like the law of industrial feudalism. In all the mergers of paths of There have been examples of this. Administrators of the great network, the one that absorbs, were at the same time administered small network operators, the one that is absorbed. Manufacturers of rails, locomotives, coal merchants, of trawlers, earthmoving contractors, masonry contractors, ballasting, dealing with themselves, had a dual quality: as simple particulars, they submit, as administrators, they accept and sanction their own SUBMISSION.

What would be the point of insisting here? The public doesn't believe us. It wouldn't be possible, the thing is so monstrous. What we have The best thing to do is to "send it to the evidence: to prosecutorial indictments, to the accidents of the court, to the requisitions nl

FINANCIAL FEUDALITY 4:

submissions of the parties, to the pleadings' briefs, to the Considering the magistrates. There, the evidence will be abundant.
Dantes: facts, figures, proper names, methods, nothing will be missing.

One more word before concluding this introduction. What These are therefore the profits—the avowable profits, of course—of These administrator functions? — Almost nothing: simple attendance tokens for those who attend the council, because it is stipulated in most statutes: "The functions of administrators—
"The administrators are essentially free." Regarding the exercise 180", the twenty-six administrators of the Northern Railway received 5,151 francs and 62 centimes: the administrators of Discount counters receive 10 francs per token. But if one wants to get an idea of what feudal administration costs Dale, you must continue reading this book. The facts are presented with the clarity familiar to lawyers. To com-
To take it, you just need to know how to read.

Lj

PART ONE

SPECULATION

IN FRONT

THE COURTS

I

A word to the wise is enough, as the saying goes. For the readers who are familiar with the customs of feudal finance—
Our introduction has said it all. But how many are there?
These elite readers? The subject is complex, and the abundance of Unhealthy literature has diverted the best minds from serious studies. The way to make ourselves understood is to continue our investigations using a method of popular writing, such as the History of Famous Cases

For example.

The social economy as studied in the Gazette des Tribunaux,
What an idea! – Oh yes! Let's not forget that the boxwood of this book is primarily to disillusion the shareholder, to separate him from the feudalism, of which he is the scapegoat, and to reunite him, in a single protest, with customers, employees, the con-

taxpayers and other serfs of anonymity, But there is no being 9

FINANCIAL TRIALS

More obtuse, more stubborn, more incredulous than the shareholder. (Dos)
If someone touches a single penny of his company, he's ready to cry foul.
thief. Show him, in a drama where a comedy in action, its administrators struggling amongst themselves or with Mr. the Prosecutor Jinpérlal, this is the only way to open his eyes.
I want to instruct him, and sometimes amuse him – when he
It will be about others, not him.

Yet another reason why we choose debates judicial matters as the basis of our study, that is what we have has gone through, from 1857 to the present day, a phase of impurities on the
that the pact of silence has cast too complacent a veil-protective ment.

"For the past eighteen months," said Mr. Ducreux, the Advocate General.
In his indictment against Prost, more than forty companies
I have to answer to your legitimate severity for more than EIGHTY MILLION thrown and lost in the abbey of the spe-culpable culation, today you still have to strike uu man who has squandered more than eight million and sown ruin around him." – (Le Droit, September 1858.)

Forty companies as early as 1858, yet that was at The start of judicial executions of high finance figures.

Indeed, before 1857, there was little suspicion at the palace of this what was or could be a trial of financiers. We findvons in the Gazette des Tribunaux, on the dates of December 26 and 27 December 1855, January 2nd and 9th, 1856, an introduction to the play tragicomic events that will unfold over the following weeks:
l'Aucre-Martin, a company with a capital of 5 million, under the pa-tronagt of the Virgin Mary, protector of sailors: escro-queries, embezzlements, breaches of trust: – court cor-

divided into five categories: scams, breach of trust interference in the functions of stockbrokers:

The 1857 Eleanor (February 25) opens with a monumental trial trial, the Docks-Napoléon; – August 3rd following, Thur- bankruptcy Neyssen, pusif 16 million.

PRECURSOR SYMPTOMS 5 |

From 1858 onwards, events unfolded rapidly. – July, CGheptel: scams, breach of trust; – mines
from Aachen: fraud, breach of trust; – 24
August, the Union of Gas and Glassworks of France: abuse of con-
Finance, simple bankruptcy; – September 4, the Banks
Discount: scams, breach of trust; – 27 Oct-October, the Society for the Preservation of Commercial Losses: es-scams, abuse of trust, simple bankruptcy.

1859. – January 27, February 3 and 10, French Company steam navigation, haulage and mail: ban-simple route: – February 1st and 8th, the Land Union: es= Croquerie: – February 16, the Little Cars affair; –
April 13, the Bonninière case in Beaumont-Vassy, and more Tärd, Sébille case, continuation of the previous one; – May 14, case Boucaruc; – June 23, trial of the backroom operators; – July 7, General Gas Meter Company: maneuvers of Stock market, artificial rise, scams, breach of trust; – 6
September, La Vigilante, a company for insurance and the Debt collection: fraud, breach of trust, destruction of records, normal wear and tear; – December 28,
The Monaco baths: exaggeration of the founders' contribution.
Stock market maneuvers; – mines of RosdorffT, Heilberg, Sar-Rebrouck and Marienthal: scams, issuance of shares at bearer before release, subscription simulation; – 27
December, the stockbroker Gibrain.

1860. – January 27, Gibrain's clerks – April 18, game
stockbroker Sauvage's dismissal;
May, Colomyes, stockbroker in Toulouse, forgery and use of forged documents, 6 years imprisonment; – May 4, Railways Nassau: scams, breach of trust, bankruptcy simple; – May 10, Bas- Asphalt and Bitumen Mines Tennes: scams, breach of trust, – August 1st, the stockbroker Féquant: scams, bad faith;
– 1% and December 8, General Union Bank: bank simple route, abuse of trust ice
The years 1861 and 1862 were filled with debates, before all possible jurisdictions, in the Mirès case, of

"2 FINANCIAL TRIALS

rare accusations of fraud, breach of trust, etc.
still have to expire at the police courthouse.
ionnelle, smothered under volumes of pleadings, mémoire*, brochures, consultations, indictments, rulings, in first instance, appeal, counter-appeal, cassation, courts of commerce, imperial courts, to which give place, at Civil and criminal cases, the numerous trials of the liquidation Mirés.

Since then we have had the merger of the Docks and ports of Alar-
Seille, the Ports of Brest, the bankruptcy of Decazeville, the trial Berthomé, the Lamirande affair, the bankruptcy of the paper mill d'Issonnes. The ball is rolling; nothing will stop it.

The public has no idea of either the horror or the grandeur of these disasters, many of whose authors have reappeared, more and more more than ever, whether in Paris, in the provinces, or abroad
Well, I know very well that the panegyrists of the caste will... accuse of seeking success through scandal and of striking at vanquished, – Okay, the vanquished of the National Code, the martvrs de-la police correctionnelle do not inspire us nor neither sympathy nor esteem, especially when they are caught in this which we have agreed to call the upper classes, where the swindler-
The quarrel is not excused by poverty, where the way has as its mobile ia debauchery. As for the scandals, whether they are the expi-preserving the past and safeguarding the future! That's all there is to it.
we are looking for

I] °

But how can we explain this sudden explosion of lawsuits?
of which almost no trace can be found before 1857?
Were major business dealings conducted more honestly elsewhere?
times? – There's no appearance of it. Only in the past the Big cases were few, people believed more than today with personal credit. The lender monitored its locations. How many e-commerce houses ne complaivat qu'un ou deux cennundiltires, Lez prenrieies

PRECURSOR SYMPTOMS 93

Gas and railway companies had difficulty in to constitute. Then, as everything is done here by enthusiasm-
The day when public limited companies gained favor, one neither direct nor indirect participation. Pu-

He paid close attention to all the stock market rumors, and so he founded...
companies that were merely a pretext for selling paper...

We are not fatalistic, and we do not hear to attribute the events of this to the mere force of circumstances world. Reflection, wisdom, the protest of honestycrumpled heads were partly responsible for this great mess-
movement of demands against certain finau- banditry cer; and it is important to render justice to those who have it.

In 1854, a book entitled "Manual for Speculators" was published.
The Stock Exchange, without an author's name. It was a work that we
we had undertaken, in a way, on commission, Proudhon and me. Never before had speculation been the subject from a book: rare documents, scattered throughout treatises on Judaism caution, newspaper articles, reports
At the general assemblies, a few doctrinal rulings, that's it.
all our elements: nothing classified, coordinated, or organized.
tic. We set to work, without prejudice or bias.
taken, almost as ignorant of the subject as the public at-which we were tasked with teaching. We thought like everyone else, the croupiers of the speculation had,
In the absence of scruples, a certain merit of skill, of habit-summer. The courtiers of the million went so far as to pronounce the not science.

It was a bitter disappointment and a disgust for us.
name when we recognized that the scientific background of the aristocracy of the crowns was, to a large extent, borrowed to the procedures defined in the Penal Code... The public was lambasted
He didn't even have the sense to be worth his money.

We frankly gave our opinion, to everyone's astonishment.

To some, to the scandal of others. Insulting doubts for

Our sincerity as writers was proclaimed in the press: Islands

The rare failures invoked by us were merely extensions, and 2.

31 FINANCIAL PROCESSES

We had generalized! Already reparaiscuentes qualifications outdated enemies of order, of the family, and of rereading ion, envious powerful people, levelers, sharers,

Nevertheless, our third edition appeared in 1856, completely revised, redesigned, and full of supporting documents companies, in the Tribunaut Gazette, Sotxkante pages authentic, irrefutable, indisputable documents, undisputed.

This time the public sided with us, and we had more adversaries than finance and its organs, that is to say all the periodic irritability.

Almost immediately, unexpected reinforcements arrived: a book. by Mr. Oscar de Vallée, Advocate General at the Court of Paris, lcs Money handlers.

a If our social and political state, he said, repels beautiful- The effect of analogies that, through violence or passion, one wants to find between him and the Roman Empire, it is now certain that we give in without restraint to the unbridled taste for riches too easily acquired, and that this disease calls for the most Quickly, the doctor... If they thought I was exaggerating the pain for the It's a vain pleasure to fight him; I would return to a publication. recent {your Manual) of one of the most irreconcilable enemies- the most elusive and assiduous members of the social order... I confess that this ma- The story of a man lying in wait to discover and denounce the islands "The vices of a society he detests moved and disturbed me."

We could not expect praise from a Member of the prosecutor's office: we've never been spoiled in that respect. through excessive pleasantness. Also, the descriptions of Mr. de Vallée They caused us neither astonishment nor resentment. What was the author complaining after all? That the friends of order were allowed to advance by anarchists. Now, in the In times of great peril, no assistance should be disregarded. The sentinels dormajent: the enemy, under cover of darkness, was climbing the fortress, when we raised the alarm... Kt

PRECURSOR SYMPTOMS 29

Now Manlius, standing, was going to save the fatherland, Nons we only had the merit of the geese of the Gapitole: 1l suflisuit to our ambition.

The bruised ego incident resolved, M. de Vallée enters the The heart of the matter. The dignity of the toga and the rigidity of the collar do not They do not allow us to follow in the down-to-earth study and the vulgar practice of parasitic speculation. H seeks in the history of analogies with our time; he asks In times past, it was a remedy for the crisis that is suffocating us. an honest pen spares neither the grandeur of convention, nor pages subject to his rule.

"The need for luxury that stirred Loris XIV, even after his setback, he said, will beg the financiers for a miracle that will... will lead to the very limits of dishonesty, - I should say fraud, if that word were less More recent and less vulgar, Desmarets didn't know where to find Islands Millions that the king demanded (for a party at Fontainebleau). We imagined taking them from public credulity...

"The lackeys of the comptroller general usually provided- to the speculators, who paid them dearly, the secrets which they stole from their master's study. Desmarets, whoever learns of this has the idea of taking advantage of it to procure for the king the 4 million that he demands. He has 30 million worth of goods manufactured of banknotes from the loan fund, and hands them over to Samuel Bernard so that he might negotiate them; but in order to give these notes a value they wouldn't have had otherwise, he writes a he drafted a lottery project and left the written draft on his desk.

"Speculators recognize it immediately. Their credulity makes rising from 35 to 85 in a few days for these values to 0/0, A Taking advantage of this increase, Samuel Bernard is selling off his shares, which cost him nothing, and he made over 4 million for the king. Soon we will know the secret of this operation and its nature highly fraudulent. The banknotes fell by two-thirds and were called "Bsrnardines,"

WHERE FINANCIAL TRIALS

After the monarchy, the judiciary:

"In 169, an edict of June ordered that a chamber justice would be established every ten years, so that the islands would be poorly- payments from accounting officers and business people do not- never die unpunished. But the influence of financiers, that Richelieu himself suffered, and that Louis XIV experienced until- that by becoming Samuel Bernard's courtier, he prevented the strict execution of this edict, required the firm integrity of Colbert demanded that he be executed in 1561...

"...What is perhaps even more worthy of attention is..." that this intense corruption reached the point of mastery tasked with combating it, suppressing its effects, and annihilating it the profits, on the very seats of this juice chamber- (1316) money made victims and subjugated consciences

"In reality, after much violence and punishment"
copies, we had done so little against wear and tear, that they were seen almost immediately starting again, this time with a incredible fury, their work of social degradation, »

Next come the courtiers, the poets, and the women:

"This Scotsman, who had travelled across Europe playing at dice, who had initially pursued a profession that we despise, even today, since he was going to run the bank in a gambling house on Rue Dauphine, lives among its flatterers men and women who had courted Louis XIV, and who Until then, they had borne the most beautiful names in France. What A source of abjection! As he passed, people shouted: Long live the king!
and Monsignor Law, uniting Aipsi in a solidarity that...
Trissant and sinister, royalty is at the mercy of speculation.

"He received prose and verse; the native muses—yourselves laid at his feet this kind of poetry that wealth has always excited, and which, by its very purpose, deserves the attention that one He does it.

PRECURSOR SYMPTOMS 57

"The women argued, which can no longer surprise us"
to take, Islands favors of Catherine Knowel, Law's mistress,
And one day, it is said, there were some who climbed onto Je—in front of this concubine's carriage to go with her, and especially to own shares...

"These charming beings, whose love was once unattainable"
and the looks that, at the price of valor, of a thousand exploits, su—winds of life, who had known how to make love a religion followed by heroes, they offered and lavished gifts upon this player Scottish, their honor and their caresses, all to eur—surgery, »

Religion and the clergy bring up the rear of the procession:

"Not only did we see prelates engaging in trade with actions, and getting rich through gambling, but there were some who found Even on this subject, accommodations with the heavens. Decisions theological, with that spirit of distinctions that Pascal put into naked, they distinguished the trade in shares from usury, and believed dity and false science, to the anathema of the Church.

"Religion itself suffered the most serious attacks," and only engaged in a few isolated battles against evil. She raised herself-sensitive to the self-serving tributes that Law paid him, This man had such confidence in speculation that he applied to everything; he speculated on his conversion and won again In this game of lies and hypocrisy, the Church took him as an important and serious conquest, and received it with open arms. although the cause of his conversion had nothing to do with Catholicism or above all selfless, he received communion at Saint-Roch on the day of Christmas with his wife, whom he had given away in the same way as him to the Catholic religion; he returned the blessed bread, and was named, with an eagerness unworthy of duties and feelings of the Church of Jesus Christ, honorary churchwarden replacing cement of the Duke of Noailles. He immediately recognized this favor and he cemented the alliance with one hundred thousand crowns which he gave to the church of Saint-Roch to finish building it, »

ON FINANCIAL TRIALS

Mr. de Vallée is not going to ask the abominations of the past a consolation prize for the present; similar Thôse would have been unworthy of a magistrate, His retrospective review aims higher: the suppression of the harmful effects of speculation contemporary.

"Until now," he said bitterly, "the law has been defeated by speculation and reduced to this role, the worst of all that it can to have, to exist despite one's defeat, and to live without commanding... 11. You have to be a magistrate to know how far the abuses go, and How painful and complete is this powerlessness of the law...

"What if I was mistaken and it was necessary to support to bear these wounds so that wealth might increase and protect that the material sandstone was not slowed down, I ask at least that the May the law disappear, and may we not be condemned, we its ministers, to hold it in our hands, trembling, unapplied and defeated, »

Whether the law remains powerless or insufficient, there is no of prescription against the law. That was our conclusion; This is also the case for Mr. de Vallée. He asks himself: "The "Should speculators return what they have gained?" And 1 liter He responds with this quote from d'Aguesseau:

"It is property that belongs to no one, and which, by its very nature—
"Second, must be returned to the public in the person of the poor."

In other words, if individual crimes and offenses prescribe for a certain period of time, against the depressants social reforms, the demand is eternal. A revolution—
The man from the good rock could not have said it better.

Thus, the book of Money Handlers produced in the the throng of groppers, the effect of a torch on a swarm of hornets. Mr. Mirès, who since... but then he dominated in pacha au Constitutionnel, au Pays, au Journa! dis chemins of iron, Mr. Mirès himself descended, in his person and his

SYMPTOMS OF RECURRERS 1)

feather, in Parène: the quality of the opponent required that exemption.

"What is Mr. de Vallée's book?" the jurfinancial analyst. — A cry of alarm, says the author. — And this eri alarm (he's the one who says it again), he pushed him after the reading the title of a book signed by the man who wrote these words without Name: "Property is theft!" This is because a suphist,
Mr. Proudhon, defeated in his politics, defeated in his systems
My, he denigrates society, that's why Mr. de Vallée took The pen! A weak excuse for such a serious act! His fears are, thank God! chimerical, his attempts at reconciliation basic quantity.

"But who would benefit from hiding it? If this current ideas were to gain credence if these accusations, which are unfounded, were to be accepted could be accepted by the crowd, then they would develop all the evils that could have been avoided by a more dispassionate study and a more thoughtful approach to our financial organization. The book of Mr. de Vailée, far from preventing misfortunes, would perhaps be of nature to precipitate them; for one cannot deceive oneself that the
The author's position does not add much authority to his words.
and that his book does not provide an example on which in the future the bad passions could take hold,

"Fortunately, nothing in our society required the publishing a book of this nature, and it is impossible for us to recognize in the Money Handlers no opposing character tundiagnosis. This book exaggerates the evils, can serve as a pretext for passive of the moment, and expose to public contempt a class of reputable and useful men... — The conriscarion!
"So this is the conclusion of such a long diatribe," (Mires, Constitutional of September 8, 1857).

In summary, an appeal to base passions, an excitement for contempt and hatred of a class of citizens, attack on principle of property, such is the conclusion of Mirès con-
The magistrate is a publicist. Never had a socialist been treated more harshly; and it is really up to the money handlers to

60 FINANCIAL TRIALS

to envy the enemies of the order of the qualifications of M, the procureUr.

Mr. Mirès had sensed something in the live broadcast by the Attorney General. A serious symptom, and his instinct hadn't failed him. A such a manifesto, penned by a magistrate, a member of the Paris prosecutor's office, currently in active service, not could be appreciated as the work of a computer thinker a simple citizen of the Republic of Letters; there was obviously this is something other than a platonic protest in favor of virtue. The commentary was not made at tender.

11]

By claiming two books, the #annual of speculation- the orator and the Money Handlers, the honor of having given the The judicial investigations into the actions and gestures have been launched. As for speculation, we're not exaggerating. Without any announcements, without reports in the Îles journals pélitiques, all in- feudal to the caste, the first work had five editions in Three years. Twenty-two thousand copies of a book of books! It was a sign of the times. As for the book of the HManieurs of silver, Mr. Mirès's price list explains perfectly what need it addressed.

Will the one we are publishing today have the same Opportunity? In a more modest sphere, yes, without con- Tredit. The time has come for investigations: agricultural survey, survey on the Bank, inquiry into the money rate, inquiry into cooperative societies, an inquiry into private corporations Vilified, we bring a strong contingent to the education of all these matters; and it is appropriate to say how we We understood our task.

We are not writing a treatise on speculation and laws that thwart it. The speculator who would seek in this work the precise boundary between what is permitted and what is defended, in order to regulate his conduct accordingly and of to skirt the Penal Code without failing, would be completely misguided. We are not adding a chapter to history either. notorious bandits. The criminality of the acts and the per- His son will inevitably concern us, as will his accused. be acquitted: or dismissed from the proceedings, that their acts that have been forgotten or defined by law; that they resurface- weave together criminal, civil, or commercial justice, whether they be assessed in a manner by the: Court of First Instance instance, in another way by the Court of Appeal, that is not the important thing. That's how we will find in some disputes between civil parties, more surprising revelations, more shocking enormities than in the correct trials tionals.

The important thing is that all the laws of special economics before being violated, two in particular: the law of the division of work and the mutual services law, all branches The heads of industry, commerce, and agriculture have #té Disturbed by this violation, we dug... canals, hastened docks, established railways, organized credit companies aiming to provide a cheap way of life: and we admit the exorbitant cost; the Jews have become again kings of the time, as when Toussenet launched an attack against them his memorable indictment.

Public morality has suffered the backlash of the upheavals- economic factors. Not to mention the luxury of women, of the audacity of prostitution, of bedroom literature, of In these tableaux vivants, the financial world has asserted itself. unanimity as a caste, from the humblest squire to- than to princes. In this lamentable review of the spectacle In court, we will never see a moral sentiment to occur among the accused; all are martyrs, victims from the ignorance of the magistrates or jurors, all decline the competence of judges who have not lived their lives.

With each incident, the same thing happens again, like a recurring theme, [a Same answer: "Everyone in the business world does the same." Mirès asks to be judged by his peers, and responds in this stockbrokers, argues that a member of the corporation-ration is not subject to ordinary justice, but only from the trade union. Even in matters of brutal robbery, like the Carpentier case, an administrator from the Northern Company comes in person to the Court of the assizes, to demand on behalf of the criminal the benediction of Mitigating circumstances. All those people who live outside of the law and common morality is indignant at being judged by ordinary courts and calls for special juries.

Thus, the assassin Poulmann, a long time ago, had pretended to recuse the Assize Court, for the reason that it appeared clinging to a world of vagrancy, he could not be understood by bourgeois jurors.

6 There » +

And now that our plan and our goal are known,
Let's give the floor to events: we will philosophize about them After.

CHAPTER ONE

THE GAME AND CASE LAW

The game is simple, devoid of any suspicion of cheating, is the basis of fraudulent pagiotage. Therefore, it was just-

This is condemned by morality, law, and the courts. But,
On the other hand, the financial system, based on the principle of feudal credit can only survive through chance, bets, and fluctuations.
abnormal actions. We will create some doctrinal rulings on the subject matter, less to establish a body of case law which has never varied except to reiterate the principles of law, and show that between law and finance, there is no recognition possible connection.

Almost all of these rulings are issued following appeals.
civil disputes between bettors. Sometimes it has happened that the Court, after sending the players back to the drawing, transmitted the
The case was referred to the imperial prosecutor for a criminal ruling.
In this chapter, we only consider the judgments of principles, and we only give it further developments
just what is suitable as a starting point.

– Stock market transactions on the rise and fall of public effects and industrial assets, being illicit, do not

61 FINANCIAL TRIALS

may give rise to legal action, (Commercial Court) (L1 Seine market, September 5, 1N.)

– The stockbroker cannot, in the absence of authorization of his client, or prior formal notice, execute the said client, in other words, liquidate the forward operation at I am entrusted, even when my client is bankrupt! Tri-commerce center of the Seine, ? January Ra; same stops by the nth tribunal, April 14 and May 4, 1856; confirmation of the same doctrine in the Imperial Court, Paris, April 26 and May 10 1800.)

– Futures markets are valid when it is justified that the seller had in his possession the securities sold at maturity of the term, and that the same summons was made to take it delivery. When it comes to bearer shares, the identity of the Selling shares along with those offered is not necessary. (Court) (Paris printing press, January 24, 1850)

– The promises that a stockbroker received to cover an advance made to pay off a debt Stock market games cannot serve as a basis for the exercise of an action and must be considered null and void, (Imperial Court of Lyon, March 11, 1855.)

– A player on the stock exchange who has paid voluntarily cannot exercise of repetition; but when promissory notes, ori-Primarily subscribed outside of stock market games, have been trans- placed by the player for the benefit of the broker, as collateral-ly, by a white backing which is merely a simple A promise is sufficient to authorize the repeated action, that The endorser withdraws, before the negotiation, the resulting mandate of its back in white. (Paris Court of Appeal, April 14, 1856.)

– The delivery of bearer securities to a banker quier, as a guarantee of the stock market negotiations in which he has acts as an intermediary, constitutes, when it is done in the capacity of deposit, not a cover, having the effects of a payment anticipated, but a simple annihilation, Consequently, the depositor remains the owner of these assets, and the creditor has no right to dispose of it only with the consent of the debtor or the authorization of justice, in accordance with article 205 of the Code Napoleon, -- If this pledge concerns games of The stock exchange, it is null and void and must be returned. The creditor-- In such a case, the company cannot invoke Article 1967 of the National Code. Poleon, who defends the repetition of what the loser has willed-- paid silently, (Civil Court of the Seine, July 26, 1856; same case law at the Commercial Court of Bordeaux, September 20, 1856.)

– Fictitious markets are further defined by Articles 491 and 42 of the Penal Code, whose provisions affect players at the Hanse and the days are falling. – The postponement, legal in itself, as a form of aid offered by capital to speculation, loses its character, with regard to the deferred, when it serves to to provide the means to limit oneself to paying differences in individuals who do not want to raise the securities, and to whom their this position would not allow us to fulfill the commitments that contracts a serious buyer. – Criminal law cannot be evaded by a mechanism of operations that would prevent to go through the representative to reach the principal who has violated its provisions. – It reaches a hundred who play by the Ministry of Stockbrokers as well as the players behind the scenes, (Imperial Court of Toulouse, criminal chain, December 4, 5 and 6, 1856.)

– A dispute relating to stock market games cannot be the subject of a valid compromise; the nullity of the compromise must to react to the arbitration award and have it declared null and void. (Civil Court of Lyon, June 29, 1855.)

– When stock market manipulation is detected, the agent's client exchange, nor can its creditor, repeat the differences and brokerage fees paid. – But this creditor is entitled to seize and arrest the sums and assets in the hands of the agent, as cover, and which he has not yet disposed of for the liquidation of the operations, (Paris Court of Appeal, 29 November 1858.)

b.

beds PROCESS LINANCIE RS

– Sie report est certenx. 1tse constHUE pas un contrat

If it is fictitious, it falls within the domain of the game, and cannot give rise to legal action. (Civil Court of the Seine, 49 and July 25, 4860; the sum in dispute amounted to 1,049,421 francs.

– The individual who lends another money intended for Stock market games, knowing this destination, and whose goal, By acting in this way, he is seeking to profit from the presumed benefits that he will produce to obtain reimbursement, with the current amounts– loaned, a prior claim he had on the loan the seller has no legal recourse against him to obtain payment of these sums; art. 1965 of the Napoleonic Code denies it to him. (Court of Cassation, July 7, 1862.)

– The provisions of Article 1965 of the Napoleonic Code, which refuse any action to pay gambling debts and paris, are not applicable to the action of the exchange agent con– the banker, when the stockbroker must have believed that he received serious orders, due to the large number of clients banker's phone. (Seine Commercial Court, October 12) (bre 1863.)

After such warnings, repeated by all the tri– French archives, of which we give only a small In view, Mr. Oscar de Vallée had some reason to speak of "the trembling, unenforced, and thwarted law." Since then, she took a resounding revenge, but, we repeat, his res The vendetta will bear even more fruit through the revelations. that she raised only through the punishment inflicted on her rapes iCurs.

CHAPTER II

SPECULATION INTERMEDIARIES: EXCHANGE AGENTS, WALLPAPERS, RAGPAPERS

How to exclude market players? The solution of The problem is now recognized as radically unsolvable. ble; but it was worth seeking, The governor– he thought for a moment he had found it: he organized in mono– pole intermediaries in transactions involving public securities: He raised them to the dignity of ministerial officers; he de– created that no stock market trading could take place fure other than through stockbrokers.

How did the privileged respond to this high mis– What about the trust in power? What have they done for the police?

We said in our 5th edition of the 5th annual, when speaking from the stockbroker:

"This officer publishes, whose examination of conscience is pre-properly done by the government, then by the corporation; which must find, before the price of his position, a guarantee of 420,000 francs; the exchange rate, the position of which you have told us

68 FINANCIAL TRIALS

legal, knowledge, prohibition of speculating on one's own behalf, defense to lend his ministry to gambling operations, the agent of Change is the first to speculate against its clients. It knows in advance, according to the orders he has received, what will the physio-market economy; he sees the cards; he can skew them if necessary.

Our assertion, although not in doubt for anyone, had, however, seemed somewhat reckless, despite 'n a beginning of evidence cited in support. But we had not They only talked about games; now justice has discovered something else entirely. thing.

GIBLAIN CASE

We begin with the Giblain trial (December 185), although it is not the first, because it forms in a way an encyclopedia, a portrait of customs complete, without retouching; and also because that's where The solidarity of the corporation was most clearly affirmed. tion.

The accused is charged with forgery of public documents, of banking and commerce, deception in banking transactions
Stock exchange: 1800 counterfeits in round numbers, of which only 180 were re-held by the public prosecutor, Giblain bought his position in September 1854 at a price of 4,100,000 francs; it had four co-owners. In just one year, he earned 1,200,000 francs. Brokerage fees, amounting to 150,000 francs for its proportional share. From Such results could not satisfy his ambition, says arte of accusation; he wanted to achieve more considerable goals Furthermore, and to achieve this goal, he did not hesitate to re-To open up to the most criminal maneuvers.

"Giblain's method consisted of interposing between the stockbroker and the client, a fictitious intermediary whom he preferred felt like the beneficiary of the original operation. By

EXCHANGE AGENTS 69

For example, Deviane, a banker in Amiens, gave him orders to purchase 100 Austrians, Giblain bought the shares at 141 fr. 25 c. from his colleague Rougemont; then, instead of notifying Deviane of this operation, Giblain assumed that the 100 shares delivered by Rougemont had bought them from a Mr. de Saint-Prix, the which had been returned, by his ministry, to Deviane, at 712 francs. 0 fr. 1 thus agreed the difference of 1 fr. 5 fr. per action, »

Same process for resales: Giblain negotiates 50 Midi at 110 francs, and only sells them during the 765 exchange rate.

The accused does not deny that the fictitious accounts denounced did not are truly such, Giblain only discusses the quantities of benefits attributed to each: a completely strange distinction manages the morality of the beginning: According to the expert, the Saint-Prix would have earned Giblain 91,000 francs; the Verrières, 80,210, the Clerbourg account 46,711, etc., together 31 fictitious names, benefiting from 320,000 francs. in round numbers. N / A— These invention accounts do not typically produce brokerages.

The main injured party, the main witness, by consequence— The next person to be questioned is Mr. Deviane, a banker in Amiens. His deposition is too important, like a study of walls, relationships between financial, so that we would be content with a simple résumé:

"I was led," he said, "in 1855, to address myself to Mr. Giblain, stockbroker in Paris. Around 1837, I was very involved in the Stock market and unable to "sell large differences that I owed. I sent one of my friends, Mr. Ménags, a lawyer, and I came myself to obtain a delay from Mr. Giblain, 11 months refused this deadline and referred me to his counsel, Mr. Jagon, who He greeted me with apparent kindness, saying: "Come now, my child, I can get you out of this mess," I will—I will see the benefits that Mr. Giblain had made with me, and I Say that if he had a little heart, he would give me some time. I proposed an arrangement, which Jagon rejected, and I left.

tis for Amiens, determined to oppose, if necessary, the retreat of the game.

"Back in Amiens, I conferred with Mr. Petit, a lawyer, who approved the course of action I intended to follow. Later, Mr. Petit became Mr. Gibrain's lawyer. That was clever. From him, since Mr. Petit knew the secrets from my office. I lost my case, and I found myself exposed to body restraint.

"It was around this time that I learned what had happened in the Mr. Gibrain's charge. A kind-hearted man, suffering to see me victim of so many frauds, gave me, in one night, communion—I examined my agent's books, and I found therein the proof of the numerous frauds of which I had been a victim. Mr. Bouillant, another stockbroker, whom I went to see, and who had the right against me. He threatened me with the execution of the judgment under duress; but, strongly based on the information I had, I replied to him: "If I am "Tomorrow in Clichy, you'll be in Mazas the day after tomorrow." I told him Zacontai what I had learned, and immediately he told me that he would settle my case, both for him and for Mr. Gibrain. He saw the latter, and I saw it myself afterwards: I told him this that I knew, and he answered me easily: "Ah, yes, it is necessary that I use carrots to support my load. Then he laughed: "What What are your conditions?

"I took a sheet of paper and wrote: 10 restitution of my securities; cancellation of the sale of 50 Austrians; 30 payment of 5,000 francs in damages; 40 acceptance of withdrawal of my appeal against the judgment of the commercial court merce.

"After a conference between Mr. Gibrain and Mr. Bentabole, his The cashier told me, "Everything is finalized; we're going to sign." the arrangement. I immediately received the 15,000 francs, from-compensation, and it is only on the refusal to execute the surplus of our arrangement that I drafted a complaint against Mr. Gibrain. Before submitting it, I had it sent to Mr. Gibrain. by my brother-in-law; the reply was that Gibrain would pass by per ot je voudrais, et Je vais mis chez lui, Fà je traie M, Jason, his sergeant, the one who lost him; for he did not give him than despicable advice. I demanded that this man re-He pulled, and I got it.

EXCHANGE AGENTS 71

finished, after a few modifications to the project prepared by Mr. Giblain. I received there the completion of what was owed to me (!), except for a few actions that were to be given to me—his, and who have never been.

"I thought everything was over, when, regarding the trials that we had, Mr. Giblain made me demand payment of the expenses they had incurred. I resisted; a new pro—He committed himself, I had promised, on my honor (!), to remain silent on what had happened, and I revealed nothing; he lost: what forced him to pay the costs of the lawsuits he had won, "However, it wasn't all over. Mr. Giblain believed and believes..." that I am his enemy; 4 is mistaken (!) He is the one who has everything woke up trying to harm me on the Stock Exchange. He knew that I I was doing business with one of his cousins, and he said to him, "Com—How do you conduct business with a man who wanted To blackmail me? It was with such remarks that he "I tried to ruin my credit,"

A long debate ensued between the accused and the witness regarding the price. to which the latter promised discretion: approximately 27,000 francs. "If I had asked for 200,000 francs," said Deviane, "I would have gotten it." "The next day, at the Stock Exchange, they were saying that I had received some" "300,000."

Deviane protested vigorously, and on several occasions, con—the accusation of having Giblain arrested; it is an out—Tragedy to his honor! He received the prize for his silence, he didn't Just a word!

To another witness, the president addressed this question: "What did you mean by core sampling?"

"A. Answer: Mr. Giblain had bought some pe—little things he didn't tell me about during the real course. I did the I complained, and Mr. Giblain responded by kicking me, at punches. I couldn't defend myself, being crippled.

72 FINANCIAL TRIALS

I appealed to the trade union chamber, and I said that if I did not obtain If I am not satisfied within twenty-four hours, I will file a complaint. complaint, I was referred to Mr. Dubois, and it was then that I received the letter you know, where Giblain pays homage to me honor.

One of the witnesses appeared escorted by two gendarmes, he
He himself is arrested and detained in Mazas, as is his boss.
11 was under liquidation at Gibrain, and 11 has, of complicity with another employee, committed forced embezzlements at the pre-the stockbroker's judgment. This story comes before the Court of Assizes.
located on the Seine, at the hearing of January 6, 1860. – Gibrain
he again lashes out during the debates against a National Movement... his principal volcur, as he calls him, a man who
He subscribed to a certificate of 70,000 francs as a dedamages.

Next came the deposition of Mr. Coin, the union representative of the agents. of the Paris exchange. The newspaper only reports fragments of it.
inconsistent statements, and it is hardly possible to appreciate them morality in ways other than through repartee.

First, it was Mr. Barbier, the general lawyer, who spoke out.
to the famous Poulmaun doctrine: to be judged by one's peers.

"According to the accused," he said, "he, Gibrain, would have, at most:"
violated the regulations of his profession; he would not have passed-
It is possible that the stockbrokers' union is censoring the rules. What is it?
What does that mean? Are there now two moralities, one vulgar-simple and straightforward, like yours, like ours, and another Morality for the use of merchants and industrialists?

Mr. Desmarets, the lawyer for the civil party, complains, on behalf of public morality, for not having found, in the answers provided by the Coin trustee, proof that the facts reproduced:
(sibrain) are isolated incidents. If it is true that these processes:
They are general, they will have to be used to record a misfortune audience.

EXCHANGE AGENTS 13

The discussions take on a lively pace and expressiveness.
a union that is not ordinary.

"You remember the exaggerations of the civil party," he said.
Mr. Lachaud; yes, exaggerations. The form was beautiful.
no doubt; but the underlying issue has not become any more true for That. Who will believe that the stockbrokers, that the officers responsible for negotiating government securities, that is to say Men without probity and without honor? Who are they trying to fool?
that the members of the trade union chamber be the guardians:
of what has been called a THIEVES' CAVE

Eight hundred and fifty questions were put to the jury, which responded with a verdict of acquittal on all charges. This decision should come as no surprise, given the presence of revelations like those that occurred during the trial. Indeed, while the criminal courts focus primarily on fact of violation of the law, simple observation during the proceedings, the jurors most commonly take the elements of their verse—dictated by one of the moral considerations: Before his conscience Is the accused, regardless of his actions, guilty? He re— It is clear from the incidents of the trial that the accused does not have the notion of justice and injustice; that the environment in which he saw could not that of atrophying his vague instincts of eccentricity, if indeed he he had ever had, that he did neither better nor worse than his colleagues. Is the fox that strangled an entire henhouse a criminal? before his conscience, in case he had one? Obviously. The fox, assuming he's thinking, would simply thank him Thank Providence for the good fortune that has befallen him. Humanity protects itself as best it can against depredations: The murder of the culprit will be a matter of prudence and precautions. tion, not a legitimate act of repression. This explains Some acquittals: the facts are blatant, indisputable, undeniable: but on his soul and his honor, the accused believes himself unassailable, and the jury, averting their gaze from this Spectre, replies with disgust: Let him hang himself!

curs:...

are

{

eh

11 FINANCIAL TRIALS

Logically, with Giblain acquitted, his clerks, followed, twenty days later, for theft to the detriment of their pa— Were they also so? It seems that consciousness The public declared here, through the mouths of the jurors: This world, outside our moral framework is also outside our legal framework. diction.

AFFAIRS OF THE TURALS, COLOMYES AND OTHERS

However, provincial juries are, in such cases, more lenient than that of Paris. This is because in provinces, everyone knows each other: the disasters have repercussions on compatriots, neighbors, friends, relatives, notables, honorable, known to all, honest and good people whose life is up to date and whose downfall is becoming almost a public calamity. In Paris, on the contrary, who knows the Giblain's victims, assuming they are even of interest?

Henry des Tureaux (Loiret Assize Court, July 5, 1859) was appointed stockbroker and commodities agent at Orléans by decree of November 19, 1850. His plow was worth approximately 10,000 francs net per year. But the demise of fortune and The game got involved. He diverted a large number of titles to the port. author who had only been entrusted to him by his clients at the charged with receiving semi-annual interest; he employed even for his own benefit the sums that had been given to him for purchasing securities. In short, he left one night, iucuszuito; A few days later, he was arrested in Marseille and taken to Orléans. The Loiret Assize Court sentenced him to five years of prison.

And yet there was no shortage of mitigating circumstances, If we maintain this pace at the previous one: the accused a First, the audacity to confess to all the acts attributed to him; agrees to his disloyalty and only claims indulgence of his judges, he does not assume that his colleagues, constituted in court, be capable of acquitting him; in his flight, he took only 1000 francs, barely the cost of a trip to the foreign. The family reported bankruptcy, full initiation-of course, and to safeguard the honor of his lost child, 170,000 francs; so that the delict of the creditors-will only be 50 percent at most. Decidedly the provinces has some good points.

EXCHANGE AGENTS 79

Colomves (Haute-Garonne Assize Court, 25, 26, 27 and (May 28, 1860) is one of the eight stockbrokers established near of the Toulouse Stock Exchange since 1852; this is the third of these ministerial officers against whom the justice system was compelled to crack down: 3 out of 8, that's the whole morality of privilege.

The story of this forger is similar to all the others: ostentatious extravagance, embezzlement to the detriment of clients, alt-accounting entries, stock market games to cover all these years of imprisonment.

However, we will highlight one paragraph of the indictment.
sation, all to the further advantage of the morality of the people of province :

"On January 45, 1858," the rapporteur said indignantly,
The defendant's gambling transactions amounted to 3,668,571 francs, and to 31 of the same month, to the enormous figure of 4,313,705 francs, »

What! Four and a quarter million, a huge number for a
A stockbroker in Toulouse, the capital of the South! Is it that they would be unaware of this detail, among a thousand, of a trial there famous man on trial in Paris:

"Guérin, an office boy at the Northern Railway, 1200 francs in salary, 280 francs in rent at La Chapelle, he made under his real name and at his real address, for #3 million (no let's say forty-three million transactions in ten months with its stockbroker. (Carpentier Trial).

7" FINANCIAL TRIALS

May F1 province retain its naiveté until decentralization.
We are complete, with vices as well as virtues.

The criminal courts, we were saying, condemn the
as soon as its illegality is established, the perpetrator of the act whether or not the accused was aware of their crime. We we find in fact on the date of April 18, 1860, ur. judgment of the
The criminal court of Paris condemned the officer.
Change Sauvage was fined 3,000 francs and dismissed from his position.
as Atleint and convinced of having engaged in games of Stock exchange. Yet another martyr of ordinary justice; without con-

Tried, judged by his peers, he was acquitted with all the honors

On August 1st of the following year, it was the stockbroker's case.
Féquant: scams, breach of trust, stock market gambling, Infinite variations on the Giblain theme. The society for the operation of his office had a capital of 2,500,000 francs.
divided into 25 parts. Féquant had 9, which multiplied in his hands like the loaves of the Gospel, for he has

of the justice system of his country, Féquant not only dared to to present himself to demand natural judges, his equals; he is left for abroad without leaving his address: and it is from this era that the Stock Exchange's jokers say about a man who slowed down: "He took the road to Fécamp."

We will not dwell further on the shipwrecks that have occurred. in the honorable company of stockbrokers; the cause of this kind of monopoly is completely lost in public opinion. The disasters that accompanied and followed the Liqui- The donation of July 1866 dealt it the final blow. The days. Financial experts estimate the deficit at 20 or 25 million, which, this This soul-searching incident strikes the corporation of stockbrokers. Paris. How to reconcile this disaster with the ban imposed to the DC agents to play for their count or to lend their mini- To be involved in gambling operations? Yet another lawless world

THE BEHIND THE SCENES 11

We are looking for – and we will find – palliatives to the positive The lion accidentally became seriously injured during the July operations. Even if it's created, the inherent flaw of the monopoly won't change. I had the honor of being Minister of Finance, obliged by posi- tion to invest the charge buyers who present themselves in Succession of the ancients, I would frankly not dare, in front of Given similar precedents, assuming responsibility for such a serious matter resolution. The investiture decree favors, as an exception, technically honest, one candidate among a thousand. Who knows if the nine hundred and ninety-nine excluded were not the most Deserving? There's a lot of talk these days about moral responsibility: agents of power must eagerly seize all opportunities to free the State from interference in transportation actions between citizens.

THE BACKSTAGE STAFF

Against the claims and illegalities of the agents of change and from their trade union there was a counter- Weight: the backroom deals, the shady brokers. Back in the day, when the The pâté was plentiful, the whole pack lived in harmony; but Then came the famine, and the purebred greyhounds chased away from the food bowl. simple mastiffs,

The oldest demand of ministerial officers against free intermediaries, the date is no more than twelve years. We find an account of it in the Gazette des Tribunaux of July 11, 1855. Stock market practices are still so to hand over the report of the following notice, today

as old as the history of the obvious:

"The Marseille court has just devoted several to-contributions to the debates of a case that raised the most serious interests: this involved the suppression of bets on the rise and the decline in public effects, what we have agreed to call

f.

78 FINANCIAL TRIALS

stock market games, and lawsuits against a company of agents of change in arrons, operating, under Island title of backstage, at from the official prosecutor's office.

"The laws governing these special matters are already quite good."
old; the judgment we are about to publish is however one of the first legal precedents, the first possibleto be, which is connected to this important matter. It is called,
"In more ways than one, it deserves attention."

This is followed by a conviction of the offenders and a fine.

In May 1859, another complaint from stockbrokers
Aix-en-Provence against the city's shady brokers, the defendants are dismissed for lack of evidence.

Finally, on June 23, 1859, came the famous judgment of the cou-
Paris tapestry weavers. There are twenty-six defendants, not common criminals.
bohemians, as one might think at first glance, but Bankers, financiers, neither worse nor less bad than the others. They are simply accused of interfering in the functions of stockbrokers, and condemned rather to A fine of 10,500 francs is applicable to abandoned children:
question of legality regarding which the voters of the parties engage in rather edifying recriminations and theories were introduced regarding the advantages and disadvantages of the islands.
denials of monopoly or freedom.

From a crime perspective, we would find backroom deals more or less similar to the cases Giblain, Colombyes, des Tureaux and associates: in order not to
We will avoid falling into tedious repetitions.
and we will immediately address another category:

THE RAGGERS

This title, of course, is not official: it is a figure of our own making, suflisammeut explicit in its simple enunciation.

THE RAG PICKERS 79

Let's see if the functions correspond to the name. 1
This is a criminal trial, in Paris, dated the 7th and 10th.
In June 1856, there were eighteen defendants, divided into five categories.
all accused of interfering in the duties of agents of currency exchange; some, in addition, of fraud and abuse trustworthy. We take a few quotes from current sources reading.

"WITNESS Husson: Mr. Vermond summoned me to the café of the Stock Exchange; he boasted to me about his shares in the Small Business Bank merce; he told me that the securities were only worth at the moment 53 to 60 francs per hundred, and that they would soon rise to 150 francs per piece.

"MR. PRESIDENT: What! You were buying shares that were only worth 60 cents each?

Husson: Yes, sir, and I believed I would benefit, because Mr. Ver-mond, by selling them to me, made me a commitment which obligated him to buy them back from me at a 50 cent profit; I bought some 5,000 from him, and 5,000 others from various brokers; I paid, h,200 Fr. |

"MR. LR PRESIDENT: There has been a great deal of carelessness on your part."
to believe that people from Pourse who were selling you shares 60 cents you Islands would take back, fifteen days later, with a a benefit to you of 50 cents, that is to say nearly 100 per 100,

"Husson: I was deceived by my own good faith," (The Honest man!)

QM, THE PRESIDENT has another: For how much did you re-Shares in Vermoud? – Réronxse: For 109,000 francs, at 100 francs per share.

hundred,

» M1. THE PRESENT: That is to say, he sold 3 sous what

You valued it at 100 francs, and, having done so, it disappeared.

© ASK the sly Parisian: Did you know that Vermond was

A crazy Hounine? – ANSWER: I was speculating; on the Stock Exchange, we do

#0 FINANCIAL TRIALS

business dealings with a crowd of people whose backgrounds are unknown teeth.

"QUESTION: At what price did you sell the 3,000 shares?"

which were given to you? – ANSWER: At 90 francs per hundred.

"Mr. Le SueSident: That is to say, 50 centimes per share which re–" presented 100 francs; the court will appreciate this extraordinary fact.

"Mr. President, to witness Hurel: What sum have we..." achieved through the sale of shares in Lignéenne (a company for (making paper from wood)? – Hunez: About 5 to 94,000 francs.

"REQUEST: How was this sum of money used? – RE–" ANSWER: We bought furniture and assembled desks: the
The rest was dissipated on travel, advertising costs, who knows?

"Question: And we haven't made anything? – Answer: A capital letter"

"A sheet of cardboard, according to my information."

"Mr. President, to witness Paujol: How much did you bought your shares? – ANSWER: at francs each; today
They are sold for 1 franc per hundred at the gate of the Stock Exchange, because it is
"It is forbidden to invoke them inside,"

"ASK the witness Bernard: What reasons did you have committed to taking action in the Lignéenne. – ANSWER: All
The newspapers had reported on it; Defricourt had 10,000 shares.
The articles of association stipulated the eight largest shareholders would be ex officio members of the council. Comine Defricourt had a large number of shares, he lent them to his friends and had

we could have accounts,

"FIUCHRHETTE, retired, 55 years old: Like everyone else, I was..."
told me to go to the general assembly; I was put under surveillance-launch; why or how? I don't know any more; ap-Apparently, that suited them just fine.

Mr. Renaun, suspender manufacturer: I was led to... seemed to be by a little blond boy, whom I don't know otherwise;
He told me to come; I went, from the moment I was appointed as a member of the supervisory board, I who have not been there

THE RAG PICKERS | 81

I wasn't expecting it, it took me by surprise, I couldn't hear what was being said anymore
My ears were ringing.

© AL THE PRESIDENT to the acclaimed Legendre: W a long time ago
That you frequent the Stock Exchange? – LeGenDre: Two years.

"QUESTION: And you fiddle with things there? – ANSWER:"
There are three thousand who do what I do; I have bonded with ANI brokers make 300,000 to 600,000 euros in business per year: I have
I believed they had the right to operate, and I operated like them.

"MR. PRESIDENT: You practice a forbidden profession, – RE-"
ANSWER: Like everyone else.

"Presson, packer, witness: I bought on the spot of Mr. Beaugrand for 180 francs worth of shares in the company La Commansaid; 11 had agreed to buy back the Islands for 300 francs, at the end of the months. He didn't keep his word, and I learned that Mr. Clerk-
The head of the Stock Exchange had argued that these shares should be listed.

"MONNIER, witness: I sold to Mr. Beaugrand for 900 francs."
of shares in the Chaudronnerie company, with a premium. At the liquidation, he gave me paid in shares of his limited partnership, which I was unable to negotiate at no price. Later, after my complaints, he gave me other promises of shares that were confiscated between my hands by the Commissioner of the Stock Exchange. Later, Beau-
"Big has lost my interest."

When the rates were 12 francs per cent, or 12 centimes per action, can no longer even find takers, the role of the rag-
The loss of their former values and their defunct values is not over yet.

Have you ever wondered, said the Messenger of the Stock market, October 10, 6:57 PM: what happened to the stocks of so many discredited affairs, which, after having enjoyed, for a certain time, favors of speculation, are now the object of his disdain and have almost completely disappeared from the market?..

"You see nameless brokers asking for these securities" discredited, search for these titles on which your operation

to FINANCIAL PROCEEDINGS

seems impossible. They soon encounter, unearth The word would be better, some of these dead values; because The Stock Exchange contains a considerable number of these wrecks, and the Deep waters of speculation constantly carry them. T| a posthumous course is being given on these skeletal titles, but to what extent? rates! We quote 50 centimes, { fr., ? fr., values which have given, a few months or a few years earlier, 100 francs. 200 francs and more difference above their issue price. Those that have retained a spark of life can afford up to 5, 10, 20 and 50 francs...

"Where have these values, so carefully crocheted to the corner of the What milestone had Ja left them? What premium did he recognize? What did these brokers think about defunct securities, about shares with no market value?

"The pirates of trade and industry are preparing their bankruptcy by buying these stocks and securities at rock-bottom prices, of which they record in their books, backdating it, the acquisition at emission rates, and even at the highest rate that has been reached. They thus have a nominal capital that balances with advance- the deficit shown by the merchandise or operating account In terms of ratio, they can only be faulted for imprudence in the choice of investments where their capital is immobilized rates and their working capital. Fraud or im- primitive foresight that compromised the value of securities representing their assets shelters their bankruptcy against the charge of fraud. The trick is done, and the clever man, rehabilitated to The desire for justice and its victims is considered a a humble man whom the exertions of the day had driven to imprudently burdened with values that everyone would have excellent raw materials,

"Moreover, if the adventurer is truly strong, he deposits in the hands of the trustee a bundle of the same securities representing feeling an enormous sum, like the personal guarantee rt proof that his own fortune, that of his wife and of "es children were involved in the same operations, so much so that

After such evidence, how can one not be disarmed?

CHAPTER III

THE WRECK OF FRAUDULENT SPECULATION

In our previous chapter, we started with social luminaries, the stockbroker, to arrive, by a series of imperceptible degradations, down to the lowest foundations, to the ragpickers. Everything connects and fits together perfectly. This world of intermediaries. Only, having arrived at the last at this level, we find the most mixed functions various, the most heterogeneous attributions. The ragpicker is simultaneously: founder, administrator, broker, seller and buyer, architect of rise and fall, until a Final catastrophe radically resolves the matter, Between these speculators and the creators of companies that we trust among the wreckage of fraudulent speculation, the nuance is imperceptible. We will pause there for a few moments. And then, climbing back up the ladder, we will return to the large business, to the financial elite.

L'Ancre-Martin, criminal trial. – In chronological order
And as for initiation, we owe first place to adventure.
that we are going to read:

The Society for the Exploitation of the Pâucres-Martin site has come

1. FINANCIAL TRIALS

to report to the correctional police chamber of Paris, hearing of December 26 and 27, 1855, and January 9 1850 – Three defendants: Durand, known as de la Bathières, con-sentenced to one year in prison and a 50 franc fine, director of the companies Ferdinand Martin, inventor of the anchor carrying his name, comptroller general, three years in prison, reduced to two on appeal, 50 francs fine; Rettig, deputy director, ac-Left in the first instance, sentenced to one year on appeal: all the:
three people jointly and severally ordered to make restitution to the civil parties 00,000 francs, unduly deducted; five years of imprisonment by
The value of the invention, of course, is not in the body.
In this game, it's all about maneuvers.

The sponsorship, placed under the patronage of the Vicre
Mary, protector of sailors, was capitalized

French patent at the price of 1,000 paid-up shares, i.e. 50,000 fr. ; 11 received 12,000 fr. in apologies as an auditor, Durand 10,000, and Rettig 6,000.

The Company could only be formed after the sub-registration of 1,000 shares other than those allocated to the insider. On February 9, 1854, the managers declared the company in good standing, although it only wanted shares under the French government. by insolvent sympathizers. The leaflets advertised considerable economies, transfers: of patents to In The Stranger, Martin was said to have a personal fortune of one million and a half million. The factory of Goat, bought for 130,000 francs, and on which no payment had been made a penny.

Alin was removing the subscriptions; Martin was in Marseille. Durand in Paris. One day, the former dictated to his accomplice a telegraphic dispatch:

"Suspend all transmissions; send all your Subscriptions will be void; those not received by this mailing will be considered invalid.

Durand hastened to repeat from Paris to Marseille Ja for-premeditated mule, Martiu, had Ta communicating with the Pru-

WRECKS OF SPECULATION 55

of Massaliote men, pressed them to backdate flower requests of actions, so that they would not be rendered obsolete by [a fatal dispatch. Durand was repeating the same maneuvers in Paris. The The misappropriations of "inst obtained" amount to approximately 150,000 francs.

The plaintiff, Mr. Honnorat, a former tanner in Marseille, Complete the information on this case.

"I only met Mr. Martin when I became shareholder. I had read the report on Îles journaux of The anchor, of which he was the inventor. MD., canon in Marseille, that I knew, Mrs. Parka, of this invention in a way very favorable and I commit to taking action, On his re-I agreed to take twenty of them, which he handed over to me. himself, after which I went to Mr. Martin's house to sign my engagement. This took place around January 10, 1854. On the same day, I subscribed to 30 other shares, of which I paid the fifth, or 3,000 francs. I had already given it to Mr. Canon D... 2,000 francs on the 20 shares that I held from his hands.

deciding to subscribe to considerable sums, all the resources of his imagination. He showed me a certificate of The Bishop of Marseille, attesting that he was of good moral character he was religious and professed religious principles; he told me that he He was decorated with several orders and was a Roman count. F m'otfrit, si I was taking 40 shares, a 27% discount, namely 12% in cash and 15 percent in stocks. He also told me about the minister. from the navy and from a conversation this dignitary had had with the emperor regarding his invention, "These last few days, "Mr. Martin told me, Mr. Ducos, the Minister of the Navy, was "in his study, admiring a small copper model of "My anchor, which I had sent to him. Suddenly the en- "The father enters unannounced and says to his minister: –" "What are you doing here, Ducos? Playing with a toy?" "Sire," replied the minister, "this toy is the Aucre Martin, who "will bring glory and happiness to your navy." – Summary I subscribed to 90 shares and paid 25,000 francs.

According to the certificates produced for the defense, the invention of Martin would have a heavenly value; niats as soon as Ics finan- Clerics seize control of a company; the fund matters little. To take care, it is to stipulate mutually, between di- unregulated and uncontrolled, leonine sales conditions, salary, representation expenses, then to get bogged down the public var recommendations from canons, from ecruit- bishops' cats, apocryphal sayings attributed to the emperor and to state dignitaries.
D

FINANCIAL TRIALS

This affair, moreover, is child's play. This blessed The period 1856–1866 is marked by the seal of predestination. tion. Financial Moseses have sprung up from all sides; all the stock exchanges, large and small, surrounded, besieged, for- cedes. Below high finance, what one might call- peeling the Institute, scouring an anthill of lesser geniuses brilliant. Alongside companies with capital of 50 to 500 million lions, like vermin, hatch sponsorships to a few millions. Everywhere there are promises of profits of 25 and 50 0/0. We explained the mechanics in the introduction. nism of this kind of blackmail, of this theory of the strongest yield, from the largest net product, including journalism The political and financial elite en masse became its apostle. We have demonstrated that the success of such senseless designs does not could only succeed under one condition: that of putting on [a straw consumers and producers. The more expensive you will pay speak the new crusaders. Examples:

The Livestock, – The share capital was 6 million; shares of 100 francs, 900 francs, and 1,000 francs. I'm about entrusting livestock to the farmers and to share the increase with them. The leaflet said:

“Society, by only revealing its existence, has degraded agriculture, in quantity and from all sides, the demands for livestock she felt that it wasn't for millions that she could to be called upon to supply it, but for 400 million, La morenue benefits by imploring her for all causes which can weaken it, is 25 percent for the owner of the livestock, even when practicing livestock farming as it is done almost – that we leave, that is to say routinely; but the average rises well beyond that when livestock farming is practiced comine The company understands this, with knowledge and method, 100 million employees of the company would secure him more than 25 million of profits.

WRECK OF SPECULATION If

First, strangle the farmer who rents livestock, to the benefit of the sponsorship; secondly, to curb the con- exorbitant due to the high price of livestock and meat, all to enrich shareholders who could not to be taken that parini meat consumers and agri- Islands farmers: that is the depth and malice of the combination.

Fortunately for everyone, the founders of com- panies have other things to do than continue the re- setting up a business. The managers began by awarding themselves a salary of 6,000 francs, then 10,000; they established directors, deputy departmental directors, ins- general and particular inspectors; they made 227,203 francs. 50 francs of advertisements; they bought four buildings at the price of 181,386 francs 50 centimes, payable in shares; they sold, under pretext of surety bonds, inspector positions and directors in good provincial areas, moving subscriptions 30,000 to 40,000 francs worth of shares; finally, they bought for 179,267 francs worth of livestock, a purchase which, according to the report of Passernhiée of 1855, gave a profit of 57, 519 fr. 71 c., or 49 0/0.

to admit a deficit of 770,689 francs; but, with a view to reducing The effect of this communication is that it announces the growth of animals can be valued at 259,000 francs, which reduces the de-
It was set at 199,689 francs. 11 proposes to raise the capital to 30 million.
of door: the duration of the company at 50 years, to distribute over these thirty years the overhead costs incurred up to that point, and of dishibuer, on the funds remaining available through this combination:.

S8 FINANCIAL TRIALS

10 and 6/0 to the shares. The assembly votes enthusiastically these various proposals, primarily out of consideration for the last, and we finally arrive at the correction- police nelle, (:e Chamber, hearings of July 7 and 9, 1858.)

May sensitive souls, upon hearing this account, pity the wretched... rables, victims of their greed, who have swallowed up their economies on a promise of 25% minimum profit.
We cannot, judging from the point of view of the collection-activity, rather than applauding the downfall of companies which, have they were not absurd from the point of view of law and practice of the economy, would base their profits on horrors of a famine pact.

The Mines of Aix-la-Chapelle – They produce smells of copper, lead, zinc, iron ores, as well than coal. They must provide an immediate profit.
diat of 25 to 0 of the cent. Provided that the transports also benefit from 15 to 20 percent, that the warehouses wholesalers, retailers, and other businesses are demanding
Also, 25 to 30 percent, what industry will be able to afford that?
Metals and fuel? Fortunately, it's still simply a matter of business, other people's money, as they say the author of a contemporary comedy.

The founders announce that their mines are in full activity, when iron alone has given results; they are distressed-
They established a supervisory board composed of metallurgists, of capitalists, of scholars who have never even been warned of this honor, and that they are kept there despite their re-their clamor, their protests; they are even given titles that they never had, in order to make them look better in the eyes of onlookers; they simulate stock subscriptions. Finally, at Instead of extracting ore from the ground, 1 million and more are removed of metal, all worked and sold to poor wretches who would have been happy to receive 23 to 50 percent of their ca-pits. That is to say, to pave or to make everyone pay twice.
ble the price of fuel. .

– Conclusion: { one and 5 years in prison, fine and restitution

WRECKS OF SPECULATION 89

on the civil parties. (Criminal Police Chamber)
From Paris, July 13th and 14th, 1858.

The French Gas and Glass Union

(Police Criminal Court and Assize Court.) – These Two companies have raised a total of 15 million: they present themselves with all the conditions for normal success, In the hands of industry, it would be a good deal. But the industry is struggling to give 60, and financiers are not pro-
They never put in less than 15; so long live the financiers!

Saimon, manager of the Gas Union, against his import s0-elal, allocates himself: for 2,100,000 francs worth of shares, 20,000 francs worth of treatment, 25% in profits, Valette is charged with e-put the shares. He takes them all at par, sells them
As a bonus, he opens a current account with the company, and... found, after some time, to be indebted for 1,223,211 francs.
for which he never paid a penny. In October 1856, Salmon sells to the company, represented by him Salmon, 3,500 actions of his contribution, and is credited with 900,600 fr. Plug Later, he bought back those same 3,500 shares from the company, which he credits him with 773,230 francs, thus realizing a difference in his own profit.
a contribution of 126,000 francs. Baron and Rouillier invest in the company, the first of which is the manager, a value of 14,000 francs in actions, distribute fictitious dividends and end up in the banqueroute. Before this conclusion, Baron was awarded by a shareholders' meeting a gold medal worth 600 francs.
in recognition of his good and loyal service.

The Pront Case.– It is in this case that the lawyer General Ducreux noted that more than 40 companies had already had to answer to the justice system since 1857.
Prost's amount to 10 million in waste. (6th cham-
Paris correctional police court, hearing of September 1st
(December 1858.)

The Noctété, preserving from losses, commercial. – Under this title, so honest, so enticing, the ac-
&.

accused Plomée, according to the correctional police court, October 21, 1858, traded in promissory notes session; he had created some worth 450,000 francs. Furthermore, he sold, under pretext of surety bonds, job losses for people who had a few thousand francs available, and who saw me more no trace, neither in the form of salary nor as restitution tipn.

The departmental railways. – It is not
It is not possible to equip each canton with a railway line.
served by whistling and fu– transport agents
According to the petition from the residents of Carpentras, this is a lie. Also, with a view to connecting the main arteries to all the centers of production, inseminators have the idea of establishing routes less expensive, horse-drawn, comprising ramps and curves incompatible with the locomotive.
Savings on transport costs by trolleys and dump trucks reaux, and benefited from celerné, that is to say no more pro–
It is clear that on roads and local paths, such is the economic idea; – 25 to 50 percent dividend, such is the financial design, and the dump trucks, carts and stagecoaches to prosper even more,

Two initiators of credit, as the Saint-Si– speak
Moulens, se som sionalés dans cette affaire, Mancel, dit de Valdouer, and Laurent, known as de Blois.

The latter was honored with an inaugural address, in fact advertisement, worthy of being reported in full; see:

Paris, April 23, 4857.

"Father,

"Our company is currently issuing shares"
the proceeds of which are intended to cover establishment expenses
new developments,

"To this day, the remuneration for care given to this type of person..."

this type of operation was exclusively reserved for bankers; but,
,

at a time when misery is in "great need of relief" age, we have thought about doing – of the remuneration of which we Let's talk about – an object: good works; we wanted in This large company is doing its part for the poor, and nobody Better than you, sir, can no one help us to put this thought into action.

"Placed as you are in the midst of all the misery,
Your mission is naturally reserved for you.
charity, and we have no doubt that you will consecrate in This circumstance should lend us, or even provide good assistance.

"Our shares are worth 500 francs, with only 125 francs payable."
cash, in accordance with the prospectus that we have addressed, We encourage you to search for, to find sounds– Cryptographers: it will also be a good job for them
from their funds, and for you, Father, a good
An opportunity to do good around you.

» We will allocate you 2 francs for each action which you will obtain the subscription for. These 2 francs will be paid in cash, and you will apply, at your choice, to the Islands the needs of your church or the relief of the poor in your parish. This allocation could offer you resources quite considerable, since 20 subscribed shares would give for you a product worth one hundred francs, and if you managed to gather a subscription of one hundred shares, your right would be to 2,000 francs.

"You know, Mr. Priest, how useful the ches are."
mins of iron that we build; all the general advice
They approve of them because their establishment provides employment.
to the workers, and increases the prosperity of their department.

"We thank you in advance, Mr. Eure, for your charitable competition, and we ask you to pass it on to us the funds from the subscriptions you collect, from the manner indicated in our prospectus, less a deduction of 25 fr.
that you will remember from each action.

"Please accept our sincere regards."

"To: Laurent de Bois and Co."

sition to the indictment of Mr. Ducreux, the imperial lawyer; he re-sums up the morality of the matter too well for us to be—Let's replace it with our analysis:

"Fraud, in whatever form, whatever

The skill of its authors always boils down to two points:
handing over of funds and maneuvers to appropriate them. But what have What did the two accused do? They threw a chimera into the public's imagination.
the shadow of prey; the shadow has been the lot of shareholders; the prey, that is to say, the money was theirs. In less than fifteen During his month-long administration, Mancel caused the company harm.
dice of more than 400,000 fr. Up to Laurent, here is the result of his administration, shorter than that of Mancel. 1] a taken the departmental railway company for the founding dre in his own, with a capital of 900,000 francs; after the fusion, he burdened the company with 5 million, and this to procure—to barely 80,000 francs, that is to say, — a monstrous thing to consider later, — that he gave 50 fr. to receive |! fr. 63 centimes.

"These are the preliminary facts that led to the days—" legal proceedings against these two men. And now, dearchons to get to know them.

"Mancel was born to parents without fortune, in a village of the Manche department; he was initially a bailiff's clerk;
Then, without any known transition, he became an industrialist, and, at that title, his name appears in a multitude of cor- business cases rectionnelles, That's how it came to be included in the Credit Algerian and Commercial Security. Involved in many scams.
queries, he reappears again in the decorations affair, At a
At a certain time, he went to Rome and bought a patent for the spur.
d'Or and takes the title of Count, Returning to Paris, :the parant of this title, at the simple invitation of the Prefect of Police, he is dethroned; which did not hinder it, in the world that he haunted, to reclaim the title of count and to display a splendor insolent.

"There you have it, Douc, launched into industry, a condemned man

WRECKS OF G3 SPECULATION

Twice in default, convictions later overturned, he is true: but condemned a third time, with conlirmation of the judgment, we find it again in the last-
the latest decorations case, where he was Viala's witness, Tel is the man who, without capital, with a compromised past, placed him at the head of a vast enterprise and called upon the public to deceive him." (Paris Criminal Court, 6th Chamber)

bre, November (IN5R8);

French Steam Navigation Company,
of rolling and courier services (7 chambers of po
Live correctional court hearings of January 27, 3 and 10.
1859). – Guillier, known as Galland, manager of the Company, is alone prosecuted. The members of the council of surveillance, Viscount of Suleau, senator, of Saulcy, mem-bre of the Institute, Belmontet, deputy, JL Bonjour and PA
Hello, they are appointed by the civil parties as responsible for Edbles, The indictment states the following misdeeds:

Galland allocated himself 600,000 francs to be taken in 3,200 shares.
13,000 francs, treatment, 19% dar: the profits, Manrol
(de Valdouer), already mentioned, was in charge of launching the case subject to: 1. a commission, 29,200 shares to be taken on the manager's fund; Mancel delivered: 0 of these shares to Mercier, an advertising broker, and Léo Lespès, a journalist;
Later, they asked to receive their partner ar-rent (good precaution), and Galland resumed their Utres moven-20,000 francs in cash. The prospectuses advertise from 52 to 16% profit, despite an acknowledged deficit of 130,090 francs.
and a real amount of 400,000, where a dividend is distributed in FS5s.
to facilitate the vote of the general assembly, Pineculpé avone that he will stuff with false achhonpnatres, with &laçies ehapeurs, but no more than five or six. – Total deficit, <'atflons el \emi.

At the beginning of the debates, M, the Vicomte de Snlean, Senator, based on the consistent findings of Mr. Rousset, lawyer imperial, was thus out of the picture, except by virtue of the senatus-consul of June 1158, the diguitarians of the empire

FINANCIAL TRIALS

are not subject to the jurisdiction of ordinary courts. This is not
And it's always an advantage to be protected by special laws.
them, and Viscount de Suleau has cause to complain, in this on the occasion, of its "roundness which attached it to the shore." How much 1 would have preferred to come before the court to confirm, by a
a public and solemn declaration, the deposition of his colleague in surveillance, Mr. de Sauley, to whom 1 did not
It was given to us to associate with each other only from the heart.

According to the statutes, each member of the council of surveillance had to own at least 25 shares, of a price

Galland offered advice to the notables he was keen to befriend. to trade in released shares, taken from its share of the foundation teur, That's how the first consultation cost him 255,000 francs. ct the second 160,000. On the other hand, the supervisors did not re- They weren't keeping a close eye on them. Nothing could be more naive or more instructive. that Mr. de Saulicy's deposition on this subject:

"As a member of the supervisory board, I received 80 ac- tions that I did not keep. I was going to retire from the service. military vice when Mr. Cauvain, a lawyer, offered me a position in this matter. I told him that I could not provide cash; He replied: That's not necessary; you will be given some Shares released: if the case succeeds, your shares will be valid; If it fails, they will become cabbage leaves. That was In 1856, I subsequently traveled with Prince Napoleon; at my Upon my return, I knew that I had been understood in the supervisory board. launch and that I had been allocated 80 shares.

"Nevertheless, I refused to sit with Messrs. Michaut and Colas-" his; the council was renewed. I fell ill for a short time afterwards; when I saw the disorder of the writings, I postponed the I resigned and offered my resignation. In the end, I handed in the actions, and I didn't receive a penny, I gave 300 francs. my pocket, and yet here I am.

It is clear that the witness had been an unwitting observer. That was the court's opinion.

EOAVES OF SPECULATION 5

L'Enion foncière, socie pour lachalen cros des inr- menbles etieur revéite en détails comarandite de 699,000 [rs (Paris Criminal Court, 6th Chamber, hearings of February 8, 155!).) Those involved are: Mancel {of Valdoucr!, already mentioned, Gaspard Petit, bankrupt, Pierre Marle, convicted cou- traditionally, in 1851, to five years in prison for fraud querie, all three founders, directors or managers of the society. The business world doesn't look at it closely.

Benumont-Vassy case (0th police chamber) Correctional Court of Paris, hearing of April 13, 1859). – Here is a new kind of financial figure, the in- broker Fluency. Mr. Édouard de la Bonninière de Beaumont-Vassy he served as prefect and master of requests; is an officer of the Legion of Honour. A certain Monsieur de Sébille finds the owner of a patent for an invention to obtain Island tageuse, economical; the patent was bought for 500,000 francs. would like to sell it to the Ministry of War for 3,500,000 francs. Mr. de Beaumont boasts, by virtue of his administrative connections, administrative, to scheme the affair. Prevention speaks of a recognition of 800,000 francs and a commission of 100,000 francs as the price for this intervention: but on Mr. de Beaumont will have to buy this sum at his own risk. and perils, the administrative consciences on which the operation depends The prosecution is discussing the charges, which are important to us. Little. The moral of the matter is found in a written letter from Laon to Sébille by M. de Reaumont-Vassy, on October 1st born in 1857, and of which the President makes the following summary:

"You say it is essential that Sébille write to you" a letter listing the requests to be made to the Ministry of war; that it will be useful to grease the palms of employees, su- Whether or not they are balanced, to achieve success; that one must go from The front; you set, for the moment, the amount to be sent to you The figure is between 3,000 and 4,000 francs. You add that it would be possible

J6 FINANCIAL TRIALS

that we spent less: that perhaps it would be enough to give a few dinners with the bigwigs, »

Nothing is missing from the picture, not even style and color. local. M, from Beaumont-Vassy was sentenced to two years of prison, a fine of 3,000 francs and a ten-year ban on holding public office: mentioned in Article 4 of the Penal Code.

The story had a follow-up in the Assize Court shortly thereafter. Afterwards. While the former official was removing the large bonnets, Scbilie was taking shareholders away by producing forged letters from General Fleury and Marshal Vaillant: he one day he even went so far as to disguise himself as a general, the comc- Die ended, for him, with six years of imprisonment.

The Gralssac to Béziers Railway.

– It is a plea between co-litigants, before the tribunal- the Seine trade center, from which the first revelations about this scandal, (Le Droit, April 27, 1858.) Mr. Touruadre, an approved representative, presents the following facts:

"The Graissessac to Béziers line has been granted a concession on Island 27 March 1852. The dealers pretended to bring that. Two of them, Messrs. Orsi and Delfosse, had a mar-

They were paid a fixed price to execute the line, for 16 million.
subcontracted with Messrs. Daviau, Brian and Labrousse, medium-14 million, or 2 million profit. These at their tour subcontracted with Mr. Gandell for 12 million: second be-

Profit of ? million: a total of 4 million taken from the poor shareholders.

The approved party cites the figures in round numbers; the correct process-tional (Gazette des tribunaux, 7th chamber, hearing of the
As of May 1859) special item 4,432,000 francs. In summary, the expenses, initially valued at 11 million, later increased to 18 million, amounted to 31,525,517 francs and 22 centimes.

The ruling, issued on May 48, 1859, sufficiently summarizes the case:

SPECULATION EXPENSES (9

... Expected, in fact, AUS Boucaruc to, without existence no surety, he esvecler to Lusène PBouearuce, his brother, under the name of Noer of Souubatstié, his friend, both simple Roma in what we call the conmieree d'étots in Paris, before absolutely no capacity and completely without fortune...

"That on these concessions, ?f to élé preleve, to the detriment of the COUPAË mie, fraudulent licenses which amount to F0, 5, 20 and up to YUU percent; that crs somines, supposed paid to Suubalwne, who was only acting as a front man, were paid into the hands of Etigrne Boucarue, whose agent he was;
that it is evident that the concessions, made in appearance to Soubaigue, were in reality Isidore Boucarue himself, who brought together Alusi and his person, despite their antagonism, the two qualities of a director and a general entrepreneur...

» Coudämune Isidore Boucarue to five years in prison and 3.00U fr, fine; Eugène Boucaruc to three years in prison and where a fine of fr. was imposed, Soubaigué was sentenced to two years in prison and 50 fr.
a fine, »

The judgment was appealed, and the case returned to court.
perial on August 23, 25 and 26, 1859. On the plea of Mr. Jules Favre, the defendants were acquitted, without the facts established in the pleading of Mr. Tournadre before the
The commercial court's decisions would have been overturned.

declared the company bankrupt. The liabilities, according to the assessment—the trustee's contribution amounts to the sum of 414#,909,015 fr.

Since the ruling refers to functions and qualities, Inmcompa-tibles, we will allow ourselves to open a parenthesis here to the address of Mr. Jules Favre.

In 1859, the Legislative Body was presented with a bill which completely overhauled the conditions imposed on the companies of paths, DG Waitet, which we will appreciate one day the economy, f Y but not without controversy. Three des cing/ opfoséremt à et l'indignité des compagnies;

| leBg* 'opinion some of the scun-
ÿ

1)

Year: FINANCIAL TRIALS

dates that we note in this book, among others March 1st Regarding the Graissossac, Mr. Baroche replied and said substance: "It was we (the government) who defrauded the case will go to court, and it will be defended there, by whom against us? — with a word that is dear to you.

The kind words of Mr. Jules Favre indeed obtained the acquittal.
the defendants' behavior. But herein lies precisely the incompatibility:
justify in criminal court what one has fought against or Left to fight by his friends in the Legislative Body, he is a
A combination that no financier could be scandalized by, but that democracy condemns, Be an extreme advocate and re-Declare yourself involved in politics, if that is in your interest; otherwise-
First and foremost, respect for the flag.

General Company of gn7 Meters. —

Why a company? The manufacturing of meters is precision work, such as watchmaking, small mechanical engineering, Optics, it is repugnant to manufacturing, to large ag#lomérations and the infinitesimal division of labor.
From then on, a simple sponsorship of 50,000 to 100,000 francs, to a
A skilled worker in the field is sufficient to create a model house. Messrs. Dumon, Delasalle and Beaugrand do not do not share this opinion: they form a company with a capital of & millions, Dumon, a patent owner, values his ap-port at 650,000 francs, and the same Dumon, the manager, hastens to per year, 20% in profits. He knows business: he has been sentenced on April 19, 1859, to four months in prison as Swindler. Beaugrand, a stock market bounty driver, employs the well-known maneuvers:

He spreads promises both in the public square and behind the scenes. of shares entrusted to him: he buys them back at a premium, puts them back on sale, buys them back at a higher premium, and eventually, they were permanently locked up with the flycatchers. with a profit of 15 or 20 francs. In the impossibility-ability to remove its place on the official ranking, it conquers amicably, its mention in the Press Stock Exchange bulletins and of the Fatherland," (7th correctional police chamber of the Aris, July 4, 1859).

WRECKS OF SPECULATION JU

JA Vigilante, insurance and recovery company
Payment of debts. (Criminal Police Court, 6 and September 7, 1859). – This is how the accused Gauthier keeps watch:

"I lend money to struggling households whose credit is
It has fallen to the point where their signature is no longer valid. I give very little money on the securities I am given;
Then, when the due date arrives, I rigorously pursue my debtors; I forces them to give me reasonable advance payments; if bankruptcy occurs, I have advanced so little money that by producing the entire the values I hold, the dividends I receive
"They make me earn a good living,"

Sorbler-Beucelas Mines. – Here is a trial of pro-Vince, this time, occupied the hearings of the cor- court
Lyon district, July 31, 1st, 7th, 8th and 21st August 1861.
Nothing original, as Mr. Royer-'s indictment notes.
Belliard, imperial lawyer.

"Can we believe in the honesty of people who, having bought the Sorbier-Beuclas mines, 460,000 francs, put them into action at a price of 900,000 francs? Were they honest when they put in shares at a price of ? million the Grand-Ronzvy and the -Barail-
The first one, which had cost them less than a million? And the mines de Moncel and Ricamarie? They're worthless; and they consider them a tribe: Charles, Augustus, Georges, etc. In May 18:7, Charles has one of those monumental bankruptcies that come from time to time, to terrify Parisian commerce.
They lost 740,000 francs. They wreaked havoc in hundreds of families and small households.

"On May 19, 1857," said Mr. Tournadre before the tribunal of Seine commerce, hearing from August, on the advice of the minister-

100 FINANCIAL TRIALS

The public announcement of the passing of Mr. Charles Thurneys.
The court declared this banker bankrupt. Mr. Char.
The Thurneysens had skillfully planned their escape: I 1:
In May, he had asked Mr. de Rumpff, Minister of the Vil-
the Auséatiques, a passport which allowed him to conceal to report his departure to the Police Prefecture; he had effect-killed at the Bank, the payment of hillets that came to deadline that day and appointments given to several clients.
you for the day after tomorrow, That same evening he left for Londres with two of his sons, without the knowledge of his wife and children Plovés, from there he embarked for New York. And soon the Newspapers in that city announced his "arrival in America.

"From the very first investigations, the disaster appeared im-Mense, a dreadful disorder reigned in the writings, little by little
The tire at La Jumiére was made, and one could measure the depth of the
The known liabilities amount to 16 million; the assets, very-problematic, barely reaching 14 or 1500 thousand francs, Since For ten years, the most culpable fraudsters in the islands were employed to concealing the situation; for ten years Mr. Thurnevyssen had been in bankruptcy: deposit breaches dating back seven years and amounting to several million, falsified accounting records his: that's what appeared, it was then known that he had not been held No diary or ledger for three years. The single book, the fog, was covered with scrapes and over-scratches: ban-some had been pasted over certain entries to subs-to appoint others after the fact; for ten years, he had not been made a simple inventory, Finally, the first examination provides the evidence of substantial annual profit allocations to two partners. Everything contributes to putting the trustee on the trail of the association whose existence we hope to demonstrate at the sorting-bunal. Public rumor, the unanimous cry of the creditors, the Evidence from the scriptures names Mr. Charles as associates Thurneyssen, M, Anguste Thurneyssen, his uncle, and Mr. Geor-Ges Thurneyssen, his cousin. I have come today to support the request made by the trustee for the bankruptcy of Charles

Thurneysseu is declared a commune in MAN, Anguste and Geor-

This is how the directors of large companies conduct their own business. As for the deranged of the syndicate, admitted before the commercial court, she was defined. The appeal was rejected. Mr. Auguste Taurnevssen was considered as a financial backer and Mr. Georges as a simple commis. ,

General Union Office, – In 1857, the day-political of the Union, following the example of financial newspapers, had the idea of founding a banking institution, a command-said to be a business fund, to which a common fund was attached of reports, Two editors, Spinelli, Fontaine, and the cashier Levinot were placed at the head of the company; the capital, originally set at 200,000 francs, was subsequently raised to 600,000, then to 1 million. The newspaper L'Union, perfectly positioned within the world of legitimists and ultramontanes, was not bothered by finding capital; he was more. It's difficult to take advantage of it.

And first, what business needed to be undertaken? Business in general: other people's money. 100,000 francs were loaned to a marble company; shortly after Spinelli, "acting more out of vanity than necessity, in the hope "To obtain a certain decoration, he lent 40,000 francs" "To Prince Godoi." The managers, playing the stock market, perished in a fortnightly liquidation of 183,000 francs; at On April 1, 1858, losses amounted to 565,000 francs. Accused Spinelli and Fontaine preempted, by a prudent escape tooth, the rendering of accounts, and the 6th chamber correctionnelle, hearings of December 1st and 8th, 1860, found only accomplices.

Serres case (7th correctional police chamber, hearings of May 28 and 30, 1862, bankruptcy of one million approximately). – This trial is especially interesting in that it... reveals the morality of contemporary journalism. All the "world, as the chroniclers say, – that is to say a a thousand people in France – everyone knows that the

ÿ,

Financial reports from newspapers are in the hands of certain businesspeople: we have just seen the Union establishing a speculative fund on his own account, but not everyone has no way to settle down; so we will find others processes of this kind,

But first, what is N. Serres?

"The information shows that, from 1840 onwards, one after the other man of letters, provincial merchant, advertising agent, advertising contractor, meat wholesaler, representative foreign mining companies, seeking to establish so-companies for the exploitation of certain patents; in 1554, coulis-to be listed on the Paris Stock Exchange. In 1858, he was affected by the measure general rule prohibiting backstage access.

"Without resources at that time, pursued until the seizure" sie, for the payment of debts as small as 140 francs, price For a piece of wine, he rents a space at 3 Amsterdam Street 3,009 fr, where he installs offices and furniture of a certain... luxury; he rents an apartment for his residence 4,600 francs, assumes the title of banker and engages in an enormous advertising (300,000 francs over three years and nine months), to attract "Money and securities investments."

Mr. Serres was aiming for legitimist and Catholic scholarships; he also had as a signatory of his correspondence ui Mr. de Mesnard had attempted to obtain a loan for the Pope, one for the (deposed) King of Naples; and finally, he had bought by François II, ex-king, for 400,000 francs, two frigates later claimed by Victor Emmanuel. The trial, held in Marseille, caused quite a stir at the time.

The most powerful lever for forcing the strong-willed of Cagots, it's a trusted newspaper, the Gazette de France. The Journal of Towns and Countryside, the Friend of Religion, The Union, if it hadn't already had its Fontaine-Spinelli fund. The Readers of these newspapers still believe in the priesthood of the press, even the announcements, seem to them to be a matter of party politics. and in principle. It was Mr. Serres' genius to sniff out this en-of the first three of these newspapers. He promoted his business there. at will, without dispute or control, and the money moved to its cash register, as if by the grace of God.

The Gazette de France newsletter was praised for Thirteen years, at a minimum price of 21,000 francs per year. The
The document, signed Lourdoueix, is part of the trial.

"As a result of what was verbally agreed between us,
I agree to the position presented to you in the Gazette,
by our treaty of... may it serve you to found a house of placapital and banking services, and I further agree to re-order this house directly and personally, which
You will be the manager, to my subscribers and my friends.

"It remains understood that the financial conditions guarantee-
The following are attached to the Gazette by you and by this house:

» 40 25.0/0 in the company's profits;

"20 The annual sum of 24,000 francs that you owe him" paying in twelve installments will be included in this share of the profit and will form the minimum. Whatever the state of affairs of to this company, the sum of 24,000 francs will still be due.
"Yralement every year, paid in twelve installments and in advance, etc."

» Signed: H, DE LOURDOUEIX.

» Paris, January 8, 1858. >

The treaty with the Friend of Religion is also cited in part :

"Abbot Sisson entrusts to Mr. Serres, who accepts, the writing the daily financial column and a Weekly stock market review. Mr. Serres will also have the ability to publish various articles in the newspaper on financial matters and other subjects of public interest to the point from the point of view of the general interest.

"In exchange for the moral benefit (good Tartulus!) and the public-

On top of that, Mr. Serres pledges to contribute to the newspaper's fund, every month and in advance, the sum of 2000 francs, i.e. 24,009 francs. per year.

"The duration of this treaty is set at five years from the date of..."
March 1st! SG0, »

The Journal des Villes et des Campagnes had dealt with ten years, at 10,000 francs per year.

Watched from behind the Union's stock market bulletin by the Spinelli-Fontaine bank, behind the financial reviews of the Gazette de France, de l'Ami de la Religion, du Journal des Valleys and the countryside by the Serres bank, obsessed with the lusciously Christian advertisements from the Jew Mirès in favor of the Roman railways, the Catholic-Legitimist world, who, it is said, was averse to stock market manipulations, had to undergo also its proportional bleeding,

We confess, for our part, that it would have seemed regrettable to us—table that a political party, powerful by fortune, had escaped to the raid; he would have rejected the depredations of the Jewish community on Voltaire, Rousseau and the Revolution, and the Prud'hommes the—would have listened.

Who knows? This common ground, the dream of politicians of all kinds. The nuance, perhaps, will be precisely the one we are proposing: Honesty above all, even in large companies and islands in newspaper advertising.

Mass trading. — Since we're on the subject Regarding the Catholic and Legitimist world, let us mention, as an episode, a little-known yet instructive aspect of customs. He a—the git of a forbidden priest, making a haqueroute to the souls of the purgatory of approximately 24,000 masses. Who would ever have thought... that the cult of the dead, the belief in an afterlife, the redemption sins, the deliverance of souls, could become matter to speculation? Here, in all its naivety, is the exposition of the trafic, according to the defender:

SPECULATION PAWNS 105

"There are several bookshops in Paris, including the heads out joined to their book trade an industry that comes in aid in the sale of these books; this industry consists, for The booksellers in question, acting as intermediaries for the priests anticipated masses to be said.

"A person, for example, leaves to the priest upon dying..."

his parish 100, 200, 500 masses, more or less, than the ecclesias-

The word will have to be spoken for the repose of the soul of the deceased; or else it is

"A pious relative who deposits the sum; no matter the price

The donation for each mass is 1 franc, or 100, 200, or 500 francs, deposited.

in advance in the hands of the priest,

"At a pinch, a priest could, within a fairly short time,

to say 500 masses; but first there are people who ask for up to 4,000 and beyond; then it happens that the same

The priest receives a similar mission of 40, 50, or 100 people. He ar-

thus to contract the obligation to say masses in such number that his life would not suffice; hence the obligation to share-

to ger with other priests.

"It is the difficulty of this sharing that gave rise to the industrial-sorting we are talking about. A bookseller knows, for example, that such clergyman is responsible for a considerable number of masses;

He goes to find him and Jui says: It is impossible for you to say these masses; you received 1,000, 2,000, 5,000 francs, more or less;

Give me this sum; I will see to it that these

Mass intentions by priests without work, and I...

I will grant a bonus of 50, 100, 300 francs, depending on the importance of the market, in bookstore articles,

"The treaty concluded, the bookseller delivers the agreed premium." Then

He wrote to all the priests in the towns and countryside; he...

offer to say a number of masses for the repose of the soul of such and such deceased, masses payable according to the price current of { fr. moon, but in bookstore articles.

"One can immediately see the bookseller's Jucrative combination," who, instead of money, gives books on which he earns 40,

00 and 75 percent. As for the priest, he sees this as an opportunity to

106 FINANCIAL TRIALS

"Set up your library without spending a penny." (Correctional Court)

(Paris court, hearing of August 24, 1861.)

We only want to draw one moral lesson from these recent events:

The fact is that the law of social solidarity is inevitable; it is im-inevitably poses a problem to all classes, whether they have them or not.

All parties are the prerogative of elite souls. It would have sufficed perhaps—to belong to a community that believes in something more than to immediate material interests, to stop, by the exen—whether through protest, or simply through abstention, this rampant speculation and fraud. But the company, while—The whole world has been steeped in iniquity: atheists and believers, the impious and devout, idealists and positivists, absolutists and liberals, reactionaries and progressives, some hypocritically, the others with cynicism. May our confidence be followed by Contrition and repentance!

CHAPTER IV

BIG BUSINESS. THE FOUNDERS; THE COACHES.

In light of the events that will unfold in this chapter, those

The points from the previous chapter are mere trifles, and have no importance. significance as much by their multiplicity. This anthill of pe—small-time sponsorships, which are then settled in the Assize Court or in correctional police, does not yet reach the major domestic industrial machinery. Private wealth is the only diminished; public wealth, the essential conditions of The French economic society is only touched upon. 'The review of major cases will give us results' far more sinister in their scope. Therefore, it would be It is superfluous to look here for the degree of criminality of individuals. swimming. No matter, in the face of the immensity of the disasters, Criminal prosecution? The laws of economics violated, the The consequences were marked, fatal, inevitable. The no—financial institutions, the largest in Europe, had—They possessed all civil and civic virtues, public and private individuals could not escape the decree of fate.

Also, the most interesting judicial information
Are not the elements of this chapter borrowed from criminal justice?

108 | FINANCIAL TRIALS

nelle. The debates of the commercial courts and the courts civil matters, even when there has been prosecution by the prosecutor imperial, are of a much higher slavity than the required islands—the prosecutor's office, which is often embarrassed by to conclude in the face of the enormity of the respective claims of parts.

perhaps the authors imagine that your words of industrial lordship-trieller are a figure of rhetoric, a hyperbole more or less less bombastic. Let them read these simple stories, and they will--will point to the evidence that the beneficiaries of the regime contemporary feudal entities are by no means ontolusithat, beings of reason. That the shareholders especially do not open--do not address our starting point, namely that, in the organization current capitalist uism, they are, not the participants, mitis the cash cows of the General Staff. The evidence, moreover, is... abundant will.

D'AUBIN

THE MINES

(Civil proceedings.)

This story, more instructive than a criminal trial, has held before the Imperial Court of Paris, hearings of the 3rd, January 10, 17 and 19, 1866.

The Aubin mines, whose apparent acquisition had been made by a Mr. Dubochet, actually belonged to Messrs. de Pourtalès and de Séraincovrt, affirms Me Berryer. Expenses considerable work had been done there without improving them well--suddenly, and especially without opening up easier exploitation for them. and more fruitful. That is why, in 1852, Messrs. Peters and Barrande, engineers, were commissioned by Messrs. de Pourtalès and from Séraincourt to study a railway project from Clermont-Ferrand to Moutauban, passing through the Aubin mines. The authors of the project, in high regard, further affirm Mr. Berryer, cuicnt that of making available to their: engineeringdeniers the maps of the general staff and those of the bridges and roads department sees, or even the draftsmen of the general staff.

THE AUBIN MINES 109

Based on the draft proposal, Mr. de Pourtalûs formed a company in order to obtain the Concession for this railway of Clermont in Montauban, which provided an outlet for its mines; but he wanted the state to provide him with subsidies and interest guarantees. The government refused, and the project there was no follow-up.

to Count de Morny a completely new plan, which consisted of boldly traveling 300 kilometers, without any guarantee of interest or subsidy, centering any possible promise by the government to grant another 600 kilometers over five years under the conditions of the 1842 law, that is to say the land, Earthworks and engineering works are to be covered by the budget. After a first unsuccessful attempt, Messrs. de Morny and de St-Raincourt succeeded in forming an Anglo-French company for the concession and operation of the network called the Grand-Central. The first had reserved for himself the appointment of the administrators ministers: at the request of Mr. de Séraïncourt, he consented-tit to designate M. de Pourtalès, who thus reappeared in the new combination.

Mr. de Pourtalès, who joined the Grand-Central council with Mr. de Séraïncourt hastened to sell his studies and preliminary works. jettisoning of the Clermont to Montauban line to the new company, – simple studies, let's be clear, a job for the- which he offers to his engineers, Peters and Barrande, 12,000 francs. not a hint of a concession, a taking of possession or a semblance of ownership; simple graphic outlines, according to the defender's expression; however, Article 2 of the treaty, cited at the trial, door:

"The new company, taking the place of Ia the Pourtalés company, and finding itself substituted for all its rights, (what rights?) will pay him, as reimbursement, for expenses: various and detailed reports made to date. an independence in Fos – made of 150,000 francs. – Furthermore, Messrs. Pourtales and Co. will have the

1{)

110 FINANCIAL TRIALS

the ability to subscribe at par to a quantity of 6,000 shares of Grand-Central, which will be reserved for them and taken by moile in both parties, English and French, »

The shares of Grand-Central, as soon as they were issued, before anyone had set a milestone, primerent from 0 to 80 fr,, by the simple authority of the founders; which allowed Messrs. Pourtales and to realize, on the 6,000 shares at par in their treaty, an immediate benefit of 420 to 480,000 fr.

MA. Peters and barrunde, which they wanted to keep at the port-tion cougrue of 12,000 fr., réclamer cut tuoilié du bétetice of the production of Pourtalées, that is to say the sharing in the

Uous, the price of the merger. From the trial and the revelations that We can offer this to our readers.

What was happening to the Aubin mines during this time?
Atoure, the starting point of such great movements?

"In November," Mr. Berryer added, "the mines and inbin factories were publicly auctioned moving the sum of AL 000 fr, A few months later, MW of Séraincourt and other secretly entered into joint ownership with the adjueataire, July 7th IR, when the path of iron from Aulban to Montauban, these same factories were, by deed Hotarie, denied under the name of M, of Pourtalès at the price of 4,200,000 francs. On the 10th of the same month, they were presented.
for een tEuer ne socié.é ationvme, on nue evaluation de 3,200,000 francs. Since then, the Graud-Central concession has been made and the company definitively constituted, 1 has been stipulated in favor Aubin's establishments-riots, an advance of millions, Finally:
these same factories are on the verge of being acquired by the ac-
Grand-Central tions for an enormous price
"SUpPriEUR to all successive evaluations,"

This significantly higher price is listed at length in the ie
rasert to the news of the Brud-Central of May 3, F856:
44,200 vbliguliuts, repayable over 99 years at 0UU fr, and pru-

THE AURIN MINES 111

paying 3% or 15 francs of annual interest, that is to say: for the Acquiring company 22,100,000 Fr, of capital to be reimbursed, plus the interest at 30/0: and for the Vendée company, in taking into account the price of the 30/0 bonds that are quoted between 285 and 305 francs of capital, a capacity to realize 17 to 13 million immediately, during the Pourse.

When these facts were revealed in the Chamber of Deputies,
At 18:59, Mr. Calvet-Rogniat, who was also an administrator of the Grard-Central demonstrated that no more favorable treaty had ever been found no agreement had been concluded between companies, Depnis, it is re-less favorable documents about this transaction have emerged.
Following a series of similar cases, the Grand-Central was dismembered and divided between the companies of Lvon and of Orléans. The latter received the Aubin mines, and here is Assessments of the latest reports:

1861. "The annual charges that the Aubin administration imposes-

than they seemed to be.

1862. "The capitalization of interest, maintenance, supply sionnement, Pamélioration have increased by nearly 8 million Aubin's capital. The infirmity to be filled on the products of the year is 455,389 fr.

1863. "Concessions were detached from the Auhin group for a sum of 567,263 francs 67 re. The surplus of the receipts for the The capital account is 1,733,000 francs, 79 c. The operation in 1862 leaves a shortfall of 487,299 francs, 55 euros to be filled.

1864. "The capital whose interest we have to serve is today, 18 million, a round number, after deduction buildings sold. In this figure, the fixed-income interests ses during the first years of our management include for another 1,318,000 francs, we said we had nearly raised from the proceeds of the financial year, a sum of 578,000 francs, intended for the partial amortization of this eharsr, 1 remains In addition, there are two factories and buildings for sale. If the rest of the interest payments were amortized later

112 FINANCIAL TRIALS

Once the wheat was sold, the capital would be reduced below {6 millions, and the charges, in this case, would not exceed 560,000 fr, Under these conditions, the inadequacy of the products, compared to the charges, could decrease and perhaps disappear in future exercises due to the development of sales coals.

1865. "The inadequacy of net income actually amounted to 202,667 francs. GG centimes... The capital now stands at 17,633,794 francs. 22nd, including 440,000 francs from immobilized interest during the factory construction period. We will pro- Let us assume that this last sum is amortized by means of a deduction. equal amount on the products of the exercise.

1866, "Sale of the Bruniquel factory; leasing of the works" Fumel settlements, A decree of August 6, 1865 authorized the extension within the perimeter of the metal concessions. The account The capital is reduced to 16,862,974 francs and 47 cents.

Pourtalès and de Scraincourt are of little importance to our subject: this
What we wanted to point out is not inequality of repartition between the contracting parties, but rather the enormity of disproportion of the figures, for sale and purchase. Mr. Lawyer Imperial Metzinger himself did not consider the matter any other way-
He seized the opportunity to utter kind words,
and we are happy to reproduce them:

"To appreciate this part of the case, one must go down
In this world of speculators, to be animated by the thought of the steps*
The sions that stir there, the passions that devour there. They ask
The sharing of a sum of 600,000 to 800,000 francs! What a figure!
Terrifying! But what exactly did these engineers do to deserve this?

These heaps of gold? That, gentlemen, is the objection, the object-unique tion; but it disappears before the collected legend of the Because, certainly, for men like you, indifferent to the favors of fortune, which place happiness and honor

THE AURIN MINES 113

of life in moderation, in the fulfillment of religion
the duties and the consideration attached to them, the
The facts of the case present a strange spectacle. In the middle of a society dedicated to work, courageously seeking and not always finding sufficient satisfaction of needs of life, two men, whose only merit was their audacity happy players, achieve with a stroke of the pen or a stroke of winnings capable of enriching twenty families. What a dice-Moralization is possible in such a contrast, and what discouragement-things to fear if the spectacle of certain trials were not made to stifle all temptation and to strengthen courage!
This, gentlemen, is the moral lesson that emerges from the Canse, but may the movements stir in your hearts in The presence of such debates should not go so far as to mislead your conscience. The figures here are enormous; but you have to judge.
men living in the midst of a world where everything is changing or; and if the profit demanded by the engineers is excessive, that You might say millions were taken away in a few months by Messrs.
Pourtalès and Séraincourt.

On such a dignified peroration, all that remains for us is to re-summer the affair.

Two mine owners need to create at their establishments an outlet. Instead of an in- railway industrial, a few kilometers long, leading to a canal, a navigable river or major railway, they imagine...

presented under the guise of the public good, will hopefully earn them
They rent, subsidies and state guarantees: Disappointed in their designs, they combine a gigantic project, a con-transfers of 1,000 to 1,500 kilometers, involve the municipal councils municipal and general councils are besieging the antechambers ministerial, they abduct political figures, carry-
They try to establish their concession, botch a company, and get themselves numbered.
administrators. Barely installed, they hasten to finish-to themselves aborted studies, worthless projects:
They're still buying their mines, 13 million, the men who,

10.

114 FINANCIAL TRIALS

five years earlier, at the public auction, had been estimated at 500,000 francs. And after that, whatever will be, will be. Under the Grand-Central Company's Market Deals: A Deal of Sixty Things is forced to dismember itself, to place under the protection of the
of two wealthy companies the interests of its shareholders and bondholders. What do the swindlers care? At cux, all legal concepts are turned upside down: the hair
The responsibility will cover ten or fifteen thousand actions.
naires, of which ninety-nine hundredths will not have
I was simply never aware of the incident.

Today (1806), nothing has changed yet in the awareness of the administrators regarding responsibilities sability. On September 25th, the Assize Court of the department-
The Seine River Authority sentenced Berthomé to five years of prison, and Dupray de la Mahérie to seven years of hard labor forc's, for embezzlement of 3,293,167 francs to the detriment of the Railway Sub-Counter. We collect, at the neck-
During the debates, the following details:

"At the opening of the hearing, one of the gentlemen, the jurors ask to ask a number of factual questions, he said, and very-short. Mr. President, Iv, authorizes.

"The juror asks this question: Did Berthomé have a bail?"
nement, and what was the importance of this guarantee, "it Did it exist?

"Mr. EnNoux: Berthomé did not have a guarantee."

"Second question, - The Sub-Counter Manager"
Is he financially and personally responsible for the damages?

Mr. Ennoux: No, Mr. President; the director is not in no way responsible for these misappropriations.

"Third question, – On whom should the loss suffered be borne?"

"Mr. EnNoux: It is the shareholders who must support it" to carry, "

The Sub-Counter does not, strictly speaking, have any shares

AERTHOMÉ CASE 119

naires: the guarantee fund, 6 million, was created by large railway companies. Since it is understood that the directors and administrators are not responsible for nothing, the Berthomé deficit, 3 million, will be distributed, in the latest analysis, focusing on the railway shareholders themselves, That's how the financial world works.

However, in the bankruptcy of the Decazeville forges, the Tribunal declared the administrators responsible and the sentenced to 850,000 francs in restitution. If the question of Responsibility regarding the Sou-Comptoir was raised in court. Perhaps Mr. Ernoux's doctrine will be refuted. This is a completely new legal precedent.

In any case, here are some elements that will help in judging the morality of major affairs in general and of this one in particular individual:

The Sub-Company was governed by twenty-eight administrators traders and by five delegates from the Discount Bank. Among These administrators and delegates, 6th, found the job-accumulators which we mentioned in the introduction, people who gou- They govern ten to twenty companies. The Viboux, the Berthomé, the Lamirande family, and the Carpentier legion have a good game with... similar overseers, and yet here is a circumstance even more serious.

During the revelation of the disaster at the Sub-Committee, a The financial daily, Le Messenger de Paris, gave of this case The following is an explanation of the following:

The Sub-Counter was managed by Mr. Lanyer, whom his health had forced him for several years to abandon his functions, but which had not been replaced by a feeling of

of the crime; but, for two months, Mr. Irnoux had been appointed director, and Mr. Berthomé found himself unable to continue the maneuvers by which he could di-si-to prolong his situation, »

What do you think of delirium? – 11 n'inorte, le nous

11 FINANCIAL TRIALS

The new director stated: the shareholders will be the sole responsible shareholders, that is to say the shareholders of the railways, nine-tenths of whom were still unaware of its existence of the Sub-Counter.

Let us cite a worthy counterpart to Aubin's story:

In 1857, the Cerneck estate in Slavonia was sold by Mr. Muller to MM. Silberschmitz and Grutschreiber, at the price of one million. The buyers brought this building to the Pinot de Moira company for the sum of 6 million. Proceedings of August 31, November 24 and 28, 1857. The court of con:- The Seine trade cancelled the agreement as tainted by fraud." {Law of March 8, 1858.}

We will encounter this accumulation almost everywhere, monst-tricks in the eyes of morality and regular business, of the qualities of buyer and seller combined in the menr no one. But let no one be scandalized: we are under the system of granted credit, and the sovereign did not no explanations to provide. What does it matter anyway? The actions The Grand-Central prizes were 70 francs each for the issue. The funds The daters had thoroughly fulfilled their mandate. Too bad for the last bearers,

THE NAPOLEON DOCKS

(Criminal trial, February 1857; civil trials.)

11 years ago, travelers departing from Paris by Saint-Lazare station could be seen on the right, before to enter under the tunnel of Place d'Europe, a deep a notch of a few ares, dug at the level of the road. I was a witness, to use an expression from public works, The madness of the Dorks. We were saying about this one day:

It would be good if people of common sense, amateurs of historical pieces, they launched a subscription, in order to buy

THE NAPOLEON DOCKS 117

this cleared plot of land, 10 to 10 meters deep, that they place this inscription there: "[and, financiers had the idea of establishing docks, 1852-1855. When our little-nephews will know how to count and count, they will not really be able to believe, if we do not deny them material evidence of of the kind we're talking about, with so much audacity on the part financiers, who have so much imbecility among the plebeian action-naire.

England had model docks in all its ports maritime: therefore, we needed similar docks in France, and, as a consequence of the idea of centralization, instead of digging ponds and building sheds
in the ports of Marseille, Gette, Bayonne, Bordeaux, the Rochelles, Nantes and Saint-Nazaire, Le Havre, Dunkirk, it's at Paris, where it was important to establish the first masterpiece.
Due to navigational errors, wasn't Paris the starting point of the line
all French railways, connected by a railway belt.

Patriarchism, chauvinism, a shadow of reason... dant, commanded such an experiment. France was rich enough to bear the cost of the attempt. In vain Timid people objected:

– The capital already has, for its 3 bulky goods of provisions, the Wine Hall, the Granary of Abundance, the Corn Exchange, the Customs House on the Saint-Martin Canal, the cellars from Bercy, the construction sites of Ivry, La Râpée, the warehouses of [at Villette. What will more and better docks do, when they will have removed from the national capital about one hundred thousand lions at least? With the railways, parcels will be delivered to its destination without needing to be stored. Remains so the shopping for Parisian items, on which we will create warrants, The Paris article! Can you imagine flowers artificial decorations, fashions, ribbons, chandeliers, bronzes, furniture, children's toys, jewelry, Foreign-Logerie stored and warranted by a general store?

– To hell with reasons and reasoners! We want Docks in Paris. And we, the auros, come what may.

– Fine! Since he wants it, we'll choose a field <nr a point that is not already congested, nn sol à vivean du Beltway, here or there, little moorle, provided it had
The location is inexpensive, and the costs are quickly covered.
mvellemert,

– Well, no, it's in the Saint-Lazire train station itself.
that we will settle in.

Suburban trains depart from Saint-Lazare station.
Knowledge: about Versailles, hour by hour, there and back,
two trains per hour; on Saint-Germain, same conditions
tions; on Argenteuil, the same thing again; on Auteuil, three convoys going, three returning, or six convoys: jar hour, or, for the suburban service, a movement of Twelve trains per hour, one every five minutes. After that, long-distance services: Le Havre line, line to Cherbourg, direct trains, semi-direct, express, omnibur, freight convoys, passenger convoys: yet another movement of about forty convoys, going and returning, per twenty-four hours. It is precisely in the middle of this tohu-hohu qu'on installa lea docks, – Why? – It's that financiers have to. No, elsewhere, land for sale, neglected for more than a generation, and an investment difficult.

The advantage of these sites? – They overlook the railway tracks.
thirteen to fourteen meters, [IF they will have to be leveled with the iron sights. By settling for ten hectares of land,
But a suitable location for such a grand undertaking, this will be, for land dealers, one hundred thousand meters of invested, and for the shareholders one and a half million meters cubes to be removed before even thinking about digging foundations.
Then, when the leveling with the rails is carried out, it rs-
tera to create ramps, in order to connect the stores aver
the surrounding streets, in order to open access for trucks this fouruous when we have cleared the way for the locomotives.

An engineer is said to have proposed such a crazy idea, on let conduit net à Charenton, unless, however, he had been in

THE NAPOLEON DOCKS 119

at the same time an influential financier, landowner, tormented by the need to sell them.

corporations don't have land to invest, and, as Everyone needs to live; we are going to witness extrava-
The ranges couldn't be more varied.

Those implicated are: Gusin, Legendre, Duchesne de Vère, Orsi, founders or administrators of the Docks; Berryer, clerk-suire oommeé par le gouvernement près de la compagnie.

On September 17, 1857, a decree authorized Cusin, Legendre and Duchesne de Vère to establish docks in Paris. The capital social was set at 50 million; shares of 250 fr., first Payment, 125 francs. The company could only be formed through the full subscription of 200,000 shares. From the
On October 31, the founders accused the company of making demands for 216,915 shares. The prince is appointed to the supervisory board
Murat, General Morin, Mr. Doifus; in January 1853, Mr. Émile Péreire, at the invitation of M, the Minister of the Interior, between in the matter as an advisor, without in any way committing his res-Responsibility. Some time later, these characters detached themselves.
The case involves the revelation of a prior criminal record.
unpleasant, arrived in Belgium at Duchesne de Vère (twenty (sentenced to forced labor in absentia for forgery), appears to be the main reason for this trout.

Land dispute. – To Councillor Perrot of Chuzellus, in his report to the Imperial Court, to-
The report of April 23, 1857, summarizes this incident as follows:

"Mr. Riant, former notary, who has long rendered services vices in the Seine General Council, was the owner of large and valuable plots of land Europe Square, he had, for several years, conceived the thought that these lands could be useful for Jui and for the public good, to be dedicated to the formation of docks commerctaux, and in 1818, petitions had been presented to the As-national assembly, designating for this use the grounds of

READ FINANCIAL TRIALS

Mr. Riant. Mr. Horeau, the architect, had drawn up plans for the construction of vast docks on these lands.

"Horeau, a student at Loudres, the English docks, had met there-against Duchesne de Veère, taking care of their organization and Dock construction projects in France. Horeau met Duchesne
In connection with Riant, a bonus of 60,000 to 80,000 francs was awarded.
promised to Duchesne de Vère in case the Riant lands were to-would, through his intervention, Ulisés, a bonus which has since acted on him sulté.

"Duchesne de Vère's projects having been approved by Laughing, he put Duchesne de Vère in touch with Messrs. Cusin and Legendre, from whom, by reason of the municipal loan of 184%, I had retained an honorable memory, and of which he judged that intervention as capitalists would be useful for the formation of the docks.

"As early as June 1852, Duchesne de Vère, Cusin and Le-son-in-law conditionally purchased Riant's land.

11,467 meters, at a price of 118 francs 75 centimes per meter, subject to 9,199,220 francs, 50 euros. Thus, the fortuitous meeting of Messrs. Riant, Duchesne de Vère, Cusin and Legendre determined the demand and the acquisition of the docks by the last three, and the company of dealers. From the outset, they suffered from a lack of A freedom perhaps regrettable: brought closer together, aided by Mr. Riant, They were trained to take his lands, which, far from the waterways, landlocked, very extensive and likely to give rise to "tr considerable losses, were perhaps not among the best conditions for the establishment of docks.

"The acquisition of the Riant land, with deadlines for the payment, from the outset, was to be borne by the company

"From the docks, a hefty sum of 1,300 francs per day."

That's where the revelations from the criminal trial about the epi-land sale; but a public auction between civil parties will to complete the story.

Mr. Pércire said, during his deposition:

"I hadn't considered that by buying Mr. Riaut's land.

THE NAPOLEON DOCKS 121

Later, it was necessary to acquire those of Mr. Ilagermann, of a worth over 4 million.

So, during his brief involvement in this case, Mr. Péreire "had reduced by half, by a particular termination, Pac-an excessive requisition made at Riant; then he himself sold even at the docks of land belonging to the railway Saint-Germain, which should provide access to landlocked areas of Mr. Riant; finally, he conditionally negotiated an acquisition of land in Clichy, allowing direct arrival, by ba-goods brought to Paris by water and via waterways by the Oise and the Seine. Finally, he retired on July 14, 1853. (Report by Mr. Perrot de Chezelles.)

N. Riant apparently had difficulty accepting the retrocession imagined by Mr. Péreire, and here is the revenge he took from it. There was one day an auction on a whole series of transactions. between Mr. Péreire, the Saint-Germain company, then the Western Company, on the one hand, and Messrs. Riant and Hagermann and the Mignon heirs, on the other hand. The claims furent brought before the prefectural council in 1856, et plus Late at the Council of State. We were throwing brochures around. The one we have is titled: Response from the Heirs Mignon, thanks to ME Péreire's publications. (Why Publishing such things: among great lords, better (Would it be worth compromising?) It is dated October 1858; signed Riant, A., Tu. and Ep. M. NON, PIET, former lawyer at the Council of the State and the Court of Cassation, printed in Paris by A. Guyot, 18 rue Neuve-des-Mathurins. We extract the Chapter titled: EPISODE The Docks.

"We wouldn't have said a word about it, because he doesn't have the slightest detail regarding claims submitted to the reference council 1st and to the Council of State, says the Memorandum, if Mr. Péreire does not We were told; but we are not upset that we were The opportunity to explain it has been provided, at the expense of whoever is responsible.

"As sad debates have all too clearly taught us, the may-mn: Legeudre and Cusin, very honorable until then, had de-

+

2 FINANCIAL PROCESSES

manidated the authorization to operate the docks in the district of Europe, near the railway cutting, between the Place d'Europe and the rampart walk, she had to, for ob- to secure the land she was requesting, to ensure it was available in advance suitable for this establishment,

"The heirs HMagermam and Mignon, who owned some of them, They sold them to him, at a negotiated price and without any possible pressure, from Lis fr. 59 €. per metre, The Heirs' Contract I:cermann, like that of the Miss ion heirs. was subordinate to the authority- the development of the Docks and the constitution of the company, Furthermore, Islands The Hagermann heirs stated that the authorization was not not obtained and the company was formed before October 20, 1852, their sale would be null and void by operation of law, And that was what ar-Riva.

but 1 remained in the state of a simple project, as Mr. Cusin said, Until the company was formed, H was not effectively realizes that after this constitution, on November 21, 1852.

"The Docks' shares had initially benefited from the enthusiasm-the thing that every new enterprise produced at that time; but well- They quickly discredited themselves through circumstances that resonated before the correctional police, the minister, seeing the situation deteriorate an establishment to which a genuine public interest was attached, He was moved by this and wished that Mr. Pereire would come to his aid. The great The financier agreed to it.

"The presenter, welcomed as a savior, had immediate- He was a de facto omnipotence, but did not immediately assume a title. official, who would have been bothered by certain actions he foresaw. He first protested about the amount of land purchased. of the Hagermann and Mignon heirs. He is now becoming a merit of having rescinded the treaty of the Hagermann heirs, merit certainly very slight, because the lapse of this treaty, for inac- The combination of conditions made the task very easy.

"The will of the Mignon heirs, freely consented, loyal" legally implemented, this presented more difficulties; It was absolutely necessary, in order to reduce it, to construct the express provisions of sellers. Or had to negotiate to get it, and that's very true.

THE DOCKS AT POLÉON 173

that the operation was horrible, as Mr. Péreires says but in What does it mean?

Mr. Riant immediately agreed to the transfer, but he She wanted it for everything, through a kind of intuition that the future has Too much justification was needed. That didn't fit with Mr. Pereire's views.

"The Docks were becoming impossible, to the God where the decree fik uit Their establishment, without a portion of the heirs' land Mignon, whose decree imposed the applicants as owners: Mr. Pereire needed the Docks to survive, at least for some time. [consequently insisted that the The retrocession was only partial: that was only what made the operation laborious, due to the resistance of Mr. Riant.

Finally, Mr. Rereire triumphed over this resistance through... words that cost him little, it seems: 4 promised to remain "at the head of the Docks. Under the faith of this promise, which, with Mr. Poreire's financial capacity, seemed to guarantee the Europe district, a prosperous future, Mr. Riant and the hertes Thirdly Mignon agreed to take back only part of their

"They did more: besides the return of M, Poreire, they granted—derent a three-year term for half the price, with remission of interest during this period, because it was necessary, it was said, three years to build the Docks, so the price does not stand out moreover, in fact, for this half, than at 103 francs per meter, and in movenne, for all the land at the Docks, than at 111 francs.
But as a pledge of her word, Sister Ja formally requests Mr. Riant, W. Peresre had to sign the deed of retrocession, and there is a he posed his signature, which can be explained otherwise, »

Here we open a parenthesis: what was the value in this affaire the signature of Mr. Péreire, mere advisor, protector, savior of society, but without a way to buy and sell?
In finance, one doesn't stop at questions of legality.
apparently.

"Mr. Riant had the simplicity to believe that X, Péreire did not asked for the concessions we just discussed that in the interest of the Docks, in whose prosperity he was interested vi.

121 FINANCIAL TRIALS

venment himself, But he did not turn to acknowledge that Mr. P:- reire ne lend, through retropression, only to the substitution of the lands from his company in Saint-Germain to the heart of the Mignon heirs, el, by the term, that to retain in the Docks' cash register, for the operations he had in mind, the money that was still there.

"The price of 111 or even 118 francs was not at all exaggerated,"
As we will soon see on the Island. At the time, Mr. Riant bought, little
Some time later, in the same neighborhood, land at a rate inferior; but this was through forced expropriation; and who does not con-
The difference arises between a price delivered necessarily to chance auctions and the actual value,

"Moreover, Mr. Péreire was careful not to speak then of expro-Prayer: we'll see why. Before the police court correctional court, 11 said:

"Before opening stores to create warehouses:"

and to hope for a success similar to that of the London docks

"The first priority should have been to eliminate the en—"

» obstacles to the ability to store; — that legislation was needed—tion and commercial means similar to those of Dock affairs until the conditions in the-which he believed the matter to be good were granted by the government. "

"Nothing could be wiser, surely; thus, M. Péreire provoked-"
he reports to the minister, the council of state, and the legislative body,
The changes that were to be expected. The logical consequence was that we had to postpone all spending in order to save on less Islands shareholder funds, until these modifications
tions, without which there was nothing useful for the Docks, would have been obtained.

"But Mr. Péreire had land that was a problem for the Saint-Germain railway company, and he had be-care of a large quantity of land for the backfilling of its stations, from Batignolles to the Asnières bridge. The position of pro-
The Docks district offered a very attractive opportunity to place

F + 4

NAPOLÉON BEERS 125

cer les terrains et se procurer les terres de remai, M. Emile Péreire did not hesitate to sacrifice logic to his own interests.

"He, who had found that the Docks had too much land," hastened to substitute his company's land for those which he had taken over by the Mignon heirs.

+ He, who today speaks of the exaggeration of the price of 111 or 118 francs, demanded from the Docks the price of 160 francs per meter, as evidenced by the deed of sale executed before Me Dufour, no-silence of the company, February 10, 1853.

"And yet, he, who opposes Mr. Riant with the rate at which he purchased through expropriation, and also acquired, as he states, on the same expropriation, land at 31 francs per meter, in
I'm in the same neighborhood, |

"The sale made at the Docks did, admittedly, include some terrains at a lower price of 160 francs. But these were the embankments of the railway, BELONGING TO THE STATE, not to the company, and that the State was one day to take over.

"This first operation cost the Docks' shareholders..."
1,169,425 francs, paid half in cash, half on February 26, 1854.

"[This presents a rather embarrassing dilemma, even for a financier of the strength of Mr. Péreire: - or the price of 11 francs.

Mr. Péreire would have singularly abused the protection he deigned to grant to the Docks, by imposing on them the price of 160 francs. – How monstrous the abuse would have been if the lands sold at that price would only have been worth 25 or 30 francs, like Île pré. Mr. Péreire is holding it today!

"We have just seen how advantageous it was, taking advantage of the press—the control that his protectorate allowed him to exercise over the Docks, Mr. Péreire had placed his company's land. Here is maiu—holding what was done for the land he needed for its Batignolles train stations.

"As early as January 31, 1853, a contract had been signed between the Docks company and Saint-Germain company for the excavation the Docks grounds. The price quoted was for the work public, but without the discount, often considerable, that comes with it always the competition.

11.

[|
124 PROGRESS DINAN LS

"Since he didn't have a moment to lose to take advantage" of the short time the Docks might have to live, and of the fools who were still in their crates, we immediately began the work, which was pursued with the greatest activity and the greater development.

We remember that indeed Pepo's newspapers which made a great noise with very powerful electric headlights which allowed work to be carried out both day and night, f:hà—measures were applied, given the urgency, to clearing the docks; this scientific novelty seemed to us to merit a journey, of a From one end of Paris to the other, we lived indeed in the construction sites. an anthill of earthmovers working with the activity of residents along the Loire or the Rhône, when it comes to consumption To defend the river levees against flooding. Squad of Day, night squad, nothing cost anything. Under the whip from this advertisement, the shares were awarded at an Insensate rate; It is indeed true that a ruinous or fraudulent extravasation puts the shareholder masses in heat far more surely than administrative procedures stamped with the vulgar mark of meaning common. Let's continue:

"Thus, Péreire managed to obtain, not only without blai de ses gares, qu'autrement il aurait achetées assez cher.

"This second operation, even more premature than the
The first one cost the dock shareholders 1,211,000 francs, a lot Paid exactly as the work progressed.

"According to information we have every reason to
If these figures are correct, the cost of the excavation would be 95 cents per meter.
to the Saint-Germain company, including transport to Balagnolles stations and the purchase of the wagons used for this purpose port, wWagons resold afterward to La Compagnie du Midi, that Mr. Pereire also supported it, a little more than they cost, due to an increase in the price of iron.
Mr. Pereire never neglects anything. – The price, according to the tariff

ES DOCKS NWOLÉON 197

published works, rabbits, being of ? fr. 70 6.. the profit ne se fait pas élevé à moins de 153 pour 100.

"To this enormous profit, you will want to grant other advantages,"

"Through their excavation, the lands were handed over to the discretion"
tion of railway lines, to which only they can convert Now, the Docks islands are not recovering: ear with a cren-
in many places, they could not These 'errains,' brought up to railway standards, are prepared at the expense of Docks, to receive the rails or stations, as appropriate, such as This is proven by the use already made of it by the Western Company, thus that one can be convinced of this at Les Heux. In the middle from the Europe district, pits, ponds, a kind of desert which, with the ignominious elotures which had to be buried, are increasingly depreciating the land in this neighborhood, confor-Pereire, in light of the views he has always had!

"Eufin, while doing much good for him, Mr. Péreire has does harm to others, an advantage that some do not attain people; it has considerably harmed the Mivnon heirs and to Mr. Riant, by degrading their neighborhood, and by putting them in the impossibility of reclaiming the land, which has become unsellable,

"Until he had completed the two operations of which
As we have just spoken, Mr. Pereire was unable to take qua-landed in the Docks company; for it was difficult that Mr. Péreire, the permanent director of the Docks, dealt with Mr. Péreire, director of the Saint-Germain company. This would have seemed too strong and, moreover, would not have been any more legal than loyal.

This last paragraph should be seen as nothing more than a biting remark. Ironie: the authors of the report are too aware of the affairs so as not to know that the cumulative Y signal forms the very basis of what is so pompously called the financial science, cumulative doubt, we have just seen the application in the Aubin case and that we will find again par- All.

"When nothing bothered him*, Mr. Péreire thought about converting its de facto omnipotence into a de jure omnipotence which can. would become very profitable for him, if, through the modifications of. mandated by commercial legislation, the Docks were regaining public favor. With this in mind, the treaty was signed which bears the date of March 18, 1853, but that Mr. Cusin said, before the tribunal, having been post-dated, By this treaty:

128 FINANCIAL TRIALS

» 10 Mr. Péreire was appointed supreme director;

"20 He reserved 83,000 syudi- shares for himself and his clientele" held at Crédit Mobilier, in whose coffers were to be also paid the funds from the Docks company, and in the- which it is claimed that Mr. Péreire has a rather great interest.

"If the forecast came true, the stocks, which had obtained a bonus of 55 francs simply for the announcement of Mr. Pee's arrival reire, in January 1853, were expected to rise to a much higher rate- rieur by the official accession of the powerful financier to the directorship tion, But supposing, against all evidence, that the bonus does not of 55 francs, 83,000 shares were still to be issued 4,565,000 francs, which Mr. Péreire allegedly benefited from at the expense of the company he sponsored, if the forecast did not come true, The shares remained at the Docks. Thus, the profit was expected to be For Mr. Péreire, it's a loss for the Docks.

On this matter of shares, the Memoir is not complete- I agree with Mr. Pércire, whose deposition is as follows: justice :

"I have unionized the 141,000 unsubscribed sections, We He reproached me for this act, and I applaud myself for it; the Docks affair was embarrassed, and I predicted she wouldn't walk. However, at that time, stocks still made a a bonus of 50 francs. Or he reproached me for not having sold; but would not maintain, and I did not want to benefit from having done so.

"To lose everyone."

Nothing could be more moral or more generous; what remains is a a very small stock business.

THE NAPOLEON DOCKS 129

"Mr. Henri Ccluiez, lawyer for the civil parties: I would like that Mr. Péreire explain his purchase of 3,000 shares, made of third-party account between him, Mr. Rougemont and Messrs. Cusin e* Legendre, C

"Mr. KE. Péreine: Yes, I remember; it was about ra-"
I bought 3,000 shares on the Stock Exchange. Mr. Rougemont told me about it.
spoke and asked me if I wanted to do the fundraising. I agreed-tis; the shares were bought on the Stock Exchange, then resold later. I was unaware that Messrs. Cusin and Legendre were in this little affair; I thought there was only Mr. Rougemont and n)01, »

The Riant-Mignon memoir continues:

"This combination, however Leo-like, did not have Île suc-
that which Mr. Péreire expected: with his usual confidence,
He had convinced himself that ministers, the Council of State, the Legislative Bodytif would hasten to comply with his wishes. But the modifications-
The grants were not immediately awarded; the mistake was made of to want to reflect on them and submit them to thorough examination.
We also made the mistake of not accommodating the other requests.
Mr. Péreire's, in particular that of the Docks' monopoly in France.

"Mr. Péreire, believing then that he had extracted everything from the Docks they could render, abruptly resigned (July-let 1853), in defiance of the promise by which he had obtained the Mignon heirs the concessions we have been talking about.
This is the story of the Docks episode, »

Another fifty pages follow, quite interesting without contradicted, but unrelated to our topic.

The markets to be built – After the manipulations land, construction and supply markets: that's and 1^o December 1856, that the following facts, reproduced in Later in the criminal trial, the first

times,

130 FINANCIAL PROCESSING

On February 14, 1853, Messrs. Cusin, Legendre and Duchesne of Vere and Messrs. Fox, Tonderson and Company made a treaty a fixed price for the complete construction of the Docks, at the price of 4 million. The successful bidders undertook to receive in pavement-
They are investing a sum of 2 million in shares, and, to that end, they are sub- registered as subscribers of 37,000 shares, which de-were to be given back, freed from 195 francs. But as one feared that the Council of State would refuse to admit this sub-Description and this payment in shares, Messrs. Cusin and Legendre have made a secret treaty with Messrs. Fox and Henderson by which these the latter committed to becoming pure subscribers simple of the 32,000 shares, while MM, Cusin and Legendre,
For their part, they made the incredible commitment to arrange their accounting in such a way that Messrs. Fox and Tonderson would not be obliged to make the payment for these shares.
This culpable collusion was not without reason: Messrs. Cusin and Legendre did not hesitate to offer a discount of {1,800,000 fr.
of the 4 million they were giving up to M. Fox and Henderson,

"We would not presume to put forward such claims."
if the proof was not provided by the secret treaty seized by Mr.
investigating judge, and we don't know what the most important thing is for us astonished by the wrongdoing committed by the managers of the Docks, or the naivety with which they recorded it in a treaty;
because it is rare to find written proof of such frauds,"

Various incidents. – The two stories, of the ruin and treaty, which we have just reported, do not appear in the proceedings were only for general information purposes. However the alleged facts are, by and large, less interesting-sants. Here is a summary, based on the report by M. Perrot de Chezelles.

After three years, the Docks concession, from September 17th-
The decree of 1852 had to be revoked by a decree of December 19th.
1855, without the concessionaires, who received more than 15,500,000 francs, have not built anything and returned no service to commerce, the result of their tasting being having dug for this action: very no loss that Gnsin res knows that it cannot be less than 4 million, that PFexpert brings the figure to over 6 million, and that the Inspector of Finances estimates the amount to be much higher, a loss of which the island The figure can only be definitively fixed by the eventstualities of the Hiaquidation.

Gusin and Legendre are directors of a banking house that; they have interests in the factories of Pont-Remv and bleach. But the Docks area becomes common to all these companies whose founders are still being issued nearly a million advances. In order to push for an increase, they accuse a number of subscriptions exceeding the number of subscriptions themselves shares; we re-examine requests for securities even though we have some Two-thirds still to be written. The writings are being conducted. like business. As for Berryer, nominated by the government-commissioner appointed to the Docks Company for to monitor operations, to suppress deviations, 1l has They couldn't find anything better than to join forces with those they were monitoring.

During the debates, we find some features of customs that deserve to be highlighted:

"The commission of 78,000 francs, which I received from Mr. Riant, for the sale of his land, it was not intended for me alone: It has been attributed to many intermediaries, and for days nalists in large numbers. » (furtherrogatory of Duchesne of Yours).

"All world business would come to a standstill," said Gusin, If it were necessary to respond to the complaints and demands of the actiounaires, »

17,500 shares were traded; no one can say when. Comnieut and by whom they were taken.

"Mr. Ducnos DEPOSIT: I have become involved in the Docks case" At the time of creation, at that moment the Stock Exchange was concerned with the issuance of shares, which, although freshly detached from the

9 FINANCIAL TRIALS

The stumps were crumpled, as if they had already passé dans un grand noibre de imiius, – Et que s'est-il

– After separating the shares from the stump, we threw them away on the ground, miters, pushed with a broom, »

"If in matters that pass for Îles plus legal, said Mr. Nogent de Saint-Laurent, it was necessary to search for all those who received bonuses, bribes, or commissions, "We would never finish."

These, in short, are the most interesting revelations. Your case is being brought to justice regarding the history of the Docks. Were we wrong to say that the criminality of individuals mattered little in the face of The magnitude of the disasters? Is it possible to give satisfaction? tion to public vindictiveness through correct convictions ional? Is it true that in this world of traders, it Is there no element of moral sense? What! Here are some mar- land sales, owners who come to wash their Dirty laundry in public, launching into demands, without suspecting that beneath their revelations, there is something To have the plaintiffs and their defenders sentenced to hard labor!...

And are the shareholders now informed about the interest- What do the general staffs take from their capital?

The saddest thing about this whole story is that the founders never believed in the creation of Docks under these location conditions. They knew, as the said Mr. Perrot de Chezelles, that the Place d'Europe was not in relation to any railway or waterway, and that, for !'ap- As the owner, nothing less than cutting through the mound of Batignolles, near Saint-Ouen. What was it about? So, in reality? – To stir up trouble, to provoke the rise, the fall, to absorb differences, of to make millions; then to abandon the business to the God's urn. This time, the founders were wrong: ilé have fallen under the custody of the justice system. The example has not discouraged imitators.

THE PORTS OF RREST 133

Six years later, in October 1863, a Mr. Hougron... dait the Société des Ports de Brest, limited partnership with the capital of 12 million. Hougron began by adding a banker Iuterlope, Dautrevaux. Where a first study of 16,000 shares of 500 fraucs, or 8 million, out of 4,500,000 francs reserved for the founders, and 3,500,000 francs for the sub-newspaper articles.

"The souiété is proud of the municipality's support of Brest, wrote Hougron; the sympathies of the population are acquired as well as municipal sympathies, that is to this double support that she owes to the favor that a subsidy given to companies of this nature, »

The local authorities sent compli-
The following communiqué was issued regarding accomplices:

"The higher administration is completely uninvolved" to the Brest Ports Company; it had no kind of she had no contact, neither verbal nor written, with the manager; she did not "gave neither his support nor his assistance."

Hougron nevertheless continued to insert into his prospectus: -

"The Company's land constitutes the most advantageous of the territory recently annexed to the city of Brest. They are bordered both by the commercial port and by the railway. This explains why the Company, by committing itself to give the city the land for roads and public squares, obtain in exchange the development of these roads and these places and the construction of the buildings necessary for a city new. "

What were these plots of land? - Like those of the Docks (the Paris, wrecks. The land brought by Lougron, they say
| !

1.3 FINANCIAL PROCESSES

Those who are considering do not reach the port; those who touch a diner fa overlooked by a vineyard of meters: It fau- would create immense fries to bring them level with the harbor, they are also burdened with military obligations, and de- defense is made by the genius of doing any work of kindness. Hatvment or appropriation.

What was this all about now? - A matter. As soon as Honuron had made 165,000 francs; he resigned from

The stop was halfway there.

COMPAGNIE IMPERIAL: SMALL CARS OF PARIS

(Correctional trial).

Up to this point in our study, the financial conceptions these ideas, however foolish they may have been, were based on real- These decisions, some more serious than others, could be justified. – setting aside the malfeasance, – by considerations economic tious. This time it's the debauchery, the brazen- Laughter and pillage on the one hand; imbecility and idiocy on the other, without ritual or reason. It's from March to August. 185, the year of the Universal Exhibition in Paris, while The drunkards of progress were shattering our eardrums with their With their dithyrambs and hosannas, it is in the capital of arts, enlightenment, civilization, which was conceived, in- fantasized and developed the monstrosity that we are about to discover to write.

Everyone, even in the provinces, knows what a Rental car: an inelegant, inconvenient vehicle, burdened with a host of contemptuous and overly- rituals, – healthy, cuckoo, wheelbarrow, – pulled by horses who are making their final stop here before arriving at the bark- Dear, ask any individual: Comphien don- Would you perish from the crew? If it goes to two thousand francs, this will be a lot. Well, in 1855, the year of the Universal Exhibition-

SMALL CARS 13

Versailles, the pinnacle of modern progress, in Paris, the metropolis of Intelligence, 31, found some rather shameless financiers to put these vehicles up for sale at the starting price of 20,000 francs per car, and Athenians from Lutetia, inqua- litigable in truth, to push the bid above 40,000 francs. – Let's repeat in words, because the reader will be confused. It didn't matter what typographical error there was: twenty thousand francs starting price per sail, forty thousand francs and above at auction.

How so? Who has ever heard of such a thing? follies? Are the newspapers, Le Siècle, La Presse, the Opi- Union, the Debates, the Constitutional, the Monitor would have let such a chaotic story pass without warning their readers, either to warn them beforehand, or to know arithmetic, up to and including division, at check for themselves,

The capital consisted of 400,000 shares of 100 francs each, total 40 million. – And the equipment? According to the report of April 23, 1856, the exploitation had focused in 1855 on 818 cars, but Gompagnie had some, at the time of the general assembly, 1816. It had gathered all the members, with the exception of 79. At the end of 18:36, the Im- Company Périale therefore only had 1896 cars; let's say 2,040 in a round number, and repetition: two mules spelled out in full. Now, dividing 40 million per 2,000, the quotient amounts to 20,000 francs. This is confirmed by the Latino Delamarre:

“Each car driver,” he said, “was loaded with more 20,000 francs. How can one expect any benefits with such a... capital to be amortized.

20,000 francs, let's note this clearly, is when the shares are at par, at 100 francs. But now, on the Stock Exchange, they jumped to 215 and 220 francs, more than double, while the number of cars was still only 848, with the prospect of reaching 2,000, we didn't know

126 FINANCIAL TRIALS

When: 100,000 shares at 220 francs make 88 million: – knows, for 2,000 cars expected, 11,000 francs per harness, – and for the 818 which alone have function born in this blessed year of bonus, 103,773 francs 58 centimes per cab.

This is not here, as in a multitude of stories, a banker's manipulation, buying up shares on the stock market with one hand, in three hours and three minutes, at a 20 francs premium, Islands titles that he delivered them with the other hand, in the morning, at his desk, at even, and simulating a capital gain in order to entice onlookers, This time, the shares, released before the issue, were selling Firm, cash. All the people's beloved newspapers. they cried out in wonder: the figure of 100 francs at par was a philanthropic, democratic design. The bonus was going fall into the smallest pockets and fertilize the most petty savings. We would increase the percentage by 30 to 35 prizes from car races, in order to generate income for those who use it.

As for newspapers, indeed, vigilant sentinels of public safety and honesty, here is part of

NT, THE IMPERIAL LAWYER: What do you know about a discount on actions to Mr. Ber? – Mr. Pucoux: We had thought that it was necessary to encourage journalists, in order to prevent the discrediting of the company. A value of 25,000 francs was allocated for this purpose. of shares, which should have been distributed among various newspapers, »

Here are the procedures in such cases: Journalists are told: We are giving you shares, at par (100 francs in the es- (piece); push it upwards, and the surplus will be for you. According to the aforementioned testimony, more would have been done this times: the shares would have been issued, released without payment ment.

"Mr. President: So the company was attacked?"
– Mr. Ducoux: Well, yes. We thought it best to... to feel some sympathy; unfortunately, it is a matter of so-

SMALL CARS 137

wind thus... = MR. IMPERIAL LAWYER: What were the Hubs used to attract serious shareholders?
Mr. Ducoux: Or resorted to the newspaper route: there was five or six publications.

To describe the number of doormen, footmen, maids, and scrubbers, laborers, and small rentiers kept in check This affair would be impossible. Let us return, however, to the in- more serious fortunes.

And first of all, economically speaking, why bring together in car rental company? What need for exploitation?
What could justify such a fantasy? If Paris had been built unexpectedly, in six months or a year, with its perimeter of 8 licues, with its crossings of 10 to 12 kilometers, there would be It was undoubtedly necessary to provide for it as quickly as possible, and by the association, to means of transport proportionate to the population and distances. But Paris developed as All human creations, progressively, successively- ment; he has enlarged his walls ten or twelve times, and the voi- Over time, omnibuses were created as needs arose.
_All we had to do was let things take their course in f855 as before, without selling the existing carriages from 20 to 103,000 francs. to fools, in order to swindle them out of their money, and charge the public a price increase of one

What need for exploitation was there still of the group?
all the staff of this department under the same rule?
The ideal car rental organization would be that each driver or coachman owned his vehicle
cule, without privilege, under the law of liberty and competition
There is no solidarity, with regard to work, between a one coachman and another coachman; at most one would understand between them a sort of joint venture for the supply of grain and fodder supply, stable rental and discounts, repairs. In such data, each
The owner represents her staff alone: no sa-lariat, nor consequently of surveillance, inspection, of 12.

438 FINANCIAL TRIALS

control, paperwork, bureaucracy, layoffs, of detentions, of any kind of harassment. All costs of admission less bureaucracy.

That's how things were done back then.
barbarity, that is to say before 1855: number of coachmen
owned their crews; the crews were counted Entrepreneurs who had over thirty cars: these most often dealt with the driver from the islands; on a fixed-price basis, at so many per day, the farmer having the best chance of winning.
The employee's dream was to acquire his own tool; his savings had a goal and an immediate, sure placement; it was finally independence.
Dependence, autonomy, free labor. A single reform
What remained to be done was to abolish the privilege, because the Parisian police...
His wife had likened this industry to the duties of solicitors,
of notaries, of stockbrokers; the number of numbers was limited; they were selling at the current price of 5,000 to 7,000 francs.
one; sterile capital to be provided by the carrier, interest to paid for by the public. Furthermore, each transfer of ownership had to be submitted to the administration: the seller had to
to get the new officer to accept the police, as with ministerial offices, we will see later the advantage that the company of these provisions.

So said common sense; but vertigo had invaded all the brains; nobody had published the decomrnte that we have just done; and these are certainly not the prvstockholders who are capable of counting. And then all the powers of the earth conspired for the success of the su-society.

This is the first time we have found the hand of an ad-Public ministry in a financial matter. In all another circumstance, |" the role of power stops at the concession-sion, the organization of the company remaining under the supervision of dealers, this is manifested by a pressure that we ue would not qualify, but whose constqueues.

The indictment states first:

SMALL CARS 15!

"The Imperial Company of PretitesVoitnres was created" under the protection of the administration. It was founded in the months of March and April 1855. The treaties concluded with The municipal administration and the Prefect of Police are of the month of March. The company act {ni-mêème is from the month of April.
On August 16 of the same year, an imperial decree was issued.
concerning the approval of administrative acts, and the !S of the same month, the corporate act, whose existence was subordinate upon homologation, it was definitively approved by its au-
"ers".

When it became known among the public that the administration
The organization was keen to group the small cars into one company
Several concession applications were submitted.
better, since we absolutely wanted to change the conditions
The exploitation of this industry would have involved awarding the merger to those who offered the lowest prices to the population Parisian. Nobody thought of it. The chosen ones were at the discretion of the electorate.
of the administration, and in order to push for the merger, we em-
He employed the following means, as revealed by witnesses:

"Mr. Duoueneice, former landlord, 101 Avenue des Ternes &
I sold my cars to the Company against my will, because I
I wanted to give them to my son. But at the prefecture, they told me refused the transfer. Friends urged me to sell to the Com-company; I appointed two experts, the Company did as well. (was All alone, but poof, to touch my shares, there was a difMi-Cult. I was told: We no longer have any shares. I was holding on a lot to stocks, because if I sold 13,000 francs, two numbersros, which I would have bought for 15,000 (that's the real price, G at 7,000 fr.
per number, including privilege, and not 103,000 or 44,000 francs),
What I wanted were shares made at prime, which would have Unable to obtain it, I went to M's, Island

I have granted 500 new issues; you will receive shares.
If they refuse you, come back and see me; my door is open to you.
always open; I will know how to get it for you.

140 FINANCIAL TRIALS

Mr. [Name], CHAPTER: I was a carriage hirer in 1855; when We were all very concerned about the merger. I was forced to sell my establishment to Mr. Caillard for 23,500 francs... I have Lost Island, the fruit of twenty-five years of work. I ask 30,000 francs in damages; because Mr. Émile Lecomte, who had formed a company outside of it and who wanted to buy me, offered me 60,000 francs. But the prefecture didn't They wouldn't grant me the transfer... Without the merger, I wouldn't have Never sold.

The prefecture is still the judge of the good condition of the equipment.

"A. THE PRESIDENT: By poorly executing the work, you cannot—"
Won't we make a profit with the island price of 3 francs 60 centimes per car and per day? – M, MEerciër: The monitoring of the
The police make improper execution almost impossible.

The prefecture judges the value of the horses.

u M, Desaaeyes, veterinary expert from the prefecture of po-List: At the beginning of the Society, there were many horses
'new ones that did not bring honor to those who had them' bought. Often, in the streets of Paris, I encountered horses of the Society that were unable to perform their service.
I could have sent them to the pound; I was content to simply "Refer to the prefecture,"

A public administration, however honorable and useful it may be
So, one does not get involved in money matters with impunity, the dif-
Fame is following closely.

It is Mr. Leboulanger, a property owner in Batignolles, who declares having gathered the following remarks in the middle of the che- market Vaux:

"I was unaware that the company had obtained the privilege, On

"Sons. We used a more forceful term."

SMALL CARS 141

Another variation on the same theme:

a People were asking why the company was not successful;

MB replied: Ah! That's not surprising; we were forced "To grease the palms of too many people."

Mr. Delamarre's deposition is precise and does not claim no empty talk:

"We gave shares to Peter, to Paul, to all those who could render services to the Society; we even have some given to front men. It was also granted to an employee
The head of the police prefecture had a car: which is not cost the company no less than 6,000 francs per year. I "Take one example among a hundred others."

These petty rumors are the natural expiation of the monopoly. and silence. Mr. Piétri, the police prefect at the time, of whom we Speaking of which, he was deeply impressed. Indeed
This magistrate was not a post-pandemic imperialist, of Those who arrive only at the moment of the feeding frenzy. The empire had been his political dream, and he had devoted his life to it from the beginning the time when it was dangerous to do so. What did Mr. Pictri see?
in this transformation of the car industry? A purchaseminement in the implementation of the Napoleonic program:
the transformation of the industrial sector and the economic system, under the high patronage of the State. Large and small rental companies, transformed from owners to shareholders, were now nothing more than a number in a general assembly, without initiative or personality. Everyone from the world of coachmen, numbered, registered-Culés returned under immediate police surveillance.
Mr. Dietri must have bitterly regretted the errors of the previous... posed to the public good could not be redeemed by a simple med culnd.

Also, how can we predict a disaster when, in addition through constant monitoring of Nolicé, the concessionaires
Their names are Jean-Claude Arnoux, engineer; Barbier-Saintes
Marie, former notary; Barry, former inspector of the Message-

General lines: Edouard Caillard, of the famous stagecoaches, with Messrs. Lecomte, Bourlon, and Marc Gaillari as controllers, Calvet-Rogniat and Lhuillier? Specialists, as they say. Having so brilliantly exploited the industry of long-distance transport, it would be easy for them to lead to the modest horse-drawn carriages of the capital. Nothing more rational.

But here, right from the start, the pe-original founders of companies, namely the cu-incompatible mules,

"To the President: Prevention notes that the administrators" managers of the Small Car Company were part of the General Messageries company, – M, An-
Noux: Not all of them. – THE PRESIDENT: Yes, there are five out of seven among the members of the board of directors and the Supervisory board. Les Messageries, after a brilliant In the past, they saw their fortunes eclipsed by the increase in Railways. The construction of the wagons was undertaken there. Then we tried to liquidate the business completely, which was becoming bad, and everything that threatened this liquidation, everything that We didn't know what to do, so we burdened the Pelites Society with it. Cars.

Mr. ArNoUX: We had the idea (we're pretty) of selling the workshops At the Compagnie des Petites-Voitures, I found the idea good, And I said so when I was consulted... The administration of Petites-Voitures was doing a good business; it was finding there workshops already built, tools prepared, staff or:anized, it was advantageous for Messageries Islands; because in By selling their equipment, they lost a lot.

u« M, The President: It is an unfortunate thing that the seller and the buyer must be THE SAME PERSON.

This awful thing is so monstrous that the mea certain segment of the readership will not dare to understand: that is why, in order not To leave no room for hesitation, we translate in a way that everyone can understand: Messrs. Gaillard and company, burdened with useless workshops, dear-

SMALL CARS 143

They try to sell them at the best price; they get their hands on the goose that laid the golden eggs the day they met the same Caitlard and associates, directors of the Petites-Voi- company tures. So Gaillard, the workshop owner, sells his ma-

Lard, manager of the said company. The price agreement is not Long. Did we understand correctly? Let's give the floor back to Mr. President:

"The proof (that this accumulation is an unfortunate thing) is that This sale, made to Petites-Voitures, was disastrous for This company and from various points of view. First, the workshops were of little use to the Society; this method of maintenance was very-Expensive. The wood you were giving away—"everything is for sale when one has such a wonderful opportunity, – "were not those who were suitable for parking cars, and the proof is that the company was forced to resell most of them to the Northern Railway.

"Mr. Annoux: The sale consisted of land, of han guys, supplies. The value of the land has increased by a great deal. The timbers were of every kind; the price was fixed, according to experts, at 30 francs per decistere; the company has resold for 13 and 14 francs." – lucky experts! – "she could have..." resell at a higher price.

"Mr. President: It's not about the price of Island, it's about the use" The nature of the sale that my questions address. Prevention argues that this acquisition was bad for the Small-Cars. Also, I read in a report: "The first admissions "The managers did not respect the interests of the Company:" "Will we find a company simple-minded enough to "Sell him what we were sold?"... You bought it. Some cars were good, and you destroyed them. as bad; the same goes for the equipment. Same thing For the horses: some have been retired, not the The next day, the day was bright. And the buildings, you... have purchased in the same conditions (that is to say, the seller and the buyer being the same person).

14 FINANCIAL TRIALS

Thus began the aforementioned founders. Later, intervien- They introduce new characters: Gibiat, Grémieu, d'Auriol, Beudin, Massinot, who have neither workshops, nor woods, nor horses, nor Buildings for sale. What to do?

"We have observed," said Mr. Lestiboudois, "that the horses had paid a third more than they should have the being.

Cars that weren't worth 150 francs (not including the (privilege) were paid 1,200 francs. The prevention report mentions a Theft of 55,000 francs, violently removed from the till. D'Auriol bought the Courrier de Paris; you need to have a platform before everything, and it is suspected that the price was reduced with the 55,000 francs embezzled.

The Imperial Small Car Company bought from a excessive prices at the Messageries workshops, in order to make its re. Preparations. Newspapers print senseless advertisements: The greatest activity reigns in the Compa- construction sites imperial genius, etc.; and the shares rise, indeed, where there built wagons and gun emplacements. As for the- maintenance of the flacres, it was awarded to a Mr. Massinot, to Price of 3 francs 60 centimes per day and per car.

How much will the entrepreneur earn at this price? The valuations are as numerous as the witnesses; no one agrees based on a true price. The most positive aspect of this document is that a Mr. Langlois, a builder, offered to take on the same responsibility at a price of 2 fr. 15 c. per day per car, i.e. 1 fr. 45 c. of reduction on the price of Massinot, undertaking to provide a surety bond of a will as a guarantee of its security, etc. declaring that at that price there was 300,000 francs to be won per au. Langlois was therefore ousted in favor of Massinot. But we feels that there has been some drawing.

"Mr. Tenier said to me one day," the witness reports: "Mou bon" Friend, we're shaved, - Mr. President: Why Rasès? - The WITNESS. A. Tenier told me: D came to see me a worker who told me: You are califying the Small Cars;

49

But you won't get them; if you had 100,000 francs to spare,

+
SMALL CARS

Î

A Mr. Viguier once left a letter on his desk reproduced at the hearing; it states therein, concerning this treaty:

"Suppose three men had taken the pledge
It's an honor to fly for a company earning 200,000 francs a year, I argues that it would be more honorable to cancel such an event.
a commitment to execute it.

The prevention campaign, in fact, mentions a discount of 20 cents.
per day and per car, granted by Massinot for the benefit of two managers who granted him his maintenance and repairs,

According to Mr. Algon, the operations inspector, Massinot could earn 700,000 to 800,000 francs in the first year, and 3 to 400,000 francs in the following years.

Despite its 40 million capital, the company is at Struggling with financial difficulties, Mr. Castets, engineer declares that a Mr. Provencal allegedly provided 100,000 francs as loan, at an interest rate of 2,500 francs per month, i.e. 30,000 francs.
per year, or 30 percent, Our impartiality makes us a-see how to reproduce this incident at length:

"Mr. President: In addition to this sum of 100,000 francs, a another sum of 50,000 francs was allegedly given, according to you, to Crémieu and d'Auriol. Wasn't that a bribe? -M, CasreTs: Yes, sir. - Mr. PRESIDENT: The missed opportunity, Have you, Islands, been reimbursed? - The TÉMon: Messrs. Ducoux and Crémieu were of the opinion that they should return them to me; I received 2,000 francs.
"Half by Mr. Ducoux, half by Mr. Crémieu." - D'Auriol, Crémieu and Ducoux deny the fact. - "Casrers: I swear before God, how true that is! - Mr. Ducoux: I have a copy of the letters written by me in Crémieu which establish that the alleged facts
Mr. Castets' statements are false. I have always been of the opinion that one had 13

146 FINANCIAL TRIALS

a matter involving third or fourth-rate buccaneers
(the world!) - Casters: I would like to respond to Mr. Ducoux's insolence. - THE PRESIDENT: Do not qualify
Not the words spoken here. Persist in your Affirmations? - Casrers: Yes, sir, before God and in front of men! A thousand francs were given to me in gold by Crémieu, a thousand francs in one bill by Ducoux.

The hearing is suspended. Upon resumption, Castets has just... to demand justice for Mr. [Name], the president, for the insults he has been subjected to.

the object, during the suspension, on the part of Ducoux.

While administrative matters were being handled so well, he
It was important not to neglect the shareholders. From December 31st onwards...
In December 1855, it was stipulated that it would be distributed in April 1856, an initial dividend of 4.65 francs per share. As of the date of
On October 7, 1856, it was decided that a di-sale of 2 francs 50 centimes, representing 371,793 shares then in wax culation, 936,982 francs, to be applied against the profits of 1856. Now, Following prevention, the account for the 1856 financial year presents a total loss of 1,783,368 francs, instead of a pre- benefice

In order to achieve this transfer of accounts, it would have been necessary to,
according to witness Delamarre, a litigation employee, to initial establishment costs, operating expenses
common, such as insurance, depreciation of equipment
riel and horses, lighting, washing, remounting costs,
farriery, municipal traffic tax, etc.

Regarding account transfers, one was cited which It is not lacking in originality, although it is very well known to economies. A horse bought for 400 francs, let's suppose, falls malade: we send him to the green room or the infirmary, and we credit him:

'Sold for his skin, 20 francs.' After a few months, the Bucephalus returns healed; they cut him up: "Bought a horse nine: 400 francs. Every time I go to the vet, even story. We were shown a retired racehorse one day, that because of his background the coachmen called the gen-weapon. It had already cost 4,200 francs, according to the system of

SMALL CARS 147

The aforementioned accounting, plus illness expenses, allocated to expenses related to overhead. We will find in the accounts-returns from a railway company something analogous in bookkeeping.

It was said that this trial would forge an encyclopedia. An ac-
The speaker, Mr. Gaussant, said, speaking to the assembly:

"Mr. Ducoux revealed many details to us which made me to think that the original managers should be prosecuted. Mr. Ducoux He dissuaded us from this idea, saying that we had to wash our We continued our trust in Mr. Ducoux, and the former managers having resigned, He appointed Messrs. d'Auriol and Crémieu to manage the business. After this following the nomination, there was a general assembly; it was tumultuous. killer; they silenced all those who wanted to oppose Sition. Mr. Ducoux pointed out a shareholder he was identifying as a member of the Chapel's renters' circle; he was violently dragged from his seat and thrown out the door. The case things were getting worse and worse; when I complained about it to these people... "Gentlemen," they shouted, "louder than me, alleging that they had" many shares, which they lost more than anyone else.

"What was happening in the assemblies?" asked Mr. President to witness Desseaux, – Well, we weren't there yet Too quiet, because for me, who's a little hard of hearing, it "It was deafening me."

While serious shareholders were being targeted, a The docile slap granted carte blanche to management, if necessary. according to the testimony of Mr. Paul, a former landlord:

"I don't know much about the matter; but as for this Regarding general meetings, I can say that it doesn't It wasn't done according to the rules. In my opinion, all the deliberations I was extorted, I saw a crowd of individuals who were not not shareholders, including former employees of Messa-general geries, – M, MarimEu: They were employees of- The shareholders who had come, how could the witness have recognized them?

148 FINANCIAL TRIALS

that they weren't shareholders? – Mr. Pauz: Because I I knew it.

We are still emphasizing the details of this meeting, because fictitious shareholders are the rule, not the exception. We will encounter this process of removing an approach later on. accounting practices, even in the most reputable companies spectacle compared to the stock market price:

"A general assembly was convened on the island on April 15, 1857:"

The port was made on May 25th. This report contains a history of the case; and at the very end, that's where we find The important thing is, as in a postscript. It indicates that it There are two paths to follow: one is a serious discussion of the past; but this market could lead to liquidation; The other is the transformation of the company into a public limited company: but To obtain anonymity, they say, she must be free of all debt, let us therefore accept the past and its accounts (its (Tales?) It's like telling the shareholders: Close your eyes... Here's how things happened, Mr. D'Auriol has In Mr. Ducoux supported the project; a shareholder approved it; Another man tried to oppose it; he was thrown out. We We have several objections and protests in this case.

shareholders (real ones). So everything was approved without control, "

The merger of the companies that formed the Compagnie pari-its gas lighting and heating system gave rise to scenes similar to the previous one. Here is the account that From the assembly, the newspaper Le Nord, March 13, 1948:

"It seems that what displeased the meeting was, from the outset-virtue, the claim made by the office to have the ap-probation of accounts without any examination having been carried out.

"This claim was vigorously opposed by Mr. Fé-line. former lawyer at the Court of Cassation,

SMALL CARS 449

"Mr. de Heckeren again supported the system presented" by the office, – which caused a great uproar, – pre-tending that from the moment this examination was required, he would not have No place.

"It was then that, at the request of Mr. Prince of Chimay, a vote of confidence, a large number of shares They declared they refused, and did not want to vote on anything without a most thorough examination. Around six o'clock, Mr. Isaac Péreire, whom we had gone to warn about the state of affairs, is in-tervened in turn to declare that if one acted on the In a way, refusing to approve the past and to vote for the loan, one would cause irreparable harm to the company, dui. your actions- The first victims would be the women.

accounts, the three largest shareholders, the most interested;
but this proposal was rejected, many members
declaring violently that they were familiar with this method;
It wasn't a sham exam we wanted, but well from a serious and thorough examination, carried out by action-officials that the assembly would delegate and choose, who could to control the initial basis of the business, and the purchases of er-Rains made outside of the specific accounts of the year.

"Finally, the uproar was such that the meeting had to be adjourned."
without having achieved any results.

"This morning, at eleven o'clock, a large meeting of ac-tionnaires took place, under the auspices of Mr. Féline, at one of Some of them, on the Rue de Rivoli, still don't know what has been decided in this assembly, »

Let's get back to the Small Cars.

To waste, plunder, and pile up false writings upon false ones by impersonation, ruining the company through bribes,
All of this is not enough to prove oneself a great administrator.
Therefore, these exploits must remain behind the scenes, and to remain unknown to the uninitiated. There was an urgent need to to reveal to the world through reforms and savings.

0 all of you, common-sense people, obscure and suffering plebeians-

13.

dot FINANCIAL TRIALS

freteuse, condemned to vegetate in perpetuity, because you
You would never have thought of grafting strawberries onto a leglantrine tree, feeding horses with tichen or picking figs
over brambles, listen to how one becomes an administrator-
A genius author, it's Mr. Crémieux, the lawyer, defender of his homonym, - to the nearest æ, - which most seriously describes the world before the Court the conception of his client:

"Before Crémieu, a horse was expected to last four years, losing thus each year 2% of the capital it represented;
but each horse had to cost 2 francs a day in food.
Crémieu said to himself: "Let's sort out the horses' feed:" as the interests of the shareholders, "we only give them] fr.
where €, of food per day. The horse will be less fat, that's True; but we don't need fat horses for the little ones

three years; it will lose 33 p. 100 of its value per morning, That's true. Under the first management, the horse, worth 600 francs on average, he only lost 150 francs a year; with the Crémieu system, he He will lose 200 francs; but he will save 50 centimes on food. per day, which makes a profit of 182 francs 50 centimes.

This extravagance was bound to be implemented.
What could be more sublime than torturing nature? Here's how...
The innovation was appreciated by people in the field:

"Mr. DESHAYES, veterinarian: Most of the retired horses They returned in good condition after a few months; I concluded that the lack of food had caused them to fall into the ma- rasme.

"Mr. Duquenelle, former landlord: I asked to be ins-" free spectator; I saw my coachmen bringing me bad oats; my horses were wasting away every day; it made me of the punishment, »

Go ahead and dream of fortune with such tenderness! Pau- Good people! Poor animals!

SMALL CARS 151

And yet the shares were rising, rising by 100 francs. at 220, as we have already noted. Believe again naive shareholders, at the stock market prices. If you want to... To find out how you're being lured in, listen again: from you 'For the horses of Crémieu, the diet is not significantly different.

The Prefect of Police, by granting 500 new numbers to the company, knew that he was making a net gift of envy- 3 million, since the old privileges were being sold from 6,500 to 7,500 francs per car. He also slipped, at the expense of... from the community, an annual fee of 1 franc per day and per car, i.e. 365 francs per year, in favor of the city of Paris. Ultimately, this tax had to be paid by the pu- public; it was an increase in the price of the ride, or a reduction in gross product for the company.

The dealers were very careful not to talk about the re- annual fee of 365 francs per issue, i.e. 182,500 francs per This small detail was only discovered after the disaster, but had it been so from the very beginning, the enthusiasm would have evaporated. Did he find it mitigated?

Greed, inflamed by journalism, demanded actions echoing from all sides of the stage and the floor; and There weren't any. How so? The debates will tell us.

say :

"The company was originally founded with only 25 million [currency unspecified]." capital, represented by 250,000 shares of 100 francs each. The increase in pira suggested to the founders the idea of issuing another 150,000 shares, increasing the share capital by 15 million, »

Following this logic, one simply became an ac- merchant prime-time bonuses. Without the disaster, the shows would have succeeded in proportion to the capital gain. But the bankruptcy coming, the Society was forced to negotiate a loan: despite the 40 million received (the increase benefited the sellers, (not to the social fund), the company was indebted and could not It could no longer operate; without the loan, it would have gone bankrupt. The simple renters, earning 7,500 francs per number, were making a profit. the money; at 20,000 francs per cab, the company no longer had only enough to cover his daily expenses. What were What happened to the shares?

192 FINANCIAL TRIALS

"At the time of the Company's founding," said M, "the pre-resident, the administrators, who had in their hands the to- The total value of the shares, minus approximately 28,700, thus made a The benefit that prevention estimates at 2,400,000 francs, and that you acknowledge being at least one and a half million, - Mr. Arnoux: We didn't own all the shares, as the president said, There are six of us who each received 6,000 shares; that doesn't that makes 60,000 in total. - Mr. 1st PRESIDENT: He does not fan- "To forget the intermediaries,"

"Mr. DeLamarre, Litigation Department Employee: The Founders" had the right to take all actions; one can even I would appreciate their restraint if they haven't done so... I said that it was more of a stock market operation that had been carried out that a serious industrial matter, in itself, the combination His sound rested on a solid foundation; but everything was done, as to the delight of it, in order to jeopardize its success...

"Mr. President: The prosecution accuses you of having carried hand them over to the rental companies who would sell their numbers, in order to

To pull off a stock market coup, you and your colleagues take them:
You sell them, you make a huge profit, and the day
where Players come to request actions, you respond:
There aren't any left. The new capital of 15 million was beyond of the Society's needs, since it remained unproductive at
Mr. de Rothschild, »

What was the founders' profit on the sale of the actions? It is difficult to establish the figure, for the reason that the increase did not reach 120 percent in a single jump, and that it is impossible to know at what rate the beneficiaries have sold. The accused confess to one and a half million; Mr. President-
The dentist speaks of 2,400,000 francs, and the Imperial Advocate says:

SMALL CARS 153

"The profit made by the founders amounts to, in our opinion, at least 10 million; however, the court will note that this is precisely the figure of the loss borne by the shareholders, »

By the shareholders who bought at par, at 100 francs, no
by the prize runners who acquired them at 200 francs and beyond.
Since then, the shares have fallen to 25 francs, even below.
below. Here again, assessing the damages is impossible, but there is one that the public is able to appreciate all the days: this is the increase in prices.

The administration's first priority was to disrupt the Conditions imposed on travelers, a new fare, the fare
The schedule, approved by the prefecture, was imposed on the good people Parisian, who immediately went on strike in response to his demands usurious: revenues fell by a third per day and per car; after a few weeks, the great geniuses who those who had designed this combination had to request a return at the rate per trip or per hour, at the discretion of the charger.
Only the price of 1 franc 10 centimes was raised to 4 francs 40 centimes, with ageration of more than a quarter; and the price of 1 franc, 25 centimes was raised to 4.50 francs, a 20 percent increase.
hourly rates, which decreased when you kept the flacre
several hours, were uniformly established at the maximum,
That is to say, at 2 francs. Parcels that did not pay were taxed.
at 20 cents each, up to a maximum of 60 cents.
Mr. Ducoux has since obtained a further increase in 5 cents per package. All these elements constitute an agaggravation of at least 30 percent.

The police force enjoys a reputation for integrity thanks to its management. Small cars alone would suffice to establish. Mr. Ducoux swore to save the interests of its shareholders; it entered into the administration at the most critical time; he had to endure the consequences of the damage committed before his arrival: The lowest prices were recorded during his reign, and the improvement— The situation that the stocks last experienced demonstrates a Well-deserved and motivated trust. Only, with all his honor—

15 FINANCIAL TRIALS

Clearly, Mr. Ducoux reasons like Mirès: he would devour the world to enrich its shareholders, therefore, the travelers on the one hand, his coachmen and employees on the other, will be, the pre. The first group was ransomed at will, the second group rationed to the point of exhaustion indigence, in order to provide dividends to the holders of the securities tions. Who wouldn't do the same in Mr. Ducoux's place? His His conduct is dictated by his very position.

But what would the public say about a return to the old prizes? 30 percent off? Well, if the company, at instead of passing into the hands of the honest Mr. Ducoux, had it remained entrusted to the makers and the buccaneers, it would have fallen into bankruptcy; the equipment would have been sold at auction, broken up, dismantled—bré; the cabs, paid 20,000 francs, 44,000 and 103,000 francs by the naive people, would have been bought back at the true price by competent people tents, tradesmen, that is to say, in the vicinity of o at 7,000 fr., privilege included, 1,000 to 2,000 fr. without privi— Legally, the shareholders would have been ruined without question: But they would have had the right, like everyone else, to take advantage of the 30 percent reduction on inau— rates price reductions are guaranteed by their company; and a price reduction means money. Cash, safer than dividends. That our hypothesis is is still being done today, and this will be a benefit for the Parisian population. Bankruptcy as a necessity and A work of repair, that's the masterpiece of the swindlers! Initiators of credit!

And this unfortunate world of coachmen, doomed to perpetuity to salaried employment, prohibited, by the privilege of the Society, from owning never his tool of the trade, what was he given as compensation for his forfeiture and his sentence to a state— in islanding? We propose to do one day, on the conditions imposed on the serfs of the large companies, a An investigation and a study as complete as possible. That these a few details serve as a sample for people who want to— will certainly provide us with information.

The wages of the station coaches were set at 3 francs per day.

in principle; – in fact, they were deducted, for pale- costs
Freight forwarders, guards, washing, lighting, insurance, |! fr, per day

SMALL CARS 155

when they didn't relay; 1 franc? 0 centimes when they changed of horses; so that the salary amounted to ? francs and 1 franc, 80 centimes. Each coachman had to spend two nights per se-Maine; he was allocated 5 centimes per hour starting from midnight – The company had set a minimum of 18 to 20 francs to be produced per car per day on average: in
In vain did the controllers, counters, and supervisors notice on the sheet was a recipe of 1 to 16 francs; the coachman was invited to perfect the difference on his savings, if mic:s he did not want to be dismissed as negligent, lazy or unprofessional zealous, – all without prejudice to fines, deductions, penalties on foot, and other penalties affecting wages. Such are the facts revealed by the publications on the famous strike of coachmen,

This was the Crémieu diet transported from the che-worth to men. However foreign the barons of industry is linked to the necessities of the proletarian's existence; it is It's impossible for them to imagine that with such a salary a
A man and a family can live. It is absolutely essential that...
The coachmen find an extra source of income. The only
The tip is something that can be admitted.

In principle, we estimate tips at the same rate than bribes. Democratic society, based on the mutuality, repels both; the nourishment is unjustrieux for the dignity of the one who received it; he notes his subordination to the one who gives it. Here, according to the
The company's calculations include salary calculations.
even; it is the epitome of immorality, it ceases to be facul-latif and becomes an aggravation at 30 percent increase-the situation we were talking about. What to say to a man who... declares: "I earn 36 cents a day, and I am obliged to you
"What if I ask to live more than my rate allows?"
If the traveler resists, it is on him that the first
The worker's curses. Who knows how much weight this has carried monstrous condition of the tip in the assassination of Mr. Judge, by the coachman Colignon?

The average daily tip does not exceed ? francs.

READ FINANCIAL TRIALS

Including salary, this amounts to a maximum total of 4 francs, or 3 francs. SU c. most often, still suffers from a lack of no-ire, especially considering that, due to his profession, he It is impossible for the coachman to return home to eat his meals while fu-a thousand. What then is left for him? Marauding, that is to say, the in-Loyalty, fraud. The directors sometimes engage in... examples; marauders have been sentenced to up to six months in prison by the correctional police. And yet, the ad-The ministry knows this: it is impossible for its coachmen to live unless they occasionally raise the price of a ride. The flight, elevated to the level of a professional necessity, that's it. core a masterpiece of banking.

At the beginning of 1866, a decree restored to the industrial-free sorting of the exploitation of cars in Paris: but the State and Cities are not breaking free from monopolies with the same ease that the founders of their commitments. A Arbitration award of March 29, 1866, accepted by the council municipal council of April 9th following, stipulated in favor of the Com-Imperial Company, an indemnity of #7 annuities amounting to 360,000 francs each, totaling 16,920,000 francs over forty-seven years, or, at a capitalization rate of 6 percent, interest and including depreciation, 6 million in capital.

In summary: ruin for shareholders, increased taxes 50 percent increases, 6 million in compensation tax on taxpayers, condemned to a life of wage labor an entire class of workers, bankruptcy as the best possible repairs to the public and staff, such is the con-The moral conclusion of this fantastic story.

After that, what does it matter that Messrs. Arnoux, Barbier-Sainte-Marie, E. Gaillard, Gibiat and Barry were dismissed from ends of the complaint; that Crémieu and d'Auriol were convicted-sentenced to two years in prison and a 10,000 franc fine, Massinot to Three months and a €10,000 fine? There is no penalty to the author of the disaster caused by the financial design which We have just finished the analysis. Whatever name you call it-Pelassent the founders, the outcome could not be different from what we have seen; personal probity cannot-

. MIRÉS AFFAIR 197

It was worthless. More or less waste and corruption. What does this mean in the face of the upheaval of an in-normal, regular industry; transformation of a service public as an instrument of oppression and servitude for all

Read the economic considerations to one hundred thousand subscribers which we have seasoned the account of this trial, for sure public conscience would have revolted, and opinion would have prevented the catastrophe. But the monopolized press is delivered to the Jews, and with it public and private interests, the nation and individuals.

MIRÈS CASE

(Criminal trial)

The key point of the Mirès trial, its originality in the middle of those we have already discussed, this is the chapter on executions. Yet another piece of financial slang, a neologism born-cessation by a kind of nameless operations in a language honest.

Mirès bank, like all major institutions credit, holds a securities account, The shareholder who fears fire, thieves, or the scattering of his papers, the deposited against a nominative receipt. Others, in a hurry, momentarily of money, instead of alienating shares that they believe them to be good, they still consign them against a well-in-less than the face value of the pledge. The bankers themselves have-same: personal account, – company account, – account: securities to be issued, – account of securities issued, – account of values held as collateral or on deposit, accounting-very normal at its core, easy to maintain in any home gulière: but, as we have said, the bancocracy, by virtue even its feudal principle of granting credit, is repugnant to order, the regularity of the writing. What he needs is joint ownership, confusion of responsibilities, and multiple incompatibilities 14

L."

15N FINANCIAL TRIALS

compatible, the regime of grace and good pleasure. The em-Those who were not educated in this school are scandalized by it. and refuse to be involved in such management, The ? fé. In February 1948, Mr. Raynouard sent his resignation in these terms:

"Mo® dear Alires,

"Since the violence of your character makes them increasingly..."
Any verbal explanation with you is no longer possible, I am dis-
I am inclined to put my thoughts in writing. The position of collaborator-
Being with you is no longer bearable; the contradiction irritates you to the point of making you leave the house every day.
sure of the most commonplace conventions; your instinctive aversion-Live for legality, makes you dislike the legal experts who They tell you frankly what they think.

"My devoted friendship has long endured this state of shock"
However, recent circumstances have filled the gap.
and my patience is exhausted.

Mr. Barbet de Vaux refuses to participate in the sales of actions, and told the boss point-blank that his methods were irregular.
Another employee, Mr. Denitis, wishes to put forward, by letter, his liability covered for the participation he owed
Take, on the boss's orders, to work on the securities. Nothing.
The powerful financier is not moved; he buys securities at full price.
hands.

"It was my duty," he said, "to look after the interests of my shareholders, to make their property grow. Needing to considerable sums to operate various transactions on the Stock Exchange sactions, I was selling those shares. Now, if I had put my personalprivity to the details of this sale, his probable indiscretion-ble would have had the infallible effect of causing the shares to fall;
which would have been detrimental to the interests of my principals.
So I sold them myself, in complete secrecy, and more
Ten thousand shares were thus sold at a profit.

NIRES CASE 159

The presentation by Mr. Monginot, a sworn expert, sheds some light on the matter.
comprehensive on this aspect of financial practices:

"In the last months of 1857," he said, "Mr. Mirès, being at short of money and believing in an imminent depreciation of its actions, had the idea of carrying out an operation which, while bringing funds in his banking house, provided him with the same time, an opportunity to realize a considerable profit.
"At that time, there was a quantity in the securities fund."

either at the Caisse, as remaining uninvested at the time of the subscription, or to custodian clients for the remainder.

Mr. Mirès obtained from the securities clerk 18 or 14 thousand of these securities, by giving him receipts that were supposed to cover the the responsibility of the said cashier, but which should not have been included on the books, according to which the shares always appeared at the checkout,

"Once in possession of these misappropriated securities..."

Mr. Mirès had the files prepared at the Stock Exchange by a third party, and at As he received the amount, he paid it all or part of it tie to the credit of his current account in the house, without in- to disclose, of course, the source of this money, which it seemed to draw from his personal assets,

"Mr. Mirès had hidden this operation from everyone around him; However, Mr. Solar, his co-manager, was informed of this, and finding her Bohne wanted his share, so he had B delivered to him for 6,000 shares of the General Treasury and sold them by the same method that his partner, without however paying the funds from it, which he kept in his possession, it therefore follows from this agreement managers misappropriated approximately 20,000 shares in total. which were sold at prices of 450 to 350 francs.

"This operation had the following results!"

"1. First, the presence on the market of 20,000 floating securities" as long as their owners had believed they were making them rarer depositing with Mr. Mirès; the presence of these 20,000 ti- very, we say, brought about a considerable depreciation in the Caisse's share prices. Values even higher

160 FINANCIAL TRIALS

solid than those that would hardly withstand a combination naision which crushed the cash market by throwing 20.40 stocks,

20 The 20,000 shares thus sold on the Stock Exchange will be presented- rent at each due date to collect the interest payments and dividend, and yet, although these coupons were paved First, the amount had to be credited to the customers who actually possessed the titles, and from which the files. From there, payment of the said 20,000 coupons in duplicate. ploi, and the loss resulting from this double employment amounted to Approximately 100,000 francs, a loss that May. Mirés and Solar made support at the General Fund; although on the repurchase of the ti- very, a buyout that lasted nine months and was done at the right price from 150 to 200 francs, they made a profit that one cannot

"30 This benefit is all the more certain as Mr. Mirès employed the most energetic means to lower the price of his own actions at the very moment when he began to rebuy.

"A. de Vaux filed a note of securities taken by Messrs. Mirès and Solar, emanating from Mr. Roger, securities cashier; on our request, Mr. Roger provided us with a more complete report, according to which the distracted shares amounted to 21,247 shares which were only reinstated by Messrs. Mirès and Solar two years later.

This sale, made at high prices, would have produced, according to the stoppage cost around ten million. The error was perpetuated by periodically sending them statements of their accounts, as if the securities had still existed on deposit. In May 1859, the political events leading up to... caused a considerable drop in stock market values, Mirès and Solar had 18 thoughts of resolving their situation with regard to their depositors, by fictitiously selling in the low markets securities that they no longer possessed, since they had previously wanted them actually when the markets were high.

were high.

MIRÈS CASE 161

In order to achieve the realization of this plan, which was to result in the managers being released from all or part of their obligations, and to allow them to benefit from the difference between the prices of the actual sale and the fictitious sale, Mirès addressed a circular letter on April 30, May 2 and 3, 1859 to the 9353 customers who had handed in securities at the cashier's office, to advise them that in the presence of the circumstances, it had seemed prudent to the managers to sell these securities. At the Stock Exchange today, a slip was attached to this letter, securities with the selling price at the current rate and the indication of perceived brokerage, and at the same time, to give a to create an appearance of reality in this fictitious execution, Mirès was selling, On April 30, May 2 and 3, all the alleged executed values, through a stockbroker at one of the usual brokers, who, on the same day, through another operation-simulated transaction, he resold them to Mirès. (Facts reported in the device of the stop.) The testimonies of those executed are a sad litany.

23,000; Colonel Danner received 110,000 francs, and his values 233,000 were produced. Madame Després is accused of... The price was 175 francs instead of 350. We're going further, we're demanding... money to the unfortunate people who have been robbed; we give them proves that they owe money to the cashier.

"In 1857," said a witness, "I needed money, Mr. Mahou," The stockbroker I contacted advised me to see A. Mi- Very. I went to his checkout. They asked me if I could provide three signatures. I replied no, but that I had some ac- , tions that I could file. I did indeed file 64 West and 34 cash registers, all worth over 70,000 francs. In May, I received the Mirès circular, informing me that I had been sold, and that I owed 40,000 francs again. I was told that my shares in Western roads had been sold for 430 francs, the Caisse 175. I later learned that the first ones had actually been sold for 750 francs and the second ones for 375.

"Because I was in debt, I was summoned three weeks ago"

EPA PROCES VINANCIFRS

nes. The liquidators told me: Do you want us to ba- Lance. Thank you, I told them, I've had enough of your Balance, I prefer the one of justice {laughs}. My poor thing A woman died of grief as a result of these affairs, Mr. Mi- Mr. Mires knows this well. She went to his house in tears; Mr. Mires He took her hands and ran away, saying: My good lady, you interest me- Save a lot. I wouldn't want you to lose. Do a sacrifice, let your husband bleed himself, let him find a neck- veriore, and we will arrange that.

"I had nothing left; I had no blanket to offer," Now, gentlemen, the 98 shares I had filed will- milk beyond what I was lent; I had nothing else to go on pay. I leave it to your justice system to decide on the 40,000 francs that They are calling for me.

Coachman Petitjean concludes his deposition with this apostrophe trophy:

"It's awful, Monsieur Mires, to have been deprived of this." the bread of our old age, the fruit of our twenty-year labor FIVE years.

"I'm here to remind you of the position these gentlemen are in."
They didn't invest by selling my shares; they reduced me to half-sère. I wrote twice to Mr. Mirès; I asked him for his prosecution to get into the Incurables. There I'd have bread on my hands. board. I could have earned something to settle my debt. I have a hard time earning enough to live on.

"I have come to ask you, sir, to tell these gentlemen to not to remind me of my misfortune. I have only my poor pe-small household. They wouldn't want to take it from me. There's no-"Wouldn't be responsible for the costs,"

That financial national interest justifies such methods,
It is therefore necessary to conclude that there are two moralities: one for

NIRES CASE, 153

The bankers, the other for their clients. What could be more natural? proving that the good faith of this poor, ruined servant, v stripped, destitute, who believes herself, as she has been told, to be indebted towards the Caisse, and asks for help in settling the debt!

The other details of the Mirès trial are common to him with many others. This is the Railway Journal, bought for 1,200 francs, and valued by the author at 1 million during the foundation of the Society; it is the Pamplona railway in Zaragoza, bought for 145,000 francs per kilometer, and sold to 200,000 shareholders: that's the Romans' business, 40 million of wasted resources before a single blow of the pickaxe; that's a figure of 6,312 bonds sold in addition to the issuance sion; it is the revelation that in the single year 1857, the spec-Mirès's revenues amounted to 720 million.

The debates are rife with details of social customs. Do you want to know, through yet another testimony, how the financial newspapers Do they understand independence and integrity? In a letter without

On that date, Mirès wrote to Péreire:

"If I have frankly acknowledged your services, you will not find- Don't worry, it's bad that I remember what was in my hands, Island Railway Journal. I made it an instrument for your usage. I supported all the Island affairs in which you were involved. engaged; I have attracted to myself not only powerful hats-

This resulted in a very serious loss of respect for me, because nobody never assumed it was a feeling of affection and gratitude to you who kept me on the path where I was committed.

Confidences between financiers are as serious as an act of accusation; Mirès writes to Solar:

"Osiris claims that you told him that the benefits that You assume me are the result of operations carried out with prejudice dice of the house. A similar accusation, expressed by Osiris, coming from you is so surprising that I cannot

164 FINANCIAL TRIALS

I believe this slander, and I hasten to tell you why. birth.

"Since my letter yesterday, the situation has worsened. The con- The conduct of Ducros and Lévy is such that there is no doubt that they continue the destruction of the Treaty of Salamanca.

"But if, after having misused such considerable sums of money..." As for the Roman roads, we cannot save this treaty, which covers our liability and the General Railway Fund of iron, ensuring the execution of the road with the capital s0- Seriously, I tell you clearly, everything can be lost. It is There is still time; come and lend me the support of your influence on Ducros and Lévy, and everything will probably be saved. But For this, we need unity of names, a great deal of firmness, and the a-devoted friendship of Salamanca. If you refuse me your assistance, you cannot claim that you are unaware of the extreme where you You will have diminished me.

"In the name of your family, in the name of the interests of so many Families whose fortunes are entrusted to us, return without delay. Health is certainly a precious asset, but there is also duties to be fulfilled take precedence over personal considerations. Sonnelles, I am convinced that you understand them as me, and, in this hope, I beg you to fight in banish all unpleasant thoughts from your mind, I swear on your head of my child, that I have no ill feelings in my heart- I lie to you; on the contrary, I pity you, because I sense that your credulous mind is surrendering to impressions painful symptoms that your illness tends to worsen.

"Look, Solar, think about it: you've seen me sometimes quite well an action that reveals a malicious character, and, on the contrary, Haven't you always seen me as a victim of my own kindness? heart?

"This letter will be given to you by Mr. Bonneau."

"A dispatch from him will inform me of your decision; I sincerely desires that it conform to good feelings that I have for you.

_ MIRÈS CASE 165

The letter of July 21, 1860, from the same person to the same person, is Ccra-health :

"The conferences you just had at your home, in Guirand, along with Messrs. de Pontalba, Gaïffe and Osiris Iffa, carried lenrs fruits. While Mr. [ffla] was showing me yesterday, with your authorization, that Mr. Dromery was chosen by Mr. de Pontalba as by you to assert your claims against the General Railway Fund, I learned that very evening, at the Opera, by Mr. Caussade, that MX.. had collected the pro-following: "It seems that something is happening at Mirès's place "Serious matters: Messrs. Solar and de Pontalba should..." "Considerable sums, and Mirès does not dare to pursue them in "The fear of inconvenient revelations," I cannot misunderstand- I want to know the origin of these rumors, especially since I know that Mr. Gaïffe, after attending Guirand's conferences, arrived at Paris in the company of Messrs. de Pontalba and Osiris Ifila.

"Mr. Iffla also informed me that you refused to don-submit your resignation as editor-in-chief of {a Presse. However, you you bought the shares of La Presse at a very high price, because that the rights of manager and editor in Chixl were attached there, The sale! isolated of the shares without the rights attached thereto occa-would cause a great loss to the detriment of the General Fund railways: I hope you will not persist in this claim, which would only aggravate the harm you have I was hurt to have bought this newspaper against my will, and the wrong more It is still a great thing to have compromised its ownership through your attacks. hateful attacks against the Emperor, attacks which required the part of the supervisory board a protest that I have pro-summoned and which I have placed in the hands of His Excellency the Minister of the Interior.

"I am aware that the formal notice, which, on my de- You were asked on this occasion to resign from a editorial staff who flattered your political passions, contributed

whose elves I had gathered in this unfortunate affair Roman railways, which, in agreement with Messrs. Ducros and

166 FINANCIERS TRIALS

Pontalba, you would have been ruined if I hadn't managed to pull it out.
from your hands, and which fortunately, thanks to me, is entitle-
She was saved and thriving in Rome.

"Our response to the threats of revelations that are made to me"
Do it, I warn you that if you don't have it within a short time not settled your account, or given guarantees, and if you you have not returned the 1,656 shares of the securities to the cash register Regarding the cash you owe, measures will be taken accordingly.
and I will have to address myself to the appropriate person.

"I will not finish this Jettre without giving you a NOTICE :

"You witnessed the threats against the trial made by Messrs. De-" Brousse, Sarti, Jeanty, Blanzj jeune and others; you know that under the influence of these threats, and under your pressure,
I agreed to some outrageous transactions for the Society of Roman railways and for the Railway Fund,
who was responsible for the capital,

"No doubt you and Mr. de Pontalba hoped for a result"
similarly, by jeopardizing the credit and reputation of the General Railway Fund; you are late; the
The trials frightened me only because of the credit of the So-
The Roman railway company would have been affected, and the Fund railways, responsible for the capital, would have been compromise.

"Today, I would regret any lawsuit, but I no longer have the same fears, because the Railway Fund is de-aged; its capital is intact, and if a lawsuit is always a thing unfortunate for a credit institution, I prefer it to others sacrifices; you will soon have proof of that, if you do not don't put yourself in a position to settle your account or give guarantees, and finally if you do not return the liters that you you must; you will thus have proof that I fear nothing and that I despise threats as I defy slander.

"If you find that Anal Island that you have done by a de-hidden part and precipice is not large enough, I can assure you-to be sure, because the most damaging rumors circulate, and one is at ease
He will even sign a document that will summarize all the remarks and charitable interpretations born of your strange con-"Dulite."

Solar, in turn, writes:

"I repeat, it depends on you whether we lose or not."
to save us; a direct accusation of wrongdoing. The name of Pereire pronounced, vague allegations, outburst would abruptly end the investigation and you would lose in the spirit of Mr. Vuillefroy, State Councillor, Commissioner, to whom it must have been said, or will be said, that you are a lunatic.

ss 1 8 8 1 8 1 8 8 8 5 + ms 8 8 4 7 + +

"...Finally, my dear Mirès, don't see in everything that I tell you that the intention of a man who trembles with dismay-
"The day we would like to explore the Roman roads,"

Roger, the securities cashier, as he delivered to Mirès or at Solar des Valeurs, 8th, a receipt was issued. These receipts were one day replaced by a general receipt.
This was a dangerous method. One of the managers could have to have the two receipts given to him by the cashier and then to use a weapon against his co-manager. He was then arrested between these three people to whom Roger would not hand over the receipt of Nirès than to Solar in the presence of Mirès, and that of Solar than to Mirès in the presence of Solar; in this way, everyone was kept in check with respect to his co-manager. The precaution was justified.
to be, because one day, in Solar's absence, Nirès demanded his his own receipt. The cashier flatly refused it and wrote to him at This subject is addressed in the following letter:

My dear sir,

"I will wait for S...'s authorization before putting it in your hands."
the piece you're asking me for; I'll write to him tonight.

"I cannot be less devoted and less loyal to S..."
that I would be towards you; I promised him not to return

I only received it with his consent, and I would not have returned it. Yours without your approval, I believe I am behaving honestly—I will discuss this matter, and I will have your approval, for in 'ap-

By calling you, you were primarily looking for an honest man.
net, »

A touching example of mutual trust.

Mr. Ducros, sent to Rome to settle the matter of the she-mins of iron, wrote to Mr. de Pontalba:

"What a waste of time on the nonsense scattered along the road of Big business! Now I'm getting serious, The Duke (it's the Duke of Massimo) is still perfect, but the rocking game that put The cardinal, who was rather low-level, did not raise his own position. I have fear that it might be undiluted on the first day, and the police station, faced with the bad mood of the prelates, who were overexcited by the the escapades of Bishop de Mérode, will sacrifice this poor duke to the pre-First opportunity. I haven't officially given him anything yet. I am waiting for the letter announced by Mr. Mirès in order to submit a short note requesting the modifications we are agreed between us.

"I had a three-quarter-hour conversation this morning with Bishop de Mérode, who, after a fairly calm start, was taken in a veritable fit of rage during which he repeated it to me he beat his chest until it broke: "Yes, I want ruin"
"entire, absolute of the Society; yes, if I could, I would put it-"
"I would be bankrupt tomorrow; I would sign in my name, in the "Official journal, a note repeating what I'm telling you now. I I want her ruined for all the evil she has done; I
"I want Mirès to stay until the last hour to attend"
"to the catastrophe and to have one's share of it." A quarter of an hour from-
He exhaled his bile, leaving me horrified by this true Epilepsy attacks, we have here an enemy against which we we can count on... »

Mr. de Pontalba, a member of the supervisory board, is sent in turn to Rome, then to Museille. In a single

Once, 11,000 francs were sent to him, in order to facilitate antepoculu The arrangements that generate traffic. In their letters, Mirès and Solar Fappellent Icur savior: they declare that he covered himself in glory. How to value in money Rare services? The glory-covered savior demands 1,200,000 francs in fees for the first assignment, 500,000 francs for the second, not including expenses, mon- So much for 250,000 francs in twenty months. What a bottomless pit! What power! A devouring session! He threatens to denounce anyone who speaks to him. The bargaining fee. Mirès replies:

"I don't want to buy your silence for a million dollars."
300,000 francs.

Solar intervenes; he writes to Avond:

"I feel I must give you an opinion that you haven't yet had Having taken that into account enough: Pontalba is going to give you a terrible scandal; if my advice had been followed, all of this would have been avoided. But here, as in many other circumstances, I play the role of Cassandra. Finally, I warn you; you will not say that You were not warned, p

Indeed, de Pontalba is suing his managers in civil court. and files a complaint against them for mismanagement at Ministry of Justice. It was then that a belated intervention occurred. transaction, December 11 {800:

"Between the undersigned Islands, Mirès and Pontalba, it has been said and done the following:

"During the course of 1858, various difficulties arose arose in connection with the Roman roads affair undertaken by Mr. de Pontalba received the General Railway Fund mission to go to Rome to protect the interests of the Fund railways, and above all with the aim of obtaining power see the Holy Father's sovereign power to terminate commitments taken against his government by Messrs. Mirès and Solar.

"These latter, as remuneration for the care of Mr., of Pontalba and the success of the negotiation promised him a full payment of the sums owed by him to the Fund.

A5

"Since Mr. de Pontalba's return, a debate has arisen" regarding the mission and the remuneration he claimed,

"Previously , another mission had been entrusted to Mr. de Pontalba; he had been tasked with overseeing, in Marseille, the interests involved in the Société des Ports de Marseille; of This chief, Mr. de Pontalba, demands, as having been promised to him, compensation of 500,000 francs.

"Difficulties have arisen between the parties regarding..." this dual settlement; a civil case has been initiated by M, from Pontalba; it gave rise to the following transaction:

"Messrs. Mirès and Solar, granting the claims of Mr. de Pontalba, hereby give him full and full receipt whole:

4° From the mortgage debt resulting from the past obligation before Mr. Gossard, notary in Paris, on January 21 and 25, 1858. Main components and accessories:

"2° Of the sum of fr. owed by Mr. de Pontalba in account-" current, in addition to the said mortgage and expenses made in Rome on behalf of the Ro- Railway Company hands, expenses which are not the responsibility of Mr. de Pontalba.

"Furthermore, MAT, Mirès and Solar have just paid Mr. de Pontalba a sum of 200,000 francs on their behalf and to their staff costs, as remuneration for don- born from the Marseille ports affair,

"Through this transaction, your accounts will be found- wind completely regulated between the parties, who recognize respectively no longer have to make any claims for whatever the cause,

"Doubly done in Paris, on... December 1500"

n C, De Pontalsa and J. Dires, » Mr. Plocque, Mirès's deflector, adds:

"What could have led Mr. Mirès to agree to a also difficult transposition? His concern for the interests of the ac-

Fund officials. He thought this would divert their attention.
this storm that he could see. He therefore performed this sacrifice, and,
Perhaps, I can only presume, he thought that everything was finished, and that he would be able, through his work, to repair this breach.
done to the interests entrusted to him.

"Mr. de Pontalba, in fact, withdrew, and in exchange for the 1,000,000 francs that Mr. Mirès had thrown into the hand of this new Belisarius' calf, he obtained this document:

"I, the undersigned, Célestin-Joseph Delfau de Pontalba, owner-
"taire, residing in Paris, rue Saint-Georges, 38, declares me
"to withdraw purely and simply the complaint that I have withdrawn" » posed on the 4th of this month against Mr. Mirès at the pétanque court of Mr.
_» Imperial prosecutor,

Paris, December 17, 1860

Signed: DB PoNTALBA.

What a world! What morals! What an abyss! Messrs. the financiers-

Ciers decline the jurisdiction of the ordinary courts of the country.
In truth, were it not for the interests of third parties, we would be... their opinion. Which court, judges, jury, or arbitrators, could,
Faced with such revelations, to say that justice, the law, Morality is found here and there; in the works of Mirès, Pontalba, Solar, or Any other hero in this tragicomedy? The judicial debates Did the officials have anything qualified that wasn't more severely criticized?
prized by these dignitaries of the million themselves from their correspondence and transactions?
The advertising was enough to warn us about these sandals, we didn't
We cannot repeat it too often, but a principle has been established today.
.today, as the march of power, the gra'.of industrial affairs-trielles, order within, dignity and influence outside demand discretion, silence. Every system "its inconveniences; but rest assured, the government is watching over it.
And the courts are not idle; those who have committed wrongdoing will be punished.

Indeed, the zeal of the parquet flooring was not lacking: we
We have not mentioned one-tenth of judicial executions.

st

And yet the system continues. Is this due to a per-obstinate versatility, an invincible spirit of plunder? Not preprecisely. We have said it, and we must not cease to say it.
to reiterate: feudalism was established in violation of all the economic laws; and in the face of a constitutional irregularity-
Such a monstrous thing, there is no virtue that can stand in its way, to
to suppose that virtue goes astray in such company.

Here are some more examples of banker customs. The quo-
The nature of the claims differs; the principle is always the same:
An instinctive aversion to legality.

?

The Eastern Saltworks, (Gazette des tribunaux. ie chambre .urrectionnelle, hearings of July 18 and 5, 1st and August 7, 1861.) – In 1856, Mr. Calley Saint-Paul founded in Paris
a limited partnership, the Financial and Industrial Union, with a nominal capital of 100 million, or at the time, 40 million more lions than Crédit Mobilier, 70 million more than I, Crédit Foncier, 80 million more than Comptoir d'Esaccount of Paris. What a mass of business was being stirred up! with such capital? Financial operations, commercial commercial and industrial, named in a rather vague way in Article 5 of the Statutes. Article 7 even provided for the case where this fabulous capital could be increased, however, it stipulated that operations could begin as soon as
The subscription reached 50,000 shares at 500 francs each.
In fact, the manager declared the company legally on May 28, 1856.
founded by the issuance of 52,000 shares, which, with a payment-an effective amount of 250 francs per share, represented a real-read of 1.5 million.

"In a society that was going to move with such capital
"Considerable," said Mr. Jules Favre, "it was indispensable for îles."
shareholders to contain within certain limits the powers of the manager, however, these powers were the most enormous one we had pit imagine; I have never known any who could be their appear.

"All powers have been handed over to Mr. Cal-

THE EASTERN SALT MILLS. 173

Jey Saint-Paul, and we do not encounter any trace of the action of supervisory committee. Article 7 states that the General Assembly-general, regularly constituted, represents the universality of whose lift is stopped by the manager #n months before the convo-Shareholders registered two months before the meeting

Only those who can be included can be listed there.

That is to say, for the honor and the chance to be com-chosen from among the hundred dignitaries of the Assembly, the shareholders residents must commit to staying for a minimum of two months in Their values. And what will they be doing at this elite meeting?

"The agenda, says article 35, is set by the manager;
No item other than those on the agenda may be put forward.
under deliberation, »

So that the assistants, as in the song, have no...
Its popular sound, with a possible refrain: Brigadier, you have reason!....

"Ordinarily," said Mr. Jules Favre, "such acts are published in ertenso in the newspapers; this one was not, in the small posters, only through a very incomplete extract. No-only serious advertising, as required by law, does not was given; but the published extracts on the actions themselves-mine were in truly microscopic characters, On seems to have exhausted all the resources of typography to prevent the reading of this excerpt. Indeed, it was
"It is risky to highlight certain articles,"

Article 47 fittingly crowns this monument of credit democratic:

"Upon the expiration of the company, or in the event of dissolution-Participée, he said, the liquidation will be carried out by the manager.
with the most extensive resources to achieve an amicable agreement the company's assets. Liquidation may, by virtue of a resolution-| 15.

1;:4 FINANCIAL TRIALS

tion of the general assembly, make 12 transport to another s0-company of rights, actions and obligations
dissolved. » |

According to the considerations in the judgment, during the four
In its years of existence, the Financial Union has done nothing but major operation: the Seine departmental loan of 50 million, in 1860. Under these circumstances, Mr. Cailey Saint Paul, invested with the most extensive powers, believed authorized to repurchase a portion of the shares on behalf of the Company, in order to successively reduce the available capital nible and thus mitigate the losses resulting from its defect employment.

Messrs. Grimaldi accused him of having, on this account, carried out the rise and fall of Union shares, pure means contrary to the laws of natural competition. The court correctional, "without dwelling on the degree of regularity"
of this operation, » did not see any fraudulent character in it.
But the same was not true for the distribution of the divifictitious charges: the court ruled that they constituted "the the most flagrant violation of Article 13 of the Law of 17 July let 1856, »
But first, how did a credit company transform itself?
formed as a mining company? Based on Article 47 of the statutes, cited above, Mr. Calley Saint-Paul, to the Assem-wheat of April 4, 1860, explains to the shareholders that, for good reason Given the circumstances, there is no longer a society to found, nor a public to hope for; a liquidation or a termination must be achieved.
training; to utilize the share capital, he acquired tion of the actions which represent {a great and beautiful business Eastern Saltworks.

This is one of those societal transformations that hold of the fairy tale: the shareholders fall asleep, the goir, co-purti-
members of a banking company; they reawaken, the lens tomorrow, salt extractors, salt merchants; they will not not even the right to prefer a refund to the well
the metamorphosis,

THE EASTERN SALT MILLS 175

The court does not challenge the legality of the transmutation:
He only accuses Mr. Cailey Saint-Paul of operations of which we have found analogues everywhere.

"Whereas," the judgment states, "by the manager's own admission, the shares
The salt mines of the East were only purchased for 4 million, i.e.
260 francs per share, including the million allocated to Working capital, they actually only cost 5 million.
that is 333 francs per share; however, the manager, without holding taking into account the lesson that events had taught his

to reappear in the eyes of its shareholders the mirage of illusions, brings the value of these shares, purchased on the, to 500 francs. 333 francs 33 centimes, a price which, freely negotiated between people capable of appreciating and supporting their interests, had determined its true value with certainty:

"Ultimately, we must conclude that it is through a strange misuse of language, deliberately confusing the certainty of the pre-feels with the possibilities of the future, that, in its inventory From March 1860, Cailey Saint-Paul increased the amount to 7,500,000 francs. Shares of the Eastern Salites, whose real value was at most of 5 million, and ve, with the fraudulent aim of concealing Islands losses of share capital, and to impose them on the public and on shareholders on the outcome of its operation, highlighting a profit of over 700,000 francs, when, in reality, the fund social life was weakened, at that time, by more than 1,700,000 francs; that this act still constitutes the offense provided for by Article 13 of the law of July 17, 1856, etc.:

There remains one small detail that we find again in a little almost everywhere, in terms of foundations.

"With regard to the third point, based on the creation of su fraudulent and fraudulent transfer of 1000 shares to the benefit of the manager and of his partner;

"Whereas the report made to the general assembly of the April ISG0, reporting on the acquisition of shares

1:6 FINANCIAL TRIALS

des Salines, determines the advantages and expenses; that anrés having stated the figure of the annuities to be paid for the bonds tions, 11 ends with these words: "The 1,400 shares are divided- "will manage the surplus profits," taking care to avoid talk about the 1000 foundation shares that the manager had in mind to be assigned to him along with his co-manager, and it actually happened to allocate a few days later, the 1% of the same month, by a Salines assembly, composed solely of the manager and of six members of the supervisory board;

"Whereas, without having to explain the terregularities" general assemblies and on the omnipotence attributed to Seratt, 11, it is undeniable that these thousand foundation actions, by taking part in the profit sharing, even after the pre-raising 30 francs per share of capital constitutes a actual load, and that this load should have been borne essentially

What distinguishes this case from similar companies is The issue we have pointed out is that if the irregularities were just as enormous as anywhere else, however, I
The harm caused to third parties was practically nil; therefore the tribute-
Does the court only consider the violation of Article 13 of the law?
of July 1, 1856. Consequently, Mr. Calley Saint-Paul is simply sentenced to a fine of 3,000 francs.

Nassau Railways. – La Gazcité des tribunaux of May 5, 12, 15, and July 22, 1860 reported debates to which the Nassau Railways affair has gave rise, before the criminal court. Messrs. Stoc-Kes, chairman of the board, and Millaud, banker quies, who had been responsible for issuing the securities, were for-followed by a number of shareholders, under the watchful eye of tion of having published, in bad faith, false facts, in the goal of obtaining share subscriptions.

Mr. Stockes was also charged with distributing counterfeit goods dividends, breach of trust and simple bankruptcy.

THE NASSAU RAILWAYS 177

He failed to appear and was condemned, on these last three counts, to five years in prison and a 50 franc fine.

Mr. Millaud, acquitted in criminal court, was retried as civilly liable by the injured shareholders, and condemned to restitution by the 2nd chamber of the civil court of the Seine (hearing of April 20, 1861).

We reproduce part of the considerations; the facts there are presented with a clarity that leaves no room for any ambiguous:

"Whereas, by a treaty concluded between him and Stockes on January 9th-
In 1857, Millaud undertook the issuance of ten thousand coins.
tions, subject to a discount of 12 percent; that he had to re-to draft and insert at its own expense the advertisements and publicity, except the approval of Stockes; that by another treaty of March 9 following-before, having gone through with Stockes, claiming to be authorized by the council of adadministration, he acquired 4,545 shares at a price of 440 francs.
in exchange for 9,514 Millaud bonds, at the price
an exorbitant 210 francs, whereas they were of inferior value higher than 145 francs, rate of their issue;

"Given that Millaud was therefore taking a considerable interest" in the matter; that he accepted a risk capable of providing him exaggerated profits in case of success, or significant losses aunts otherwise...; that in the circulars by him written with the most skillful artistry and addressed to his clientele In particular, he asserted that the deal was excellent, that he had had studied it at length, reiterating the assurance of a treaty made with the contractors who guaranteed, from now on, a net income of 7 percent {the Nassau government does not grant-said that 4 of the hundred);

"Whereas he knowingly deceived the public and the customers" who had faith in him, presenting him to them as truly studied by him and as an excellent case on which he would not have gathered any information; that he would, in any case, committed a serious error, engaging his liability;

"With regard to Frédéric Lévy, Molines-de-Saint-Yon, de Seillières and Cheppes:

178 FINANCIAL TRIALS

"Whereas, according to the statutes, the council of adniuistra-tion is invested with the most extensive powers to manage and garlic. minister of the affairs of society; that the administrators The French had a duty to monitor the issuance of shares in France and to monitor the promises made to the public; that this the duty was all the more limited for the defendants, because these promises were made under the guarantee of their names and of their honor...

"Whereas it matters little whether or not they were the man-" subscribers' data; that if they have not been officially appointed to the positions of administrators only by a deliberation. Minutes of the meeting of the council sitting in London, dated 14 February 1R57, They cannot dispute that from the month of January they have not agent accepts the duties, since their nuins are included in the first announcements with those of foreign members; that he It is also clear that their participation was essential. Stockes ue capable of issuing, with some success, in France, the shares of a foreign railway without the guarantee of ad-French ministers honourably known to the public;

"Whereas it is undisputed, moreover, that they are not" remained uninvolved in these announcements; that Frédéric Lévy has ap-The drafting was proven in January...;

"Furthermore, given the interference of the defendants in the Nassau Railway Company was not entirely disinterested, since they received, as compensation, a sum of 30,000 francs, to be shared among themselves, and which they made in addition to allocating, some thirty, others one hundred shares, of which The payments were not required, ALTHOUGH THE INTEREST IN FUSSENT EXACTEMENT RECLAMES:

"Whereas the defendants, by allowing publication in Îles newspapers and circulars, under the guarantee of their signatures, the promise of an additional interest of 3 for 190 on the company profits, even approving the drafting of these announcements, without verifying their accuracy, where, otherwise, they are aware-metit, at least through a serious error, misled the public into error...;

THE SHAREHOLDERS' FUND 1:9

"Whereas, the defendants' fault being common, Each of them is equally responsible:

» Condemns Midliud, Frederic Levy, Molines de Saint-Yon, of Cheppes and Seillières, jointly and severally, to reimburse the demands the sums paid by them as subscribers of Nassau Railway shares, with the interest at 3 percent of the day of the application; says that the pSente condemnation will take place by deed against Millaud, and the duration is fixed of the five-year constraint. » LL

Mr. Millaud was really unlucky: if he dodged The correctional police, the civil parties, on the other hand, do not They never showed him any mercy. He is still the one who appears in the history-next page:

General Shareholders' Fund, Dissolution of society (our tperinle of Paris, "udiences des fer, 3, 4.7, Islet, March 18, 18062.) – On May 28, 1856, a company was formed between Messrs. Arnault, banker, and Jourdan, editor of the Century, Daveyrier and Moïse Millaud, already named, under the title of the General Shareholders' Fund. Its purpose was: 19. to publish and operate the Shareholders' Journal; 20. to subscribe, acquire and sell government securities, open Current accounts on securities denominations, and other operations whose prototype is located within the purview of the Crédit Mobilier. In 1862, approximately forty plaintiffs are pending before the Imperial Court to request the same objective at the first level of jurisdiction, that is to say before the commercial court. What happened then? Nothing "original" at its core, after what we've already seen produce elsewhere.

The early primitive social structures presented to the sub-four main guarantees:

The founders submitted in advance to the pros-descriptions of the law, then proposed, on companies in com-cursed;

180 FINANCIAL TRIALS

20 They pledged to pay one million in cash as contribution;

30 The company expressly prohibited all purchases at prinic and short selling;

4° The second half of the payment was only due a-near the realization of a profit of {5 percent.

All these guarantees were successively removed from shareholders, on the proposal of the managers, with authorization-tion of general assemblies composed of more or less elements less ambiguous. But the general assemblies, if unanimous-Whatever their status, they do not have the right to change the basics fundamental aspects of the association. As well as the complacency denounced to the prosecutor are not among those who can do tip the balance in favor of a favorable decision to managers, when the text of the law is ambiguous,

Article 5 of the statutes obliges the founders to pay a million; the article % allocates them 5,000 paid-up shares. The ac-only half of the funds delivered to the public were paid, 250 francs out of 50.

"They're not giving a million," exclaimed Mr. Sapey, the deputy prosecutor. Speaking of managers; but they take the shares! Then When they have taken them, they bring back some of them and say: We no longer owe you anything, and you owe us 250,000 francs. That's called compensation! EL found some votes eloquent enough to justify such acts, skilled hands to weave crowns of mu-skill and generosity.

"We shall see, gentlemen, what this generosity will bring them." cost, by reporting a weariness of shares-which did not belong to them No, they not only find themselves having paid their debt, but They remain creditors for 20,000 francs. Their first act of

from the Amail management. You who know what it cost them
This sum, you will appreciate the merit of it in its true value.
sacrifice.

"That's not all. With their way of counting, they also-" would still have been entitled, – after the second payment was made, –

THE SHAREHOLDERS' FUND IS

on five thousand shares that they claim belong to them, to 200 francs per share. They will have it by right, because the shares that The games that assigned the statuses were freed. So here they are.
thanks to the combination you know, they are free from their ap-port of 1 million, and creditors of 250,000 francs on the one hand and of 1,200,000 francs from the other. [1 It seems they had the modesty to nc not to claim this last sum.

On December 1, 1857, Mr. Millaud, who had become manager after Amail convenes a general meeting of shareholders; it requests and obtains the repeal of the last paragraph of Article 4, which prohibits the company from engaging in short selling;
He also abolished the clause that forbade the administration to tion to call the second half of the capital as long as the benefits the lists will not have reached 15 percent.

The conclusion of the Imperial Advocate is overwhelming:

"A society is being formed," said Mr. Sapey, "under the auspices of a of those men who have made advertising the instrument of their fortune, while waiting for it to become the instrument of their punishment,
This company dares to write the word "speculation" on its banner.
However, it still reserves some guarantees for its actions-
haire: the founders promise to comply with a law protective measures that the public authorities are preparing: they forbid themselves
a fundraising appeal until a benefit is confirmed fice; they make a million glitter in the eyes of greedy shareholders promised in cash to the social security fund, the million! They swindled it out tent, – pardon this ignoble word to condemn a more Disgusting indeed! – Social guarantees! They're abolishing them, thanks to...
to the ignorance or credulity of a supervisory board blind and of deceived general assemblies where accomplices, 1
A day comes when, with no respect for the law but in contempt, one install the game in the statutes, and we lose our moral sense.
to the point of not understanding that such a society is La violaliving tradition of public honesty and of the law!

"Ah! Such facts may well not fall under the categories of:"

182 FINANCIAL TRIALS

strict and severe provisions of the Penal Code; but the ju-Her ei Vile, it withers when it meets them!...

"Announce the dissolution of the Suciety, gentlemen; give to morality and to the law this satisfaction, which will be of a kind example, "

The Court, in accordance with these conclusions, pronounced:- solution of the Society.

We wouldn't understand why people would be so severely... those who were justly flogged allow themselves to reappear in the the world of business and politics, if one did not take into account of the power of the political and financial collusion of the press.

After becoming Mirès's partner, Mr. Millaud remained... that dark time; then suddenly his name was found in relief, for five or six months, in the large and the small press. What had he done? A clever publicity stunt, quite simply: he had offered to all the prominent figures in the press, from the htc- A gargantuan banquet of erasure and the arts. Two months before, as well as two or three months after, the recognition The literary world, with its astricial flair, poured forth its profusely in verse. CL in prose.

Later, Mr. Millaud bought La Presse, thus joining The liter of patron, that of owner. Today the house where the chan \illaud possesses the Petit Journal, the Solcil, lu Jour: nat politique hebdomadaire, where the advertisements slip in which would entail the conditions of surety ctde Umbre, The first part of Mr. Sapey's predictions came true: "[advertising became the instrument of my fortune,"

In August 1866, the Millaud company, faithful to tradition- family tion, puts the Petit Journal in community, To which Price? Gesture [that reveals the practical genius of the financier.

We were aware, like everyone else, says the Courrier fran- those of September 16 IR66, that Mr. Millaud put the Petit- Journal un actions, with a capital of #,000 shares, valued at 000 fr, HACHHE, and LOU HOUS said:

"If a publisher, a bookseller, a professional in the field, in short, to—I was going to buy Le Petit-Journal, including Timothée Trimm, he didn't would not offer 100,000 francs. Mr. Millaud, instead of contacting... competent buyers, offers to readers, subscribers, to ignorant people in bookstores, to take their sheet at the price of two millions, Mr. Millaud is a very clever man!...

"Two million! If the advertisement mentioned the sum of two thousand... lions, the number would make even the most foolish recoil. Also the an—The nun speaks of 4,000 shares at 500 francs each; and Mr. Millaud... said: readers who might have the idea of multiplying 4,000 shares For 500 francs, they will see that I am selling Le Petit-Journal for two million. And those calculators won't take any of my shares. But I would be unlucky if, out of my 220,000 buyers and subscribers, I couldn't find three or four thousand brainless people at I'll slip my two million shares into it, precisely because that they will not know how to count, or that they will not think to do the aforementioned multiplication, Speculation on ignorance, the ne—Carelessness and greed, it's definitely a masterstroke, and M. Millaud is a particularly skilled craftsman.

"However, we must anticipate the criticisms of the grumblers, The Holders of the 4,000 shares at 500 francs each will have a co-ownership in the land, the buildings, the model printing works, the printing presses steam-powered Le Petit Journal, to be established on rue Lafayette: a value of 1,200,000 francs. Where are the quotes, estimates, contracts? of acquisitions, especially mortgage discharges? That's what the year The nun doesn't say what she would refrain from saying, one must believe the author on his word or not to get involved in the sponsorship, The 4,000 shares at 500 francs each are trust funds. Otherwise, there is no More business opportunities, so let's take it, with our eyes closed, for 1,200,000 francs for the building and the materials to be constructed; the Petit Journal now only fetches 500,000 francs, about ten times its value, if a man as skilled as Mr. Millaud does not If he didn't succeed, we could no longer say that fortune favors the talent, hard work, genius...

"That's where we were in our reflections, and we didn't break off the..." to keep to ourselves, out of respect for the freedom of industry reactions, for the lot of supply and demand, for the

11-INCH FINANCELES

laissez-faire, laissez-passer, as economists say, when—that a provincial newspaper, the Breton Union, has brought us additional information, which we have just verified—

Laud is selling Le Petit Journal, it's 5 million. Let's write in all letters: FIVE MILLION! The correspondent of the Breton Union noted, on July 31, 1866, in the legal notices from the Monitor:

"An extract from a private agreement, dated July 93, modifying" » ficative of the statutes of a Société du Petit Journal established, under "Ja raison Millaud et Ce, by deed of September 7, 1863; this » the amending act notes, in addition to some changes in "The form of the newspaper's publication, which the Society has also..."
"Today's purpose is: firstly, this publication; secondly » the purchase and construction of a building intended for: °ntra-» lisation of the services of Le Petit Journal and to the establishment "of a printing press; finally, that the social fund consists of "exclusively the property of Le Petit Journal, as it " existed on July 4, 1866, and everything that served its "exploitation; that, moreover, nothing has been done with this fund"
"It was not valued in money, but it was divided into hard parts."
"A thousand equal fractions, called shares of interest,"

The author adds:

"That's what should have been said in the announcements intended for to be read by the public, and especially by the segment called upon to take-dre part of the show, that's what was important to explain to him to ask clearly, and what, precisely, he was not told about-in one way, »

50 + + =

"10,000 fractions "gales, without monetary value, but equal to the 4,000 shares issued at 500 francs, that makes 5 million (let's repeat in full: five million), Mr. de Girardin, at stronger than the success of La Presse, a political newspaper, whose
The classifieds page alone was worth 300,000 francs per year, Ja-but valued his paper at over a million!... »

LS VARIETIES

The subscription was going very well, when the ma-unfortunate article in the Courrier; it was the second part of Mr. Sapey's prediction: "Advertising was becoming a punishment." Shareholders wrote to me to thank me for having sienalé [a malice: they demanded the cancellation of their mations. Thus, what they could neither foresee nor prevent, and the indictments from the public prosecutor, and the admonitions of the presiding judges court teeth, and the disparaging rulings, a hundred lines of Criticism, failed in time, stopped him. Why haven't we stopped What to repeat from the beginning of this book? That the pu- Publicity alone could repress the excesses of financiers; but Free advertising, not endorsed, privileged journalism. authorized, monopolized. Mr. Mirès has just bought the Press; the transfer of ownership did not encounter any difficulties in mid. Ministry of the Interior. Mr. Mirès, as one might expect, will not do to use his newspaper for the revelation and discussion of facts like those discussed in this book.

We would limit our economic and legal studies to this point, because île The financial world was seen there from all angles, if not We were left with a trial where morals were cynically asserted. that we have only sensed, glimpsed in the previous narratives; here we encounter an accumulation of such procedures that the public prosecutor's office itself could not find any evidence against them qualification. Therefore, the debates did not cross the line. initis of a civil auction. It seems that the enormity of the The confession had caused the Imperial Advocate to back down. Before the enumeration- lion and [an attempt to justify the exploits that we will After reading, there is no longer any doubt about the existence of the two morals. The financial public is completely outside of the surrounding society. We don't judge such a world: We either endure it or we eliminate it.

| t

186 FINANCIAL TRIALS

MARSEILLE PORTS COMPANY
FUSION AVEC LA COMPAGNIE IMMOBILIÈRE, E1C.

(Civil trial, Imperial Court of Paris, December 1864 and January 181.)

Several points should be noted regarding this trial: Pre- Island
The first thing is that all the newspapers published it. Up until then, when it came to the BIG FINANCIERS, the mu- pact
The antagonism between the press and high finance, denounced to the Corps legislative session of 18614, held its pro- gram ct its commitments. The judicial searches, of a very limited advertising, were the only ones to record scar- Daleuse maneuvers. This time, the political newspapers at Big draws have joined in. Could this be a sign of the the determining motive would have nothing to do with the love of public good. Steps were reportedly taken with the the most renowned journalists, in order to encourage them to report Taking this into account: all would have recovered, except one a beginner, the National Future, which was still only at its Sixth number. The newcomer's drawing success, consequently This advertisement would have worried his elders, firstly as immediate sale, then as a position taken outside of certain financial cabals. A political leaflet, breaking with the tradition of guilty complacency, responded such-addressed a need of the time, that it would have been dangerous to to leave it this exclusive character: the bodies accredited to the-would have seen their loyal followers desert in favor of the latest arrival. Therefore, they all vied with one another in accuracy and speed. May this precedent, whatever one may think of the morality motives and financial connections of the future national, to have a sequel and to set a precedent, The spirit of denigration-ment between competitors who are jealous more than once served the cause of justice.

Year

FUSION PES PORTS OF MARSEILLE 17

The final point, the very subject of the trial, is [in a way] acknowledged by which large companies conduct themselves: the good pleasure and raison d'état transported from politics into the world of commercial companies. If we were to write a memory for the applicants, we would not have, like Mr. Grand-Mauche de Beaulieu, to condemn such methods and to to demand justice; but, we repeat once again, We are conducting a study of the morals of high finance and the island. principle of the credit granted. While sharing the holy indignation of the eloquent defender and of Mr. lavocrat wénéral against the violation of the law, we will be forced to agree sometimes with his opponents than given a certain milicu, social well-being takes precedence over procedural considerations. harsh. Like that Roman dictator who was accused of excesses, Messrs. Péreire, Crochard, de Chaumont-Quittry and consorts have the right to reply: – We saved the pa-sorting. – At what price? – That's what the... will reveal. debates. – For how long? – It's still secret: of the future.

Statement of the trial, – On October 5, 186?, the assembly General meeting of shareholders of the Ports of Marseille, convened Extraordinarily, voted to accept a provisional treaty generals and the Imperial Street of Marseille, past the 22nd sop-previous member between Mr. Émile Péreire and the Marquis of Chaumont-Quittry and Crochard, one president, the other member-bre of the Ports Administration Council, La décret iapéciit of June 1, 1863 authorized the constitution of the Society [rn-movable property, resulting from this merger, into a public limited company, at canital of 85 billion,

A number of shareholders of the Ports of Marseille, M, Godde, Lemerte, Lefebvre and Chopelet, oi requested against Tr Compagnie repaire and MN, Pércire, de Ghaumont-Quitirs and Crochird, fa matt de cette factor, based on the irregular composition of Fassembliec who had stolen it, and as was, the said merger, contrary to the statutes, as exceeding the limits set for voting, and as constituting a lesion of more than seven-twelfths,

158 FINANCIAL TRIALS

The Civil Court of the Seine (Third Chamber) rejected the said request by order of May 13, 1864. The plaintiffs have in-appeal rejected.

Their lawyer, Mr. Grandimanche de Beaulieu, made an exposition of the matter so clear, so precise, that we will simply state it to quote verbatim the essential parts relevant to our topic, in interspersing it with a few explanatory headings. That readers do not are not deterred by the length of the plea: there is nothing to it. more instructive in the annals of justice. We leave the The defender has spoken:

The preliminaries of a general assembly of shareholders. – “I am now entering the first part of my discussion, the composition of the assembly. On this point, I-I unsuccessfully requested this in the first instance, and I have new calf, without further success, requested from the Court, which joined the in- They essentially ordered, beforehand, that I be given communication of attendance lists and securities deposit shareholders who made up the assembly of October 25, 167. I reiterate my conclusions; it is my right and my duty. See, I will never accept that a majority can say to a minority: No, we impose our will on you because we we are more numerous than you, without the minority having the right to know, to count, to discuss this majority.

"Before entering the assembly to study its composition-tion, I find in the very method of summons a pre-

Sex shares must be filed. According to the articles of association, it appeared in the newspapers a notice worded as follows: "The titles will be re-" "Us every day except holidays," – you'll see the surprise and the advantage that was derived from it – "from ten o'clock in the morning to two "Heuics, from Monday, October 6th to Saturday, October 1st."

The only downside was that the 19th was a Sunday.
My God! We made a mistake, that's all. Such an error in a letter touching on our relations of humankind in this world is few important; but when one invites, through the newspapers, actionnaires to come to a general meeting whose purpose is to to have absolute control over their property; that the con- The essential step in drafting the statutes is to file its securities, which one He gives her fifteen days and only three or four hours per I cannot accept that we are not taking the time to do this. to consult the calendar, and to confuse Saturday with on Sunday, the 8th with the 19th: so that, on Sunday the 19th Since it's a public holiday, we send away the unfriendly shareholders who... presented based on the notice published in the newspapers, I ad- put even less than in the space of twenty days we are not warned of the error and that it is not corrected by means of the advertisement.

MERGER OF THE PORTS OF MARSEILLE 189

"Let's see what advantage has been gained from this supposed error."
The fourteenth day of the deposit, it was Saturday, a Mr. Lasorne, A stockbroker in Douai introduced himself; it was nearly three o'clock. We knew that one was a bad thinker; we had fears. Small entrances for friends, he entered through the main gate. They told him: – It's three o'clock, the office is closed, – This It's only Island 1S, I'll come back tomorrow the 19th. – Oh! no, tomorrow It's Sunday; haven't you noticed, we don't receive the liters that Islands days or holidays. Mr. Lasorne does not seem very- convinced of this order of ideas which consists of playing on the word Not on holidays, he gets angry; we don't like the noise in this house And for good reason; so we're going to ask for orders, and we're giving them to him. a card bearing the number 392.

"A Mr. Halbronn also found the offices closed;
He turned to the courts and requested, in summary proceedings, to be... authorized to deposit his securities. The president issues an order, October 23, under which Mr. Halbronn will be included in the list; the card issued to him bears the number 43. – Now, as from 5722 to 335 11 y to 12 numbers, we derive this conclusion: that twelve people have been introduced since the number 22, and that Mr. Halbrunu, by summary order, has

I had number 35.

190 FINANCIAL TRIALS

A Norman, a Norman and a half. – "the second
The fact that I submitted myself to the first judges and that you su-dishes, gentlemen, is this one, 1] there was in the middle of crtte as.
assemblage, whose singular physio- you will see shortly nomy, a man who, placed in the center, expressed his admiration, his enthusiasm, through shouts, through signs so de-unaware that he had attracted the attention of the assistants. | va men who do well to seek the half-day; there were around him a group of satisfied people whom he seemed to know-to lead with the staff of command, The attention of an act-
The woman is attracted to this character. – But it's J.... –
No, J... has never owned any shares in his life! – However Him. FT, there was no mistaking it, it was broad daylight. It-was J...

"Now, that's what J... was like. I don't want to say anything about the man,"
I hardly want to pronounce names, but anyway, it has to be said that I pronounce that one, he was a business agent, an orator customary at these assemblies, called Pavant-veille by dispatch telegraph from Nantes to make the merger, – It is one of the twelve that I was talking about earlier.

"The shareholder makes the very simple argument that St. John..."
being part of the assembly means that he must have previously deposited to take action, and that this is the case of having it executed against ri a judgment thus far obtained in vain, 1 court at his Bailiff Legendre, and asks him to farm opnoïttion eur fes actions of J.., The bailiff forms immediate opposition at Mr. Bignon's name, rue du Cherche, 68, for 2,300 francs.
amount of a judgment that was far too often left unexecuted, -- In the evening
Even the bailiff receives a visit from Messrs. ..., who give for address 358 rue Saint-Fonore – it was a false address, – and who says he comes on behalf of Mr. Péreire, – How many
Is it due? – 2,300 plus fees. – Here they are. – And the bailiff.
written in his register: "Received from Mr. Émile Pe.- » reire, ef, »

"The bailiff had several clients, being an intelligent man,"
He said to himself: Since we pay, let's look after the interests of my comments.
mettanuts. D will immediately form a second opposite

Lion, on behalf of Mr. Teinturier, 55 rue du Cherche-aïdi, for 509 fr. In the evening, 11 receives a visit from Mr. B..., administrator Ports of Marseille. – How much is owed? – 50 francs, – The Here it is, – And the bailiff writes again: "Received from "Mr. Emile Péreire, etc."

"Just as Mr. B... was about to leave, the bailiff..."
A well-bred man said to him: "Perhaps you are very well-off."
Cupped. I wouldn't want to bother you a third time;
While you were here, one of my clerks went to train
One last objection; pay immediately, this will save you from to come back, – was that the last one? – Yes. – How many? – It's at Mr. Barthelemy, postmaster at Bondy, is only for 400 francs – And for the third time the bailiff writes: "Received "In the name of Mr. Péreire and company, etc."

"It seems pointless to draw a conclusion. Generally,
The one who pays the amount of the objections is the owner shares.

Gron words and gronsen things, – ("I arrive at the third-the sixth fact that I submitted to the first judges, Celut-Ft is not arrived in Ma Connalssanee only twenty-four hours ago
Before the initial hearings, I had to plead for Count de Lanbespin; I was supposed to have the 521 shares of which had a deposit agreement, I thought that when one had an aete
For the deposit, a receipt, all you had to do was present yourself, as d The Bank, unless you come back the next day to collect, Mr. de Laubespain, being a gentleman, believed it too.
At the checkout, he presented his receipt and claimed his aetions; on the Island, Grand emotion;, where one goes from office to office, and finally one arrives until...
A. Pereire, the shares were no longer there!

"As for me, I was pretty sure they weren't there anymore, I had"
in the hand, the receipt of M, de Lanbespin, which por-tait: "Deposit of 521 shares, of [SOU at INR 000 and of 2206
» of 2,016, » and in the right hand, 5 actions bearing the numeros ÎS,1:~, LS ho and LS, 59; these three actions were therefore included in the category of those that had been filed,

192 FINANCIAL TRIALS

– I drew this rather logical conclusion from it, that they had stolen, and, indeed, THEY HAD BEEN STOLEN.

"Graud, I'm so excited, I said it: they call a man I don't know
I didn't want to pronounce the name at first instance, I didn't pro-

world now, before the court, my adversaries, who were perpetually amazed, wanted at all
No matter how much I say it, they knew better than I did; the Court will probably know: he was the Secretary General of the Society.

$

This gentleman is crying, lamenting, declaring himself the author of the detour-- nement, moreover without surprise or anger on the part of the leaders, who wisely remain silent. 11 had no very-
With good examples right in front of him, he had found 521 shares to his suitability; he had laid his hand on::18. Finally, these actions were not there were more, we recognize that theft, - there is no other expression, - had taken place three months before the assembly of October 20, 4862.

"Who stole those shares? I only have one thing to say. He
There was a chest, and on that chest were three locks and three keys;
None of these locks and none of these keys resembled the other; three different keys were needed to open the three locks different rural areas. Mr. de Chaumout-Quittry had a key,
Mr. Crochard had another one, MX.. had the third,
And the securities have been released! Do you share the responsibility?
Safety, that doesn't matter to me; but what is certain is that the titles were no longer there.

"The next day, at the hearing, I presented my conclusions and I..."
This new fact, it was sufficient. Of 316 forming the ma-Jorite, remove 521, there wasn't much left. With that, the tribunal is singularly moved. The opponents, after having been Surprised, they reply, "Well! That's true!" I believe it.

Well, I had the proof in my hand.

"Furthermore, since the initial pleadings, a Judgment of the 1st Chamber, dated last August, notes
the date of the diversion, a date prior to the meeting of October 25th
In October 1862, and condemned E. Péreire as civilly responsible.

fr

FUNION DES PORTS DEF MARSEILLE Es

ment, to return the price to Mr. de Laubespín. The fact is There's nothing more to discuss.

"There is an even more serious matter. I just said that these actions had been diverted. How is it that, diversion-born before the assembly of October 486?, on October 29th
the bank pays the interest on these same shares to Mr. de Laubes-Pin? I don't understand, I don't want to understand: it me
It seems difficult to detach the share coupons that do not exist.
Furthermore, here is the receipt: "Receipt from the Limited Company"
"of the Ports of Marseille, on behalf of Mr. de Laubespín," 7,648 francs for the payment of the sixth coupon. Signed: The » Director of the Sub-Counter of Industry and Commerce.
"October 29, 1862."

"It is proven that the 521 stolen shares were listed in the As-appeared and voted in one direction, while the owner voted in another, - Now, of a majority of 316, removing 521,
How much is left?

Do I need to focus on what these 521 actions entail?
did they vote? By the mere fact that they were diverted, the hands in which they are do not inspire my confidence immoderate! The court will see why. One can be, it is true, bearer in the best faith of the world of stolen shares; but When I explain why they were stolen, the court will see where They have passed. It is enough for the court to note: "There is 521 shares were entered into the meeting and originated from of a diversion; they couldn't get in, » so that I
You are justified in concluding: The ballot was flawed: of 316, I have the right to withdraw 521.

"Note, gentlemen, the following fact noted by the tribune-" final judgment of first instance, and this appears to be the refutation completeness of his judgment, whatever the number of actions of which one was a carrier, one could not be entitled to more than 10, vote, but 5 shares entitled the holder to one vote. 521 shares in the hands of Mr. de Laubespín, who voted with his receipt, or with 521 shares, which is the same thing, it was 10 votes only: but 521 shares targeted in 104 hands to third-party shareholders, at a rate of [number] shares per vote, gave 104 votes, 10 of which weigh as much as 104 on the panel of a Balance? There's no point in insisting further.

"Thus, while M. de Laubhespin arrived with his receipt-pissed off by 521 actions, saying no by 10 votes: these same 521 shares, divided among other hands, came to say yes to 10 votes.

"The facts that I proved or that I articulated at The first judgments were few in number; but their gravity was not not escaped the first judges; they noted it at each instant in their judgment, and I can tell you that, under this Report again, their emotion was great. Only 115 have thought that this set of facts was not complete enough, did not weigh enough in the balance of Justice for the nullity of the assembly's vote. I believe that the first judges at-could have drawn a firmer conclusion from their premises, and that, after having uncovered the fraud, here again they should have to go all the way, and break the act thus corrupted.

"If you only knew, gentlemen, the trouble a litigant goes through..." finding evidence, especially in a trial where high-ranking people, and which focuses on a very important joint-Serious! - 11 is addressed to everyone, left, right; cha-The ass knows something, but everyone refers it to their neighbor. dislikes putting himself in the hot seat and giving attestations ions; we don't like him to serve as a witness; we like nothing less than to share the fate of those who are fighting. So that No matter what we did, we were very embarrassed, Yet, "Work force, we had achieved something.

"We learned of the J... incident from the bailiff Legendre," and thanks to his intelligence. Laubespain's actions, we have seen we only found out the day before the hearing, and we didn't expect it. We hardly know. The other facts were not yet sufficiently proven. Since the judgment, we have been, I won't say more, um- But in the end I think we did better, and I learn-brings to court today elements which, if they could being produced in court would have singularly altered its Decision: These are far more serious, and we will not

MERGER OF THE PORTS OF MARSEILLE 195

will not discuss, unless one wants to discuss the light of the

The cream of the crop at a shareholders' meeting,
—"I provide irrefutable, material proof that nine!"
The people whose names I'm giving were fake shareholders.
(names follow), By adding the actions of MJ., I finds that these fraudulent actions numbered 57;
I deduct these 287 from 346, leaving 29. One could say that there are still a useful majority; but we will find others, be sure They are certain; we have already reported them.

"How do I have this proof? Ah! I admit that it wasn't..."
It's easy to get, but here's how we did it.
On November 2, 1864, a bailiff issued a summons.
tion to a Mr. T..., I only read that one, the others are cou-cues in roughly the same terms: "...To have imme-
"immediately to declare to me if the 40 shares filed in his "Name, on October 18, 18672, for the general assembly of "October 25, 1862, were his property; otherwise, who...they...
"asked for him; if he did not vote for the merger; if he did not
"was not called to the assembly solely for that purpose, and if he
"He didn't attend out of mere complacency," MT... re-laid:

"19 That the 40 shares filed in his name on October 18
» 1862 for the aforementioned general assembly did not belong to him
» not; that they had been handed over and deposited by X..., mem-
"member of the board of directors, with a recommendation of » vote for the merger of the Ports of Marseille with the Compa-» Real Estate Management; that out of courtesy, to be agreeable to
"MX., and at the latter's request, he voted for the fu"sion, but that he has never owned said shares"
"ions."

"I don't need to point out to the court that each of those who responded to our demands could be prosecuted by us in criminal court: the bailiff has present to offenders, a summons to police correctional facilities

106 FINANCIAL MINUTES

with one hand, a summons to answer with the other; he
He told them to choose, and they chose.

"Îlya,ence, which concerns one of them, M, D..., a fact which must be brought to the attention of the court. MD.. is in charge chief at the N... toll office, and one of his sons was employed by the

He was lying, but here's what he said:

"I, the undersigned, declare that I attended and voted at the assembly"
"General of the Ports of Marseille, dated October 25, 1862, with a » entry card representing 40 actions that were not mine
"ownership, having never been a shareholder of the Ports, and who "had been filed in my name by the board of directors-
"Tration, my presence having been requested as a service"
"To vote for the merger."

"After responding in this way, MD... regretted it. He wrote First a letter, and then he filed a complaint. At the letter went unanswered; to the complaint, the prosecutor impe-Rial took it upon himself to answer. The magistrate gave a lesson moralizing to this gentleman, who didn't understand that his place would be in the correctional police. He complains about the way in which one made his certificate and threatened to tell the judge, if he is called, all the mistakes that occurred during the composition of the association general appearance.

M, THE FIRST PRESIDENT & Âfe Grandmanche: How Do you have this part?

Mr. Granpuancne: I will state this to the court immediately: I have said that a misappropriation had taken place of Mr. de's shares Laubespain; I spoke of a box with three locks and three different keys; one of the locks was at the disposal of the secreditor general, MX., who is therefore one of the three authors of this act. We had the right to complain regularly-lirigement. It agreed to these gentlemen of the board of directors-
The Port authorities were trying to suppress the matter between themselves, and there were Reasons for that. But if we had complained, we would have!
The court understands, we didn't do it, but we have imposed our will. I say we, I should say my clients.
Our aim was to have the documents in the hands of Mr. X...,

MERGER OF THE PORTS OF MARSEILLE 197

Secretary General of the Society, and we have them. Here they are.
In my hands, there are so many serious ones, I so compromising things that, as for me, I do not recognize in myself
The right to read them. I discussed it with my teachers and elders,
I approached the most loyal among them, and one of them is very close to me right now. Everyone told me that I I could read everything that is useful to the truth, well! I didn't.
I won't. For me, there's a kind of co-property between the one who writes them and the one who receives them. A
In my opinion, a letter is a kind of written confidence that...
They are sent to both correspondents. My clients are neither one nor the other.

"I confess that I find it singularly repugnant to come and read at the
The letters in question are difficult to read alone;
I started by sharing them with my colleague, who then... made them all copy, because at that moment there was unrest in my mind on how I should use them. Having com-
I'll leave the communications in my file; you'll see them if you
If you wish, I say that in the presence of these letters the discussion is Once finished, you will know what it costs to buy a conscience.
and the share that each person received from our spoils,

"I will continue, but yes, without regard for a scruple of Awareness, perhaps exaggerated, I am being urged to read, I will read.
without worrying about the scandal.

"I was saying that there was now an indisputable fact,
that of 287 shares fraudulently entered at the meeting Distracting from the 346 of the majority, 29 remain. If the court still has
If in doubt, I ask him to allow us to do, by-
The court will seek and, through witnesses, proof of these facts. If the court deems
It is necessary to order the investigation; she will see many others like it.
We didn't want to name names, but it will be necessary.
so that we know them.

"Alongside these men who illegitimately became part of
of the assembly and who were forced to confess, it is one whose response to our summons revealed such a fact-It's so serious that I hardly dare speak about it. "Here is the response given by a bailiff... at the summons of the bailiff: a few days

17.

198 FINANCIAL TRIALS

before October 25, 1862, MX., member of the board of directors Nistration, of which Th... was the supplier, offered to do so.
to represent 20 shares at a shareholders' meeting
Ports of Marseille: from October 20 to 23, 1862, the same board member came again lt to request that he be represented for a similar quantity of shares at a another meeting that was to take place on the 25th of the same month. He a card was given to him for this purpose; but on the morning of the 25th, he said to MX., returning his card, that his mother having died at Nauteuil-sur-Marne, he could not attend this meeting.
In fact, he did not attend, having gone to Nanteuil; he did not remember
He doesn't know if he signed the card in question, and he doesn't know who has filed these actions in his name and what was the true purpose of them?
owner; in any case, he was unable to vote for or against the merger.

"Now, I take the list that was given to me, and I see..."
in full the signature of Th.,! This same Th...., who...
Clare was unable to attend the assembly, as her mother had died.
the day before, and having returned to MX, the card that he had
The submission to be included there, this same Th... is included there.

"I can tell you how we did it. We were embarrassed—"
Once settled, these twenty shares were available, and one counted close: we knew what opposition there would be in the assembly.
An employee was told: Sign here. And he signed... 1l is There's no need to qualify this fact; I articulate it in my conclusions.
And I demand proof of it.

"As the Court can see, I have proven, with evidence in hand, the fraudulent composition of the assembly. If I could have brought This evidence was presented to the initial judges, who were already moved by the facts.
that I was establishing, I believe the court would have singularly modified its sentence. That the Court will consider the evidence as done, or, if she believes it to be doubtful, she will order an investigation.
That's all I ask; the proof will be abundant. In any case
In this case, proven or probable, I will be agreed that this is perfect.
relevant and admissible.

"I come now to the third set of facts; these are the conclusions—" additional information that I had the honor of submitting to the Court

MERGER OF THE PORTS OF MARSEILLE 190

three weeks ago. Or issued a summons to ML..., an employee of Crédit Mobilier, in the terms known to the court, and here is the response from this employee of T. Pereire;

» 10 The 20 shares filed in its new form: for the assembly
general of the Ports of Marseille, were not his property they had been dropped off for him by someone from the administration administrative, he does not know who the true owner was;
90 he voted for the merger of the said Company with the Company real estate; he was called to the meeting only in the but to vote for this merger. – He did these things purely for the sake of... pleasure and as if being morally and financially compelled to do so he lies because of his position at the time, and, without wanting to name them, he knows many other people who have acted like him and under the same influence,

"That one talks more than the others, in an investigation he would probably say some very instructive things, that's all.
ML... with 20 shares.

"Another summons was sent to a Mr. C..., equal-Péire's employee, who represented 40 shares, 1! has de-clarified that he was not the owner of the 40 shares with which He voted, while pre-prepared slips were being passed around. prepared for the office employees of which he was a part; that there was no saw no problem with this, given that he had done it and seen it done. several times... and that many other employees besides him have did the same thing that day.

"Count, gentlemen, 20 and 40 make 60, and you have to add the 20 shares voted under the name Th...: that makes 80 in total which must be subtracted from 29. - What remains? I had reduced to 29 the alleged majority of 316. If I deduct these further 80 shares, 51 minority shares remain. That's what has become of... this majority.

"Besides these facts, gentlemen, there are others that I haven't..." This is what I will articulate in my additional conclusions. Those, I don't have absolute proof of that; but I have something which is very similar. In this regard, I will only read My additional conclusions; this reading seems to me to tellu-

t

200 FINANCIAL TRIALS

This edifying situation, which I believe requires no further addition, is as follows: Our joint is designed as follows:

The administrators' cake.- "First fact, - F1 July 1862, - contrary to the preamble of the treaty provi-evening of the Ja fusion attacked, it is Émile Péreire, by the inter-mediator of two people, who made openings in Cro-chard, annuity receiver, administrator of the Society of Ports of Marseille, for the merger of the assets of the said Company with the Imperial Street, in Marseille,

These openings remained without result, and Crochard rc-Fusa, because Émile Péreire formally laid down the condition not to retain him as a member of the board of directors tration of the new projected Society, and that Crochard trou-had this condition which was harmful to him personally,

"Second fact. - In August 1862, after the provisional convention" reserve granted to Hardon by the directors of Ja Société Ports of Marseille, new proposals in the same Meanings were made to Crochard, The first condition of Crochard was that he would be part of the board of directors of the Merged company, At his written request, Émile Péreire gave his support by saying: "I accept your help: "You are one of us." Upon hearing this, Crochard announced-said, in September 1862, the sale of his business practice for to have all the time and freedom one could want,

"At the same time, Crochard and Chaumont-Quittry have put in touch with Emile Péreire and agreed to a merger-connecting the Ports of Marseille with the Imperial Street, the Company real estate company of Paris and the General Stores Company.

"Sefait," Crochard followed the negotiation. Péreire l'entratna by guaranteeing him considerable personal advantages.

"Isaac Péreire, acting for him and his brother, under the eyes de Crochard and a third party, said and wrote an indicative note tive of the personal benefits promised to Crochard,

"They consisted of the promise to allocate to the latter,

MERGER OF THE PORTS OF MARSEILLE 0!

as payment for his assistance, a thousand shares of the new New company guaranteed at 700 francs, a thousand other assets at par, either 500 francs, and one thousand shares of the Real Estate Company, called Rivoli, at 200 francs. – In addition, a new promise was made to him made by appointing him administrator of the future Company,

"Apart from these advantages, all personal to Crochard, he It was stipulated that Mr. Péreire would give a thousand guaranteed shares to 700 francs and a thousand shares at par, i.e., at 500 francs, to be re-parties between various people

"That's done," – A few days later, Chaumont-Quittry, apprenant de Crochard himself the particular advantages that one ini had consented, wanted, in his capacity as president of the con-administrative body (of which Crochard was simply a member), to obtain from Péreire superior personal advantages of a-edge, and then at least equivalent. Péreire refused, and pen-for several days all negotiations relating to the merger were broken.

offered Chaumont-Quittry a thousand guaranteed shares tied to 700 francs on those belonging to him, to him [personal bag-insurance was also given to Chaumont-Quittry.
_ that he would be appointed administrator of the Compagnie nouvelle. Chaumont-Quittry refused this offer as it was insufficient. for him, in terms that will be established by witnesses.

"I did it." – A few days later, Crochard and Chaumont Quittry, in a one-on-one conversation with a third party, in a Credit office furniture, caused this third party to relinquish it, in favor of Chaumont-Quittry, 1,300 or 1,700 shares out of the 3,000 shares issued that this third party was to receive as the price for the redemption of his treaty management. Subject to this particular abandonment in Chaumont-Quittry, this The latter accepted the proposal that had been made to him by Isaac Perish.

"Does it. – The provisional treaty was signed on September 22nd." in 1862. Crochard and Chaumont-Quittry consented to the transmission of the Ports of Marseille property to Mike Pércire, acting in these various capacities, at the same price, in 1869, as this property had cost in 1556 – whereas a capital gain A huge amount of land had been acquired by the Islands from this Society. added value that the Council of State itself assessed as early as 1854, to the net figure of 9 million, and which had, without a doubt, considerably increased since that time

20? FINANCIAL TRIALS

"On the other hand, the same Crochard and Chaumont-Quittry," personally satisfied by particular advantages: staggering, and without regard for the certain added value of the land. of the Ports of Marseille, readily agreed that Mr. Péreire contributed to the merged company the buildings of the an-old Paris real estate company, with a market value obviously lower than their cost price, due to their extraordinary and considerable importance and their re-Venus minis, for a price double their original value, either with a capital gain or increase of nearly 25 million.

"Done. – From September 22, 1862, the day of the signing of the provisional treaty of the merger, dated October 25, 1862, the date of the general assembly that was to ratify this treaty, Crochard, Chaumont-Quittry and Péreire, with varying interests in the same but, they consulted with each other to work in an infallible manner to the success of their projects – on the one hand, by preparing the

"the assembly;" – and on the other hand, by seeking to silence the absolute opposition of the former manager of the Port Authority Marseille was supposed to do: to the planned merger.

"I do," Crochard was an administrator of the Society of Ports of Marseille, and, moreover, he was a personal owner of approximately 1,200 or 1,400 shares of this Company: finally, he had, Corme, a rent collector, used his clients' money to the acquisition of more than 3,000 shares, of which Mr. Péreire the sa- had depository, a circumstance which was even more than once in- summoned to promote Crochard's credit and services in the Marseille Ports Company,

"This large number of shares served – initially, for 50, to

MERGER OF THE PORTS OF MARSEILLE (15

to form the figure of shares filed under the name of the svere- General secretary of the Society: – then, for more than 3,000, to the composition of lists of fief shareholders on which In the front line were nearly one hundred of Mr. Pé-'s employees reire, which employed these lists, were handed over to Crochard.

The following is a list of names of all the fictitious shareholders, with names, first names, qualities, as well as the number of votes at- allocated to each one. Mr. J..., the man with three opposing views- tions, was the head of the clique, in charge of warming up and removing the case. One of the extras, Mr. F..., attached to the Com- "Compagnie Transatlantique," he exclaimed, in his enthusiasm: We just won 20 million from Mr. Péreire, we're there We were all there; we crushed the Ports' shareholders.

The statement of MD... employee on the Chemin du Midi, This deserves to be reported:

» He verbally stated, in front of witnesses, that the actions with whom he had attended and voted, at the assembly of October 25th in 1862, did not belong to him; that which had been given to him, like his fellow office workers, an entry card for the assembly; that it was a constant practice at Crédit Mobilier; that employees of this institution, some found agreeable- It was difficult to have the day off at three o'clock on the day of the assemblies. rallies, and the others accomplished this mission, despite their scruples, as if morally forced and constrained by their si- luation; that he had not wanted to respond to the summons by reasons of deference towards his former superiors, not wanting saying he was ready to confess everything if others did the same,

Mr. Grandmanche summarizes the fraudulent composition as follows from the assembly:

"The list of employees of Pervicre, in northern Spain,
"We have 530 acquisitions; the first list of Péreire's employees, in northern and southern Spain, 685; the last-minute list of

04 FINANCIAL TRIALS

Extras: Pérerre and Chaumout. Quitttry, 500; various named individuals, 017, = TOTAL: 3,852 shares.

"This number does not include many other actions placed under the name of neighbors or friends of Crochard or of his brother-in-law, – which neighbors, friends or acquaintances, had no shares in their possession or did not possess any less than was fictitiously attributed to them, |

"Without even taking into account this overabundance of action—" fraudulently introduced shares, the 3,852 shares above suffice, for – once deducted from the 9,810 which were cent-representatives at the assembly of October 25, 1862–no more to allow to subsist only a real representation at the mazsimaumn of 5,958 shares.

"However, as Article 30 of the statutes requires, for mergers, a general assembly bringing together at least one-fifth of the actions issued, – in this case, 6,000 out of 30,000, – the deliberation– The ration of October 25, 1862, would, by that same fact, be invalidated.

The quarrel over the spoils – "299%, fact – One a powerful opposition was forming, and at the head of the opposition M. Mirès was at the merger. There was great fear among Péreire, and immediate steps were taken to buy the silence of this dangerous adversary.

"At a previous general meeting of shareholders" of the Société des Ports de Marseille, a formal mission had been given to the directors of said Company "to continue
"in court, the rectification of the facts attributable to Mr."
"Mirès."

"As a forced consequence, the provisional treaty of September 22nd" tembre had expressly reserved for shareholders, against an increase of 5 million.

"One of the current directors of Ja Compagnie immo-Billière was charged, both in the name of Péreire and in the name of the administrators of the Société des Ports de Marseille, to offer to BE. Mirès: "to have the assembly vote on the approval of "His actions and management, which would nullify any claim-

MERGER OF THE PORTS OF MARSEILLE 205

s tion, if he wanted to suggest to me make no opposition to Hi
"Merger."

"306 fact. - Despite all the measures taken for the composition and leadership of the assembly, the majority was not than 316 shares; and, to buy the retirement of some opponents of the merger who had appealed to the council of the State, and before the courts, in order to prevent or to cancel the merger as tainted by fraud and new-new offers emanating from Péreire were added to those made before the assembly,

As for the actions of these opponents, they were paid for.
by Péreire, under the cover of R... de L..., to whom he gave a a special letter of guarantee for this purpose, at a rate of 900 francs, per action, on the date of July 1, 1863, in a bond of 4,080,000 fr.
on the Bank of France, handed over to one of them,

"Mr. Péreire knew this share buyback so well, effective-killed for him, that at the last assembly of the Immovable property, one of the former opponents, now satisfied, having per-
I tried to elicit some explanations about the situation of the-
Mr. Péreire, who was at the aforementioned company, could not restrain himself and called personally and directly, by criticizing him for speaking-from the decline in the shares of the former Société des Ports de Marseille, when his opponent had been paid 900 francs for his shares.
to remove any obstacle to the merger.

"As for the 5 million increase, representing by Each share of Ports receives a bonus of 166 francs 66 centimes, on the one hand, Crochard relinquished the benefit of a judgment that condemned Mirès to pay him his proportional share in this increase;
On the other hand, Chaumont-Quittry intervened before the Court in his capacity as chairman of the board of directors represented-
The Port Authority has abandoned its intervention; and Finally, Péreire refused and continues to refuse to the former shareholders Ports of Marseille, which exchanged their titles for shares of the new real estate company, by any means of

to this bonus of 166 francs, 66 centimes, for each of their shares.

18

106 FINANCIAL TRIALS

"3. The fact. – All the promises made to Crochard, Chaumont-Quittry and others who helped with the merger, were not painted carried out before the first general meeting of shareholders of the merged real estate company, dated August 2, 1863. in order to secure the cooperation of these same people, including Several were listed without owning any shares, with almost all the same employees who were part of the composition of the as-meeting of October 25, 1862.

"It was only after this meeting that Messrs. Péreire contributed to the settlement of accounts. 11 was handed over to Crochard and in Chaumont-Quittry the equivalent in cash of the shares to them personally promised, The shares allocated to their requests were initially refused, on the pretext that they were duplication with those given at Chaumont-Quittry; then They were partially delivered to the claimants.

"32nd fact. – At the same time that Péreire was stifling all opposition; when he told all interested islands, especially to Chaumont-Quittry, Crochard and others, that he would not give to one of the shares of his new company below 1,000 or 1,100 francs; while he was urging Crochard to press the 6-exchange of securities of its clients, holders of shares of the former: companies, against those of the new society, this exchange, following the claims of Péreire, serving as ratification of the merger, – Péreire formed a partnership with Crochard on May 22, 1863. convention called union to operate, through daily purchases diens on the Stock Exchange, the rise continues, apparently, on 1c shares of the Société immobilière et des Ports de Marseille, by the ministry of the usual stockbroker of Crédit Mobilier, hitherto unknown to Crochard.

"He later learned that Péreire was actually selling secretly all the shares he had bought before the fusion, to make the Rivoli shares rise and make them Going up from LIU to 255 francs in a few months.

"Although this union resulted only in the ruin of the public shareholder, having emptied the excess portfolio of Pereire at inflated prices and now fallen by nearly half, and then the particular ruin of Crochard, in the compromising in the most disastrous way, it is not less true than this union, was then presented to Crochard comr: "a source of new personal advantages, such as a price supplement for its active cooperation in the merger,

"Here is Particulation:"

"I would add that in the sharing of the money, there is a very important fact:—" Significantly, MB, one of the most active authors in this market, that the Gour knows, dared to summon Mr. Péreire to pay 81,219 fr., representing his share of the prize promised by Péreire. On July 27, the court ordered an interrogation-gatoire, On the day of the interrogation, no one showed up; But the payment was made that same day. That's all. I have something to say about it.

"When I wrote this account of facts which you I just heard the reading, I was almost frightened; I didn't I could only believe in their existence when they were placed in my hands pieces such that it was no longer possible for me to doubt one instant. The relevance, the admissibility of this articulation, this It would tire your attention to discuss them; it's a It is simply monstrous to see, not only— These insignificant people who took part in this sad farce, but also to see flocking in legions, islands, chiefs of the coast— leading the charge were the 23 employees of the Compagnie du Nord. Spain for 920 shares, the 35 employees of the South for 1,145 shares, the 23 employees of the Compagnie Trausatlantique for 650, and finally those of Crédit Mobilier, each contributing its contingent in this immense fraud, at the head of which Find the head of these four companies! That hurts.

The moral of the incident — "And look, I have to Let me tell you, certainly, this secret agreement between Messrs. Péreire and Chau-Mont-Quittry and Crochard, dividing the spoils in advance from the Marseille Port Authority, coldly combining this shameful assembly that must sanction their market, All this raises awareness; but there is something that

20: FINANCIAL TRIALS

I find it even worse. They have in their many s0-companies employ a mass of workers, mostly people without wealth, having wives and children. These employees live solely off their own resources.

is lost; and they abuse this omnipotence of money to make these unfortunate people—perhaps honest ones—the forced accomplices in a fraud that the law calls a crime, and the moral sense, amidst these traffickings and these compositions of consciences, become so altered that these employees no longer appear. They no longer understand how abhorrent what they are being made to do! Oh! Gentlemen, even in a century of moral turmoil and such indifference as ours, what demoralization, what "Degradation of conscience!..."

Physiognomy of a donkey at a general assembly.

"Now, gentlemen, that you know how to assemble—Wheat has been gathered, allow me to introduce you to a few things only moments. — We're not going to find ourselves in good health company; but we won't stay there long.

"This assembly is composed as you know; the contingents were provided; there are the well-meaning and the maitinkers; there are those who are there to vote for the merger, and there are has a formidable opposition, represented by loyal supporters shareholders, who will protest against the act you are witnessing. You will be born with value.

"A. de Chaumont-Quittry is at the presidential headquarters." You now know that, for many months, the treaty The fusion is in his pocket, well prepared; he has it well received the prize, as did Mr. Crochard, or he will receive it; that one agrees that it is simply a matter of removing the vote from the appeared with varying degrees of skill.

"First, we take great care not to warn the shareholders." If they had been told: We are gathering you together to rob you from your actions, each one had returned from the provinces, each one was... would have presented himself to defend his property; they were not warned. They cannot agree.

"The president reads his speech, which was very well prepared. I recall—"

MERGER OF THE NARSEILLE BRIDGES 209

only shovels the content: After announcing to the shareholders— They were moved, surprised, by the position of society, so beautiful six months prior, is disastrous; that it is a choice between the bankruptcy and merger, he reads them the provisional treaty Signed on September 22, 1862, between Péretre, himself, and Crochard, This Here is the treaty:

a. A real estate company is created under the name of Compagnie immobilière.

» that it continues and includes; ® The land acquired by
"Pereire of the city of Marseille, according to the act of August 4, 1862."

"The purpose of this company is the development and exploitation" and the resale of real estate properties in France and the ex-
* operation of the General Stores.

"The capital is set at 85 million, represented by 170,000
* shares of 500 francs each and 25,000 preferred shares.

"The capital will be distributed as follows: 10 To the Im- Company

"Paris furniture company and the General Stores Company, n

»

103,938 shares and 25,000 preferred shares: 20 to the So-

Ports of Marseille Company, 30,000 shares; 3° to E. Péroire,

"36,062 shares for the land on Imperial Street, the sure

» plus expenses that must be covered by an issuance of o-

» obligations. Total, 170.00% shares. »

"Here is the treaty, it is a matter of grasping it in a single reading" and to vote on the hour. Everyone, while listening, seeks to understand, What is this commercial marriage between four companies based on 85 million, with contributions of on both sides, with assets and liabilities such as they are continue and include? What is the intelligence sufficient to-

Who could grasp all of this simply by reading?

"Shouts, shouts; nobody understands anything," except for those who were there precisely because they didn't understand anything at all, since they only came to vote. Those, the reading

When it's over, they shout with joy: "- To the voices! To the voices!"

We should have voted immediately.

"I have the shorthand transcript that was published of this extraordinary-a general assembly. There has never been one, I believe I can affirm that.
a meeting where the uproar was more scandalous than that 13,

Df(0 FINANCIAL TRIALS

which happened. These were the biggest arrests.

They were arranged on both sides; these were the battalions these voters, these employees, were tightly packed and asked to go to the voices and shout: To the door those who are not so-satisfied! And it is the true shareholders who di-

Let's split! It was Mr. Mirès again who, with his vivacity and lust-managing his word, went up to the office seat and announced the most exorbitant things. There were almost voices. In fact, the police officers were arriving; finally, it was a tu-extraordinary mullet.

"The court, in its judgment, said: 'Assuming that the assembly was indeed stormy and the discussion did not happen in complete freedom, after all, we were in a state of 'vo-' » ter, » Yes, but on the condition of understanding something.

"Three proposals were made to this assembly, which were all wise, to arrive at the same goal, starting from the same point of the same line of thought.

"By the first proposal, the vote was asked within a month, so that everyone could examine the pre-treaty. Ready. What to say to that? It was legal, it was honest, The second proposal also tended towards a postponement, so that talks could begin with the company guide to the Mediterranean route, so that things would be beginnings to a successful conclusion. By the third proposition, we demand the appointment of a commission that would be tasked with studying the various outstanding issues, and to report to an assembly that would be convened later, The president replies that all of this is impossible; that it is contrary to the Statutes, there is only one proposal to be submitted to the merger, that one must vote yes or vote no; that it is up to choosing between an immediate vote and bankruptcy – This expertise that he was asking for, it was a kind of preliminary legal action, of the interlocutory decision does not prejudge the merits, but permitting honest people to realize the operation that we were going to do, What prudent, sensible man signs? Would you agree to a treaty without knowing its conditions? Well, all

MERGER OF THE PORTS OF MARSEILLE 211

These people together signed an 85 million dollar agreement without knowing neither why nor how.

"Thus, gentlemen, amidst the vociferations of the legions" of employees sent there to vote and prevent discussion, protests from actual shareholders, under pressure from M, from Chaumont-Quittry, and in the presence of the town sergeants called in to at least prevent acts of violence, which took place on the Island vote.

"I say that such an assembly is a disgrace in its composition, a disgrace in its direction and in its deliberation-

that it is tainted by fraud; – as a figure, since the a majority of 316, reduced earlier to a minority of 51, you is proven to be a considerable minority, I repeat, in Given the presence of such a scandal, justice cannot remain silent;
It is necessary, it is a matter of public order, that it gives by its stop one of those great moral lessons which, by purifying the
The past governs the future.

The second part of Mr. Grandmanche's plea raises more than just a question of status: from an economic point of view nomics is the subversion of the very laws of work and of the exchange that it reveals, or rather confirms:

"What were we? For fear of being mistaken, I read the statutes."
decreed by the Council of State in 1859. We were the Society
Real estate company of the Ports of Marseille, that was our name.
Our goal and objective were: "The enhancement of the ex-» exploitation of land sold by the city of Marseille and
"intended to form the new districts adjacent to the ports"
"From Ja Joliette and Napoléon, to the Docks and the train station basins"
"Maritime railway," that's our name.
our object, our essence; nothing more, nothing less.

"Our position is very clear and straightforward, Every carrier d'actions is a co-owner of these lands, and since there is 30,000 shares, each share representing one thirty-thousandth of total ownership, a piece of a building that the imagination

21? FINANCIAL TRIALS

can imagine. The shareholder's future is quite simple: he will sell his land for more or less, depending on how long he waits for a longer or shorter time, depending on the fortunes of Marseille will be more or less brilliant; he has nothing to fear from any operation Commercial, none. Of these chances that Islands action- run industrial and commercial affairs; it is before every co-owner of real estate.

"So, with whom is it merged? With the company that is initiating-" management of the Rivoli buildings, with the Compagnie des Magasins generals, and with the Society of the Imperial Street of Marseille, That's what we voted for.

"The court is aware that the Société des Immeubles de Rivoli operates by itself the Hôtel du Louvre, the Grand-Hôtel or the Hôtel de La Paix, located on Boulevard des Capucines, the café which is below, and even today a laundry. This So-engages in commercial operations.

"What are the General Stores? They are moneylenders."
on warrants or on pledge, | -

"Can you imagine this unusual alliance between companies
Also heterogeneous? The Ports of Marseille, a real estate company in its essence, real estate nonetheless, and the other two that I have just named, essentially commercial companies and industrial! So that I, a good Marseillais, am...
I sleep at night, believing myself to be a co-owner of the property; I took shares in the Ports of Marseille, because I love my city;
I enjoy getting a good deal while I contributes to beautifying my city; I fall asleep content, I am trans-bowling pin; the fortunes of the city and of France are doing well, the Public wealth increases: I take no risk: my Managers have their hands tied by the bylaws... And one fine morning
I learn, upon waking, that, as a result of an assembly
general who imposes her will on me, I became a launderer café owner, hotelier and pawnbroker in Paris; that this me Like it or not, they're going to take my shares out of my hands.
and exchange them.

"I know that in recent years, railways

\

MERGER OF THE PORTS OF MARSEILLE 213

merged with other railways, assemblies of general-
The general councils approved these mergers; the statutes allowed them.
May two paths join their tracks to form no more that, the purpose of the Society is always the same: it is a che-
one larger railway instead of two larger railways small. But there is a difference between these mergers, which I re-
I know legitimate companies, similar in nature, having the same essence.
the same goal, and the mergers between the companies differing essentially.
element by playing an object. The first ones are legitimate, because social statuses are not violated, in the sense that the es-
The presence of the Society is not modified, the seconds are ilgales, bad, because islands are essential, fatal conditions, imposed in the statutes of one of the Companies are found transformed, completely disrupted by the intrusion of This company, whose purpose is to be a real estate company, in a-
to do industrial and commercial work.

The most elucidated aspect is undoubtedly that of the division of the work: there, axioms and principles have the authority of a theorem of geometry. "The division of labor," said J.-B. Sav, is limited by the size of the market. » That the village grocer-lodge either at the same time innkeeper, leatherworker, haberdasher merchant of linens, fabrics, pottery, it's a condition of group and specific clientele, particular to each village that offers only a limited number of shops. But can one imagine, in Paris, in Le Havre, in Marseille, in Lyon, Bordeaux, Rouen, and other major cities, where the work is divided, fragmented in atomistic proportions, a company with a capital of 80 million and more, encompassing the bank, the building, and the operation of hotels furnished apartments, cafes, restaurants, bathrooms, shops, consignment loans? Finance brings us back to the individual. vision, incompatible combinations, barbarity. Consult on this subject economists of all persuasions, members of the Institute or socialists, they will be unanimous in their conclusions: such a mess of affairs can only lead to...

214 FINANCIAL TRIALS

bankruptcy, unless the operating company invests of a de facto monopoly (hoarding, famine pact) or of a legal privilege, does not exploit the public at will, without competition or control, to cover up the mess of its management. Lacking any other grievance against the high bank, this argument—The mere fact would be enough to secure his conviction. The acts of embezzlement We have cited so many examples that do not apply, except a few cases of personal crime, from another cause than a violation of economic laws. That's the science. 101s who condemns and expels the Jews; 11 his arrest must either be executed in all its rigor, or the company will perish. Because, once launched, the company operates outside of its principles. Essential, there are no longer any limits to abuses; outside the law, 11 n°v a that the reason of state. Ask Messrs. Péreire, Crochard, of Chaumont-Quitry and other doers, to justify, otherwise that under the pretext of social salvation or personal safeguarding Sonnelle, the following arrangements:

a The provisional treaty of September 22, 1862, This treaty stipulates that four contracting parties must enter into association: the Ports Company, the Society of Imperial Street, the Rivolt Building Company, the General Stores Company, The treaty is read, or the euten:i as We can; in short, we vote right now.

"Some shareholders, more wary than the others, before in accordance with the provisional treaty, otherwise to transform the provisional treaty in definitive form, propose to the resolution an addition formulated as follows in the minutes of the meeting: "The general assembly, deliberating in accordance with Article 30" "of the statutes, gives the board of directors of Îles powers" "To merge..." – Listen to this, gentlemen, this is the edition which was proposed and adopted, – "..., without deviating from the » foundations laid in the provisional treaty, signed between Messrs., Pe- "reire, Crochard and de Chauimont-Quittry, September 22 n [80%, » – That's quite clear.

"1] There are four co-contractors. What should the incmnaked

MERGER OF THE PORTS OF MARSEILLE 215

members of the board of directors who thus receive the mandate to The general assembly? They must adopt the provisional treaty and to transform it, under the same conditions, without changing anything, in a final treaty. However, I accept the merger as it was carried out, The Docks or General Stores have disappeared! The merger is complete. no longer between four, but between three contracting parties. And we comes to say: It's exactly the same thing; it is true that The General Stores were listed for 25,000 shares, and that he The result was a completely new distribution: it doesn't matter.

The Council of State and the principle of guarantees – A Society Anonymous falls under the public order. Therefore, it is certain that the Council of State has the right to impose conditions of existence whatever he wants. God forbid I should contest it before the Council of State. the right he has to authorize the merger only on the condition of Eliminate the General Stores. Here's what I'm saying:

Those who voted for the provisional treaty voted for the thing under: submitted for their deliberation, that is to say the treaty of September 22 1862, contract between four parties with its distribution. The Council of State refuses to authorize the merger as it has been proposed. Having done so, he abolishes the General Stores. That is his right; that What should we have done?

"By this modification, the very foundations of the treaty are found to be..." completely disrupted, new people had to be summoned to the general assembly and tell him: You had voted for a fu- sion between four contracting parties; the higher authority, of which we we hoped to obtain assent, setting aside the General Stores- nerals; the foundations of the merger are no longer the same, at the livn of four partners, we will be three: in addition, 25,000 shares They were supposed to return to the General Stores, a new one is needed is to be shared. We are bringing you together again, and we are we ask that you please accept the merger as the The Council of State wants you to raise your will. against his own, but you can say that the conditions imposed by the superior authority being known to you, YOU accept tez where you do not accept.

216 ' FINANCIAL TRIALS

"And then, a supposition. Here I am at the assembly, proprie-" to hold 200 shares of Magasins généraux and 50 of Ports. My reasoning is as follows: As a shareholder of the Ports of Mar-Seille, it's a detestable affair: I have 50 shares, I'm going to per-to make a lot of money; but as 'owner of 200 ac- The management of the General Stores is an especially important matter. beautiful, but worse for the ports; if we marry the Ports with the General Stores, by virtue of the principle of Old jurist Loysel: "In matters of marriage, who is deceitful?" "Maybe," the company that will make the island a worse marriage will make it to make the other one more beautiful. I vote under these conditions; my The vote is taken into account, and it is one of the 316 actions of majority. The merger is submitted to the Council of State, which removes The general stores. I ask, would the vote have been the Even if this withdrawal had been anticipated?

"I now come to the second complaint on this same point. The release of a the four partners brought about a change in distribution shares, The provisional treaty as voted contains the following: The Company's net assets will be distributed as follows: "To the Real Estate Company and the Stores Company" "General, 103,938 shares." The two companies receive All of this together. The shareholders understand absolutely nothing. A shareholder asks how much the Mu- company is worth. Gasins Généraux receives shares. Mr. President replies {page 7} (from the minutes of the meeting) for 12,500,000 francs. That's sweet. 25,000 shares of 500 francs each.

"I am removing 25,000 shares from 103,938, since the Magasins gé- Negals leave the merger with their share, leaving 78,938. Therefore, I must find a solution for the Real Estate Company. Rivoli, by Mr. Péreire, 78,938. Not at all, there are 87,264; - Approximately 9,000 more, making 4,500,000 francs. 11 is impossible for me. It's easy to understand. In your merger reorganization, you Eliminate one of the four partners, and you win the contract. otherwise his entire share, at least 4,500,000 francs. That's not in- to the core, precisely what had been voted on Another surprise! In the provisional treaty, the distribution of the 150,600 questions was asked under the conditions that you

you know. Suddenly, in the final treaty, I see inter-6,666 shares will remain at the stub. What is What does that mean? When I want to know the truth, I learn that 6,666 shares, or 3,333,333 francs, were allocated, for the a-cat of the grounds called the Catalans in Marseille, to a
A famous journalist, now more of a financier than a journalist.
The introduction of this new a- will probably be explained
society,

"Gentlemen, we can sense how difficult it was to respond to" all the very serious facts that I have presented before you, I cannot-Before answering directly, we will look for, as they say, a exit door,

"My God," they said, "why discuss all these things?"
Why these scandals, why sadden the eyes of Justice? A decree issued by the Council of State, dated the 15th
In June 1863, didn't he authorize the merger? Do you Do you believe that the Council of State did not realize this?
What could be wrong with this? Look at how-
The Council of State acted as a guardian! We had forgotten two millions are sitting in the coffers; WE HAD LOST OUR HAND IN THE-Yes, that's true; he made us give them back; we understood.
in the Île project to fuse the General Stores; the council
The state removed them, and there was an expert assessment.

"Look, let's not talk about this expertise anymore, it seems to me."
It's strange that we keep talking about a document in court.
which is unknown to anyone, this so-called expertise
Crete, expertise that adversary islands would know admirably-ly, since they said, at a previous hearing, that they had-had paid quite a lot.

"When I ask to know her, I'm told she doesn't exist."
not for justice; THAT THE PUBLIC PROSECUTOR HAS VAINLY SO-LICENSED BY THE ADMINISTRATION, during the trial of first tance; THAT HE COULD NOT L'o8Tenin, Such a document, I repeat, must not enter into a can; nobody knows him, and we
we were not allowed to defend our rights there nor to contradict them;
It is true that we were represented there by Messrs. de Chaumont-Quittry and Crochard, just look at how they defended us!

"Here I must mention a very serious matter: the council"
The state official was particularly moved: he had learned of lawsuit previously brought by Messrs. M..., de P..., de T... and others; this trial had a hearing, and unfortunately the Ours was still only at the stage of being summoned. The Council of State wanted to bypass it: an imposed transaction took place between Mr. Péreire and the litigants, fortunate enough to arrive before Justice before us; the actions of these gentlemen fury them bought back at a price of 900 francs each. This transaction is "Of June 44th, the decree is of the 45th,"

The Lion's wager. – "I quicken my pace, ei
I've reached the fourth point of my discussion. They are more–
These are questions of numbers rather than questions of law.
The numbers are large, but they are simple, and I hope that the
The court will seize them immediately at the sole pleading stage.

"I say that the merger as it was done constitutes non–"
only a 7/12ths lesion, but a monstrous lesion.
indescribable, and it had to be that way for us to dare everything we did to obtain it.

Z » For Mr. Péreire, the operation can be summarized in a few words. He had obtained, on August 14, for 48 million, the concession–section of the Imperial Street, which starts at the foot of the Canebière this ended up on our land; he was going to spend a sum that he estimated Estimated, perhaps exaggerating, at 40 million, for the establishment–the construction of this street which led to the destruction of the old city. All its expenses were intended to enrich the ter–rains to which the street led, without Mr. Péreire receiving nothing in exchange; he must therefore have wanted to have these lands, A buying them at their value, there were 327,000 meters at 200 francs, in average, or 65,400,000 francs, – 5 million constructions, – Millions in receivables: roraL: 76,400,000 fr; – as charges, the interest on 40 million bonds. Mr. Péreire found a way to absorb all of this for an apparent figure of 15 million, actually 8 million. – Let's look at these figures more closely.

close.

MERGER OF THE PORTS OF MARSEILLE 219

"In this merger, we are bringing the Ports' shares into a sum of 500 francs in the new company,

"There are 327,553 meters of land: which, the shares being numbering 30,000, at a rate of 44 meters per action, puts the The price per meter is 45 francs. Here, I'm taking the fusion as we He did it; I will show how we were paid for these 45 francs.

"What is the value of a meter, what is the value of a share? To avoid any Exaggeration, or fear of being wrong, let's take the figures admitted by the higher authority. In 1859, the Council of State at authorized the Société anonyme des Ports de Marseille, But, before to grant this authorization, an expert assessment took place in 1858; and, since that time, the building in France, and in Marseille In particular, he only succeeded. – Well! At the time of According to this expert opinion, in 1858, the assets of the Ports Company were 23,500,000 fr., which, divided into 30,000 parts, gave 782 fr. by action. Thus, under the management of Mr. Mirès, the shares were worth 782 francs each. According to the same expert report, 327,553 meters of land: that is, for each meter a value 105 francs.

"We used to say, in the first Instagram post: Bring back the expertise of the Council of State. I have Micux! I have the statutes of 1859; now, what These statutes have decided, have been decided for you; therefore, by the higher administration, in 1858, my action was worth 182 francs. and 105 francs per meter of land.

"We're walking: the matter is more or less badly managed; But we do make some sales. Would you like to know the prices of the islands? Windy? Here's a small notebook containing the ter-
"Rains of the ports of Marseille: each lot is marked separately" L'Ilot No. 9 is sold there at 130 francs per meter; l'Ilot No. 10, 140 francs; block no. 8, 300 fr.

"Do you know what 'Mr. de Chaumont-Quittry, who comes from to sell to us, our agent, to Mr. Péreire, for 45 francs. meter, do you know what he thinks of these sales at 130, 140 and 300 francs? Here is the report he gave to the general assembly, 11 first speaks of his predecessor, Mr. Mirès, criticizing his administration, 1 said: "These sales at 130, 130 francs per meter

290 FINANCIAL TRIALS

"They are deplorable; it's a waste of our wealth."

"Mr. de Chaumont-Quittry himself therefore found that our Selling land at that price was the most wasteful thing imaginable; He valued them at 200 francs or more per meter, and he's selling them for 1 franc!

The value of no: lands? It's easy; mats first, I do
A recap. In 1856, M. Mires contracted at a rate of 50 francs.
the meter. In 1958, the Council of State gave the share a value of 382 francs; then part of the land is sold at 100 francs.
At 130 francs per meter, the share is worth 1,100 francs; at 130 francs per meter, the share
1,430 francs; at 140 francs per meter, the action is worth 1.510 francs. ; at 900 francs.
The share is worth 3,300 francs per meter. And we buy it for 500 francs!

"Mr. Péreire himself, what is his opinion three months ago?"
before the decree of June 15, 1863? Others besides us, Messrs. B, of P...., C.... and others, bring the same charges against him as ours: the
The Council of State is outraged, refuses to disregard it, and imposes a "transaction; the transaction is made at 900 francs per share, on June 14th; the de-Cret intervenes on the 15th. In the first instance, it was denied with a unwavering assurance this transaction in which Mr. Pé-Reire had the skill to avoid appearing by name and to make himself represented by Rougemont de Lowemberg; today that I have proof in hand, we'll admit it, but by saying that we had the forced hand by the Council of State.

"I said we were paid in the most peculiar way."
We were supposed to be paid 500 francs per share, or 45 francs per meter.
If only we had been paid in cash! But we are bought in the sense that we are forced to enter the real estate society billière by receiving a share worth 500 francs against our former one.
Every action that enters into partnership with me is the counter-vatheir own action, since we mix everything together so as not to to make it one. But how were the buildings of Ri-voli? There were 240,000 shares of 100 francs each: that is, a caa pilal of 24 million francs, Well! these 24 million in-thirty in the new Company for 87,272 shares of 500 francs each,

That makes 43,636,000 francs! You're overestimating 50%! That's monstrous!

MERGER OF THE PORTS OF MARSEILLE a |

"So not only are you bringing me into this so- } company at a rate of 500 francs for my share, a price lower than that for which Mr. Mirès himself was bringing her into the company in 1856; price of 52 francs, lower than the council's estimate State in 1838; price 200 0/0 lower than that shown by the sales figures that you find regrettable-
you yourselves; but you still pay me in fr. coins.
which are worth only 50 centimes, or in assignats, because you me Offer, as an alternative, 182 francs worth of Rivoli shares worth 100 francs each.

Calculation yields the same result.

"So the share, seemingly bought for 500 francs, is paid with an overvalued currency of 50 0/0. We are paid less of 300 francs, which puts the meter at % francs.

"That's how we got our hands on the stock titles--" honest, serious men, who lived according to the statutes and of the Council of State, keeping their titles as assets for their children!

Will the answer be the stock market? I respect that too much. justice to admit such points for discussion, and to the merchants who enter the temple, their prices of Purse in hand, the court will demonstrate the immutable law; and the law, That's the written moral; but in the end, the opponents hold so much to these stock market quotes that, in the documents they are distributed to the Court, there is a record of the ratings of the ac-Port of Marseille operations in 1860, 1861, 1862 and 1863. I do not I know what you will find there; I see that in 1860, the shares listed SU0 fr. or in the vicinity fell, in 1861, to 335. But in 1861, disaster struck Mr. Mirès: it was natural that the shares of a case created by Mr. Mirès are subject to the influence of the author's position.

"With this disaster behind us, the shares are rising again, and from there..." In 1862, they successively reached 600, 7.5, 545; then they return to 710 and 500.

"I don't really know the argument that the opponents want to--" slow to draw from these figures. If you invoke stock market quotes to justify the admission of 100 franc shares to IS? in the merger, because they were listed at that price, why not admit our shares at 793 instead of 50, since that was their odds? And besides, why would you want me to believe your odds of Stock Exchange, when I see at the assembly of October 2, 1862 a ce- A famous banker said: "Stock market prices are calculated as follows "We want," And Crochard, one of our adversaries, wrote in his conclusions that a union had been formed between him and Péreire to raise the price on the Rivoli!

49.

999 FINANCIAL TRIALS

"Let me say, what everyone already knows, that when you have a portfolio like Mr. Péreire's, when He holds most of the shares in Rivoli.

merger. Share prices are raised or lowered depending on the state of its portfolio, by virtue of this principle that the merchandise follows fluctuations in supply and demand.

"Mr. Péreire, if he wishes, will increase the annuity by 2 francs." one day, if the person who gave the certificate that I was speaking, or had the kindness to continue, we would have had something A very instructive thing. Awakened, I picked up the newspaper this This morning, I looked at the value of the shares of the Im- Company -furniture that day; it was 492 francs, - below par.

"Clearly, it seems our actions were better before" the merger that since then, since from 795, they are now at 492, But let- Aside from the stock market quotes, I wouldn't have mentioned them if... "We hadn't brought those ballots..."

We will allow ourselves a simple reflection here: For- what does the government, through its Council of State, take its Share of responsibility in such shady dealings? - The re- The answer preempted the question: a bill puts the public limited companies under common law and eliminates the inter- vention of power. - Finally! - But, failing surveillance- The Council of State's recommendation, deemed insufficient, suggests that it would be necce giving free rein to that of the public, removing the endorsement newspaper content and prior authorization, as well that the summary of unofficial warnings. It is necessary today-

i.:TON OF THE PORTS OF MARSEILLE 193

today, deposit 50,000 francs at Tic-or to have the right to to speak non-scientifically about politics, but about financial matters cè- all the interests that the reader is able to appreciate Now, morality. Freedom of the press amounts to The height of a question of public honesty. To raise the to control the Council of State without replacing it is to hand over the national wealth and that of individuals to the croupiers. The bill has not yet been debated: that MN. The MPs are carefully weighing the consequences.

Among the lawyers for the respondents are Mr. Victor Lefranc and Sénard. Need we recall, in connection with these two names, this that we were saying of Mr. Jules Favre defending, in police cor- rectionnelle, Boucaruc, whose exploits formed an arboretum- How to oppose the five members of the Legislative Body? Ja- but we will only admit a lawyer, a politician, would speak at the rostrum of Parliament as an orator, or in a newspaper as a publicist. Democratic customs, of the less, do not include such an accumulation.

Having stated these reservations, what does the defense say? All it she could probably say; she invokes public safety, the general interest, even that of the applicants, which is taken into account fortune in spite of themselves; the accomplished facts, the sanction of Council of State. Then, a series of rambling, lyrical pronouncements: the old woman. Marseille transformed, – thousands of workers finding the work in a moment of crisis – the major financiers covering our land with railways, and the sea with ships, In a fit of enthusiasm, Mr. Senard exclaimed: "Mr. Pé– "Reire can say, like Muhammad, that he never put the "On foot, on a ship that has sunk." Sad! Sad!

What else is there to oppose? – The indigence of certain advers– sares.

"Mr. Vicron Lerranc: How did you obtain a certain letter" In your hands? We're being told this story which is supposed to shed light on things.

HAS

2?

At court, we are told: "It is true that Letellier will be among our guests." "Less. It's true he's looking for some for us!" Letellier, This is the only one you name, and yet you admit that He's a thief. What am I saying? He admitted it himself: he he threw himself at our feet; he wrote us a poignant letter of Pain and despair to beg us... And in what circumstances? Mr. Laubespín comes to tell Mr. Pereire: "Ren– "Show me the 521 shares I filed." We're doing some re– search; nothing is found. Mr. Laubespín returns with Mr. Le– Tellier; he first says there is an error. Mr. Laubespín She turns around and looks at him. Letellier staggers and turns pale, u We "Lock that later," said Mr. Laubespín; and he took it away. It was then, gentlemen, that we received this distressing letter, touching, which we hadn't talked about until now, because It is not intentionally that a guilty person is crushed, that one reveals a confession and a pardon.

"Here is the letter: I hesitate, but I read it. I read it while–" third party at court:

"Paris, 1st March 1864.

"Sir,

"It is not for myself that I come to beg your mercy," because I am a wretch who could not resist the whirlwind-Jon who was training him, because I am ashamed of myself.

"But I have a seventy-two-year-old mother, widowed by a di» rector of indirect taxes who was forty-

"Four years of honorable service, a career that has no

»

»

all fortunes except for a pension of 1,100 francs, and that his son for Consolation and support for the family, an honorable mother, daughter of the general, (I'm withholding names) and sister
" of.... ..

"But I have a seventeen-year-old daughter who is ill, and who..."

"will die, but I have a nineteen-year-old son, a laureate at the Sorgood, as second prize of honor for French speech-

"That, and who will no longer know where to hide."

"Have pity on this unfortunate family that you can save-"

"The worm of dishonor. For me, for a year now, I have no longer been living;

"

MERGER OF THE PORTS OF MARSEILLE 25

"the suffering that my shame made me endure-

"They even have no expressions; it's for my poor mother,"

"for my poor innocent children who will die from it like

"I was filled with shame and sorrow."

"Excuse me, sir, and have mercy, save a son from his mother and a "Father to his children. Have mercy! Have mercy!"

"Oh! How much gratitude, how much adoration for you, my-"

"Sir, of whom I dare not call myself the most respectful and the most

"unworthy servant."

Signed. A. LETELLIER,

Not a word about the substance or morality of the debate.

"NT. THE FIRST ATTORNEY GENERAL: The appellants' lawyer said that he would not receive an answer; I listened to the three arguments from the respondents; I am still waiting for their reply.

"My Lerranc and Senard both reply that they believe" to have answered sufficiently.

"MR. FIRST ATTORNEY GENERAL: Pardon. None of you, I He repeats, he did not plead the case, the real case; the assembly Was it or was it not fraudulently composed? The Are the facts argued and presented by the appellants true or False? That's where the trial lies.

"Me GRANDMANCHE DE BEAULIEU: Did I tell you, gentlemen, that they would not respond; that they would plead all around the A trial without addressing it head-on? And that was the way it should be. There are acts so condemned by moral sense that one can close eyes so as not to see them, but that, when we see them, we cannot defend them.

Mr. Oscar de Vallée, in turn, offers his assessment:

"This trial, gentlemen, contains many lessons. I I, for one, only want to retain one, and that one, it is per- I am obliged to say this, because of my position; it is personal to me: this is the increasingly urgent need for everyone The world of respecting the law. That is the great religion of life.

This + gr

EE

FF -

996 FINANCIAL TRIALS

civil law, and we must all submit to it, magistrates, lawyers, Businessmen! We will never finish, gentlemen, all kinds of disorder will arise if we persist in this flaw. of respect. It is, believe me, the great evil, the "intimate, pro- the deep, visceral nature of this society. Nobody wants to respect the law that hinders him; one seeks to free oneself from it according to one's in- interests, passions, the speculations of his mind, his companies. Well! No, not even under the pretext of building to obey the laws. May those toward whom my thoughts turn in this moment—

They should not misunderstand her; let them believe me.
Rather! Major actions, like major projects, are... easily comply with our laws, which have become so flexible and so easy-veurs to the major movements and major results of the credit and industry.

"The alliance is very easy to form, and then these men who, by becoming richer, enrich their country, than their Rapid successes expose one to envy, they will not find a way to counter it.
the injustice and the base passions of the most determined defenders than ourselves,"

We were expecting from the author of The Money Handlers a In a more manly conclusion, did YŸ have an urgent need, after such scandalous revelations, to assure the respondents of the protection-
A vigorous action by the public prosecutor's office against base passions?...
As long as the prosecutor has not identified any offense in the...
Given the aforementioned maneuvers, there is no longer any financial trial.
aible, and reparation is due to the Crémieu, the d'Auriol, the Massinot, at Solar and other victims of a temporary power outage of puritanism.

As for us, who judge these acts only from the point of view of economic science and its laws, we will content ourselves with to conclude: With its incompatible accumulations, its amal-gamifications of foreign industries or repulsive to one another others, with its concentration, in the hands of a few high barons, from the clearest part of the country's movable wealth, with its principle of granted credit and subordinate labor, the

e

MERGER OF THE PORTS OF MARSEILLE 227

the system cannot live openly, under the control of written laws or the law of Jurisprudence. Violation of principles economics inevitably leads to disregard for principles Morality, much to the chagrin of philosophers or novelists who only want to see the social economy as a collection Indigestible in their banal observations, Messrs. Péreire are right: they saved the fund, that is to say they substituted the con-Cordat is bankrupt and the explosion has been temporarily postponed.
The disaster. Raca on those who scrutinize the means.

But who will save France from the clutches of feudalism?
industrial? Who will bring back into our customs respect for

of Mr. de Vallée? Is it then the destiny of the Jews to find those placed in perpetual exile outside the law, sometimes above it, sometimes below: too small in the Middle Ages to enjoy the common law, too high today for the law to be reached?... Did the Christians really pursue them in the past? against the Israelites, what is the vengeance of a deicide? – What about What do contemporaries think?

qq

The amount of documents we have accumulated in this The first part would seem to have sufficiently elucidated the question; and we would leave it at that if we did not know how much the public mind is loath to believe in a so- gangrene universal commercial. We would be told: The acts of fraud, However numerous they may be, they are merely facts, not a system. The question must be addressed, since we have already raised it. raised, or dug to the bottom. We will see, after the documents- judicial matters, administrative documents, IDENTIQUES to the preceding ones; after the acts, the principles. Let the vic- times of the correctional court are looking in our second part of their justification, as they see fit, provided that The public interprets this as a condemnation of the feudal financial system. black but will be sufficiently fulfilled.

PART TWO

FINANCING

"Before addressing this lamentable story of speculation In court, we took care to warn our readers that no hatred motivated us against the Indians- vidus. Here indeed are the personalities, seemingly the most powerful, are dominated, crushed by the syuration. The per- Individual versatility would not suffice to explain such enormous anomalies, such disastrous upheavals, disturbances of such power. The original sin is organic: we wanted the banking hierarchy, the industrial centralization, as exemplified by hierarchy and political centralization, and the first result of this false In principle, it is a clear, precise, persistent antagonism, without aggravated cessation of relations between company founders and their ac- tionaries. What could be more subversive, more monstrous, to More improbable at first glance than such a statement! What could be truer and more established, however? Let's dig deeper. The idea persists, and the improbable will become the last

00 THE BITTERNESS

Agglomeration, that is the generic name given to all the processes, increases or decreases, advertisements, exorbitant dividends, gambling or fraud, by which high finance pays tribute on the peat of speculators, But what is lagio-tase?

"We should finally settle on the value of the terms we use—"folds," wrote M. Mirès in the Constitutionnel of September 8th 1857. We hear every day a distinction made between speculative-tion and speculation, to amuse the one and condemn the other, without that no one has ever been able to explain to us what particular signs We recognized them.

"An eminent magistrate, who is noted among the adversaries" the most pronounced forms of speculation, we were told, not long ago days :

– I call the spread of fake news "speculation" to raise or lower it. – But that's fraud, re-pondit-ou.

– I still call speculation the dividends of the exaggerated ones that we distributes to boost the shares, and thus achieve uu bé-illicit profit, by giving unrealistic expectations.
– But, they replied again, that's a scam.

"We withdrew from this conversation with the convi-intimate observation that the definition we were looking for was impos-possible; and having reread the opinions expressed by the financiers possible-litigants who have never been involved in the affairs, we take care-My convictions have been further reinforced.

The question of definition, when it comes to something as... universally known and understood that speculation, do not has never seemed very important, omnis definilio periculosa, and we would not stop there if he were not to leave from it that it's a sterile argument about words. But, while acknowledging on the one hand, honest transactions leave room for gambling a place larger or smaller, on the other hand than speculation and The scam, as Mr. Mirès observes, touches on, penetrate intimately, we are able to specify strictly speaking, what speculation is. We have already seen (Speculator's Handbook) and we will see how, through fraudulent maneuvers, coalitions, and land grabbing mentions, infidelity in the accounts, embezzlement, concussions, investments, incompatible accumulations, dividends taken from capital, fake news, it develops and grows to the point of ab- to completely absorb the business, and to reduce the companies the most serious ones are merely a pretext, a basis for new acts of vandalism. What, then, is the starting point? What about speculation?

Agiotage comes from agio.

"The agio," says the Dictionary of Political Economy, "is a corrupted Italian word meaning additional value or ex- yielding value, and which corresponds quite exactly to the word French added value. It was originally said to be any excessive price- in the ordinary or natural value of things. Later, especially when it has been transported to foreign countries, one has used it most specifically to designate the excess of value of bank money relative to current money, and vice versa.

We are using the word here in its broadest sense.

Due: the difference between the price of an item and its value. What is it?

What is the value of a product? Why?

Are these two terms not synonymous?

Economists distinguish between two kinds of values: the useful value and exchangeable value. Light, air, the sun's heat is a value of primary utility. order, although they do not give rise to any kind of trans- action. Conversely, chinoiserie, pottery fragments antiques, old daggers, autographs are of an inu- blatant utility, although sometimes forming the subject of markets considerable. Between these two extremes, agricultural products manufactured goods, cereals, vegetables, livestock, hides, plants textiles, oilseeds, dyes, wood, fabrics, the Mineral substances combine both utility values and exchange. The social economy only deals with the latter nice.

932 Speculation

of time and expense. The culture of mink requires at-
So much care and so many ways for a year of scarcity that for a year of abundance. The wine doubled in price.
price increases when the harvest has halved, the higher price-
There's nothing unusual about it. You can say anything about it :3 the times when the rise or fall is motivated by an aggravvation or a reduction in labor costs proportional tional to the fluctuations of the mercurial. Let's do all-However, there is a caveat here: collective insurance must mitigate and will certainly mitigate these fluctuations one day; the assured-France Mutuelle will prevent large price discrepancies.
In the meantime, let's reason about what is, not what should be
be.

Things don't happen that regularly in the
The practice of affaires. The production and distribution of wealth, left to blind empiricism, suffers periodic disturbances that accuse an organism of-deplorable. The newspapers of the first quarter of 1858 were filled with ads like this: "House X..., before took advantage of the crisis to have books made cheaply its items at 25 and 30 percent discounts. » The rate increase discounts, overcrowded stores, unemployment,
the export of cash, the hoarding of resources financial institutions, extending to all branches of the for-public tune the principle of the famine pact, produce in the price of goods fluctuations also anormales than unforeseen.

The result is that honest trade, which creates utility, don't just look at its prices for remuneration legitimate of a service rendered; he reserves a part for chance.
This is the agio, whose results fluctuate for each exchanger on a profit and loss basis. The principle of the a-gio is supremely anti-economic, although the state ac-
The nature of trade explains and legitimizes it. It leads to this

DEFINITIONS 330

monstrosity, that two merchants, equally rich, active, Upright, enterprising men can achieve fortune, one of them.
the other one went bankrupt,

In every exchange, there is a premium that benefits one or the other.
the other of the contracting parties, even without their knowledge. It is obvious that if they saw him, neither of them would want him to pay. Most often, it is chance that decides; art
it consists of putting the most chances on your side.

commercial transactions are: the impossibility of con-accurately determine the proportion of a product with the others, the subordination of the commercial paper to [a mon-gold and silver coinage, from which results for the holder of nu-Merary, arbiter of credit, the ability to do, without rhyme or
The reason, the rise and fall: the lack of security in one Word. The reform of our exchange system, a statistic conscientious, accurate documents on IVS arrivals ct shipments, the establishment of agricultural and industrial docks trials, in the major production centers, the warrants.
a vast system of free advertising replacing monopoly:
journalism endorsed and supported by finance, tlimine-would soon realize the immoral importance that the game in business. It's marvelous to see with what rapid-said a note inserted in the Afoniteur, concerning an industry, reaches the knowledge of even the most illiterate people whom it interests-
resse. |

The premium exists everywhere, on gold and silver coins.
the commodities, on the portfolio values, on the buildings Wages, capital, rents, sanitation, transportation. The reputation of the scholar, the artist, the writer, eloquence of the lawyer, the capacity of the statesman, the prudence of the banker, the virtue of the civil servant are also matters of ago.

"What we have to pay to the one from whom we claim the service, what we exclusively intend to acquire is the Same service, nothing more, nothing less. Aesthetic in use, 20,

234 BITTERNESS

That's not how things work. There is a crowd of circumstances where we pay, in addition to the value of the produit, of the service requested, both for rank, birth, the il-Illustration, titles, honors, dignities, the renown of the functiontionary... I don't know what kind of metaphysical and idealistic thing that, far
The ability to be paid, aversion to venality... |

"The doctor and the lawyer, the shoemaker and the milliner, do pay for the popularity they enjoy; there are even people who put a price on their integrity, like this cook who, by means of-Offering a stronger pledge, he promised not to make the cove dance.
from the basket. What man doesn't consider himself a little more than his colleagues, and does not imagine doing you any honor by tra-Valiant for you, for a fee? In all circumstances salary, when it's the producer who does it, there's always

France had a hundred surgeons who would not have been embarrassed to to extract the ball from Garibaldi's foot. But it was necessary to illustrate... A famous operator was wounded. Garibaldi appeared ten times more: heroic, and Mr. Nélaton nine times more skillful. Each had his "Reclamation: such is the economic mode." (From the capacity of the politic. (The working classes, by P.-J. PROUDHON.)

The widespread use of the agio means that, throughout the National wealth, it is liquidated, leading to the net production of the island. to which it serves as a basis, by zero.

In any case, in honest business, the premium is not that, in the background, it is not the merchant's motive, and we hinted at the possibility of mitigating it, even to eliminate it from transactions without inconvenience. That would be the to return to scientific precision, to the certainty of a remuneration fair ration that would leave no room for disasters nor to scandalous fortunes, these two necessary poles of the current business world.

Augtotage is the search for the agio for itself-mimic 2so fuclo, without creating any value, a con- market pulled in view of simple differences.

"It's a bet where the players keep the ulterior motive of

DEFINITIONS 233

To cheat at gambling. – The speculator bases his profit solely on loss that he makes others bear, – When his operation is finished, 11 no service was rendered, no value created; What is happening is simply a transfer of wealth, in at the same time as a profound attack on morality, » (Dictionary of Political Economy.)

Speculation encompasses all branches of Ja production agricultural and industrial, levies taxes on all den- problems are compounded, most of the time, by a multitude of offenses, as observed by M. Mirès, in its most innocuous form is the game.

CHAPTER ONE

THE SIMPLE GAME

In September 1856, he performed on the grounds a considerable increase that took on the proportions of a-sastre for the Lyon-based manufacturing company, Le Crédit mobilier, suspected of being the author of this speculation, he defended himself against it.
described as a culpable act. So much the better for society.
general. Nevertheless, the benefits of the increase do not went neither to the producers nor to the manipulators of silks, but to business swindlers.

In Paris, a distinction is made between bakery flours and flours.
commercial products, although they are all intended for the breadmaking. Between the different types of milling, the speculators felt the need to create a unit of quaity, so that they only have to worry about the price in their transactions. Until recently, they operated on the flours called four marks, so named from four main factories, namely: Rabourdin in Etampes, Aubin and Baron at Etampes, Labiche at Maintenon, Morel at Essonnes.
Two other TVPE factories have since been added, Darblay in Corbeil and Truffaut in Pontoise: and now they sell fa-six brands. There is yet another unit, Island {pee

THE SIMPLE RAT GAME

Paris, supplied by various millers whose flours are subject to the assessment of a special committee.

The average production of the six brand factories is... approximately 27,000 bags per month (gross weight of the bag, 159 kilos, Net weight 157; the standard Paris bag weighs only 100 kg.
Speculation sells between 70,000 and 100,000 bags per month. Six mar ques. Only one merchant was able to, however, during a tri-Master, remain a seller of 50,000 bags each month, 25,000 about more than actually occurs. On their During manufacturing, millers had to take the necessary quantities services for the execution of the so-called "cooking" contracts, which their They take a third of their products directly. So there remains.
Approximately 18,000 bags per month are needed to carry out a clearance sale.
between 70,000 and 100,000 bags sold through speculation.

Speculators operate using round numbers of 25, 50, 100 bags and multiples of 100; the markets are at #, 6 and 8 month; in the latter case, we make two 4-month accounts.

Thus, we sell in July: - to 4 months from September (delivery-

3 months from October (October, November, December) – to 6 months from November; – to 4 months from January.

The fluctuations in the price of mercury during this period of time constitute the loss or the premium.

The seller must liquidate from the first to the last day.

of the month of its expiry. The buyer is required to take

Delivery, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

upon presentation of his receipt.

We had to be on guard against bad players faith and give the game the appearance of a serious market. At this Indeed, we created a sign bearing the two labels at the top.

following:

D. – "100 empty bags, brand X.

No. The bearer of this document shall be entitled within one year 186, to the reimbursement of 25) Fr.

against his delivery of 100 empty bags in good condition, to the brand A.

"Paris, the 186th."

"Signed Z."

238 FINANCIAL EQUITY

®. – "100 bags of flour, brand X.

n No. Paris, île [Sb.

"Mr. Station Master of or "Mr. B..., at the La Villette warehouse.

"Please deliver to Mr. Z, or order, 100 bags of flour, mar–" that X, which you hold at my disposal, according to notice no

as of » Shopping from the

"Please also, at the bearer's request, note the following..."

weight and quality guaranteed to it until

"Trucking at his expense"

Signed Y.

"Good to deliver the 400 bags above to MT"

"By order and on behalf of."

"No. Paris, the

"Sign V,"

Then comes the clearance sale. A seller of 1,000 bags only has 1,000 left. 100 to deliver. He chooses from his list of buyers the one who He seems to be the one most embarrassed by the merchandise. and gives him a voucher for 100 bags to be collected at the station or at the... Trepot, he's asking to negotiate. You sold me out. Buy me back at 52 francs for 50. The deal ends with a Payment of differences. The operation can be repeated everywhere. and the seller remains the holder of the flour after having Sold and liquidated at ten times the price it had. If the buyer takes delivery, the seller is obliged to protect themselves with On the other hand; if there are many in this situation, it will raise a cry for help. resounded in the market hall: There's no more flour! It's not pre-precisely the announcement of the famine; this simply means that The bulls prevail, and the bears will pay the price. war expenses. Because whether there is flour or not, there it is simply a matter of short speculators finding a cover and be prepared to pay the price.

THE SIMPLE GAME 90

Most transactions are conducted through the factor or commission agent, subject to a brokerage fee 2 of paid by the seller. We saw 50 bags of farine, priced at 2,500 francs, liquidating a sale of 3,000 bags, on which he was paid, solely in commission fees,

3,000 francs.

Speculators sometimes play pranks on each other that could turn-to turn tragic.

Mr. X, a commission agent, had bought, in one month, for the account of its principals, 10,000 bags of flour. However the A commission agent is a responsible trader, unlike of the broker, who merely brings the seller into contact with the seller the seller and the buyer, saying to them: Sort it out. The sellers-Mr. [Name], who had a month to liquidate, were... they tended, they joined forces: they arrived on the same day, at the same time, a few minutes to four, etfec-hours, half a million in cash to be found. The presentation

Last-minute submissions did not allow
Mr. X to seek buyers in time to cover himself: he was forced, as they say, to sleep with the flour. Happy-
The electric telegraph was invented, Mr. X warned all his principals and realized his available funds. The sum was paid, in full. The commission agent emerged triumphantly.
he learned from this difficult ordeal, and his credit benefited all the more as a result.
But with ten similar attacks, such a coalition would succeed at least eight times to a disaster.

It was enough for us to describe these operations in order to judge them; the Comments will be useful. We will only add that it was on such markets that the tax was based bread, before the freedom of the bakery, and today its price. 11 was granted to the bakers a sum approximately invariable charge of 10 francs per bag for handling costs.
The popular prejudice that accuses them of creating high prices is of the most unjust. Working people and merchants will not be never artisans of famine.

Among the oils, rapeseed oil is the primary ingredient in the agio-

210 FINANCIAL EQUITY

tage on the Place de Paris. Markets are conducted in 100-kilogram increments.
but speculation does not operate below 20,000 kilograms or
For 20 tonnes, the freight forwarder's premium is 0.5 percent.
by the seller and equally by the buyer.

A distinguished speculator in this area was, from the very beginning quarter of 1858, seller of 3 million kilograms, to be delivered after the harvest. The plant still had many nights to Sleeping outdoors; what could one know of its future? One
The persistence of the drought at that moment raised fears of a disette; the bulls were jubilant; we did not sa-Let's say if the seller with 3 million kilos in fitness illness. In any case, he remained for fifteen days without appearing Neither at the market hall nor at the stock exchange. A few thunderstorms.
finally came to refresh the crops and the player's mind; the Rapeseed was saved, and the speculator as well.

He is a fortunate craftsman, the one we have just... to speak. Towards the end of 1857, he was a salesman in Caen of a a considerable quantity of oil and seeds.

The shrewd Normans said to themselves: We've got him; he will not be able to deliver, because all of the country's production is in our hands: he can only buy from us. The audacious one

He was not a man to bow his head before the enemy.
Instead of settling by settling the difference, he sent some shipping orders to Holland, Belgium, Germany.

Upon expiry of the contract, the Calvados department, which which produces and exports rapeseed, found itself overwhelmed with shipments.
of oil and seeds that he had no use for. To freight some ships, organizing unnecessary, disastrous imports, to throw in a few days on the square of Caen, no longer fictitious vouchers to be delivered, but real barrels of oil, ame-
born on real ships, by real sailors; show and verify the authenticity of the cargo, then do it to set sail again, to send the flotilla to transport elsewhere a commodity which Calvados doesn't need to do anything, since it supplies it all by itself.
Fifteen or twenty departments: all this for the history of Making your opponents pay for differences is what doesn't

THE SIXPLE 211 GAME

should never be classified by the science of production and the distribution of wealth. The word speculation, although the o-
The operation does not accuse anyone of fraud, which already seems weak here.

That the Norman speculators were extorted in this case of around ten million, when they were counting to win as much as their opponent, even by pocketing
the differences, whether it was still found in return, it im-
It doesn't matter much. What's important is that work, culture, consumption, through alternatives of degradation and high prices, ultimately, are what pay for these extravagant spending-laughing.

Speculators in Marseille are doing the same thing with wheat.
operations like those in Paris on flour; the unit of
The measurement is the load, 8 double decaliters.

The spirits flowed out in 620-liter casks, the agio-
Tag does not do less than 25 pieces per month.

Consult the newspapers, the trade bulletin; it's the
the level of speculation on goods.

The speculator sells the rapeseed, then he sells the oil;
He traffics in wines, then in spirits; in wheat, then on flours and starches; on raw wools and on the fabrics one reads about; on hemp in tow, in thread and in canvas: on raw sugars and refined sugars; on the raw silks and worked silks; on oils, tallows, the potash, and on soaps. Each transformation of the ma-

of industry, the infinite varieties of the division of labor seem to have no other purpose than to extend the scope of the parasitic and disruptive speculation. The traders con- They check the prices and comply with them. Ultimately, the consumer... The debtor pays, and everything is fine. The Convention sent To the scaffold with traffickers of this kind. Today we in fact, great administrators; national opinion calls the initiators of credit, and the people choose them by- times for its representatives.

It's not child's play for someone to operate on 41

942 Speculation

Bulky commodities such as flour, oil, and wine? alcohol, wool, and cotton. We saw this from the example of the rapeseed speculator. This kind of speculation, or gambling, as one might wish, was accessible only to a select few. financial, and the adept at driving them to devour one another, unraveling- something that would have made the public laugh heartily. It was important to Democratizing speculation, since we are democratizing everything: This is the result of the unbridled behavior of the commands. said and limited companies, 20 billion in paper at less, of all cuts and deadlines. There are some for All budgets and all appetites. The big guys don't profit. more on top of each other: the game menu is too abundant dant. However, they sometimes argue, as if they were With their families, unsuspecting, the reckless ones! Just a bunch of indiscreet people! can hear them.

How many lessons can be learned from their controversy!
Railway Journal of April 11, 1857, for example, preaches like a prosecutor general of the Revolution:

"a The issuance of shares with premiums had the inevitable effect of- able to develop speculation, and, let's be frank, the the most deplorable speculation, the one that has rightly been described speculation, which consists of buying what one cannot afford and to sell what we don't own. We know very well that People who do the sad job of short selling find an excuse in the premium that the founders take. The agio- They believe they have the right to act as they do because, they say, the rate at which the founders want to sell their actions is exaggerated; they think it is fair game to participate, in one way or another, in these exor- bitants. »

Short selling is not the only thing tainted.
of speculation, because here are two companies to which these kinds markets are prohibited by their statutes, and on which The Journal du crédit public expresses itself in these terms:

"The opposing camps are led by two major establishments"

THE SIMPLE GAME 2 19

financial institutions that have powerful resources and a immense credit. It is especially between these two rivals that the
The game is on, and we know that with such opponents,
Victory often depends on the final throw of the dice.

The newspaper L'Industrie of May 30, 1857 summarizes the morality of the onerous-
tions:

"The mass of small-scale speculators has been severely tested"
For the past few months, as ultimately, between buyers
And sellers on the Stock Exchange, there isn't a single cent of production.
What one gains is lost by others; and since one counts in the tens, and even hundreds of links profits shared between a few establishments and a number limited to individuals, and carried out on reports, brokerages, especially regarding bonuses, it is necessary that this money come out of somewhere, and one should not be surprised to find a place
"Clearly after such harsh rejections."

The Journal du Crédit public (August 1857) will give us measuring the services rendered by the founders of our prosperity and justify their claims to apotheosis:

"Large capital associations no longer sign off on anything"
of life, the situation may be gradually clearing itself of all encumbrances, Prunts and any remnants of the past, the companies started Although they may promise a return, the capital he-site to continue their work of association.

"That's because the stock market no longer offers bonuses to the first ones."
large-scale investors. There's no hope left.
to expect profits, even from the future of large companies.
What's the point then of engaging in long-term financial operations?
breath, which, by the very fact that they are important, demar-

"If we were to take stock of everything, including capital in-committed to the first issue of major companies have Given the discounted bonuses, it would be understandable that they wouldn't want to return to the same values they once held.

231 | BITTERNESS

hardly abandoned profitably, and which would not give them at-today, only 7% at most, instead of the 25% and 30% they have withdrawn them previously, »

Discounting for long-term businesses

What a subversion of all ideas of morality, of economics, of work, public order, and collective wealth! The discount of a company established for 99 years! The legal proceedings
And the documents we will cite later are there: the fact is constant, irrefutable. Why create a compa-gnie: of docks, cars, gas, exploitation.
Mists of the Seine or the sea? In order to ensure a Public service? Period! In order to expect anything, Public stupidity above all, a name that commands respect,
sometimes a serious design and slow development, Painful, random.

We must follow, from its origin to its putrefaction faction, this social monstrosity, and show how a
This false principle inevitably, necessarily, engenders the abominations whose account has scandalized all our readers.

The idea of discounting long-term companies is born from banking practice, the discounting of securities
trade.

The banker, let us remember this, is not a lender
no money nor a sponsor, nor is he an entrepreneur business or industrialist. The basis of his operations is the discounting of securities. For this discount, he is paid,
In addition to interest, 10 a commission, which is his salary; 2° a premium which varies according to market conditions, exchange rates
This is the risk of non-payment, which is called agio.

How could we reduce these levies to the simple commission fees, by removing the bonus and interest, is as we will demonstrate in subsequent publications, and which we have already hinted at in our Introduction.

A bank must operate without capital; the only guarantee of its transactions, that's the wallet; the bill brought today A is pledged by B's matured note, and will in turn guarantee The one that G will present tomorrow. May the accounts be settled by Transfers, checks, tickets or cash, there is no there is no reason to establish a difference in treatment, a hierarchy-Shit between the various payment methods. The supremacy of Gold and silver are condemned by economic science.

The discounting of trade securities is merely the pressure-the present situation, the day-to-day inconvenience; the discounting of tra-Long-term investments are the ruin of the future. Let's take An example. A region needs a railway. What What do science and common sense say on this subject?

A railway, like all transport routes, is an expenditure of public order and utility, attributable to the nation's general expenses. If taxation could suffice, this would be best. However, as the benefits of creation-tion will be spread over several generations, it is just to also stagger the charges. Therefore, one must allocate a A loan amortizable by annuities, with no net proceeds. The bonus The railway is reflected in the ease, regularity, and vi-communications department. Rates must be established at manimum, alin than by the low price, the benefit of the creation-collective operation will benefit everyone. To whom will the line be granted? To companies of metalworkers, mechanics, contractors of buildings, earthworks, under the supervision of a com-mission undertaken in the chambers of commerce, Îles Conseils of the labor court, interested clients of the process, and under the high control of the government and the legislative branch. This is the reasoning of the social economy.

What do capitalism, parasitism, and the Jewishness, speculation?

The natural concessionaires of a railway are the Bankers, arbiters of credit. A concession of this kind, This is, as with the discounting of a trade value, the e-change of an unknown value ("construction, operation, risks, line products) against a known value (ca-hospital, stocks and bonds), that the said bankers would charge—gent to procure, not from their own funds and their own coffers, but by their clients and by the public who have faith in their credit.

21,

On September 9, 1845, the Northern Railway was awarded to Messrs. Rothschild brothers, Hottinguer, Ch. Laffitte and Blount, for a period of thirty-eight years. What does that mean if—Gaified?

This is because Messrs. Rothschild brothers, Hottinguer, Ch. Laflitte and Blount have committed themselves to the State, not to become themselves same, and directly, entrepreneurs and operators of the che—North iron ore mine, but to form an anonymous company who will take this commitment in their place; let them bear guarantee from this company; that they guarantee the training of its capital.

Naturally, such a large-scale operation, viewed as random, requires for the concessionaires remuneration= tion, commission,agio. Their job is not to commit their own capital in any industry, that is to procure îa
sponsorship, to act as intermediaries, and, provisionally, to bear the burden, until other capitalists,
non-bankers, led by example, convinced of the
The goodness of the investment, they relieve them of it. The premium, let's use it.
From the technical term, the bonus, received by the bankers, is will therefore consist of a portion of the added value, between, a part, the presumed products of the route for 38 years, aug—mentioned the amount to be reimbursed for this same route, to the termination of the lease, by the company or by the State; and, on the other hand Part, the capital of 200,000 million, with interest, to which one _ assesses the establishment costs from the outset.

How much will this bonus be?

Such negotiations are only undertaken with significant resources.
profit. Increase it to just 20 percent, it will be 40 million lions for the bankers, before we've even started the works; 40 million that will not be included in the material—riel of the road, ct who will be removed from the country's assets,

Who will pave this bonus?

The shareholders, to whom the 500 franc shares will be issued

THE SIMPLE GAME 047

against payment of 540, 360, 600 francs, depending on whether the favor will be acquired by the company; in other words, depending on whether the government more or less attractive to dealers, and that's what they are.

People involved in finance and speculation will have, more or less skillfully...
ment maneuvered, We are already far from the elementary speculation-silence.

Let us move from theory to facts: we will see that they do not differ not methods revealed by the correctional police and the civil trials.

CHAPTER II

+

THE FOUNDATIONS CHAPTER

#

Let's continue the story of the Northern Line with the intelligence-Mr. Raoul Boudon's teachings: {The Truth on the Paths of iron in France:

"When you consider," the author said, "that the Northern line had was initially granted for thirty-eight years, that this line has cost 442 million to build, which took almost three years to put it into operation, even though it had been intact-constructed by the State, in accordance with the conditions of the law of June 11, 1842, which consequently meant that there were barely thirty-five years to amortize this capital plus interest and initial establishment costs, during this period at a low
Given the unproductive nature of the situation, one is tempted to wonder if the concession
The Zionists were no more foolish than the subscribers.
of shares.

"They could, in fact, excuse themselves from such a thing"
It was madness to say that at the time they subscribed, they did not _ were not aware of the conditions of the auction, which they had faith in the future of railway companies, and that they could not have imagined at the time that these companies, excellent by themselves, could be compromised only by accepting inexperienced bidders.

THE FOUNDATIONS CHAPTER 19

"But those who had assumed responsibility for themselves
Having accepted these specifications, what excuse could there be?
They allege...

"Only one: that by accepting these conditions, they had..."
very little concerned with the increase or decrease in profits that could give the exploitation; that they had only had in mind that the bonus that one could obtain overnight on the actions, and by enabling subscribers to achieve this bonus, by extending their actions, their responsibility towards-their position was completely clear in case
They would be making the mistake of retaining their titles.

"That is how speculation, from the very beginning, cast discredit on railway companies, and removed the industries-serious driels. The public, which hardly studies or analyzes the chances of success of a business, he thought he saw, in the debacle of actions that took place as early as 1847, proof that exploitation Building railways was a bad operation, while there were no had had positive negative experiences, in the concessions, that the terms of the award accepted by the administrators
authors,

"That's how it was. From the very beginning, the industry's initiative..."

private was sidelined, disgusted by the operation of the railway lines created, and that state intervention later became ninecessary to ensure the network's operation...

"From the very beginning of the company, and three years before it..."
yields no profit; the Company's capital of 160 million
The North was sold to the public for 340 million; therefore 180 million siphoned off by speculation under the pretext of strengthen the company's credit.

"Wasn't this, on the contrary, the most serious offense against this credit that is imposed on the company, vis-à-vis the acquired shareholders at a rate of 860 francs, charges which it would unable to ever fill it? That is, in fact, what

250 FINANCIAL EQUITY

arrived, the more the operation developed and drew closer by Consequently, the time of the actual product, plus the share price should have consolidated, but the opposite was happening.
plus the ac'ious fell on the Stock Exchange; so much so that from 860 fr.
In 1845, they numbered only 497, in 1847, to recover in 1851, with the hopes that the merger brought about, at 580.

"Things were in this state when the decrees of 1852, The island's goal was undoubtedly highly commendable, and they came to stimulate again speculation and providing him with the opportunity to execute a second raid on the capitalists; those were the good times financial raids.

"Indeed, the 38, 40 and 45 year concessions were von-verlies in conc:ssions of 99 years from the promulgation of the said decrees; also the actions of the Northern Company, of the course of 575 where they were at the end of 1852, reached-they, from the first months of 1853, the price of 975 francs, and the the public was paying a new tribute of 280 million to speculation lions to boost the company's credit, corn, alas! without to be able to consolidate it further.

"This phenomenal increase was in reality the only result" produced by the decrees of 1852; for as early as 1854, the actions of the North had fallen back to 680 francs... and the credit of these companies guides, which these same decrees aimed to maintain, had already fallen so much that they could no longer find anything to emprunter without the guarantee of the State, and that they found themselves in newly unable to continue their work without

"SOI CONCOMOUFS."

If, once the premium was collected, the operation resumed a 'process' regular, as required by a public service, the drawback would be less; one would recover from it, one would be consoled. But no, the subscription made in the hands of the State is only the first link in a long series of specious operations:

Contracts and subcontracts for land purchases, works of art and earthworks, laying of rails, construction of ma-China: speculation.

Company mergers, authorized, even provoked by the power, approved by the Council of State, but not the. Where the principle of number of competitors is violated, the value of the exaggerated company, all reports combined: asio-stage.

THE FOUNDATIONS CHAPTER 01

Agora-style tariffs, differential tariffs defended but tolerated: agiolage.

Share issuances, conversions and doublings, dividends anticipated, exaggerated debts, premiums, discounts on the future profiting from the present: speculation.

Issuance of bonds: agioage,
State subsidies and interest guarantees for mortgages whose discussion is forbidden to the public: speculation.

The worst part of all this is that, in major business matters bank, such as public loans, concessions of railways, cars, ocean liners, gas, banks. Quakers are always quite well informed, the power quite complacent, the public foolish enough, for the operation to take place. Certainly: in the event of danger to the banker, the government, through a multitude of considerations all more political than each other, don't hesitate to re-lifting of his commitment, as we shall see.

Bankers, as we have said, are merely es-counters, as soon as they have extracted from a case all that it can yield immediate profits; they break free and run to a new prey. But if there is a need to combine future investments, capital increases or concessions, Whatever the advantages, they come back. That's what happened. tagged and is practiced on a vast scale with the paths of iron. Here are some examples of what is called faith contracts in finance.

On September 9, 1845, the Northern Railway was completed. leased for 38 years. On December 20th, the branch line The lease from Creil to Saint-Quentin was awarded for 24 years and 335 days. The Amiens to Boulogne line had been given on October 15th. bre 1844 on a lease of 98 years 11 months.

y

The speculation

In February 1852, all these concessions were extended. 4.99 years to run from September 10th 1852,

In 1853, the entry into enjoyment was set for September 10, 1853. was postponed to December 31, 1851.

Strasbourg Road, alioué, November 2, 1845

September 2 [553.

Lise de Lvon, sold at auction on December 20, 1845 for a duration of 2 years; taken over by the State on August 17, 1848, the case ofvowing bad waltz; returned to the Island on January 5, 1852, the case re-Lutl Lonne, to an Exploiting Company: duration, 99 years.

Lyon to Avignon line, awarded on June 10, 1846 for 99 years; taken over by the State in 188; rendered on January 3 viur [59? to a company for a period of 99 years.

Liane from Paris to Orléans, sold on July 7, 1838 for 40 years old; purged at 99 years old on July 10, 180.

From Orléans to Bordeaux, auction held on October 9, 1844; of-lease term: 27 years 278 days, first extension to 50 years
August 6, 1850.

From Tours to Nantes, contract awarded on November 25, 1845; concession of 5 to 15 days; first extension at 50 years, August 1850.

Chemin du Centre, concession of 39 years 11 months, on October 9th
October 1844.

Finally, on March 27, 1857, the Paris-Orléans lines merged.
from Orléans-Bordeaux, from Tours-Nantes, from the Centre, new Luil, 99 years old, running from 1852.

It appears, in summary, from the aforementioned facts that the increases
The lease terms were:

67 years on the Northern Line:

60 years on that of Creil to Saint-Quentin;

63 years on the eastern one;

THE FOUNDATIONS CHAPTER + 093

\

43 years on the one in Orléans; |
67 years old on that of the Centre;
78 years on the one from Tours to Nantes;

The lines from the East, the Center, from Orléans to Bordeaux, from Towers in Nantes, from Chartres, were built in the system-theme of the 1842 law, that is to say, land purchases, the earthworks, engineering works at the State's expense; the installation of the track and rolling stock at the expense of the bidders. Meanwhile, the companies obtained from the government-loan, grant, and interest guarantee arrangements, Waiving profit sharing. Examples:

August 9, 1846, loan of 3 million to the Montereau company in Troyes;

July 15, 1840, loan of 12,600,000 francs to that of Strasbourg in Basel',

January 5, 1852, guaranteed by the State to the Paris company in Lyon, for 50 years, at a 40/0 interest rate on capital of 200 million.

May 10, 1850, guarantee of a 5% interest rate on a loan of 30 million to be contracted by the Avignon company Marseille;

July 15, 1852, free transfer of the Nîmes to Mont- pellier, state property, to the Lyon-Médier- company ranée;; guaranteed to the same company an annual sum of 2,735,000 fr.}; 4 0/0 with a capital of 31 million; of 5 0/0 of a loan of 30 million.

August 1848, deadline granted to the Northern Company to rem-allocation of sums owed to the State; whereby the Shares are issued at 400 francs instead of 500, i.e. 40 million which will not be paid by the shareholders and which will be... will be reimbursed during the amortization period.

July 15, 1840, 4% guarantee to the Gold Company Leans.

March 2nd, Catebsion at 120 million fa guaranteed pre.
cedunt,

June 16, $1.54, guarantee to the Western Company of a liability insurance policy.
annual revenue of 19,624,000 francs.

Shall we talk about mergers, divestitures, and restructurings?
Company formations, rescue zone boundaries? Let's cite one example.
example :

The Grand-Central was granted on April 9, 1853.

On December 6th of the following year, he bought the roads of the Rhône.
ct-Loire.

On January 31, 1855, he sold them to the Lyon- company Bourbonnais.

On December 15, 1855, he obtained the branch of Fir-miny.

On June 8, 1855, he bought the Moulins railway line.

Even in the same year, he bought the Aubin mines, the famous mines whose history we recounted on page 108,

On January 31, 1855, he joined the Lyon-Bour- union good.

On the same date, he bought from the Orléans company the section of Saint-Germain-des-Lossés.

[S3, the Grand-Central is dismembered, liquidated, divided, actif and passive, between the companies of Orléans and Paris-Mé-Mediterranean.

And how can the shareholders recognize each other?
In this perpetual bubbling of treaties? The shareholders are, like the rest, subject to the regime of grace, treat-ordered according to the pleasure of the high and powerful lords. Happy I'm elected! So:

The shareholders of Nonterreau in Troyes are being reimbursed.
au pair, in cash.

Those from Saint-Dizier to Gray, due to an obligation of 500 francs (25 francs interest, repayment at 650) against 2 shares released from 2950 francs.

Those from Strasbourg to Basel, by 3 bonds and a balance 31.50 francs for 4 shares,

Those from Mulhouse to Thann, by an obligation against a action.

Shareholders from Amiens to Boulogne, from Dijon to Besançon, from Avignon to Marseille, from Grand-Central, from Dieppe and Fécamp, of Versailles (left bank), etc., receive obligations to fixed income in exchange for shares that may increase in value or loss in value.

The shareholders! They count like fattened pigs!
when it's not game, in contracts,

In the Western merger:

Chartres receives a new share for an old one;
Rouen, 19 for 12: |

Le Havre, 6 against 7:

Caen and Cherbourg, 6 against 7, after liberation:
Saint-Germain, for a double action, a half-tion, plus half a bond with a nominal capital of 1,250 francs, producing 50 francs of interest.

In the Orléans merger, 8 new shares were issued.
against :

5 old women from Orléans, all paid for;
10 from the Centre, all paid for:
15 from Orléans to Bordeaux, freed from 275 francs;
20 from Tours to Nantes, freed from 425 francs.

Merger of the Paris to Lyon and Lyon to the Mediterranean lines
year:

The Lyon-Mediterranean company receives:

Paris Lyon, 3 new ones versus ? old ones.

So that the capital of the two companies, represented by 355,000 shares of 500 francs, is increased to 577,500 shares.

256 BITTERNESS

tions, representing a bonus of 222,500 shares that did not pay out sou.

How the idea of speculation has grown!

In order to enlighten our readers about these metamorphoses, we let's tell them in detail a complete story of this kind of operation, the most honest merger, or at least the most conscientiously made.

CHAPTER III

STORY OF A MERGER (ORLÉANS.)

The contracting parties are the companies: 1° of Paris in Orléans: 20 from Orléans to Bordeaux; 30 from Tours to Nantes; 4th of the Centre.

The agreements of March 18, 1852 for the companies of Centre and Nantes, from March 20th for that of Bordeaux, were consented to by some administrators acting in by virtue of the full powers conferred upon them, not by an aecsem-general agreement, but simply by the board of directors Transfer of leases. The lease assignments were carried out under the conditions following:

The Centre company was receiving a 'new action against two' old ones released at 600 francs, or 33,000 instead of 66,000; for a Paid-up capital of... 393,000,000 one of them was recognized. « « , + + + + + _ 16,150,000

DEPICIT. . . . , 46,500,000

The Bordeaux company received one new share for every three old ones, released at 275 francs, or 43,334 instead of 130,000; for a Paid-up capital of... 0 + + + -35,750,000
It was a recognized capital of... + + + 21,666,666

DEFICIT, +. . o 14,083,334
22,

258 THE AGIOTAUE

The Tours-Nantes company, exchanged for a non-share old, four old ones, released at 424 francs, followed by 20,000 instead of 81,000, and for a capillary payment of 3+,000,000 acknowledgment of, . . 4 4. «+ + . + « 10,000 ,0K)

DEFICIT, +. . 24,000,000

In short, according to the figures in the report:

"The shareholder of the Centre, for whom the new Or- share Léans represented a payment of 1000 francs; – the shareholder of Bordeaux, for whom it represented a payment of 825 (r.; – the Nantes shareholder, for whom it represented a ver- those receiving a contribution of 1,700 francs, were only entitled, through the annual dra a refund of 00 francs, »

Why these sacrifices? Because the acquiring company, in operation for ten years, had, in addition to its own traffic, the transit of other lines; that its actions were stuck to 1,200 francs; that the Bordeaux road and the Centre road were only operated in sections; that the line of Nantes had just opened and had not yet achieved any di- empty. If it had been a government buyout, one would not have had hyperbolic enough terms to condemn a Torture of contracts, a veritable spoliation, an attack to the property. The rapporteur of the Paris company to Strasbourg said, in 1848, regarding the project to take over the State-run roads:

"We understand, to a certain extent, that lots-

born, and while the shares are definitively classified, the dividends distributed can serve as a basis for the value of actions in ordinary times, but when, like ours, a railway is a means of construction, there is no division "dendes that can serve as a regulator of the buyback price,"

The selling companies, which had also made their protest in 1848, could invoke the future that their reserved the extension and completion of the roads started; the importance that would give to the Nantes line the Saint-Nazaire business, perhaps destined to supplant the Le Havre, but these were financiers dealing with financiers Ciers: shareholder confidence was a given. Then, when the approval was submitted to the general assemblies,

STORY OF A MERGER 209

The merger was already a fait accompli: the Council of State had approved; acceptance by shareholders; the compa-
Sic nouvelle had obtained lease extensions, extensions, interest guarantees; it was difficult for interested in escaping this network of influence; then he was It was unheard of until then for a general assembly to have voted against it. the proposals (of the council). However, there were, according to con- translators, if we are to believe the report in a newspaper:

But the vote vindicated it. The merger obtained 889 votes against 7 at the Central assembly; 1,034 against 43 at that of Nantes, and less jonanimity? than that of Bordeaux. The opposanis, in Despite the faith in contracts, they had to endure the conditions of the majority.

These initial conventions were improved by those of the 29 May 1852; it was decided that the exchange of securities would take place in the proportions of:

$ old ones from Orléans,
10 of Ceñitie.

45 from Bordeaux.

20 from Nantes.

8 new actions against

Ge, which reduced the deficit of the selling companies
cumme suit:

| CAPITAL PAID IN. CAPITAL RECOGNIZED. DEFICIT.
Center. 43,00,0000 3,400,000 6,600,000
Bordeaux, _35,750,000 34,667,000 1,083,880
Nantes. 34,000,000 16,000,000 18,000,000

Was this a concession made to legitimate demands?
What is certain is that it had been demanded; because the report

200 THE AGIOTAGUE

speaks of "objections raised from the specific point of view of "Depreciation." But there was, at its core, a consideration that we have not yet examined.

The capital of the new company was thus cons-
title:

Shares of Paris-Orléans. . + + + 40,000,000
Acquisition of the Central line. 16,500,000
me - from Bordeaux, . . , . 21,666,666
_- _-_- do Nantes. , + + + e 10,000,000

LOTAL. © o + D9,166,6066 fr.

represented by 176,334 shares. The administration proposed to increase the social fund by three-fifths, i.e.
52,900,000 francs. : which raised it to 141,067,000 fr. in number round.

What was this increase without payment?

Calf? A fairly simple operation at first glance. It pleases an owner to value his building at 800,000 francs instead 500,000: a permit for him is a boast; he claims to be more rich as he is; only, if it's a matter of finding a buyer,
The actual price will need to be discussed. However, in this case, the buyer is entirely ready; every day the company's shares are sold and are bought on the stock exchange. Those from Paris to Orléans were at 4,200 francs before the merger; this was a potential capital gain.

body.

The rapporteur had sensed it so well that he went ahead with it.

of the object:

"The capital paid in by the shareholders of the four companies—
"Gnies," he said, "is from:"

£0,000,000 by the shareholders of Orléans,
33,000,000 by those from the Center,

35,760,000 by those of Bordeaux,
38,000,000 by those from Nantes.

"TOTAL: 142,750,000"

STORY OF A MERGER 261

"a What is the difference between this figure of 142 million and the one of 88 million to which the capital had initially been set The New Society? The difference is, more or less, three-fifths more.

"So, if in the exchange of securities we were giving 8 shares For 5, that is to say three-fifths more, we would arrive at, as approximately as possible, to be represented between the shareholders' hands the capital invested in all of the work carried out. In effect, this would mean the number of actions raised to 282,134, or, at 500 francs each, 141,067,000 To round the figure, we would only need to create 17.806 ac- new tions representing, at 500 francs each, 8,933,000 fr, : which would give a total of 300,000 shares representing 450 millions.

"This improvement would be neither forced nor artificial," because it stemmed from this single fact: that instead of representing a capital partially depreciated, that is to say an accidental circumstance lace of the market, the new shares would represent the ca- "pital poured out, that is to say, the very truth of things,"

Very well for the group; let's see about the details.

ment:

The Center 8 U 7 + 6 + + 9 + ss +
Bordeaux + - e 8 + +7 + = ee + , + »
Nantes |] + e + + ® . + + = » +

TOGETHER, less... 25,683,000

On the contrary, the Orléans company, receiving 8 shares against 5, for his part:

428,000 shares, representing a payment of 6%,006,000 while she only spent40,000,000

ES

DIFFERENCE, in addition. 23,009,000

This capital gain, "an accidental market circumstance,"

26? The Agiota

takes on a reality that translated at the amodlisserhent into a a bonus of 24 million.

This question of depreciation had not entered into the origin in the combinations of the Council; these are some serious capitalists who will have raised it: the administrators the tors were pre-emptively only on the other side of The question is: speculation. That is indeed the most important thing.

The shares of the new company were quick to... to be listed, like the old ones, at 1,200 francs. The shareholders of Nantes, having received 8 shares out of 20, released at 495, were able to to make 9,600 francs compared to the 8,500 francs they had spent;
– those of Ceritre, with 8 shares against 10, released at 500, earned 9,600 for 5,000; – those from Bordeaux, with 15 shares issued at 275, having cost 4.125 francs, could sell 8 at a price of 9,600; = as for acquired compapagiareur, with its 5 shares, costing 2,500, she also won 9,600 francs, and almost quadrupled his initial stake. That's
The whole moral of the story.

Vulgar scholarship recipients, when it comes to a project with the study, anxiously awaiting the moment when it will transition to the state of realization, counting on having the first profits. The most. Part of the time, it's a miscalculation: the merger was expected, Nothing could be easier to explain. The administrators know-sensed the conditions of the concession well in advance new; as it is unheard of for a general assembly to have They have never amended or rejected a proposal from the council; they have not no need to wait for the vote to be informed, like the vulgum pecus; they can, therefore, begin their operations two or three months before the public. At the end of In February, the shares of the merged companies were:

Orléans at 41148
Lo Centro at 698
Bordeaux at 49%
, Nantes to 'HN

The series of actions that were expected to produce, after the merger,

STORY OF A MERGER 163

and the amended agreement of May 25, 9,600 francs, could to be purchased at the following prices:

5.725 for Orléans.
5,250 for the Centre.
6,373 for Bordeaux.
6,000 for Nantes.

But who could have predicted the rise in prices? Those still who alone make the weather and the rise and the decrease; those who have the ability to distribute the gross product, in order to raise values, unless the future of the company is at risk of being jeopardized risks capable of causing more than just a downfall, namely a liquidation, a bankruptcy.

All the treaty revisions we have mentioned
A few examples are expected a long time ago. The fa-the conventions of 1839, the history of which we will not discuss further. and the appreciation for their subsequent publication, did not Two years of speculation have been dealt with; consequently, prices are falling. and are now sustained only by the hope of new fa-veurs, The day the swindlers declare that there is no more in the fraudulent cases mentioned at the beginning of this book: speculation reigns supreme. Our chapter on Accounting— This newfound ability will shed a great light on the future. But let's talk first. general meetings,

CHAPTER IV

STRATEGY FOR GENERAL MEETINGS

Finance has its jurisprudence, or, more modestly, its uses. She claims that a general shareholders' meeting— naires is sovereign to abolish, change, overturn the foundations of the contract; it does not admit, like politics, a charter, declarations of principles, prior rights superiors and leaders. What could be more immoral than such a pre-Attention!

Thus, with regard to third parties, a company with capital— 100 million shares are issued, along with 50 million bonds. Lenders, finding the mortgage sufficient, flocked to the sub-description; a few years later, without increasing the number shares, the assembly issues a new bond of 100 tail— lions, i.e., a mortgage of 100 against a debt of 150: This is the case for all railways; well! in case law—

Financial stability means the initial lenders have nothing to take back to the weakening of their pledge.

It's better to attend the general meeting among shareholders. Generally, you need to hold 20 or 10 shares, depending on the statutes: this is the electoral property qualification transferred from politics to

GENERAL ASSEMBLIES 205

In business matters, votes are counted one per share. of 20 or 0 shares, up to a maximum of 5 or 0 votes. It follows that a decision of the assembly is binding, as well as We already said this in the Introduction: |

1° Those who came and voted in favor;

2. Those who voted against:

30 Those who did not come:

49 Those who did not have the right to come, possessing

Such a monstrous doctrine of absolutism could not to appear in court without provoking repression. And that's exactly what happened.

The Paris Court had ruled that the general assembly of shareholders before voting, by the majority required by the act social, the non-execution of the Fécamp line, this decision bound all shareholders. The Court of Cassation did not hesitate to overturn the aforementioned ruling on the grounds that the two lines of Dieppe and Fécamp formed the essential basis of the act social, and that only unanimity could modify a clause of this kind. The case was referred to the Court of Orléans. who, adopting the principles of the Supreme Court, pronounced the resolution of the company's articles of association, if it were better not to have liked to execute the Fécamp branch within the deadline of two and a half years.

In the past, general assemblies were used to discuss and People believed in the law. The shareholders were wealthy people. and enlightened; it was permissible to hope that affairs would take- They would appear honest. There were interested parties who attended the assemblies, not for show, but with the intention to audit the accounts, to scrutinize the mysteries administrative, to discuss the council's proposals and to introduce amendments.

In the meeting of the Orléans artisans, on March 18, 11, Mr. Bounousouté "complains about what the agenda distributes" to shareholders is written in terms that are far too vague questions. At least one should, when one consults the association. given the numerous and complex questions, indicate briefly outline the points related to it, in the order of printed day, »

" 23

260 AGIGTAGE

Mr. TEISSERENC. "The shareholders are not gathered alone- to decide on the ancillary proposals that concern them are subject to: they must approve the accounts. The use of "The right, which is at the same time a duty for them, that can to be serious only as long as the examination of the accounts is possible. Whatever the order of this care taken in the relation of reports that have just been read, a quick hearing of these Documents overloaded with figures cannot suffice to form

time and resources to consider the state of their business at
With a clear head. This request is not meant to be hurtful.

for the administrators." (Railway Journal of the April 6, 1844).

Another shareholder protests in a letter against the in-influence of the board of directors in the gt- meetings general; he reminds his co-associates that they are not called only to vote as they stand on the proposals of the administrators administrators; that they have the right to discuss and modify them.
to dilify, even to reject them.

Advertising bodies warn speculators that it is not only on the Stock Exchange that they must con-consult the value of the securities, but especially in the reports; that it is a duty to attend meetings
general, otherwise the administrations, acting without cun-
role, can allow the interests of subscribers to perish
authors.

A journalist is surprised that he was refused entry to a assembled as a publicist, given that the press has the right to report on the debates and votes. A host of interests Responsible parties find the journalist's claim perfectly founded. The big day, the publicity, the spotlight, what will it be?
What has become of iodality under such a system?

GENERAL ASSEMBLIES 207

So, as we were saying, there were shareholders Serious, determined to conscientiously monitor the entre-taken: it would have been the safeguarding of everyone's interests, including those of the of the public and the title holders. There was a struggle; but the Preponderance always remained with the director; he would not have less was needed than the enlightened competition of tones for the com-
Instead of beating the stupidity of the vulgar, the press ve-
The weaknesses and weaknesses of the power conspired in a common way accotd the establishment of the bancocratic regime.

Let us note one last, rather edifying, aspect of this struggle of the Right against privilege:

"Paris, March 23, 185.
a To the editor of the Railway Journal.
" Sir,

"Upon reading the report for the year 1844,
Regarding the Saint-Germain railway, I wondered why-that the distribution of profits was not done in accordance to the statutes (Bulletin of Laws, 10th section, 2nd semester 4845) page 846), of which article 12 formally states that the profits seroht distributed, after the payment of 25 francs to the shares:

» Half to the shareholders;

"A quarter of the 2,000 foundation coupons allocated to Mr. Péreire;

"A quarter in reserve,"

"According to the report, the profit surplus being,"
after the island deduction of 25 francs for interest on shares, de soso 209,074 fr. 00 ce

"Half of it going to shareholders was of, ss ss soso 127,937 930

"A quarter of the 2,000 foundation shares, 63,768 Ua

"The quarter in reserve, ,, Ua,iU8 Go

Instead, we distribute:

"To the shareholders, 4,444,000,000"

"To the foundation shares, , . . . + + 1,000 n

"Only in storage, , , . , . . + " " 930,074 GB

208 FINANCIAL ACTION

What motive can be given for this attack on the statutes?
It will be futile to say that shareholder islands participate, like the foundation shares, to this increase in the dividend; it
It is obvious that it is not very sensitive when it is spread over 12,000 shares, while for the founders, the increase-
The investment is nearly 12,000 francs.

"But what suffers most is the reserve fund," who only has 30,074 francs. 65 centimes, instead of 63,768 francs. 65 centimes. that he should have, according to the statutes, and the reserve fund which must be used to reimburse shareholders the capital of 500 francs.
will never reach 2,900,000 francs with such distributions.
to which it must rise for the first distribution to
TO DO.

"And who benefits from this delay, which can only be a prejudice-"
What about the shareholders? Obviously, the founders.

"Is this not, moreover, a way of giving actions a price higher than it should be, by attributing to the actions a dividend higher than it should be legally.

"So, who benefits from this rise in prices?"
Those who speculate on stocks, and not those who have them as Serious investment

"Is there no king's commissioner or supervisor—" any administrative initiative to compel the administration to adhere to the exact execution of the statutes, which form the condition for the existence of societies.

"A subscriber from Dr. Paris."

Mr. Émile Péreire, responding to this accusation, alleged that his discharge:

S'ülest states in our statutes that a quarter must be put into reserve, 1! It is also said that this reserve is intended, between other things, to provide for the interest and amortization of the loans, while retaining an amount equal to half a percent per year of the capital of the issued shares. That's what happens, summer.

Articles open to double meaning and discretionary interpretation

GENERAL ASSEMBLIES 269

to the administrators who want to increase by 12,000 francs:
Their annuity, that's what savvy capitalists didn't want.
not to allow and that it was important to the first hands—
To hold on. The invasion of the Stock Exchange and business by a mob of lackeys, doormen, errand boys, — {a vile multitude, Mr. Thiers would say, — has come to repress into the shadows People capable of shedding light on the discussion. The introduction of this new element in the staff of speculation has been For the upper echelons of banking, this was the equivalent of a coup d'état in the
in the most absolutist sense.

Here's a glimpse of what's called accountability.
This concerns the Crédit Mobilier:

Meeting of April 29, 1854:

from our inception, we have lent our support to an establishment ment to the success to which the government rightly attached of great importance: we want to talk about Crédit Foncier.
We have subscribed to its bonds in a large proportion tion. This operation is now fully liquidated for our society, »

Was there a loss or a profit?

"Merging of the iron ore deposits of the Rhône and Loire rivers – A little later we played a considerable part in the merger of railways from Saint-Étienne to Lyon, from Andrezieux to Roanne and from Saint-Étienne to the Loire, which, united in the hands from a single company, with Island consent and under the guarantee of the State, have since been transferred by this company to the company of the Grand-Central, to which this line provided the complement– an indispensable part of the vast network granted to it, »

Is this simply an unofficial intervention?

Meeting of April 30, 1855:

"Several major companies have asked us, in-23.

said the speculation

dant Pexercicee which has just finished, the contribution of our capital and especially with the help of our credit,

"Soriélé of the Buildings in the Rivoli district, – That's how They were created under our patronage: the Building Society of the rue de Rivoli, founded with a capital of 7% million, and the Maritime company which, in a few days, will have received the sanc-official government formation, and whose capital of 30 million
The lions project, which is fully subscribed, is already partially completed.

What did this patronage produce for the shareholders?

"Mines of the Loire. – We also lent our assistance to the Compagnie des Mines de la Loire for the solution of a difeconomic and industrial complexity which had been a concern for several years
Our intervention allowed farms whose merger might have caused some unease.

Doesn't it look like a report from a justice of the peace who has just...
Reconciling a contentious matter?

"Entreprise des roitures et omnibus, = The approach of the ex-universal position and the ever-increasing daily needs of the circulation had given rise to the idea of an organization new for the local buses serving Paris. Two Rival interests were at play, and our company was able to, through a welcome intervention, safeguarding rights precisely acquired, reconcile claims and facilitate the constitution of a public limited company in which all came to meet and to merge the various companies that shared this industry, »

More arbitration interventions; but accounts of Profits and pearls! We're talking to shareholders.

Other, less important industries have also found
In our country, credit facilities have allowed them to... velapper, etc.

GENERAL ASSEMBLIES 271

In short, the author of the report makes the Society a pae
a negativity aimed at the public, a sales pitch like they make every day in newspaper advertisements; only, in the language of the administrators of Crédit Mobilier, this
This is called being accountable to shareholders. They vote
All proposals were unanimously approved!

How can serious shareholders allow themselves to be strangled?
So, between the pot and the wall? Ah! It's the shareholders Serious people don't have a voice in the assemblies. We have cited, in our Judicial Review, a number of frauds. Was it The exception? Let us judge by the following article taken from Stock Exchange Messenger of January 16, 1858:

"We laughed on stage to make them more striking,"
the intrigues that arise around any industrial matter.
We had characters maneuvering, whose masks
could easily be recorinus on the scene that they temp-They revel in their scandalous successes. We have paraded our planned; we have shown how your council is organized surveillance, how to improvise a rahipott, and tünmient set This charade of general assemblies is a skeletal structure. We have highlighted the composition of fictitious majorities, including those administered by the Company representatives draw up the indemnity bills, the supplements issue, amendments to the articles of association, capital calls, confirmations or extensions of power that they need.

"We have shown how, with the help of foundation actions— donation or contribution, the administration opened to the last of its cothinis or his employees the doors of a meeting from which are Excludes serious potters of less than 40 or 5) shares; cnme— ly, with the help of this compliant public, having the watchword, Practiced as needed through ad hoc repetitions, one managed to GlonffFer the Just complaints, the timid protests of action real births, when we couldn't stun them with reports full of false assertions or brilliant insights of cleverly grouped figures, of incomplete balances, allocations and transfers of accounts onto one another,

972 Speculation

"We showed how the army of extras was flanked by skilled attack leaders, lawyers, businessmen, brokers, journalists, company associates; how to organize organized the interruptions or the applause that was noted; how a proposition was distorted by exaggerating it or by presenting it as a direct insult to honorable people rables; how the modifications were enthusiastically removed the most serious ones; how they were punished, taking advantage of a surprise, acts causing the most serious harm to the statutes of the companies and the guarantees of the shareholders.

"Our paintings were not creations of fantasy," but studies taken on the spot, at the very heart of these meetings unions of mystifiers and mystines, of scoundrels and dupes. The practice of these maneuvers has become so widespread in joint-stock companies, where twenty names were often listed both on the masks we placed on stage, »

When we were to add to this testimony information— ments to us personally, when we would claim to have held in hand a card with 9 votes in the name of a polling station chief who didn't have a penny in the company; when we ju—

We would retract, on our hearts and consciences, that we have returned countered a squad of clerks, engineer in the lead, going to vote as shareholders at the Sainte-Cécile hall; when we would cite the names of half a dozen honest employees who preferred dismissal to shame and us have authorized us to produce their testimony, what would we do? Furthermore, to persuade our readers? They have I read about the trial of the Ports of Marseille and its sordid dealings. Until- Already, the forgery in matters of assembly was only notorious- public order; there was no judicial evidence: or at least, with the excessive leniency of the prosecutor's office, one does not He didn't want to look for it. Today the evidence is sura- abundant: the Attorneys General are forced to do their reservations, as in the Mirès trial, against the horror financiers for legality...

The law stipulated that artisans should take care of their own business, at least once a year: she made their meeting annual an imperative, decisive condition, The Jewish community has He created this axiom for his own use: For business to work, The shareholders shouldn't get involved. Forced to go through the formality of general meetings, she has made this prescription what everyone knows and appreciates NOW.

GENERAL ASSEMBLIES 2.8

Why not simply remove this condition? tion of the assemblies? – No doubt that would simplify the the mechanism of dictatorship; it would spare the thugs the trouble of organizing a meeting of scoundrels, the agio tasked with playing the role of honest people. Corn, on the other hand, What a school of abjection! What resources in this mess! sure to depress characters, debase dignity, crush Consciences! We've all heard it: for the employee scrupulous, there is neither room nor means to live; whoever He refuses to become a forger on the orders of his boss and is expelled. as rebellious, unruly, a bad servant and a bad citizen thinking. Thanks to this system, the purification takes place; we will arrive to retain only starving bandits, worthy Janis- The sycophants of such pashas. The plebeians must be brought down to the level of the bourgeoisie and to bring all souls into unison. Do we want a sample of the work that has been done in the middle classes in this sense? Here's a characteristic anecdote... teristic.

A provincial man came to see me one day, armed with a resite: I would like to be part of the supervisory board of Company X; it is the management committee that proposes the candidates, and since you know Mr. Z, if you would like He would certainly give me a letter from him.

elect. – But the functions of a member of the committee of sur-monitoring services are free. – Sorry, there are tokens for pre-sense, plus initiation into the secrets of the operations of the Society, and by this last means alone, I would be sure of to earn around forty thousand francs a year. Furthermore,

HAS

14. FINANCIAL ACTION

e

Mr. Z could not find a more accommodating supervisor than
I would sign and approve all the closed vows.
You seem to know your era well. – Bah! I don't I'm not ambitious; these gentlemen in management are winning from one hundred and fifty to two hundred thousand francs per year, I I would leave them completely free and would simply glean what I have to give.
My measly forty thousand francs. These are the profits of the surveillance; they have to go to someone, why not Could it be mine?

I declined the honor or indignity of such an immix-
Lion: – I haven't told you about the share I would give you in my profits; but there will be one: it's full Right; do you want to fix the quota? – Thank you, I don't do Not of that sort of thing. – My God, you see in this a abuse, me too, only your apathy will not make the island not to stop. The abuse will continue, and we will not benefit from it.
That's all; it's a very useless kind of virtue.

As a final argument, our man invoked his quality from a Democrat: – Isn't it better than the benefits of The system comes to our party? We create ourselves through that.
means of influence; it is better warfare than to
to leave to the enemy. – I replied that participating in abuses,
It was tantamount to forbidding oneself the right to denounce them... The petitioner he withdrew, and I wouldn't swear that in his heart and conscience,
He doesn't believe me to be a deserter from militant democracy.

This anecdote reminds me of another one of a similar nature.
quite different, yet both contributing to the same goal,

A professor in Paris receives from a friend in the provinces a sum of 8.0 francs, with the mission to insure the place-moves as he sees fit, completely a stranger
In finance, the custodian consulted friends who operated a stock market, on the best use to make of one's trust-
- By Jove, said Fun d'eix, Ut es prédeatiné; nous Let's take an insurance company, a CATPOnrise Sie
perbe, bring us your funds; as principal uc*

GENERAL ASSEMBLIES 219

tonnaire, we tb Pros nmoepmior member of the council of on velauces LU V will be avee uus. - L'hounéie ct conliant
The professor readily agreed. We were watching him.
monitored the company's status using provided forms
through the cash register; that is to say, they simply checked the accuracy of the totals, and the additions never showed-but by mistake. To the newcomer's objections, we respond-said: - Things always happen this way; nothing more Sincere than accounting. Besides, you don't detach yourself from We ?

At the end of a session, the professor receives feedback from his colleagues.
This opinion: We prioritize: we must sell. - Sell what? -
Your shares; they won't go any higher. - I don't care.
I'll gladly go, since the placement is safe. I don't understand.
To speculate. - Let yourself be guided; you don't understand.
Nothing.

At the next meeting: - Well, did you sell anything? we We've all liquidated. - Not at all; I remain loyal to the company.
Imprudent, but we've achieved parity; the shares are at the decline, and it will not stop. - What do oscillations matter?
fortnightly arrangements, which I don't understand. The Society
Is she serious, yes or no? - No, no: there isn't There's nothing underneath. Enjoy the remaining illusion that still surrounds our company, and sell at any price, if you don't
I don't want to lose anymore. And to convince him, they showed him the situation-
The company's true tion. The unfortunate man was devastated.
Repoudil statistically: - You have dragged me into a guct-upens. I am guilty towards [the shareholders of not having-
I can't see anything better, I've fulfilled my supervisory duties and I've had I had faith in your integrity. I cannot in good conscience sell to to bind the scraps of paper that I know have no value theirs. I will lose everything, and I will repay my friend from my personal fortune. Farewell. - The bereaved remained stunned facts. It did not occur to them for a moment that they had Committed a fraud in which they were complicit, and faced with this act of heroic integrity from the professor, they did not truuvéreut qu'uu gt: - It's a Hinbccele!...

CHAPTER V

ACCOUNTING IN HIGH FINANCE

The paragraph we are about to read is taken verbatim from the Report of 1856 to the shareholders of the Northern Railway:

"The Company does not shy away from the necessary sacrifices" services for the maintenance of rolling stock, which gave rise to loss, in 1855, at an expense of 4,067,812 francs, 55 cents, exclusively taken from the firm's produce, the maintenance committee takes not only the ordinary minor repairs, but and major repairs that may become necessary in every kind of case; so that the material is, as much as much as possible, constantly maintained in like-new condition.

» There are only major orders for locomotives, tenders, carriages or wagons and complete tooling for the new workshops intended to service the new lines, which may give rise to imputations, which you authorize. Moreover, on the first establishment's account.

"The expenses incurred in this regard therefore always place between the company's hands a wealth that increases in proportion— even even of these expenses, the value of which is determined from one of the annual inventories, and which depreciates all the less the more it is "Given more attention to maintenance,"

FINANCIAL ACCOUNTING 271

That is to say, to use a trivial comparison, But just, only boots bought for 30 francs, constantly kept in like-new condition by a series of resoles and reassembly would represent, after six months, wealth THAT WOULD HAVE INCREASED in proportion to These expenses amount to something like 45 francs.

After such a profession of faith in accounting matters— With this newfound ability, the reader will no longer have to be surprised by anything.

Dividends taken from capital or from gross product, condemned and punished by the courts every time The courts have been seized of the matter. The question is one of law and principle.

Left to their own devices, the disaster did not occur Don't wait. Those which, like the railways, are in perpetual restructuring, with subsidies and guarantees of the State, can prolong their existence
All artificial. The subject is worth dwelling on.

The average cost per kilometer of railways in France is 474,000 francs; in Belgium, it is only 210,000 francs. Belgium has coal and iron under its belt.
main, at 40% less than us; its population is denser: its specific traffic is more considerable. And the Belgian railway revenues vary from 2 to 5.5 percent, tun-Say that those on our lines are between 7 and 20 percent. That the
The system's eulogists attribute to the skill of our administers this difference in performance, that they re-command from this leader admiration and gratitude of their fellow citizens, that's their job. But accounting does not sway with dithyrambs. The Journal of the che-mins of iron, which will not be suspected of hostility towards the financiers, since it was headed by Mirès, wrote on July 18-
let 1857:

"Since the creation of the railways, it has proven to be a 2

078 FINANCIAL ACTION

The general trend in all companies is to rage.
the divulendes by an accounting system which did indeed have a fair character, but which also had serious drawbacks denies attracting the jealousies of shareholders real estate, by the great apparent prosperity of companies, and then worsen their situation as soon as a
The financial crisis erupted. This system had run its course, and it...
It was so disastrous for the industry that no one was tempted to... continue.

"In current market conditions, the revenue figure allows us to..."
generously reward the shares, while dedicating a portion revenues from operations for track and malôriel, even in the renewal of both.

"It is useful for the establishment account to be closed definitively-" tively for each section opened to traffic. Up to Today, we so easily applied expenses to this account which, in good conscience, should have been included in the ex-exploitation, which we have seen this strange event occur,
of a path producing 20% less to shareholders than

rables. » |

A financier, Mr. Grosjean-Bérard (from Geneva), said, to pro.
Pos of the 1853 loan:

"Railways, however well maintained they may be."
deteriorate; the locomotives and equipment, despite the re-preparations weaken, and there comes a time when dependencies Its capitals are necessary. If then, or has not taken care to to build up strong reserves, Rome is only too ordinary-
In this case, we are forced to resort to a process which has several antecedents: ON BORROWING, We carry half of the expense to the general construction account. and it is necessary to fear-see throughout the duration of the concession to the interest and lake morlization of this half, the other half is brought to a a special compline that is extinguished in ten or twelve years by means of
from a levy on the bee-tices.

FINANCIAL ACCOUNTING A TO

"Future profits are therefore burdened by a portion of the expense for the duration of the concession, and another part for a number of years.

"But this last charge will not have reached its conclusion," that others, having the same origin, will come to add to it; for 11. It will be necessary to renew the entire borders successively, in starting with the oldest and most fa-Tiguces,

"Everything we have just said has been said and foreseen by the serious people. But speculation and the public in general do not don't worry about a future that seems 'o'gné' to them, that ohacun promises himself not to wait to achieve his actions. n

The fact is so well known, the anomaly so obvious, it has been so denounced so often and so early that it is impossible to companies of pretexts of omniscience or ignorance:
Force! Therefore, to seek the cause in a thought arrested, but not confessed.

The accounting system adopted with a view to exaggeration dividends, observes Mr. Mirès, did indeed have a certain character of fairness. He means, and this is indeed the motive alleged by the administrations, that it would not have been fair to leave the present alone; that it was appropriate to reject part of it on the a-

to come, that acting otherwise would have been bad policy;
which shareholders, most of them not very wealthy and comp-
all about their income, would have been discouraged; that one could Consequently, since moreover the product of the paths iron was certain, allowing oneself an anticipation that would satisfy respectable needs, without compromising any interuit,

This is what was said and printed with great fanfare.
a show of foresight and tenderness towards subscribers Poor people. If you want to escape a real jerk, go to... to feeling. EL: father who hurries for dry stokers a paluis Did he sleep under the stars?

280 BITTERNESS

But, — as Mr. Mirès informs us, — this claim-
Due equity was nothing but an abominable trick. Nothing prevented-
It was necessary, since we were keen on it, to anticipate by a few years on the product of the lines; we had a precedent, the interest at 4
p. 0/0 paid during construction. But why distort
The accounting entries? Why include them in the establishment account?
What should be included in the profit and loss statement? Why not?
not to indicate from the first year, by this simple word, memoire, the place of the reserve fund necessary for maintenance roads? Why not announce them at each assembly?
egenrale, in the reports, and have them repeat it newspapers, that the formation of this reserve fund begins-
It would be at such a time, that it would follow such a progression, of in such a way that anticipation would first decrease, then would cease completely, to then give way to a restraint Getting stronger and stronger? Why again, none of
Were these precautions not taken? Why, on the contrary,
Was the embezzlement carefully concealed, defrauded?
kept secret from public knowledge,
dismissed as a criticism of malicious intent?

Ah! So we wanted a raise, we wanted bonuses:
There were fortunes to be made, lives to be rebuilt, a an aristocracy of the self-satisfied to be formed. That's why we have silences the conscience, the good conscience, says Mr. Mirès, and that for fifteen, twenty years, we have been counting establishment of the expenses that were to be included in the account operating.

The Belgian roads, which only give ? to 5 1/2, admit-nistre very differently, as evidenced by the passersthe following, which we borrow from the report of

"1] It is appropriate to recall that the administration has taken on the task to only charge construction expenses to the loans
tion and extension proper; renewal expenses lement, replacement and even improvement have been impubased on maintenance, that is to say on the annual budget.

281

"It should be noted that this method of operation, in accordance with the the law and the regulations of the Court of Auditors, is the only true one, since it has a consequence of not increasing indefinitely the capital or initial establishment account.

"This is how the annual budgets provided for the replacementcementing a quantity of weak rails with strong rails, and to the considerable improvements made to the rolling stock "Lant."

FINANCIAL ACCOUNTING

Let us quote once again on this important subject an authority that No one will object. Mr. Ad. Jullien, the engineer and the director of the most important lines, addressed from
In 1816, when the network was barely in its infancy, he warned-
The following information is provided to the companies:

"We still have to address a question that we may have a little neglected until now, and which is nevertheless of great Importance: we want to talk about the depreciation of the che-e min, and in particular the deterioration of the sleepers, including the renewal, after a few years, will come significantly increase the annual costs related to road maintenance.

"All the reports we consulted are silent or..." more or less on this subject. The English Railways Committee signals the importance of the issue, but states that he cannot to answer it with no specific document; he admits, as a a hypothesis that he does not attempt to explain, a sum of 0.00585 per traveler per kilometer to cover this de-precision.

undeniable signs that the only solution is the renewal of the sleepers oak will require, on Belgian roads, before a few years, a annual expenditure of 1 million. However, the total annual expenditure on these same paths is today only about 5,400,000 francs. The renewal of the sleepers will entail therefore an expense of 19.9 per year; and if traffic does not increase 17

282 Speculation

Don't lie, this renewal will produce, on the price of transport of a traveler per kilometer, an increase from 0 fr. 00:13, and will carry the current price of 0 fr. 027 at 0 fr. 032,

"But it won't just be crossbeams that need replacing; In addition, there will be the track of the rails, the shoes, the wedges, pegs; in the structural works of the framework; in the rolling stock, machines and vehicles to be renewed, We would believe ourselves to be rather below than above the truth carrying, for this depreciation, a figure of 1 cent per passenger transported over 4 kilometers,

"But it seems to us that this is an expense item to almost independent of the traffic that develops on each that path. It is time above all that gradually brings the island the deterioration of the sleepers, which necessitates their replacement. However, time will act in much the same way on the very busy lines and on those that are less so; and if To cover this expense, an additional amount was allocated to average transport cost for a passenger over 4 kilometers, we laugh— would result in a figure that is too high for the paths where the Traffic is active, too low for those where traffic is weak.

"We believe it would be appropriate, to cover this article" of expenditure, to create a reserve fund which we compose: it would be done by means of a deduction made each year from the net proceeds of the company: a deduction that would decrease, it It is true, the dividends to be distributed annually to the shareholders, but which would not expose a company to being found, "after a certain time, burdened with an expense of between. "That's quite extraordinary, an expense that could be..." "strong enough to absorb all of its revenues" » company during the three or four years during which » the renewal of materials entering into "the composition of the lines,"

"This reserve fund, which I consider somewhat arbitrary here—ment, it would seem to me that it should be fixed annually at approximately 4,000 francs per kilometer of double track; that is to say, in twenty years We would thus pay a sum representing the price of the double track, estimated at 0.000 francs per kilometer.

FINANCIAL ACCOUNTING 283

"However, if the rails last more than twenty years, which is doubtful,
The sleepers won't last long, according to Mr. Perrot, — and we
In this regard, we share the opinion he expressed in his writing.
— that ten to twelve years; and the 4,000 francs, which we are carrying, by kilometers of double track and per year, will be rather low than strong when it comes to covering all the necessary expenses Sitcra, the renewal of tracks and their accessories, of frameworks of engineering structures and part of the rolling stock lant; because this equipment, despite the annual expenses allocated its upkeep and preservation will require from time to time that some of its parts be completely rebuilt." (Notes diverses on railways, by Ab. JULLIEN.)

Mr. Jullien's assessments in 1845 have since undergone "Experiential control." The Paris to Orléans route, open
March 1, 1843, state completely renewed in 186.
It lasted 13 years, not 20. How long will the new one last?
under the influence of the enormous traffic brought there by the lines From the Centre region, Nantes, and Bordeaux? We must rely on a ten-year re-election, despite the 7-kilogram increase per linear meter of the weight of the rails.

The Northern route lasted even less time; for in fabrication,
It had already been resurfaced with 509 kilometers of single-voice track. The ad-
The ministry claims, it is true, that this is not a normal condition; that it involved replacing rails insufficient rather than worn, and to reduce the weight from 50 to 47 kilograms per meter. But she forgot to mention that at the same time that she was increasing her rails by 7 kiloga, a little more than quarter, she carried the load of the wasons from 6 tons to 10, and that of the 18 and 20 tonne locomotives at 61, triple, The Nord has machines that load 15,000 kilograms per axle and convoys of 45 wagons, each weighing 10 tons. In a way that the 57-kilogram rails are in conditions of depreciation much more considerable than very old ones at 30 Kilogs, which did not last nine years, without prejudice to the de-

281 FINANCIAL EQUITY

progressive deterioration of works of art under the effect of these overwhelming convoys.

The renewal operation cost, 24%, 460,268 fr.

To be deducted, value of the old materials... 14,870,268

REMAINING. 12,580,000 fr.

The old materials, valued at 11,870,000 francs, are employed for sidings and earthworks on the connections under construction – an outlet that we will not have not always; which does not allow us to consider it as This estimate of 5/12ths of the coins' value is normal. of waste.

In any case, the sum of 12,580,000 francs was imwhore:

"10. Over five annual installments of 860,000 francs taken from the exploitationtation, i.e. 1,800,000 fr.

» 20 On the reserves of depreciation as it had been constituted before the extension to 99 years, i.e. 4,600,000 fr.

"30 The supplement, i.e. 6 million, to the first account" establishment." (Report of 1857.)

This is a clear application of the mistakes we have made.
reported. Reserves for fiscal years prior to 1856, nothing. – Charge of 1,800,000 francs over five operating years.
tation, burdened for the benefit of the past. – Possible bonus of 4,600,000 francs resulting from the extension, which allows to spread the amortization that was to be carried out over 99 years in 38 annual installments: proof that the lease increase had with the immediate aim of making up for past disappointments. The Does the company hope for a further extension every ten years? – Finally, allocation to the first establishment's account-amounting to a sum of 6 million: the loan.

According to the assessments of Messrs. Perdonnet, de Billy, Polon-Ceau, Jullien, the lifespan of the rolling stock cannot be eva-read at over fourteen years old.

An author we have already cited, Mr. Raoul Boudon, has made about the Northern Company, concerning the subject which we occupies the following job:

TABLE OF ANNUAL DISTRIBUTED PROFITS AND PROFITS
ANNUALS DISTRIBUTED FROM 1845 TO 1863 (old network)

ALLES RECIPES

6,154 31
16,826,309
17.32N,:h)2
19,1:42,788
21.1 11,690
27,373,827
30,112,936
35,047,710
40,194,145
18,615,60 1
47,337,970
50,291,167
54,235,900
16,799
00,607, 113
61,122,2428
65,810,12ÿ
66,827,576

EXPENSES

»

0.249.59%
13.03:,849
14,718,954
15,045,762
16,631,7924
19.74),861
21, #68, 060
S 4 ,' 28,782,04.1

38,174,633
39,816,885
40,178,90:)
1,251,480
33,010,778
A4,893,7N2
47,018,592
48,018,592

BENEFITS

Distributable

»
»
»
»

3,742,409
2,012.
4,391,026
1,459,890
7,033,960
E,644,880
11,691,402
11,411,9502
16,382,415
12,863,312
14,471,282
15,0357,497
15,434,378
16,560,334
19,228,6040
18,191.83
16,308,914

731,177,201 18392,834,728|108,342,8231342, 180,000 [143,837,477

PRELIVATES
On capital

PROFITS
Distributed

,000,000

2.5#30,000

k,503,000

7,400.0NX)

9,600.00!

1%, 400,000

18,601.00

18,400,000

20, 0R, 000

24,400,000

22,400,000

2%,000,000

24,400,000

26,200,000

31,200,000

31,123,000

29,675,000

26,200,000

11, 1,489,4167 167

"We can see, according to the table of annual situations of the year-

former network of the Compagnie du Nord, that there is a deficit of 143,837,477 francs in its assets, and that this deficit stems primarily from mainly also from what she has credited to her account of established businesses part of the repair and renewal of its tracks element of his equipment instead of debiting his ex- account exploitation, which resulted in a net product from this account

L.

286 BITTERNESS

distributable, all the more considerable, Some sums Expenses spent on road repairs are, moreover, included in his accounts. establishment, but these sums are far from reaching the figure of 143,83,117 francs, and this is only through a fairly thorough study in-depth analysis of its annual situations that it is possible to to find some traces of the difference,

The company from Amiens to Boulogne, the Northern Company had in operating 507 kilometers, and its establishment costs amount to that same year they had 236,716,731 francs. During the three In years 1852, 53 and 54, it did not put a single one into operation kilometer; therefore its establishment expenses do not—should not have increased, or at least should have increased very little; However, during these three years, the account has been taken into account to establish a sum of 42,147,669 francs. But this is not not everything, we still find in the annual situations anomalies which can obviously only come from the application to the establishment's expense account which should to be included in the operating account. Which seems to justify This way of seeing it is that the first 707 kilometers, with their operating equipment, the establishment of stations, of workshops, etc., are only included in the Company's assets for one sum of 236,710.37 francs, as we have already said, while that the 217 kilometers built from 1851 to 1859 are included, with their equipment, etc., to this same asset, for 152,215,008 francs. Now, assuming that they cost to establish the same price per kilometer more than the other 707, and it is certain that they cost less, they should not represent in the Island account of establishment that a sum of 5 million instead of 15,215.00$ fr; The difference is an additional 10% in millions.

"During the years 1839–60 and 61, the Compagnie du Nord put 90 kilometers into operation, and it did not change its establishment capital of 1,200,000 francs, for These 90 kilometers: but also my report from 19 years ago announced to shareholders that the renewal of the way, for the two Belgian and French networks were completely terminated—Having been eliminated, she therefore had very little to spend on two following years for this object, and that is why without doubt that these 90 kilometer—were included in the state account blissement than for 11 million 500,000 francs, that is to say for a sum proportionally three times less than that represented by their predecessors, while the renovation some of the tracks were not finished.

FINANCIAL ACCOUNTING 287

"If we now add to this difference of 107 millions, the one of approximately 30 million which appears in the state accounts In the reports, we find, to what extent—a few million close, the deficit of 143 millions indicated in our picture." (The Truth About Railways.)

The Northern Company was sensitive to this opinion and took it into account.

Indeed, we read in the 186 report:

"It is an issue that concerns many shareholders" and which was raised and disseminated by certain agents of the advertising: it's that of the reserves for renewal, in a more or less distant future, rolling stock and the track equipment. Considering the very large sums involved. employed in the construction of this equipment, and which form Given that the value of the roads is nearly half, the question arose as to whether, At a certain time, the dividends would not have been notable. diminished, if it is totally absorbed by the de-necessities thought by these renewals, In these precepts sions, where he wondered if he was not wise and necessary. sare to make important reserves on the Bencliffe Islands huals,

"Your committee believed it was its duty to enlighten itself" To answer these questions, she has gathered as much information as possible. that it was possible for him to do so by addressing the Spectrur men, and Cufinelle had to ask these questions to the admitted gentlemen. administrators of your Company who, as much as we, support in-Tired of being caught off guard by unforeseen events tualités.

n]The response to your committee was that Reserve Islands do not

288 | BITTERNESS

the question had no reason to exist, given that NOTHING would suggest the use; that the equipment was maintained in such a way in such a way that it could be considered as always being & the brand new condition, that one would never have to proceed with a renewal development, either complete or for a large part, of this ma-"Terial." – Item for the roads.

It seems to us that the opposing opinions we have cited They also emanate from special men. Now, among specialists who They contradict each other; there is a sovereign, irrefutable arbiter, i.e. Questionable: EXPERIMENT. Here is what she observes through gold Report from the Orléans company's rapporteur (1864):

"We were able to remove from service and replace, namely:

» 120 locomotives and 95 tenders;

» 323 high-speed train cars:

» 718 wagons of the slow trains.

"This equipment has been decommissioned, both because of its condition of vétusité, that because its dispositions were no longer in relation with the needs of our farm.

The equipment, despite being constantly maintained in like-new condition, It eventually disappeared due to obsolescence.

But to all this the Northern Company responded with its transcendental axiom cited at the beginning of this chapter, and which returns to this:

"When society has renewed its paths ten times and
"Her equipment, she will have increased her assets tenfold and will own Ja
":value of ten lanes."

Originally, business was conducted in a more in accordance with the dictates of a clear conscience, as well as We've already noticed this:

"We like to hope that the time when we will have to carrying out a renewal, even a partial one, of the track, is still However, it seemed to us that an administration
The foresighted person should not be caught off guard by events.

FINANCIAL ACCOUNTING 28y

ments, and that it was not fair to let our successes—
on the entire cost of an expense arising from traffic whose fruits we reap, but precisely because of the in-certainty still prevails regarding the probable duration of the route,
We had to be very circumspect, and we did not allocated as a reserve in the 1845 budget, a sum of 450,000 francs, which represents barely 1 percent of the capital... devoted to the construction of the road. The future will reveal its secrets.
to what extent this allowance should be continued.
(Meeting of the shareholders of Orléans, March 29, 1815.)

This wise measure was modified the following year as a result considerations that show what serious capitalists would have acted in the general interest. Under the terms of the law of concession of July 15, 1810, the company was required to amortize his capital in 46 years 32½ days, starting from 1° January 1814.

+ "The duration of the operation was divided into two periods: the first, of 46 years 324 days, in charge of sup-bear interest and amortization of the first stage capital blissement; the second, aged 46 years 228 days, discharged from interest and amortization.

"It follows from this," adds the rapporteur, "that we are obligated-" to support today, mitigating the dividend at distribute, an annual levy of 2,128.30 francs, while that if the depreciation had been spread out, according to the computer real-years, over all the years of the concession, this levy would have been reduced to 1,736,350 francs. This is therefore an additional charge. a fixed amount of 32,000 francs per year which weighs on the shareholders during the initial concession period.

Consequently, the assembly of March 8, 1847 decided that:

"To equalize between all first years of the Îles concession" expenses resulting from the amortization of the social fund and the 1842 loan, which weigh exclusively on a

2

290 BITTERNESS

a period of 46 years and 324 days, beginning on January 1, 1844 and ending on November 20, 1890, a sum would be awarded of 391,552 francs each year of this first period, at means of borrowing including principal and interest, calculated at 3.2221 ten thousandths per 100 per year, would be deferred to the exclusive charge of the second period, beginning the November 24, 1890, and ending July 8, 1937; – that these 391,552 francs would constitute the endowment of the reserve fund, thus that the interest at 3.2227 ten-thousandths; – that this account would consequently have to bear the burden of the loans. necessary for the realization of the facilities, »

Today we have changed all of that.

The theory and application of excessive dividends has generalized; if the railways alone had been involved, the The fact would have been too obvious. This is still the organ of Mr. Mirès, the Railway Journal of June 6, 1857, which reveals The following facts:

"Large financial or industrial companies do not
In our opinion, they do not sufficiently warn against the consequences high dividends when applied to companies which enjoy public favor, and for which the slightest appeal new becomes an element of exaggerated increase...

"Isn't it true that the dividends distributed on are so high?"
The actions of the Bank of France have triggered an increase which will force commerce to satisfy, through the product of Discounts, the new prices of these shares? This could have been avoided.
risk by setting aside the income from discounts exceeding 4 percent, considering that this income was the result of calamities that had momentarily halted our prosperity, and that it was necessary to avoid jeopardizing the interests of the shareholders of the Bank acting against the public interest.

"The Crédit Mobilier distributed 203 francs of income in 1855."
Isn't this the cause of the rise that has raised this value to 1,800 francs, detached coupon? But the current price is 1,200 francs.

FINANCIAL ACCOUNTING 291

The loss for buyers and speculators is therefore considerable.
maple,

"The Compagnie des Messageries distributed 120 francs in 1835."
per share, and the price reached 1,600 francs. In 1836, the revenue was only 50 francs, and the price fell to 390.

"On the western route, the revenue in 1855 was..."
00 francs per share, and the price reached nearly 1,000 francs; in
In 1856, the income, with an increase in revenue, decreased at 42 francs, and the prices fell to 780.

"Having conducted a retrospective review in this respect, one
one of the main causes of the is found in this order of events discouragement currently shown by capital towards of the industry. The public is not expert enough to realize—see that the dividend of Crédit Mobilier, in 1855, was the
as a result of very large deals made during this year, and which also could not reproduce every year. For
For the Messageries, it was obvious that an income that reached 120 francs per share, or 24 percent, was the result of treaties temporary works carried out during transport operations caused by the Eastern war. It was certain, for all men experienced—to lead. But the crowd, which knows neither how to reflect nor reason, and who only sees facts in their crudest expression, as an island, cash payment of a dividend, hastens to on the contrary, to capitalize in its calculations the sums that it receives, and finds himself a victim of his own frivolity.

The year 1858 brought far more serious setbacks: the The revenue from Crédit Mobilier fell to 25 francs, and the shares have fallen below 600; the Eastern Company, which had distributed 74 fr. for the 1856 financial year, gave only 40 fr. 65 on that of 1857, etc. We know where things stand today. all values.

This method of administration has led to the establishment of a system of means

d'h THE BITTERNESS

a financial instrument which, by its very nature, was only meant to be a temporary solution. A potential resource, we are referring to loans. due to obligations,

The philosophy behind the process has been made accessible to everyone.

intelligences through an explanatory note to shareholders of Orléans.

"Given, for example, a capital of 100 million, a 100 products, or 10 million; everyone comes assumes that if this product is to be shared among 200,000 shares of 500 francs, each share will receive 10 percent or 50 francs; but if half of this capital, i.e. 50 million, was provided by bond lenders at a rate of 5 percent, these lenders taking from the.. .. +. 10,000,000 fr.

only,,0.... ee 2,500,000

7,500,000

it would remain for the shareholders... that is to say 55 francs per share or 15 percent,

Gnie, with a capital of 60 million, does not have 120,000 shares, but only 80.00, the surplus, i.e. 20 million, being provided by bond lenders.

"If the net product, which in 1851 was 6,295,865 francs, had to be divided among 120,000 shares, each of them would have only received 52 francs 46 centimes. But the 20 million borrowed did not withdrawing only 1,217,450 francs, he remained at 80,000 shares D,078,415 fr., i.e. for each share 63 fr. 50 c.

"Between these two situations, the difference was, on the last exercise, and for each action.fde 11 fr. 04 c. »

It couldn't be clearer. The explanation would be incomplete without it. Meanwhile, if we did not add a few words of commentary... silences, |

Why, in the face of the higher reason that guides us, this division of the capitalist class into two categories, the Shareholders and bondholders? We are told although that is the interest, at least apparent, of the former;

FINANCIAL ACCOUNTING 303

but there must be, within the system, a more general reason—rale, and that's the one we especially need to know.
Why this privilege within a privilege, if indeed there is one?
privilege?

It is proven by the figures that the railways, if they had been undertaken by the companies alone, firms of a single class of capitalists, the shareholders, produce—would on average at most 3%. This was not enough for the goal to be achieved: the State has consequently undertaken a part—tie of the works, which he delivered to the companies free of charge.
With this in mind, we were able to attempt the undertaking.

But the benefit offered by the government, in the form of works and land, was taken almost entirely by the Speculators and concessionaires, then we found ourselves forced to serve, In anticipation, an annuity for subscribers: two causes which would make subsequent operations difficult. The year—
The anticipation would have been too great, therefore impractical.
if it had been necessary to do it for 200,000 shareholders in the same proportion as for 100,000; — it would have been too fai—ble, therefore insufficient, if one had to be content with that newly created paths. Thus, capitalism was forced to form into two bands, unequally divided in appearance, essentially enjoying roughly equivalent advantages. It is according to this same principle that the State, in order to arrive to the collection of the tax, is obliged to divide it, from the state-to blur across several categories of objects. It would be impossible to asking for two billion from the landowners, much less still at registration, customs, sugar, timber-sounds or tobacco.

It is perfectly understandable, in regular administration, that a company with a capital of ? to 406 million to take out a loan between 20 and 50 million to prepare for unforeseen events, such as a force majeure event, floods of 1856 and 1866, for example, destroying 100 kilometers of railway min; or even an unexpected increase in traffic, requiring additional hardware construction, The

25,

204 | BITTERNESS

In good accounting, the charge must be distributed over a series of exercises, instead of absorbing the net product of plus-several years and to ruin the current holders for the benefit of those of the future, but this is not about administration and accounting; speculation reigns supreme; therefore, it is necessary expect the most fantastic extravagances.

The condition of privilege or benefit of the shares at comparative disadvantage of the bonds resides entirely in the principle of division: shareholders who become-would at the same time their own lenders would do, at At first glance, proof of ineptitude: the combination of both qualities would establish compensation. From the account of A, shareholder, to that of B, a bond lender, there may be inequality; but the same A, both lender and borrower, does not can establish in its general ledger that two accounts which, at the ba-The trade-offs between profits and losses will result in one being more, the other by less, and, consequently, zero advantage.

However, it is a fundamental principle that each bond issue the shares are reserved specifically for shareholders; the securities will only pass into the hands of serious lenders after having left between those of the first, the inevitable bonus.

"An initial series of 150,000 bonds has been issued. Only shareholders were allowed to subscribe to them at the price of at 500 francs for the duration of the concession. For the sub-

For the cryptographers, it was 3 percent to 68; for the company, it was a debt amounting to 4 francs 67 centimes, plus interest and amortization understood. The chosen method therefore seemed to bring together all the "Conveniences, and that's what ensured the operation's success."
(Report from the Orléans Company dated March 31, 1853.)

"We created 80,090 bearer bonds, producing 50 francs of interest, repayable at 1,250 francs during the period of the State guarantee. The issue rate was set at 1.050 francs.
If we had wanted to admit other people to the subscription sounds that the shareholders, the full amount of the loan from 80 million would have been quickly surpassed. 68,160 bonds

FINANCIAL ACCOUNTING 205

have been issued, We have given up negotiating, before May 1st 1853, the 11,840 unsubscribed bonds: by the shareholders, if not at the price of 1.125 francs," {Report of the Company of Lyon, June 30, 1852.)

1,050 francs for close friends, 1.12 for outsiders, different a discount for the benefit of the former, 75 francs per share, and for the 68,160 bonds subscribed, 5,112,000 francs. These are people who steal from themselves, some honest jin- will think dusiriels. But no: they are astute speculators who n will never reach liquidation; most have already done so.
The operation only proves that, despite 89, the tithe con-continues to be the characteristic right of the federal regime.

The financiers in this respect are frank about what borders on cynicism; for example:

"We could have called up the remaining 250 francs to
to invest in new shares, we preferred to ask to the Minister of Public Works the authorization to issue 125,000 obligations.

"We found a double advantage in it. On the one hand, the ac-tionnaires were not required to pay the second half of the value of new shares than at a time closer to the one where these shares were to be shared with the shares
old; on the other hand, we could offer the wearers shares, both old and new, the exclusive right to sub-write bonds, and thus secure an investment which They could appreciate the sturdiness. The authorization that we

(From Paris to Strasbourg, April 28, 1855.)

How to refuse such a combination! instead of to invest 250 francs in already listed, deflowered securities, where there is no It's more than just scraping together what's needed; the goal is to create 125,000 titles.
new, completely virgin, which will be prioritized on the Stock Exchange immediately subscribed, even before; for the requests were of 237,524 bonds, when there were only 425,000
of offers.

96 FINANCIAL ACTION

In 1851, there were some rather foolishly scrupulous bankers they see this process as an abuse, an illegality, press-
that it was an indiscretion:

"The right granted by the statutes to contract loans"
is a power that can only be exercised in cases of insufficiency of the social fund, and the capital must have been previously-Completed. It must not be transformed or modified.
The company's commitments are formal, and the whole of The spirit of the statutes leaves no doubt in this regard.

"However, the board of directors cannot make proposals-"
tions that, according to the statutes, and on its side, the general assembly-General can only bind all shareholders in the limits prescribed by the statutes, »

Who rejected in such wise terms the proposal to issue
A loan before the equity capital is realized? – The rapporteur of the same board of directors of the railway Paris to Strasbourg. But that was in 1851. As we have market since!

However, the confusion of administrative records, the ab-
In the absence of reserves, the allocation to the establishment account of expenses charged to the operating account could well before long, as Mr. Grosjean-Bérard predicted, to make cmprunts is a real inkwell. Here is a warning-a seed that starts from the top:

"Everyone knows about railway bonds"
can only be negotiated under two conditions: the first,
to be given preference over shares; the second, to offer an advantage certain fee to the lender, either in the form of an increase in capital, either in the form of increased interest.

"The capital to be amortized is more considerable than the capital" received: it strictly follows that the social fund is increased This was done to benefit lenders and to the detriment of shareholders.

» There are two types of securities available: bonds and shares. Bonds take precedence over stocks, and are preferred throughout the concession period; they receive a fixed interest rate and are free from all risks; shares, on the contrary, do not receive—wind that a possible interest and run all the chances of the company." (Report from the Paris–Strasbourg Company, (April 29, 1851.)

FINANCIAL ACCOUNTING 207

Let's translate all of this into figures, based on recent reports. We have established the capital account in the Introduction shares of the six major railway companies; it amounted to { billion 477 million. Of this total there are re-Reductions to be made: as a result of mergers and splits of securities, the shares redeemable at par, on the whole companies will receive, upon depreciation, much more that they did not pay. But this is only one incident of which we will have to take this into account elsewhere. Let's accept the figure as it is. the companies give it, even rounding it up to a One and a half billion: That is the pledge, the guarantee, the property. Let's now look at the debt. D According to the 1866 reports, the bond capital, as of December 31, 1865, was established as follows, for both NETWORKS:

Orléans... soso cor venosssnsuse 728,976,808 fr.

North.....e.soeseososessess ss...

Question., 00000.

Paris–Lyon–Mediterranean. soso. 1,496,591,983

AFTER IS PIE TITI TER 736,499,854

... sense &31,000,000

TOTAL,..... bones. 4,989,994,953 francs.

The bonds, issued at an average rate of 300 francs, rather Below that, as above, are refundable at 500 francs, i.e. an increase of two-fifths, or one billion and half a bonus for depreciation. We won't insist. on this detail, because on the other hand, the interest is roughly

But another consideration is the completion of the

298 THE ACIOTING

The network will be perfected exclusively through borrowing:
so that the debt of 4 billion 390 million will increase saying every year, without it being possible to predict
What number will she stop at?

Let us conclude this part of the investigation into this prodigy of comp-capacity: one and a half billion shares, four billion and half of the bonds, without prejudice to the current and future;

In short, ONE pledge, FOUR mortgages!

Ed

CHAPTER VI

THE PRESS AND FINANCE

If a popular newspaper, invested with the trust of the classes working-class and bourgeois women, Le Siècle, for example, had de-denounced this method of bookkeeping and all other abuses, with as much insistence as the removal of little Mortara or the outdated mandates of certain bishops:, he would have spared the country, the State and the bondholders, serious miscalculations. But, still chauvinistic, chivalrous and what-that few Don Quixotes, we are passionate about pointing out

The speck in your neighbor's eye. Let's talk to the French.
excesses committed in Poland, Venetia, and the royal states hands or in Constantinople: the warrior spirit awakens, Subscriptions are being organized, petitions are pouring in: it's the Holy war, the crusade. Excesses here! Bah! No
Are we not the first people in the world, and do not they act there?
not treasonous to designate France as a tributary of the nation of Judah?

We have thus far sought to explain, from the point of view of capitalist feudalism, the miscalculations, the errors, the subversive acts by high finance. We see only one possible interpretation of his reports and accounting bility: They can be considered as the expedient of a power to the Ubois, still clinging to a shadow of reason for his maneuvers, on the condition of speaking alone to amidst the silence of the indifferent and under the approval of How many press accomplices are there? trants? We, in the Speculator's Manual, in 1857: Mr. Raoul Boudon, in his financial bulletins and in his Excellent book, The Truth About Railways. May the cla- The death grows; the Jewish community has only one thing left to do: to demand that the political authorities deport the indiscreet individuals. The beige Independence contained, in November 1858, a article stating that, upon the complaint of the high lords of the bank, railway patrols and all the com- possible companies, a deliberation had taken place at the Tuileries, in the Council of Ministers, in order to prevent unfair criticism vigilant, harmful to public credit, which occurred through the press. The article has not been denied. The media's silence on scandals which resounded in the correctional, civil and courts The trade is also common knowledge. Who has ever heard about the monstrosities denounced in the first part of this book? Mr. Nirès published, in Le Siècle on November 30, 1858, the following letter addressed to the director of the newspaper Le Nord:

"Sir, you announce in your November 8th issue- the commercial court of the Seine condemned Mr. Mirès to pay the sum of 2 million to Messrs. Roblin and Janty, and that, by the same judgment, Mr. Mirès was convicted to pay 200,000 francs to Mr. Larpent, engineer, to whom he had lose the position he held on the Western Railway.

"The court did not issue any convictions against" Mr. Slirès in the Roblin and Janty case. As for Mr. Larpent, His name is revealed to us for the first time by your arli- key.

"It is unfortunate that such formal assertions are "Also completely unfounded."

THE PRESS AND FINANCE 301

So, around November 8, 1858, there had been a The Roblin-Jantv-Mirès case, and a debate before the court of Seine commerce. It is the aforementioned letter which... We learn that no political newspaper in Paris had mentioned it.

North service and all the rumors circulating about the trial by the very publication of the debates and the constitutional sentence air? And then they accuse the rumors of slander! Is that the due to hearsay, if, in these impenetrable shadows, one has attributed to Mr. Mirès ardent efforts to obtain from the government government the silence of the press on his case; if we re-told the court that the said Mirès, reproaching Roblin-Jantv that a market of 8 million was exaggerated by at least 18, The latter's representative replied that Mirès himself had wasted 40 million; that, frightened by the scandal, Mirès would have ran to the papal nuncio to ask him to request the- near NM. the Minister of the Interior the ban on the day- terms of reporting on such a compromising debate for the dignity of the Holy See, the probity of the concession holders, contractors and subcontractors; and that from there came the mu- the turmoil of French journalism and the uncertainty of versions foreign?

The periodical press has sometimes reported the effect of the aver-unofficial weavings. In the 1st of April 1864, Mr. Jour-Dan protests against the pact of inutism established between the journalists lists and major companies, a pact denounced from the podium by Conservative MPs and the more politically correct. He does elevate the responsibility for the silence... (+, ament to fail to comply with an invitation formulated in these terms: "The government would dislike any talk of speculation-MX's or MZ's trial? An opinion of this kind It was brought to me in 18354 on behalf of the Estafette, I I could say by whom.

In 1858, I presented the manuscript to three French publishers from a brochure on the new treaties between the compa-26

30? FINANCIAL ACTION

railway companies and the State. I experienced a refusal.
Nime and motivated.

It's because everything is interconnected in society. The indisputability of Government actions have as a corollary indisputability the actions and gestures of privilege, the pressure that the great companies exert influence over newspapers, and even over the internet. typographic industry, stems from the system of warnings unofficial and official channels to which the government has subjected the press.

First, a word about the position taken by the administration to the printers.

Title I of the law of October 21, 1814 established the censure on manuscripts intended for printing. Its dispositions the statutes were repealed, and neither was the constitution of January 16th. 1852, that the organic decree of February 1st and the senatus-consulted on November 7 of the same year did not restore them blies. It is known to us that in 1854, a printer, having submitted to the public prosecutor the proofs of a work which He was supposed to go home, but received the following reply: We cannot—we will give you prior notice; it would be unconstitutional to do so. Functional: there is no censorship. In 1858, the management of the The bookstore felt compelled to seize the manuscript of a work in publication process. The author claimed, on behalf of the Constitution and organic laws, against this abuse of power, and his request was immediately granted.

That's settled: there is no censorship.

But, on the one hand, the same law of 1814, maintained as Furthermore, he said:

"Art. 11, No one shall be a printer or bookseller unless he is a bre-veterinarian and sworn in,

"Art. 12. The patent may be withdrawn from any printer or bookseller who will have been convicted, by a judgment, of contra-
"Convention against laws and regulations,"

Is there a printer or bookseller in France who doesn't have incurred, through oversight of some formality, a conviction For a traffic violation? The fact is that all, or almost all, are subject to a patent withdrawal, that is to say of complete ruin,

THE PRESS AND FINANCE 303

On the other hand, the seizure of an incriminating work has never failed to bring the printers to court and publishers in charge of the industrial and commercial aspects of the work, even when the author was a serious respondent, According to the Court's ruling in the Montalembert case and according to others since then, the true respondent of a writing would not even be the writer, who, by providing the manuscript, requested the printer's service, it's the printer

The printing and bookselling privileges were handed down. bound by considerations of public order that we have not Not to be discussed here. Notaries, solicitors, bailiffs, the Stockbrokers are subject to the same regulations. In this regard. Regarding the latter, the law declares their ministry to be of force. that is to say, they cannot refuse their assistance to whom- whoever claims it, upon payment, of course. The lé- The legislator wanted to anticipate the unlikely event. a coalition of ministerial officers would prevent a citizen to seek justice, to enter into a contract, or to make a transaction.

But printers and booksellers, through their responsibility judicial (fine and imprisonment), due to administrative risk (patent withdrawal) that they risk, cannot be summoned to lend their support to a publication, whether rightly or wrongly The reason they consider it dangerous is that they consider it dangerous. And the power, naturally not a friend of the press, instead of lending a hand- strong to the citizens who demand the publicity of their opl- denies, applauds the refusal. Everything therefore contributes, the police and industry, to curb this mania for writing that Solomon, King of the Jews by the grace of God, denounced a thousand years before Jesus Christ.

We could cite honorable industrialists who have re-rocketed from the works whose circulation, thanks to less timid, has never been hindered. When it is known that a A bookseller and a printer, as a precaution, rejected a

JU L'AGIOTAGE

"Book, that's the watchword. The coalition of fear produces" the effect of the coalition of malicious intent, which the law intended notify ministerial officers: author is prohibited of the press and of advertising. Before the constitution there is no there is no censorship; in fact, there is, in certain cases, including the industrialists are acting as judges, and judges without appeal, abolishing the constitutional right to publish.

We have just been talking about the bookstore and the printing works. The periodical press is even better guarded. First It's the 50,000 franc bail in Paris. No one has the right to speak daily about public affairs if he has not 30,000 francs to be deposited. Silence to the poor man! – Then it's prior authorization. Who will ever agree to deposit A guarantee with no hope of preferential benefits? Also Do we see the big bank seizing control of the day-

When Mr. de Girardin retired from the press, he ceded his part and the title of editor-in-chief to Mr. Illaud, a former associated with Mirès, then making aflaires, either in his own name staff, either through participation. Barely installed, the new the director extended to stuff his columns, even in pre-Mière Sue, of advertisements in favor of his companies. He It was possible to insert its advertisements, which had become provers, under the banners. Biales: "Buy from the South!" Mr. Rouv, statutory manager, intervened and removed the overly dithyranish claims from the islands. his new leader. Hence the trial. Mr. Millaud is preparing to... the master of the house held out because he was the biggest shareholder; and a carefully and severely determined ruling was necessary motivated to remind him that a statutory manager, responsible-sand civilly, commercially and politically, was not a valet who can be dismissed in eight days.

Later, Mr. Millaud, prosecuted in criminal court and acquitted, but sued by the plaintiff and sentenced to Remembrance to Nassau Railway Shareholders the sums for them, and this because of the prospectus men<ongers {see page 176), had to sell the Press.

THE PRESS AND FINANCE 305

The same Miillaud, former associate of Mirès, found himself again in a general partnership within the company called Caisse et Journal shareholders, along with Messrs. Jourdan, from Le Siècle, Amail and Duveyrier. Finally, in recent times, Mr. Nil-Laud, who still has financial prospectuses to launch, obtained from the outset, he founded his weekly political newspaper. In a criminal trial that we reported on, On page 89, Mr. Ducreux, the deputy prosecutor, reproaches the accused for having Devoured, in less than two years, 8 million. The delinquent His name was Prost; he had founded discount banks in Paris and in the departments. In order to support his speculations and to allow the bonus to mature, he had created a political newspaper-financial journal entitled Journal of Public Credit; then it was de-coming main shareholder of the Messenger de Paris, politics and daily life, caught up in its downfall.

In the Small Cars trial, the indictment accuses managers Crémieu and d'Auriol of embezzlement 55,000 francs were spent on the purchase of the Courrier de Paris, polished tick and daily life.

When MN. Millaud had to sell the Press, he found for purchaser Mr. Solar, of the house, illustrious above all others, Mirès, Solar and others. While Mr. Solar was buying an opposition newspaper-the nature of the two-month suspension, – his colleague in bank and corporate name, Mirès, managed, in the capacity of main owner, the Country and the Constitutional Council, devoted to the government to the point of compromise, plus one financial journal, the Railway Journal. The de-

The financial situation of the Mirès-Solar company necessitated the sale of all these newspapers. Since then, Mr. Mirès alone (without Solar) is became the buyer of La Presse.

The debates in the Mirès trial revealed further that the house Mirès bank, Solar and Gie had provided the guarantee (30,000 francs) from the Courrier du Dimanche. A landlord of co-operation which can say: "I withdraw my funds within twenty-four hours, and you won't appear next Sunday." is certainly the pasha of the house.

26,

306 Speculation

The Irès-Solar bank therefore held: 10 the speculators pure by the Railway Journal; 20 the conservatives by the Country and the Constitution; 39 the dynastic opponents by the Press, 49 the Orlean-democrats by the Court-Sunday rier.

Today, Mr. Mirès alone has nothing left but a newspaper; and that's it.

the whole secret of the difference, depending on the era, in the courses on the stock market, certain stocks.

Now, consider the supply chain: while the so-called newspapers Conservatives believe the country has enough freedom, So-called liberal newspapers are calling for the coronation of the building. What do these political windbags want from us, no less convinced than each other? Conscience or in-awareness, they fulfill the role of Bibouquet at the parade. The important thing is that, – the trifles of the door exhausted, Imperialists and demagogues read the financial bulletin from Messrs. Mirès, Millaud, Solar and associates, in newspapers of all shades.

In the leaves that are not completely approached prayed, he will the panegyric, not the industrial announcement, that everyone knows how to discern and place outside of responsibility the quality of the writing, not even the advertising between-mixed with miscellaneous news items, but a substantive article, some considerations economic, political, social actions, put to use from a trading company, and signed with an e- name

When A.F. Mirès reappeared on the scene after his trials with a project for a Bank of States, with a capital of 100 million lions, the entire press was abuzz. Le Constitutionnel of November 17–November 1864 welcomed him on its front page, in an article signed Viru, L'Opinion nationale of the 18th, to the first page also, under the signature MALESPINE, known as to the sovereign people:

a If the founder of the Bank of States can contribute, as is its aim, to restore to the French market the pretence that he had in 1856, by attracting foreign capital to

THE PRESS AND FINANCE 307

His suit, he will have well deserved from the country (not the newspaper) as well as its former and new shareholders. Our best wishes and Our sympathies will follow him in his work.

The newspaper Le Siècle devoted two columns to him on November 21st. its second page, in nine line spacing, no more and no less than when Mr. Havin speaks from atop his stilts; the others Advertising bodies followed suit. Unfortunately For the author and his supporters, the ministry justified that the The name of the Bank of States, at a time when no one... government did not request a loan, was too vague, let- knows too much about arbitrariness, and he refused to authorize the issuance of 400 million. In another form, Mr. Mires became martyr; and the press expressed their condolences to him.

Financial journalism knows neither law nor convention. These. How many writers have exposed themselves to the warnings? and to the pursuit of power, and never dared to refuse a case of criminal complicity. Number of sheets, docile to the point of obsequiousness with the government, have He didn't hesitate to break the law, for the sake of the stock market. November 10, 18:57, the Minister of the Interior addressed to The Fatherland issued a warning with the following justification:

"Given the article on the financial situation of France and demanding, among other measures, the legal tender status of banknotes the Bank of France; considering that this article is of a nature to spread unfounded alarms and to harm the public credit, »

On April 11, 1858, the Moniteur sent this collective notice to
The entire press in general:

"Some newspapers prematurely announced the fixation of the dividend of shares of certain companies = iron or other industrial companies, and they have attributed-reflected in this dividend a figure lower than that which was determined later by the boards of directors, these are

308 FINANCIAL EQUITY

there are maneuvers against which industry and capital of the country must be protected. The managers were called to prosecutors and warned that acts of this nature will henceforth be but referred to the courts for publishing false information new.

® , , . .

The role of the press is to ENLIGHTEN the public, not to...

deceive. "

When you consider that every piece of fake news, in terms of finance, covers speculation, it is a case of repeating: "The "Good ticket that La Châtre has!"

It is always to the Gazette des Tribunaux that one must refer to come when it comes to studying the customs of this world. We we cited, at the trial of the Steam Navigation Company, page 93, and at the trial of the Small Cars, page 436, of the Examples of advertisements. Journalists, paid in shares, judge the position lost and take precautions by
As a result, they continue to promise to readers of incomes of 30 to 50 percent.

In the ministries, wood ash is the profit of Office warcons: that is to say, if they weren't rationed, They would burn down the Ardennes forest in one winter, just to... each to make a bonus of one hundred crowns of potash. Thus the Journalists become complicit in raids worth billions.
a simple question of setting aside a few thousand francs as a gift üfication.

The Fontaine-Spinelli trial, page 101, showed us Island or less likely from its stock market report. In the trial Serres, page 102, it's the Gazette de France, the Friend of Religion, the Journal of towns and countryside which affirms their financial statement to an adventurer later claims by the correctional police,

"These newspapers of ardent politics," said the Imperial Advocate Hémard, are widely read; the publicity they give to the en-

THE PRESS AND FINANCE 309

The Serres undertaking was expected to be considerable and bear fruit. And so it was. We wanted to draw your attention to these shameful markets that, so to speak, make one complicit in frauds committed by those who, through odious publicity, helped to commit them.

Although we don't discuss politics in this book, we: we cannot ignore the revelations of another nature that have recently occurred against the journalist-contemporarism, revelations that go no less than an accusation of high treason.

All acts of foreign policy, even the most hostile, those most repulsive to France or to our national character, found apologists in the Parisian press and enthusiasts. It was a general astonishment to see so-called democratic leaves defend, for example, Island Prince Couza's coup d'état, or the obstacles brought about by the Egyptian government to the Suez Canal company. What about it? Did he have something underneath?...

Two nations have particularly ardent supporters in France:

Prussia and Italy. Even the exactions of France—strong people who have not found apologists in the national opinion and admirers.

The mystery has not yet been solved, and never will be. Completely. However, there are serious beginnings. of evidence. A senator, Mr. de la Rochejaquelein, formalized—Some newspapers and journalists have been accused of venality. who allegedly received money from Mr. de Bismarck. Le Siècle has replied with the epithet "slanderer"; then, a few days afterwards, he stated that the accusation of slander could not to be maintained against Mr. de la Rochejaquelein, in the presence documents that he had presented.

Who are the beneficiaries? After a few more or less articles lively exchanges between certain bodies have raised the question of... holed up; the pact of silence has taken hold again; the investigation is Smothered. All that remains are scattered fragments.

310 FINANCIAL EQUITY

The Union of June 1, 1866 printed the following extract from a Correspondence from Naples:

"In France, liberal newspapers, or those claiming to be such, have created an ideal Italy, and want to support their paradoxical un- to remain silent until the very end. Here, the republican newspapers themselves mock the Franco-Italian press, and especially the readers volunteer authors who believe in the truth what is written by some names. The People of Italy, our Century, writes in its Number 158 of the seventh year: "Cavour had paid the press "French. Three Parisian newspapers, among others, (they are de- (named in the Italian newspaper) received a subsidy "Fixed. Italy continued to pay."

Mr. Villiaumé wrote, on October 1, 1866, to the Opinion nation- a letter which the Saint-Simonian newspaper refused to publish tion.

"In your September 24th issue," he said, "we have committed two errors: 10 in mentioning a note in the fourth edition- tion of my Spirit of War, as if it were relative to the Prussian affair, although it only mentions that of the Piedmontese government in 1860. Now, I designate it without equi- accused of having used money to corrupt the most of the organs of public opinion. I maintain that I have written. I will only speak of the Prussian government when All the documents will have reached me, because I never write without certainty, »

A Belgian newspaper mentions a Parisian newspaper, which it does not cite. not, whose funds were originally made by Mr. de Cavour, and to whom the Florentine government would pay each that year 7,000 subscriptions would not be served.

MP Lefranc publishes a letter in Le Phare de la Loire in which he explains the reasons for his resignation from collaborator contributor to the newspaper L'Europe. Is this due to financial mercantilism?

Is this what he's referring to, political venality? We
We couldn't say. Here's how it works:

"After the revelations made to me, I threw my hands away—mission at the head of the owners of Europe in a rather vivid, and one they will not forget for a long time.

"Facts!" I'm told. A delicate matter. My reasons for—What? I'll gladly entrust them to a discreet committee mutual friends. I have some reason to believe them, since—that I held them:

"10 From the entire French colony of Frankfurt, which had accepted me as his natural leader and where I left in one more memories and regrets than others in four years;

» 20 From the editorial staff of the journal;

» 30 Newspaper printers;

"40 Creditors of the newspaper, who are not complaining."

"50 From the negotiator of secret operations, who, far from..."
to hide, boasted to myself, as if they were masterpieces of skill.

"Enough is already too much. One last thought to finish."
If such are to be the conditions of the press henceforth, then... periodic, I will try to console myself with the memory of times better... »

In addition to all this material evidence, the Finance Department October adds an element of moral evidence that has been well received.
also its importance, especially since the author concludes that public notoriety, which in effect verbally puts the names on masks and figures in treaties;: verbal exchanges, scripta manent; the demonstration is carried out, but by eunequally authentic statements, although all equally true.

"Some questions are resolved simply by the fact that one can..."
to ask them. What reason would the French newspapers have?
supported the policies of M, of Bismarck, if they had not been Scratched? At least we understand the man who betrays the interests from his country for money. We don't understand that at all.

 who betrays his country and goes over to the enemy without a fight to have an interest. Is the second less guilty than Île pre-Mier? No. Only it is recognized that for him to have acted
 In that way, he must have lost his mind.

"Remember the magnificent popular epic of Erkmann-Chatrian, the Madman Yégof: the madman Yégof is just doing what he has just done to create, in France, the authoritarian press. 1 discovers in the Prussians-
 His people abhorred the borders of the homeland. Yegof, it is true, did not
 He doesn't receive any money; therefore, Yegof is a madman!

"Or fousuu rendered. Those who supported the bis- campaign"
 Markienne will not escape this dilemma. And this dilemma, they They find him and leave; in vain they try to appear to be playing to innocence; there is not an individual in true Paris who does not cites the figures. These figures that cannot be printed, Islands echoes of the boulevards, the passageways, the theater courtyards, the editorial offices, cafes, stock exchange columns,
 They spread them far and wide. Would you say that's slander? ©
 Oh my God! Among all those who will repeat these rumors,
 No one is indignant—a symptom of the times! Many envy and everyone finds it perfectly natural.

"Why your anger? It's all said, but..."
 None of this was printed. It's not for you.
 for your confidence, for me, for all of us that you...
 Deplore these indiscretions. It's because of the bourgeoisie. One must not no more to initiate the bourgeois into the sacred mysteries of the offices of writing, as well as to the no less sacred mysteries, a notebook of Stockbrokers.

Proudhon, who could not have known all the elements of the demoralization of the press that we have just listed, since most of the facts mentioned last are subsequent
 At his death, he could already write, in 1861, without being suspected exaggeration:

"It is in our time that we have learned to take advantage of publicity."
 cited; it is also in our time that we must date the flood of a habit and a profession of speaking, ad infinitum, for. against or on all subjects; to fight or defend any species of cause; to announce or deny all kinds of news: of to promote or denigrate, for a fee, any idea, any in-convention, any work, any merchandise, any undertaking. The The stock market and the bank, sponsorship and the shop. Literature and industry, theatre and the arts, the Church and education, Politics and war, everything became a subject for his exploitation. tation, a means of agitation, blackmail, and intrigue. The Court Neither the courtroom nor the public gallery was immune to its lies and her frauds. Such a guilty party was found guilty by her Exonerated, yet an innocent man accused of the crime. The most pressing questions important aspects of politics have become, in his hands, financial matters: Eastern question, sold; Italian question lie, sold; Polish question, sold; States question United, sold. I'm not saying that the truth doesn't sometimes escape him. either indifference, or that she has an interest in it, or that by affecting On certain subjects she adopts a severe attitude, avoiding trafficking. to ask more advantageously, at another time, of his opinion Union... A thousand years in prison and a one hundred million fine would not atone for the crimes of the press only since the December 2nd, » {On the Political Capacity of the Working Classes.}

After such trials, I will conclude here, as in Chapter on stockbrokers: If I had the honor of being half-Minister of the Interior, I would not dare to assume the responsibility of Choosing newspaper editors: Among a thousand who present themselves feel, there is a chance of excluding nine hundred and ninety-nine honest people and to give the privilege to a trader. Prior authorization carries a certain degree of commitment. the moral responsibility of the government. It is desirable. that he should distance himself from such a compromising association, and as soon as possible.

It seems that Ics shameful collusion with the fin, .ciers
21

314 BITTERNESS

be the lowest degree of abjection to which the press; however, it has fallen even lower. Let's say Read the following article, published in Le Figaro on December 16th 1860, and we will judge if [the measure is complete:

"I'm not sorry to speak a little frankly."
of our modern financiers, and to speak from the heart about everything

"I don't know that bankers used to feel..."
the irresistible need, when they launched a new value,
to involve people they only knew from name. Yet that's what's been happening for the past few years, The system of favor distribution to men of letters and to journalists, a system that Maecenas would have adopted if one had created its time, limited partnerships, was invented by the ex-that Baron de Rothschild; he did not take out a patent, very Fortunately, because his colleagues in banking could imitate him.
This is a counterfeit that no one will complain about.

"At the time of the creation of the Northern Railway, the Baron de Rothschild was not content with simply issuing good actions, he wanted to do them; he wrote in his ledger of sub-description the writers of the book and the newspaper, the poets, the authors playwrights, all witty and talented people, all those whose works had brought some renown to their name.
he put all his delicacy and tact into performing these courtesies, all the gentlemanly manner one has the right to expect from a thousand honorary who, usually living among the men of the Islands
one of the most spiritual people of his time, he knew how to appreciate them for their val
1! sent shares at par, which could be sold immediately directly with a bonus; but they could also be kept and to remain the baron's partner; one was no longer merely his obliged, we were his shareholders; the most resentful prides did not find it offensive to be a gift made with so much courtesy.

"Later, when Mr. Mirès launched major businesses, he followed the noble example set by Mr. de Rothschild, and Messrs. Péreire contracted the same habit,

THE PRESS AND FINANCE 315

"And that's how, from time to time, he falls into the
a literary desert, a benevolent bounty in the form of generously presented and due to an initiative which Neither the intention nor the methods of production could offend no one's pride.

What is the result of the encouragement given to writers?
By the financiers? This: that the millionaires make amends.
their millions through these princely ways of acting, and that envy Stop biting them when gratitude protects them.

"I don't expect the grumblers to respond to me..."

Sénart, who responded in the Mirès trial, by addressing the accused:

"Ah! You have been generous," they say; "you have had the hand open to those who came to you seeking help. Yes, you have lavished largesse, but it was the money of the unfortunate that you distributed in this way; it was that of that old woman servant, that of this coachman, of this poor errand boy went mad. Can such benefits be attributed to you? your! "

Mr. Attorney General is absolutely right. But journalism The banking system records the largesse and says nothing about the de-twists and turns. What is the complaint of the three or four Hundreds of starving people executed by Mirees? What is the ri-the gorism of the grumblers against a financier who owns the Country, from the Constitutional Council, surety provider to Courier du Dimanche, holding the Press for its associate or in his own name, Patron of the Bohemian life, of which we can, According to the excerpt from Le Figaro, appreciate the warm recognition "Birth"? Silence to the poor and down with the robbed who dare Complain! Servants are worthy of their masters, and, from on high below, this world is held together by a chain of iniquity to which Not a single link is missing.

CONCLUSION

IJ. – SITUATION SUMMARY

Our readers have already had to ask themselves this question several times – following tion: |

Why do shareholders, against their own interests and against do they accept the law, the solidarity of the actions of their administrators? Nistrations?

It is clear, if one reasons from the point of view of principles legal aspects of the partnership and anonymity, which are not the shareholders who had an interest in paying 16 million for the 12 millions of actual works from Graissessac to Béziers; 43 million lions the Aubin mines, sold four years earlier for 500,000 francs; The shareholders did not choose the location.

Docks, or created, with a capital of 40 million, the operation of 2,000 horse-drawn carriages in Paris. These simple facts are enough to show to the least far-sighted that exist within the very com-companies, apart from the distinction we have made of capitalists jointly committed as shareholders and lenders, a dua-

AT,

18 CONCLUSION

This duality? How do general assemblies suffer?
Do they have a similar competition? The introduction tells us about it.
I learned a great deal about this topic. But there is still more to say.
one word.

Mr. Mirès, defending his queen against Mr. Oscar de Vallée, who had stepped on it, wrote in the Constitutionnel of the ?
September 1857:

"Of all railway shares, the shares of The Mediterranean are those that have reached the highest price high: we saw them rise from 500 francs to 2,200 francs, and this includes, since they have successively reported up to 110 francs in dividends in a single year. Their high cost is not than apparent. In reality, a share of 2,200 francs which brings-carrying 110 francs is no more expensive than a share of 500 francs which It reports 25, which is still 5 for 190. That's the situation.
tion of 1857, »

Conversely, we might say, incomes of 110 francs. ache-
2,200 are no more advantageous than incomes of 29 francs.
Purchased at 500. That's still a 90/0 capitalization. However That's precisely the question.

There were shares subscribed at par, at 500 francs, and which have quadrupled on the stock market; but the public doesn't know nothing but hearsay. Let's reread the Docks trials, the Small cars, the history of mergers, and of any foundation. No companies whose titles were not born-negotiated under similar conditions.

Thus, there are two classes of capitalists: one that pays taxes bonuses, the other one who collects them; a plebeian shareholder class for which the dividends of 15 and 20 0/0 are still, by following the rise in prices, that an investment at 5 saw 6 0/06;
a financial aristocracy that is driving the price upwards through its newspapers, through their advertisements, their leaflets, their divisions overrated dens, and who, once the matter is launched, hastens to to realize, to liquidate, anticipating the future at whose expense
It will belong to him.

We ask what this agitating aristocratate is doing here,
And how come Lx, the plebeian shareholders, don't think about eliminating it?
Why, at least, instead of deflowered actions, does she not prefers not to take on obligations, which would guarantee him a Equal income with less chance of depreciation?

But first, for obligations to exist, there must be, at First, shares must have been subscribed for: it is necessary by
It is therefore necessary that someone should volunteer: that's what it seems to understand very well the agglotous peat. After all, one might say-
For her, equality is not of that kind, nor is it in the aristocracy.
that in the rabble: too bad for the damned, so much the better for the chosen ones! And then, isn't there irresistible seduction?
dn game, of this lottery that makes them feel alive, and which will always attract more willing victims than the Shylocks
The sponsorship won't be able to do anything about it?

After the attack on January 1st, there was a decline on all the islands.
values. 1! It was necessary to raise the morale of the public, so it was organized the trip to Brittany. The clergy getting involved, the ovations... multiply; in six weeks, Crédit Mobilier rises by 540 to 1030. He who possessed a hundred of these titles doblait sa fortune: the means to resist such training!

Everything is anomaly and immoral in this business world.
if you judge it from the point of view of law, science, of common sense; everything is in order, if you put things into perspective from the point of view of hierarchy and reasons of state feudal.

A theory has emerged in financial journalism.
The news, as strange as it is, is the price increase.
stock prices represent an increase in value from which the nation. The nation! It is then the band of thieves who, Having subscribed at 500 francs, sold, realized, pocketed 800, 1,500 and 2.2000. Calculate the price difference between par and highs.
1856-55 ratings; account for the planned, premeditated declines, in anticipation of new upheavals; add up the hundreds millions "thrown away and lost in the abyss of speculation" guilty," and you will have no less than three billion in-raised in the nation in ten years by the aristocratic elite, nothing

320 CONCLUSION

than on the Stock Exchange, in differences, without prejudice to markets such as that the works of Béziers, the Aubin mines, the terraces-Docks workshops, the small car workshops, the markets

Let's say THREE BILLION, a round number.

Well, yes, financial journalism is right: all of this is wealth in the sense of the agglomerative world; for 'has wealth does not consist solely of the material creation of values, she also insists on their proper distribution. To give each person what is due to them, according to the principle, what Whatever it may be, whoever governs society, that is wealth. Likewise that a democratic society enjoys greater well-being by that only education, work, and products are equal distributed among all, likewise an organized society According to the hierarchical law, the stronger, the more powerful, the more rich when the products are distributed, no longer according to the work, but according to rank. All this, we say, is In order: it's just a matter of reaching an agreement.

This inequality of position between the big bankers... founding assignees and first subscribers of the companies and the common shareholders result, in the arising Financialocracy, another distinction: that of employers' associations and customers. Out of fifteen or twenty members comprising In the administration of a public limited company, there is a director two at most; the others are supporting players. creatures of the master, docile executors of his will. What do a Boniface, a Bertrand, a Durand, a bourgeois in an administration that counts Five Rothschilds, three Péreires, or six Mercadets?

Calculate the thousands of kilometers and the billions on the which great feudal lords have the upper hand; count the army countless small players orbiting around them: shareholders beholden to their wealth, clerks, and others tenants, laborers whose existence depends on a their frowns; the cities and provinces where they create abundance and scarcity at will, and say what are the powers of the State in the face of this hidden coalition,

SITUATION SUMMARY 321

all the more terrible because she is relieved of all responsibility stability.

If we do the math carefully, we would find that the general staff of the finance comprises no more than a hundred individuals powerful and a few hundred cronies, we have given an overview in the introduction.

The first civil servants of the State are only second

Company representatives, in the Legislative Body, are more besieged by the petitioners than that of the ministers. Dau \eurs tour- Born in the provinces, their march is a triumph. The arrival Isaac Péreire's in Perpignan, in August 1863, a worthy Count of a dynasty leader.

Mr. Isaac Péreire, according to the local newspaper, deputy of Pyrénées-Orientales, and newly elected council member-general by the western canton of Perpignan, arrived in this town, Sunday, at 7:30 PM. Mr. Prefect had gone to the station to receive the representative of the department-temment. The mayor and his deputy, the members of the co-The electoral committee, gathered in the waiting room, complimented Mr. Péreire as he got off the train. Immediately afterwards, Mr. Péreire took his place in the prefect's car to... return to the prefecture building, where he was to attend a grand dinner. In all the districts of the city that he had to Crossing, there were many people; but in the street of At the Prefecture, there was congestion. The facades of the cafes The Place de la Loge was illuminated. Finally, the second reception of the honourable representative was the exact photograph of the First time: same applause and same crowd.

A man like that cannot truly doubt that he has a high social mission to fulfill. Also, with what con- During the eviction, he spoke of his services rendered to the country, during the ve- Correlation of powers to the Legislative Body, and with what de- Dain, he throws these characteristic words at his opponents: "Money played only a very minor role in my election."

32? CONCLUSION

We will have it soon, we hope at least, an opportunity to thoroughly study the workings of these large machines, the fate of employees, workers, men of the team, agents and other scribblers of anonymity; we We will stop for today at this simple question: - What is a director of a large company, at viewpoint of a democratically economic society organized? - And we respond with Boi-'s candor water: - He's a mere business swindler, with access to billions that he got his hands on as part of his fortune own. A seat on the board of directors is a fiefdom. The emoluments, as we said at the beginning of This book consists of meager attendance tokens from 10 to 40 francs. Therefore, there would be no need to compensate the holders- Jaires that a merger was inevitable. However, here's what happened at merger of 185?:

The meeting of the four companies – from Paris to Orléans, from the Centre, from Orléans to Bordeaux, from Tours to Nantes, – in a single company, eliminating three boards of directors, The shareholders of Bordeaux were asked for 500,000 francs. compensation allowance for ousted directors as useless, 300,000 francs for people whose salary legal status does not reach that of a servant in a good household. The proposal was met with an unfriendly grunt. ethical considerations on the part of serious shareholders; 418 votes dared opposing their bicycles, amidst very rude calls– However, 516 compliant votes were granted access to the de-order.

The henchmen of finance roared with anger at the account of a such temerity; the Railway Journal took the ferule. Quos ego!...

"With this vote, the shareholders warned the administrators– that they had nothing to expect from them; that those who told them– They were in their position and had to defend and preserve it. themselves, without relying on the slightest testimony from recognition birth on the part of the shareholders. God willing, these last– "They should never have cause to repent!..."

SITUATION SUMMARY 323

Who would suspect, after this price list, that the administrations Are strategists eligible?

A nasty company, which wasn't four years away from the bankruptcy, is bought out by a more powerful one: the shareholders lose half of their capital, but allocation 6,000 francs in life annuities for the ousted directors. 6,000 francs in pension versus 1,000 to 1,500 francs in salary! What is this? So, once again, what about a board of directors? Let's be clear about the profits, whether they are acknowledged or not. for which such large compensations are being demanded!

As for shareholder meetings deemed sovereign, in addition to the frauds that we have reported there and which receive Each day–an increasingly striking confirmation–we doesn't even take it into account.

"We kept saying that Île was buying back the shares of Dauphiné" was a fait accompli, lacking only the sanction (opposition is not expected) of the general assemblies "rales," (Press, July 10, 1558.)

Six or eight months before the promulgation of the treaties of In 1859, with the railways, the same newspaper printed:

"The rise was not as rapid on the shares of cheaper iron than on the annuity; these values had taken the lead and had obtained an improvement of 50 to 400 francs at their lowest prices.

But, as we have said, below the princes, the gentry—the realities of feudalism find this quite simple; if, by a On one hand, they are connected to the people; on the other, they are attached to the flow of the nobility; they are among those called, who knows if they will not be among those elected. As for small actions— They no longer need to delude themselves: there is no solidarity between them and their general staffs. Our proof is Done. But do they have nothing more to say? Are they irrevocable? "Blissfully vilified." Perhaps; the future is still uncertain. in their hands.

321 CONCLUSION

of

II — PRACTICAL ADVICE

And since we have this book especially for their instruction, we cannot avoid dedicating ourselves to them a consoling paragraph in our conclusion, and of their to say what it is up to them to do, in their interest as in that of the public, with a view to: 10 escaping themselves from hands of their general staffs, to free the clientele from erandes companies of the embrace of the lynx-wolves.

Certainly, looking back at the past, the shareholder is neither interested— Neither healthy nor respectable. He took the bait of the crudest lures. but out of avarice, he threw his capital into... companies that promised him large dividends, and he didn't Vincials, who are counting thirty sous a month to send their children in primary school, have swallowed up the savings family members, lacking the ability to count, leaving their sons in the same crass ignorance, so fatal to fathers.

How many bourgeois, literary, enlightened, even learned people have sin through churchmanship, saying, in the form of an acquiescence: finance, Banking and big business are not my specialty; I entrust the care of my interests to those in charge. The par-Cellarism, the infinitesimal division of labor and functions tions, so stupefying at the lowest social level, have corrupted thus extending to elite intelligence

Have we understood now that we need to be somewhat encyclopediste, under penalty of letting the economic world turn upside down to barbarism? Under penalty of having renewed, extended, our industrial equipment has been multiplied a hundredfold, according to the expression of Mr. de Persigny, and to reap from it only dearth, misery and "Ruin"? Have we understood that the small capitalist, bondholder or

PRACTICAL ADVICE

shareholder, only makes income from his capital on the condition to pay on his work and his consumption of surpluses Insane taxes? If these truths, as clear as those of Mr. de the obvious, have entered into a respectable number of circles
In the future, the role of the shareholder is far from over.
He has two main things to pursue: 1° the safeguarding of its own interests, 2° the reconciliation of its interests with those of the public.

A. — We have here, under the eyes, a pamphlet dated: June 1, 1866, signed with the initials JD, published in Paris under this title: General Union of Shareholders, statement of principles tips by a new industrialist and anti-saintly school Simonian. The author places his manifesto under the auspices the following words, spoken during a session of the Senate, May 29, 1866", by N. Dupin:

"We are the defenders of the weak against the powerful."
We must give strength to those who ask us for it.
to fight against the encroachments of these major financiers, in order to "The rapacity of which the future will undoubtedly find a name."

This is a project for a mutual association between the actions companies of all industrial societies, with the aim of controlling the management and administration of companies any. We detach a few sheets from the pro-

"Our partnership plan has two notable precedents:

10 The Union of Shareholders of the Ports of Marseille; % The Union shareholders of the Bergerac to Libourne railway: two associations which, under the guise of specialization and interest purely private, were in reality only the prelude to a vast organization designed in the public interest.

"The complaints of security holders are universal. Their Capital depreciates day by day. Everyone's wealth... lost what the fortune of a few has gained; rightly or wrongly The reason is that the citizens are attacking their administrators.

28

jt: UNCLUSION

by demanding, as a natural reaction, the return of capital to their true and legitimate owners...

"Fathers are worried. The artificial exaggeration of The increase in the value of movable assets leads to the rise in the price of all things, and the balance of the household budget becomes increasingly more difficulty, On the other hand, as expenses increased, the large incomes so promised to some of them Businesses vanish, and even capital, the very assets of Families vanish with the falsely announced dividends.

"The moral world itself is affected."

"The dizzying effect of millions that comes from 'shameless 'joking', the thanklessness of work that denies luxury and slowly leads to The ease, pervert the ideas of justice and honesty. Vale An eminent magistrate flogs the money handlers, and An illustrious poet wants to moralize the Stock Exchange. In vain the so-Verain himself applauded their efforts and gave to the nation A great lesson. The humble shareholder remains condemned to exploitation and silence.

"The powerful financier silences or speaks to the press, according to..." the secrets of his speculations. Thanks to grand words invoked concepts used in other times, such as raison d'état, public credit public, the development of work, today's treaties, sinister imitators of the financier Law, disturb consciences, distort public opinion, defy the religion of souls honest, and ensure that the theory of the fait accompli serves an excuse for fraud...

"The usual practices of founders, managers or adspeculations have become a public danger; they must be thwarted by a prompt return to the true principles, constantly reminded and especially observed by an institution opposite. "

Thus speaks a capitalist who learned to count at his own expense. Thoughts. All the testimonies are unanimous. Which shareholder "Doesn't live off his capital today?" Mr. Cram- said in turn. pon in Finance. Now, what remains must be saved; this who has been unduly caught, he must be made to return: such is the problem.

PRACTICAL TIPS

The means? The author said it: a mutual association between the shareholders. The current state of the legislation offers several modes of constitution, none of which, however, seems to us sufficient. But here comes the law on cooperative societies, which, we sincerely hope, will be classified in our codes under a few months. Until then, it is up to the men of initiative to take their measurements, to prepare the public mind, to sketch- dear draft statutes, to set the movement in motion- finally, so that, as soon as the law is promulgated, we put ourselves at work.

Let's not forget that the fight must be legal, constitutional- nenelle; without it everything would collapse, for lack of a point of support.

The campaign plan must begin with the assemblies. general shareholders. The directors of the company must... cooperative society, chosen, as far as possible, from among the interested parties who have leisure time and business acumen, they intervene to have the front right-handers deposit their actions, that they spare them the errands and the hassles. If the bylaws prohibit entry to the meeting for those carrying [cards/documents] of fewer than five, ten, twenty or forty shares, ils allows- at least try to get these little ones to come together and make themselves represented by one of their own: the most important point of all. The company will form a common fund to provide compensation, at minus travel expenses, provincial shareholders who will ask to come to the assembly. When the League is mistress in the railway councils, she will vote for the . free travel for all carriers from the provinces and abroad ger who will attend a meeting. The union will not have to Above all, forget the story of the merger of the Ports of Marseille. Each assistant will sign or declare their name, first name(s), will be immediately referred to the Imperial Prosecutor.

Any outgoing member of the board of directors will be removed to the re-election. Assuming that circumstances allow

328 CONCLUSION

An exception to this rule is that re-election will not be possible in any way cases may be granted to the multiple holders we have discussed in See our Introduction, pages 35 and following. That's enough of to bear the burden of a major case.

The League, once in control of the councils and the a- Once assembled, the rest will follow naturally. Its first principle will be the publicity of the writings, committee deliberations and re-general agreements, as well as all relevant acts, namely the public, i.e., the security holders.

Faced with the immensity of the disasters caused by feudalism Financially, it is impossible for the aggrieved holders to count on a refund or compensation of any value. That's no reason to do nothing in this regard. Against the For limited partners, the responsibility is absolute. The administrators of anonymity, according to Article 32 of the Code of Communications merchants are only responsible for the mandate they have received. But at least they are responsible. However, if we consider that case law has recognized liability for cause: of false promises and leaflets, of distribution of unearned dividends taken from capital, violation of statutes and specifications, fraudulent assemblies- fraudulently constructed, false reports and concealment of liabilities or assets, etc., etc., how many financiers are safe? of a reclamation?

It is necessary that satisfaction be given to the law, to morality, to the principles of economics that are ignored and trampled underfoot, and even to interests. The cooperative union will take care of the costs of the proceedings, whether as advances or free of charge, and will follow before such courts as the rightful claimants may make. tions of the applicants.

This is what interest, "honor, dignity, and de-" demand. to see shareholders.

B. - The author of the brochure "The Shareholders' Union" has understood that the public must also have its part in the repair ration. It is, moreover, the only way to interest the nation wholeheartedly committed to the claim. High finance, after having appropriate state subsidies and the bulk of the fortune of its ports, has again imposed conditions on customers usurious prices.

"The constitution, by means of anonymity, of a true Financial feudalism is a clear fact today, and it is not No one disputes this anymore; everyone knows that this feudalism exploits for its own profit all the businesses created in the general interest of the country, which can no longer benefit to the public, when they benefit them, only after having been skimmed—somehow controlled by the monopolists.

» Unfortunately we don't see each other anymore.
bearing of this kind of tithe levied on the production of wealth through parasitic speculation, rather than in the manner in — ingenious which it is imposed on the nation and the government" himself.

"It is this aspect of the monopoly issue that we want to..."
Let's try to shed some light on this today.

"A nation can only become richer by producing more and more."
moreover, in relation to its consumption needs, and of the moment Given that its production increases relative to these needs, the price the average consumption of its products decreases and its well—to be increased.

»]1 therefore there can be no increase in production and public wealth, without there being at the same time lowering consumer prices for products; this is Undeniable.

"All agricultural and financial companies without exception" tions can only have one goal, that of increasing the quantity of foodstuffs produced, and to decrease by this increase reducing production overhead costs, so as to...
to see the producer's profits increase, at the same time that the decrease in the consumer price, which results from This increase in production contributes to the well-being of consumers.

23.

3930 CONCLUSION

"By what harmful result can we recognize the u-Material nature of major public works? Only at the reduction of production costs and the average price of chases; one would search in vain for another serious indication of the true usefulness of major public works.

"Well! What was the result produced, at least up to..."
present, by the fifteen billion spent on public works
Of all kinds, for the past fifteen years? A price increase general of all goods and labor, in a word of all elements of material life.

"To be consistent and logical, one must therefore conclude from this real fact, recognized by everyone, that until this day
Furthermore, the nation has not yet derived any benefit from this work.
Public, and that if this work has yielded real benefits,
It is not the general population of citizens who have proliferated from it, since,
Contrary to the result they should have produced, we live
today it's less cheap in France than it used to be.
before those same works were carried out there.

"If we now take a partial look at the si-
the destruction of financial feudalism, we will see on the contrary that she accumulated wealth during those fifteen years immense, and if we were to add together only the islands fortunes made since that time by certain administrators for owners of public limited companies, we would obtain a total which-would certainly involve several billion.

"This economic fact, known to everyone, not having needing to be demonstrated in another way, we will manage to pose the
The following dilemma:

"Or our major public works have not yet produced..."
feels no seriously useful results, fears the nation, then-
that she spends to live today twenty-five percent more than she spent 11 fifteen years ago, before these work had not been carried out, a result which could not have been achieved obviously, if they had been profitable for him.

"Or these same works have yielded real profits, and then..."
financial feudalism, which carried them out, absorbed into itself

PRACTICAL ADVICE

neither a tax break nor a price reduction for the hub things.

"Well, can we reasonably assume that it was there?"
the goal that the government had set for itself by provoking the Building large public limited companies? Obviously not Undoubtedly, he hoped for the exact opposite result.
the realization, as he put it then, of the cheap life.
The truth is, therefore, that he was mistaken, or that he was misled.

This is how Mr. Raoul Boudon expressed himself in the Journal des Ar-Lions of September 22, 1866; and his complaint is only the weakened echo of universal protest. When the League
The cooperative will have overcome feudalism, its first public act will have to be a reduction in the price of all things, tariffs transport, discount rates, louveres, rents, services any entrusted to the various companies. The competition public opinion is only valid under this condition.

C, – A whole world still to be freed from island status, that's what army of workers, teammen, employees, salalaughed at, dedicated to, the development of machines and large modern industrial machinery, to an eternal subjugation
Nelle, what does feudalism do for these unfortunate serfs?
What isn't she doing instead to improve their position?
"More than intolerable"? It worsens the workload and cuts into the salaires: no one is treated as a man, much less as a citizen;
These are nothing but threatening agendas, espionage, SUR-surveillance, suspension, detentions, harassment of all kinds.
The employee no longer even has the right to have a conscience.
The accountant is ordered to falsify the records, according to the inspector the denier to lie in his reports, to the cashier of Violer his de-Pots, everyone is encouraged to come to the general assembly and play a role in forgers whom the law condemns and punishes. Feudalism steals from the refrom the actor's reports, to the head of department's initiative,
To the administrator his reforms, to the inventor his discoveries.
The dispossessed person who complains or acts disobediently is chased away and reported.
by the entire caste; it is forbidden to work and conditions of existence; the resentment of the traders would have invented eter-Unit of hell.

3.3? CONCLUSION

Is this enough misery and shame? Is there not, in wealth and dignity, enough to seduce the bourgeois class capitalist. Will the shareholder masses let themselves die of famine, running out of dubious income? Will she remain in history in this ignoble aspect, from all points of view: and of the contempt heaped upon him by the tax collectors, and jeers. t3 of which the deceives the small press, and the sarcasms with which it is riddled vaudeville performers. We offer them our program, the most free from the world: this is the repair to pursue, the ruin to be averted, rehabilitation to be achieved.

Shareholders, are you no longer worthy of the principles of 8)?

The miscalculations whose faithful account we have just outlined for you Your paintings are personal and only make up a quarter of them. of your disasters, In the three-quarters of which we have left to To take stock, you will have as companions in misery the the entire nation: taxpayers, customers and regular employees.

Patience! We will complete the investigation; and if one day, let-sant there of sterile groans over your ruin, 1l you what remains – for lack of savings – of the heart, the love of work vail and the desire for redemption, united with the working classes, to the armed forces of all regimes, grouping together, for the benefit of all,
the bundle of COLLECTIVE FORCES upon which the feudal-
The ity has put an usurping hand in, you will become the initiates-their economic transformation. In ten years, you will have revolutionized the world of work and exchange, and created more wealth than the Jewish community has devoured since Abraham to this day. But first of all, hurry to Give a deposit!

It was the scumbags who shouted the loudest since

Twenty years: All wealth comes from work! It only takes...
They took him at his word.

END

TABLE OF CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION

| Pages.

FINANCIAL FEUDAUTY, an exposition of the issue. |

11. – General considerations: that the monopoly is,
by nature, indifferent to the interests that are his entrusted, . eo +. + 10
II. – The shareholder plebeians. , ,	16
IV. – The general staffs, ,,,,,, . . .	23
V. – Incompatible combinations. . «4: . +	99

PART ONE

+

SPECULATION BEFORE THE COURTS, , 0 ee
Caap, I, – The game and jurisprudence. . . . , JT. – Intermediaries in speculation: stockbrokers,
ragpickers, scavengers. « , , ,
The Gibrain case...
Affairs of the Tureaux, Colomyes, etc... + . .
The backstage crew... , , 7
The ragpickers, , , 78

331 TABLE OF CONTENTS

Pages

Cnap. 11. – The wreckage of fraudulent speculation. . . . 3
The Ancre-Martin. no. 83
The Livestock, AE 86
The Mines of Aix-la-Chanelle. 83
The Union of Gas and Glassworks . . + . + . . 89
The Prost case... 8)
A company that protects against commercial losses. .#9
The departmental railways. . +. . + . . 9)
French Steam Navigation Company. « . 93
The Land Union...
The Beaumont-Vassy case... + 95
Graissessac to Béziers Railway. 96
Gas meter company.

Sorbier-Beuclas Mines...
Bankruptcy Thurneysen. . . . °
Union Counter.
The Greenhouses Affair
Mass trading,

Cnap, IV,

Big business: the founders, the trainers
NEUrs. es +
The Aubin Mines.
The Berthomé Affair.
The Docks-Napoleon...: . « . . .
The Ports of Brest, . ,
The Small Cars Trial... + "...
The Mirès case...
The Eastern Saltworks,
Nassau Railways, .
Shareholders' fund... , . « « « + . .
Varieties. ns
Merger of the ports of Marseille A

TABLE OF CONTENTS 339

SECOND

PART

Speculation. . "
Definitions. , . .

Chapter 1 – The simple game.
The discount for long-term businesses... 2%

II. – The chapter on foundations. , . , . . . 218

IT, – History of a merger (Orléans). +. 257

IV. – Strategy of general meetings. . , , 264

V. – On accounting in financial matters. . . . 27

VI. – The press and finance. + + + to & + + ee +» 299

1 -'Rémmé of the situation + 37

: | » : || L to o | ed + | | U? 4

END OF TABLE

PUISSY,—= TYP KT 51Eł, DE ALU, BOLRET,

German

English

Full text of " Rothschild and the European States "

See other formats

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
,Main

[UB] Enjoy

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
University Library Frankfurt am Main

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
University Library Frankfurt am Main

Rothchild

and the European states.

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

41

69 Rothschild

and the European states.

Ben
Alex Weill.

Vous saves mieux que moi, quels que soient nos efforts Que Pargent est In elef de tous nos gränd ressort« ,
Et que ce big metal qui frappe tant de toos

En amour comme gy guerre , advance les conquerors

Stuttgart.
Franck'sche Verlagsbuchhandlung.
1841.

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
,Main

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

Preface.

For centuries, indeed for almost a millennium.
Kings and emperors fought against the high feudal dynasty.
Liity, which limited their power, and never allowed them to which led to the exclusive concept of the state. It
It required genius and a heavy iron hand
of an emperor, to secure the whole as a whole
to keep together, yes, most wars abroad,
the trains to Italy and earlier ones that went to the Holy Sepulchre, had the indirect purpose of the various scattered self-rules to one= to unite them for a purpose, in order to use them as such.
I recognized him at home. But it was all in vain.
The lord of the castle on the main road was a master at himself, by virtue of his nobility and his sword. –
They only recognized the emperor in times of war.
Not in peacetime. Germany could never do it.
to bring about a state, despite the Habsburgs,

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

8 Preface.

and what they did with their mighty fist= Luther, who had forged, separated again with his still more all-powerful spirits. Only in France did Lud begin wig the eleventh with tyrannical luck, the fire-dality and the self-power of the high barons to fight. He spared no means to achieve his goal.
To achieve his goals, he would have had all the fine children himself.
sacrificed to this idea and even today the Ge-
He justified his acts of violence by his purpose.

and Mazarin, and Louis XIV pursued the same goal with luck. The crown but was this concept of the state only supported by the Re volution set in motion; for only through it was the
The state as such the central focal point of all Lines of the state circle. Napoleon originated here—out, but destroyed all the elements that the revolution which aimed at equality within the state. Because, if Although it had the principle, it lacked the Time to complete their work. The chaos of individual licentiousness and self-legislation
It still hung over her. The state was not yet a social bond where the individual
It exists in itself, but it is only a part of the

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

Preface. 9

genus is, but rather an accidental, unlawful,
unorganized amalgam of various substances:
sentences that either randomly fought each other again or supplemented it. Because the natural law of a state has not yet been put into practice.

gone. However, the beginnings were there. Only In war, one understands the state nowadays, in Peace falls back into chaos.

Wars make them peace, and they die. One for the other and have a natural equality,
and feel big and powerful as a whole;
But as soon as external peace is restored,
the internal civil war with all its subtle corruption—lichkeiten, and the bourgeois life, the Jfolirte, Individual, selfish begins and explains to everyone
to wage war on his competitors to the death.

But feudalism had been broken, even in Germany. Even if the latter country is materially better off Although it did not bring about unity, it nevertheless had through the revolution and Napoleon have a different meaning Received from the state. Yes, even the idea of customs—Vereins is the French idea of the Continental System.

One would now think that a battle that had already
How long does it take between the state as a concept?

Frankfurt am Main

UB

10. Preface.

and feudalism, i.e., some powerful barons,
be done with once and for all; one should believe,
that, since progress in history generally
It is acknowledged that one should not concern oneself with such things.
I have more to deal with. –

It was believed – the whole fight was now the between state and state, between prince and people, Between justice and mercy. – The governments
At least that's what they believe. They see nothing but [unclear] everywhere.
They are enemies of their existence and ultimately separate.
entirely independent of the people and the concept of the state itself.
– But no, they face a far greater threat
Danger. They are subject to the feudalism of the law of the jungle.
They were removed from power, but their feudalism is now growing.
The bank almost ransacked it. Barons have them.
no more who get involved in conspiracies,
But they have barons whom they collect alive.
to drain their people dry. Throughout the world–
There is no historical period where the state was considered
A state with so little self-power, so little self-confidence had as our European states. Never yet had the state relinquished its power, its self—government so alienated as now; never before had he so bound and ensnared by some stranger's happiness=

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library

Frankfurt am Main

Preface. 11

mushrooms are said to be used against one's own children to play the great man. The more he aligns himself with the people, the better.
opposite showed, the more vulnerable he was against the false– his friends, who embraced him, like the Snakes Laofoon and fine sons. There are only a power in Europe, and that is Rothschild, and Houses and fine soldiers, fine squires, find all honest merchants and workers and his sword, That's speculation. And where he rules, things can happen.

Nothing can stand beside him! And he rules everywhere – and the state itself is subordinate to it, at most
He is his own director, who takes care of his finances; because
The state, the European state, has so far done more Trust in Rothschild rather than in oneself, he is for free competition and for laissez-faire attitudes, laissez passer, and so he has the feudalism of the
The nobility fought to bring it into the hands of some merchants.
to fall. What from now on will be of great state importance–
What is most necessary in the state should happen.
He heard it, but it's no longer his business. Railways,
Canals, mint, industry, everything belongs to Rothschild.
and fine marshals; for under Rothschild, the following
I stand by the private companies of the stock exchange, whose

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

12. Preface.

He is the patron. The state, however, is not allowed to have the police.
Take over. Happy Europe, you!

But I don't want to use empty phrases here, s—
Let them calmly examine where our concept leads us.
from the exaggerated right of ownership of the one—individual, from free competition and our brought about state laws. With the name Noth—
I don't have a person in mind either. He is Unfortunately, this has become the norm.

There are people, even statesmen, who believe=
Ben, Rothschild, and his power were accidental.
Appearance. Of course, if the state itself in lives from day to day and through sheer chance consists, for it Rothschild nothing further than a larger Randomness, but it remains no less a con—sequence, which necessarily had to arise, and would be If it weren't Rothschild, it would be someone else. He is but by no means a random consequence, but rather a concise, fundamental consequence from the state:
The principle that has ruled Europe since 1813. It is by chance...
Absolutely nothing. One thing always brings an end.
which is inherent in its necessary nature lies. Just as a horse becomes a horse again, a

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library

Frankfurt am Main

Preface. 13

Love begets hate, and hate begets new hate, so go
Each principle with a thousand fine nature according to necessary
The consequences are ominous. If the principle is good, then...
If the consequence, that is, the effect, is precisely:
If it's good, yes, it will always get better; that's the principle.
However, if something is wrong or unnatural, then they screw themselves together.
the consequences, even to the most destructive extreme up. Every great crime sets several small ones in motion.
ahead. The Church Fathers described this in a Word: One sin, they say, brings many sins.
and larger ones into the world.

The state does not consider itself the center.
of the entire people, as its administrator, but He sees himself as the principle, the people as "we".
kung. He is not there for the people, but
The people because of their refined nature. This false principle meanders.
down to the night watchman. The official who
The village gendarm considers himself something higher than the
A layman in the state. With the uniform he puts on,
He also strips his civic soul bare. It arose
This has led to the situation throughout Europe that half of the state on the Koften of the other half lives, and that the concept of state in and for itself is something Something torn apart, something divided, that is only connected by Distrust could exist.

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

Preface.

Indeed, it cannot be denied that until still the first principle of statehood in Europe divide and conquer is. Like when it happens again
a minister tried, and instead of separating, to merge= sought one; who did not act in the name of hatred, son-

I've tried so many things and nothing worked, how...
if one ever wanted to love and trust presupposed – of course, this love should not be the
to be our husbands who say, I love you,
That's why you're mine, with everything you have.
Our love only takes, gives nothing, the true love
Love gives only and lives only in this feeling. It is happy when his beloved enjoys himself and enjoys himself
This makes it doubly so. A government must be happy.
to feel when the governed are happy, even without
fie. Only that is love of country and love of humanity.

Yes, I've already gone too far. Let's just say...
Trust instead of love. A government that:
Trust in their people grants them what they need.
to refined intellectual and material development
May. Distrust arises when the government fears the people are not worthy of this grant=
He digs and abuses his freedom. Even more, they

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library

Frankfurt am Main

Preface. 15

fears revolutions. But you don't notice that These are only to be feared where precisely because of this Distrust, but also everything is refused where People and prince no longer a linked chain form, but where this chain is violently cut through is and both are there with the pieces and scraps=
to stand threateningly opposite. Neither prince nor people.
gains something from it. The great princes, who through
They wanted to rule by love, not by the people.
not under, but through the intrigues and the henchmen Tyranny itself. What will become of the villains?
will happen when all princes love their people and to rule fraternally, where should stupidity and hatred be?
where hypocrisy and superstition hide
the millions of human ravens, migrating to themselves to rush at Aesern in the dark. Hardly does it appear Henry IV, yes, is also a Ravailac already there, and if a prince is a loving person seems to be the one who rules with heart and mind
will, so they encircle him, showing him entire armies enemies who don't even exist describe to him

They tear his olive branch and want to force him to to wield a whip for it. To do it themselves.

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

16 Preface.

everything to make the people grumble, even if It's pointless. Then they come and say: "see Didn't we tell you, it's impossible?
"Peaceful revolutionaries." The prince, who was in his
a heart that feels only love, that truly only that
The good of the people will ultimately be achieved by themselves, through This annoying dissatisfaction becomes discordant, distrustful and unhappy. Henry IV felt this when he said, dieu me garde de mes amis, pour les

Ennemis, je m'en charge.

Rothschild had to escape this type of government.
Standing. I wouldn't mind if only the
The state could exist over time. I belong to it.
to the people, live only in him, but so hostile and I am distrustful of the current government system—
Even if one is already powerless, so is the state closer to every man than to any individual Banking companies.

Rothschild arose from the principle of re governments towards their people, as we will soon see will be seen. He was also written in popular literature.
steller, especially von Börne, were always attacked
But it is no longer the people's savings bank.
Rothschild devours the state itself, a

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library

Frankfurt am Main

Preface.

Obviously, it only happens this way because every principle is subtle.
The consequences it brings with it, like the polybe's
A thousand feet. Rothschild needed the state to to become Rothschild, because the European states needed a Rothschild. But now he is –
And he is not a chimera – does he need the
The state no longer needs him, but the state needs him.
Up until now, the gentleman has been quite polite towards his favorite, but it can't last much longer.
It will take a while, so he has to throw the mask away everywhere.
In France, he has already exposed himself since 1840.
James Rothschild overthrew Thiers, conquered the Orient pacified – solely for the sake of his money, and how! –
James Rothchild made Guizot minister;
James Rothschild is King of France, that House Rothschild is king of Europe!

It's quite simple. If a state has a must wage war that is popular, that the takes up the entire existence of a people, so He doesn't need to borrow any money for that. Everyone gives.
what he has. The poor man his life, the rich man his Money. And the rich person is, as usual, selfish.
and places himself and his fine family above the state, fo

WELTI, REIHSCHILD AND THE EUROPEAN STATES. 2

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

18 Preface.

The latter forces him, without fear of resistance, because the entire population is primarily in favor of the state against some wealthy individuals. Never before has this happened here!
arose through a revolution, except in countries like Italy, where the rich citizens are divided into two classes divided, they were fighting for power. The
The forced loan taken out by the Convent was greeted with jubilation by the people. In general, the
The people here have a strange rhythm and exactly what they were looking for.
NOMMEN is mostly among the most important Le=
Questions on the part of the government. Otherwise:
This applies to wars and state enterprises, which do not directly affect the people. For example, the Wars for the benefit of French legitimacy, which for Germany not even the value of a

do not take; for the rich seek the discontented.
to spread hatred, to seek to incite the people,
and how much they love the prince and the authority,
They still prefer their wallets. It must be then be borrowed, and scarcely is a hen
There, the heron is already flying over her, its whole
Kraft's existence is that he first swallowed a dove.
Thus Rothschild came into being. But how did he gain power?

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library

Frankfurt am Main

Preface 19

State? Not directly. It gives to the state itself cheap money to give his subjects all the more It's better to dupe. The state is his means to do so.
It seems he's going to win right away, but the
The millions that Rothschild wins in the process are all... from the pockets of the less well-off in the same States, as I will soon demonstrate clearly. The
The state as an administration does not become poorer, but rather
The state as administered. Where in this the subordinate
The difference lies, no professor will be able to reveal it. But even more, through these sham affiliations they took Finally, all private bankers, even the Press Party for Rothschild against his own state, and so grew a fine power, that the minister of Frank:
rich himself, forced his party against the country must take. First, he uses the state against the country, then the country against the state. Through Given his omnipotence on the stock exchange, this was easily achieved for him.
possible, and today not only the private individual is able to,
And however rich he may be, nothing against him, but
The state itself is liable to pay interest to him, unless a A different principle of the state asserts itself. It is a major prejudice of a state, to
They believe that only in times of war are major measures permitted.

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

20 Preface.

Rothschild's erection is the greatest, most disastrous War that an enemy has ever brought upon a people, but not as Rothschild, because, as I said, with the government principles pursued so far would Another would be different if he weren't there; the whole borrowing
And the bond principle is wrong. It is based solely on Distrust of the people. The governments may only approach their peoples, engage with them in One melts together, then you hand over the gift-railways, canals, coins and factories not need-sign and private companies, not even the Newspapers. But where will the money come from? – The
The answer is quite simple. – You take it, (Does not borrow). – But I will be clearer on this.

will be, in the article railway; because under the
I absolutely do not understand taking your word for it, violence.
or unfair coercion. This is only for shy people.
Ghosts who have no concept of the word Ne-have greed.

*) "Water for the fleas!" a doctor once cried. "How do you do it?"
"For what?" asked an old matron. – "One catches them and throws them–"
"One –" was the answer.

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library

Frankfurt am Main

The House of Rothschild as head of the Speculation.

This relates to the appearances in In= industry, trade and commerce just as with the Natural phenomena. It is not enough to know how.
to investigate, but above all the why.
They are by no means isolated, neither in their Origin, even in its effect, and when in
of our time of so-called intelligence, a power could train, like those of the House of Rothschild, Thus, it is primarily a social problem, on the basis of which
The reason one has to go back, otherwise one runs away.
drive, to lose the root and never the evil

Personally, the "how" of the House of Rothschild
It has often been mocked, but unfairly. Because
As I already mentioned, it is no coincidence.

The House of Rothschild is European. It is located even a cosmopolitan idea within him, which,
It should appear that it should guarantee eternal peace.

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

22 The Rothschild House

Only for Germany itself, the first Em^e reminds us
porkommen dies dies Hauses, an ill-fated
Time. As often as I saw the old man with the pearls, in Cabal and Love, to Lady Mylfort, saw,
I always thought to myself: and yet Roth came into being^e
A shield made from such a pearl.

But this is irrelevant here. As long as our trade and our industry in their chaos^e continues the sloppiness at the tables; as long as the free Competition mastery is about excelling in production.
offer, and merely the money, the accidental possession, the
The only lever of trade is, will always be, the who can endure the war the longest, that This means that whoever has the most money absorbs everyone else's.
and himself, in his kingdom, as the sole ruler
King to soar; so that the real power count him, and have him beside you, not under you must be acknowledged.

This is necessarily inherent in the nature of Matter. Trade, industry, the stock exchange if a war, a well-ordered civil war, where the Thaler in Battalions, Companies and Squadrons^e Launching drones. There are small and large ones here.
guns, howitzers and cannons, and so on, as in
of the battle, the larger battalions secured the victory at They claim to be at the end, so they claim here that large capital. The dead are in both cases.
numerous, the wounded countless, only the

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library

as the head of speculation. 23

State usually pays tribute to its members in a cannon battle.
He provides for the dead, burying them for eternity.
while the stock market dead caused him real trouble
do, and also the wounded bad citizens hand over.

This battle gradation is in our Gefell-It's perfectly natural. The generals just... to deal with the officers, who in turn dealt with the common soldiers. In the Industrial War, they are the workers, the common soldiers. On their Costs are what matter most; the vassals live first. For a while, shit!
They believe they have improved their situation. New opportunities arise.
New factories, the newspapers report jubilantly about them
the prosperity and peaceful activity of the country, but it doesn't take long, so these are themselves fell into the hands of those greater than themselves, in order to...
to withstand competition. But you can still...
They can't stand it. The protective tariffs probably protect some.
Manufacturers, but not the manufactured goods, because through the excessive protection system, a country everything must artificially produce what is something else better in nature. For example, the sugar refining= Nerreen made from sugar beets. But also with the protection= Twelves, when used correctly, will do good.
by virtue of free competition, the production the Consumption always exceeds consumption. The battle continues.
Lost for the smaller one, he makes a slap in the face, and His workers steal or beg. But that was

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library

®)

| University Library Frankfurt am Main

24 The Rothschild House

Just a small fish for a tench. Now
First come the pike, then the sharks, and so on.
The same thing repeats itself with more or less variation-to see, until the happiest, strongest one is all alone there=

He considered them all his vassals. That's how Roth came to be.
sign. Free competition brought it about,
Speculation lifted him, and luck brought him luck.
wanted all the others to fall so that he could focus on rise from their ruins.

But now the question arises, how did Rothschild specify?
cultivated, not only to assert itself alone, but
and to rise up more and more. This That's an important point. The means and the methods.
They were initially open to others as well, albeit with preferential treatment.
The state, but one must admit that the
The House of Rothschild has always been a prude in speculation.
It was. It was, admittedly, at the expense of the princes and their peoples, under the guise of Loyalty and gratitude, but under the word Spe=
In culture, many things are allowed. In a battle,
One doesn't murder, one merely kills. From those Spe=
However, one can say that, according to speculation, it was never a
Not a battle, but a slaughter.

The House of Rothschild is indeed Phi=
lofophe, that it loves speculation above all,
But this speculation is not Hegelian. It is rather simple and clear, and can be reduced to a few

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library

Frankfurt am Main

as the head of speculation. 25

Reduce points. But it is admirable that... after Rothschild's operation, the stock market audience not even the slightest confidence in his further prospects—
There were speculations. Because initially, of course, they were all in favor of the state and the subsidiary state Rothschild, but this always happened at a cost
the stock exchange.

His main thought for a long time was this. He makes a loan like the one in 1820 with Austria for So many millions, 20,800,000 guilders, in 100 guilders, which he bought for 96 and which a 130 sold. That's quite a nice thing.
Win. But the bank has confidence in the documents.
It's good and people fight over it. A common thing.

Percentages. But not Rolschild. He buys, sells—buys and buys the same item ten times. Buys always in batches of 50 and sold in batches of 100. These papers To press, he moves forward some time later with a new bond issue – which already was arranged at the first one. This caused—
The first ones and Rothschild attract them again.
fich, theils um fie fpäter noch ein Mal à 100 Pro=
to set aside a cent, partly to thereby cheaply= to resolve. But woe to him who relies on the first documents.
had confidence. The strongest houses, the noblest,
The strongest pillars of the stock exchange were thus... assassinated by Rothschild. That in a

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

25 The Rothschild House

In every major case, hundreds, even thousands, of them.
I don't need to repeat what I'm suffering.

Rothschild famously disdains poetry and Literature, but the press, both the good and the bad
He doesn't disdain bad ones and he often has them.
used it for his purposes. For example, in 1826 he did in Darmstadt a loan of six and a half Millions of guilders in 50-guilder lots, which he a He bought 90 and spent 140. Not long after
It was reported in all the newspapers that Rothschild had given the new government a new Government made a proposal to a Cupid= tissement and the government have also said this= Nommen. The duped stock market geese let themselves Pluck patiently. Almost all the loose ones left again.
in Rothschild's hands and the amortization should It's no longer necessary to come, since almost everything has been redeemed. But under the word Spe= Kulation is understood in many ways. It actually means...
In fact, everything is allowed, as long as it succeeds.

A major speculation for Rothschild, namely the most skillful but also the most perfidious that exists in a
The most unbelievable thing in a well-ordered state is the str=
Ben after the monopoly of money making. This
As is known, the house has for this purpose the Gold and mercury mines in Merico and Spa nien an sich kaufen. The main coin in Paris is in his hand, and just recently, he had it done through 8

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library

Frankfurt am Main

as the head of speculation. 27

other mints in the departments to be listed below=
Press. How did he use this money-making?
Oh, I'm almost ashamed to have to say it.
In a way that the censorship did not allow the expression will happen. When the story with the
When the Coburg coinage issue occurred, one was already allowed to to criticize Coburg. The word counterfeiter.
It appeared several times in the Frankfurter Journal, but as in October 1839 Rothschild in the Handbook had new pieces of gold struck, which, due to their dimensions,
and through their worthlessness devalued all gold,
that almost not a single citizen escaped it,
No one had the courage to call the thing by its name.
to name it. It said, "a large trading house,
A European banking house considered it a good idea.
to have a new Friedrichsd'or built, etc." But No one dared to name Rothschild; for everyone
He fears his power, and now they stand
The bankers are above the state. This proves it.
but only Rothschild's power of the public Opinion on this. He is not afraid of the police.
He is the police himself, yes, he can even already threaten.

That he was like all the other honest banker houses
They all feel it's dangerous, but they don't dare.
to complain to the state about it. It is Sometimes he even lets them have his power.
He feels he has no chamber to consult when

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

28 The Rothschild House

It is necessary to intervene in foreign bonds, to...
All the troops marched in unison. For example, to take over the penultimate Belgian bond issue alone. –

But Rothschild suppressed them persistently and sustainably.
and carried fine prisoners gagged to Haufe,
For Nothschild must, against his will, do all have European bonds in his hands, since= with the uniformity, at least seemingly.
exists. He must consider himself the Achilles of bonds.
and all one knows is that he is wounded in the heel=
If he is in a bar, he has reason to fear that people will look for her.
She aims, she hits, and he, in his entire length and Severely falls down morally and takes prey
the time bird becomes.

When Rothschild comes to the aid of other heaps,
This looks quite humane. But Roth= Schild is such a thorough speculator that with
to the best heart in the world, his vanity as Banker does not allow speculation without to undertake an advantage in which his speculation is not Lative head played a witty trick.
In 1838, a large Parisian banker= house numerous rats, carelessly from the Bank of the United States accepts. The bank
However, as is known, it was in very bad circumstances.
They stood, and it was said they had to fall. Rothschild
He himself had some of these wavering acceptances.

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library

Frankfurt am Main

as the head of speculation. 29

in hands. But that wasn't known. What That he? He offered the bank of his own free will in the states, 40 million, thereby increasing, but only temporarily, the bank's credit, and saves
The Parisian house – but rewards itself, as the Virtue, even by the fact that he first borrowed his money sold very well – immediately afterwards by 50 percent= cent fell, and does not deliver to the American Bank cash, but tramples on themselves, who
He bought it up dirt cheap, then rubbed himself with a smile.
The hands. The house in Paris was saved.
and the newspapers, the good press especially, agree=
ten Hallelujahs for Rothschild, who is so great=
It would be courageous, which is otherwise the business of the bankers

the stock exchange. Millions more were lost, than the total amount of the bond. Several suicides
They fell for it and the American Bank will...
From now on, guard carefully, once again by Rothschild wanting to take money if he offers it to her again should. Thus Rothschild became the king of finance, And this kingdom is not a poetic license. The Other bankers find fine, large vassals. He to
She is bothered when he doesn't need her, and when he
They need to run, like curly-haired sheep.
Come here. The people and the workers, these are the Knappen und das Lumpenpack, les vilains taillables et corveables A merei, as the Phalange says.

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

30 The Rothschild House

And Rothschild retained the statement that the King not because of the people, but the people
He was there because of the king. But the people were working.
no longer for the state and oneself, but
The cream of all diligence, of all industry, flows into the Rothschild's treasure trove. A political economist, a Diplomat, a writer, and an actor
They were recently sitting together in a company. The
The political economist spoke of Rothschild and his Influence. The actor stood up and said:
Let's assume the four of us had half of Rothschild's Wealth; we speculated with it, be it in what chem article it wants; because trade and industry interlock, like the wheels of a machine-rail. – Who would have saved our money in a few minutes?
Years? – No one answered. – Rothschild! verse
"The clever artist set out. – And truly, it lies
There is a profound truth in this answer. Those Manufacturers, bankers and merchants who still Those who value their honest name may notice this. It's also not about... not what Rothschild does, but what he can do,
if he wants to, and what he does at certain times must do what needs to be done. Rothschild is without will.
became a major political figure. In the state
There is nothing isolated, nothing torn apart. Everything is interconnected.
intertwined. But if Rothschild wants it, and it
A time will come when he must want to – if

as head of speculation. 31

The stock exchange is closed. Because it is his monopoly.
And even a coalition can no longer bring him down. Only
The state as such can still take action against him.
defend themselves, but even this is too late for some.
especially given the current principles of the state. See into which conflicts the state with Rothschild can come where he already is according to his position
above him and how a nationality positions itself beside him
He can still claim that, but for now I must
I should also mention one other means that the state of Roth-handed over a shield to demonstrate his superiority to constantly claim. I mean the relay post.

The relay post.

Everything happens quickly these days. Five mis
Grooves are often more important than a century otherwise.
Not that intelligence is developing more quickly spreads, but is affected by the invention of the stock exchange.
the fate of many thousands often on a few Wednesdays-
Nuts. The dead ride fast, hunt citizens.

The state, to which the well-being of all is equally linked
He must care about his feelings, even if he also so far, the means to
to actively and equally promote the well-being of all,
This can negatively prevent many measures,
that gives one person too great and clear a precedent= Part over the other. I have this principle in a brochure "the state and industry" carried out to the extreme, and wished the
to see the state merge into the people, by becoming one with them alone should seize control of all industry. I took The post office, the salt and tobacco monopoly as an example, provided that the state makes no profit,

but merely the faithful steward of a fine people,
without distinction of rank. But now I was mistaken.
For example, myself. Our state has it not even brought to the point of considering the post office as a to be considered a non-profit state institute for everyone.
The state itself is opening the postal service to competition.
Whoever has the most money can afford one Holding the relay post. And precisely this competition
It is of such a nature that any other competition is impossible.
will be. Free competition is only the thing= to condemn because they need= which in turn leads to a monopoly. But not to the state monopoly, which the One must keep everyone's interests in mind.
on the other hand, to a private monopoly that only the protects one's own interests at the expense of everyone else.
Others. Such a private monopoly, which the found to contradict the rationale of the state, is the staff= fat post. If it weren't a reality, one I wouldn't believe it. And yet she is...
Rothschild's advantage at the expense of the entire stock market.

So the state allows a special post next to the main post office. But why is he refusing?
because a special telegraph line next to the main one= line? What's different about a relay post, then?
where this telegraph line is missing? The principle That would be true: Have money, become rich, and
You are allowed to do anything.

Weill, Rothschild and the European States.

until the stock market will have stopped trading. Roth-
The shield completely swallowed her up to that point, and He will find enough flatterers to tell him become:

Vous leur fites, Seigneur,
En les croquant, trop d'honneur.

But assuming there are still some stock exchanges left-Ruins remain, so Rothschild is already taken care of.
Just like things are now in Paris and in Sieb-Germany stands, it is highly likely that the railways by companies under the Pass
The Rothschild throne will be executed.
The purpose is quite simple. Until now, the post office belonged to... this main means, the state, but this, ver-voluntarily expresses his power, surrenders the iron private companies and only have the -
It was unreasonable to demand that she return his letters for free.
Get it! Our state is very modest. Ge-
Now the train of the railway from Paris to Frankfurt goes off twice a day, or it will
A telegraph line was built on it. Nevertheless-
This only happens at certain times. But now it happens again.
Just an important message two minutes later
One. The train won't leave again for another twelve hours.
and only applies to the future stock exchange, which is currently
It has a last day. But what can the patron do?

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library

Frankfurt am Main

The relay post. 35

What to do for society? He sends a very small Locomotivchen alone as a relay, the own-
This is not denied to the people, and to the state.
It doesn't hurt, so they say; incidentally, this is what these people are about.
nothing at all; the railway takes its Letters with! Happy state, you and threefold a happier stock market that remains silent about everything, and doesn't even dare to submit a pleading petition.
to sign against it. How is that even possible?
They find all the Rothschild brokers, and fine forced servants. Rothschild is already dealing with yourself, just to do something for the poor devils-

Don't be magnanimous and philanthropic. Just...
Slander from the stock exchange, this ungrateful Courtesan
O, tu Pas voulu, George Dandin!
And so, may peace be to their ashes!

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

Rothschild in conflict with the Nationality.

I've already said it, it can be done to the House of Rothschild, a philosophical-cosmopolitan to gain a side that only indirectly stems from him emerges, as well as often the finest flowers on the Prison and fortress walls flourish. As a result, that Rothschild's house is European, that it is German, French, English and Italian, even Turkish and is Russian at the same time, that it must be said so—Kalisic is, it seems to be on the verge of eternal peace—to have built, and since it is the main power in the Diplomacy is, so it also receives as much as possible.
Peace, at the expense of all principles. It Perhaps this will be a blessing for all of Europe, and Rothschild can probably speak of believing souls
to be regarded as a work of Providence;
For it is undisputed that in every friction between Rothschild, of two different nationalities, presented himself as raises mediators and in the name of peace,
That means the stock exchange, every conflict with violence

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library

Frankfurt am Main

Rothschild in Conflict, c. 37

suffocated. Thus, as has already been noted, Thiers overthrown by him in 1840. Because Rothschild's Power is, after all, concentrated in constitutional states, in this hybrid network of a state, most strongly and most widespread. Our constitutional states so far, they are based solely on accidental possession, which

Sovereign: consequently, most legislators are sovereign.
Wisdom, countless multitude of bankers' deputies, fine
faithful squires, and yes, he lifts and throws down.
in the blessed lands of constitutional freedom—
He knows who he likes or dislikes. Perhaps...
They melted together to please him, the various ones
The nationalities of Europe together, so that one can no longer do so in Paris, just as in Vienna and London.
French, German or English, but purely stock market-related,
That is, speaks Rothschildish.

But what about Roth's patriotism?
signs, if in the end there is one after all War should break out! Which country can withstand it?
Can we count on him? But, one might say,
Rothschild is actually preventing the war!
Of course, in diplomacy. It's also a matter of principle.
War is not part of our discussions these days.
fear. We'd rather spill ink than blood.
Even between the different parties in the
There is no need to fear feuds between monarchical states.
Prince and people are like married couples. They sulk.

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

EU)

38 Rothschild in conflict

together when they find themselves alone, but then a Stranger, they immediately smile back and make Peace. But ultimately, it's about Europe.
but neither about principles nor about freedom from the state=
It's not about nationality, nor about today. Who will be responsible for such things?
Things can throw your life into the balance! That's why Rothschild can sleep soundly. However, this is a matter of...
for something completely different, bigger, more important,
More poetic. These are English linens.
and cotton, for which Europe has not yet long period of time, for forty years, mutually abusing—has slaughtered, and here lies the question. What does he ask?
Finally, a bale of cotton went to Rothschild.
He lies calmly and phlegmatically and lets him
to stumble over the fact that he falls.

It is fortunate for Rothschild that the emperor

That would be fine Chinese patriotism with the English—
The red-haired war has plunged into terrible conflicts—
come. Perhaps he would have made peace.
and either the English minister, or the deposed the Chinese emperor. But with China, if England has not been helped yet, because with its free Competition may even give him a second China for his goods are openly displayed; he may even speak German—
The country will make even more concessions than on the last customs congress, so in a few years the Production still exceeds consumption.

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library

Frankfurt am Main

with nationality. 39

The same misery will ensue, the same crisis will occur.
appear and not always will the emperor be from Give China money so that Espartero fish can survive, fine troops can be paid with English gold, and the civil war thereby fueling the English un—
Quiet cotton finally available in Spain too.
It's coming. England needs sales channels for its products.
to have them, and in order to have them, it fears war.
No. But Germany, God willing, always will.
more German, that is, becoming anti-English, likewise France, indeed the entire continent. A friction.
It cannot then be avoided. The question then arises... then, is Rothschild German, French, or English—
lifch? — And if Russia with fine pan—Slavism would occur, or become associated with England or combine with France against Germany Should Rothschild take what position?
But, they say, the slightest war would harm Roth—
Schild's power must be overthrown, indeed, the power of the entire stock exchange. —
To that, of course, it can be countered that Rothschild gold mines and the stock market has not yet not dispensed with. But here, too, the question is somewhat...
It's gone too far. It's not that important to know what Rothschild's position in the war was will be, but before the war. Which national Does he represent the interests of the First? One probably knows... that Rothschild never the freedom and the fort—Steps is represented. Regarding this question, there is

SZ

—

N

Dun

40 Rothschilds in conflict

There is only one answer: Rothschild is the open enemy.
of the people, from whose immaturity he lives. But Even as an ultraconservative, he must have a Na-Representing nationality. If the stranger is armed who invades Germany, he is called a Russian or a Frenchmanzose, so ist es die Pflicht eines jeden Deutschen, Whether he is a democrat or an aristocrat, weapons first.
to take action against him; then they may later
her black laundry with the family lye-Wash. So what nationality is he? -
That is a very important question, to which Rothschild replied.
doesn't even know how to answer.

And that question was already there. In 1840 it arose.
James Rothschild openly supported the four powers against France in Paris. May Thiers be right or
He was wrong; he believed he was acting as a Frenchman.
and to represent the honor of a fine nation. Roth-Schild, however, appeared as Austrian consul and as king of the stock exchange. Thiers let him in the Con-to ask the institution what French honor it has for him as regards him, since he is a German. James Roth-Schild responded in a public letter, which he had it inserted into all the journals: even if he also
If you are German, then you have fine children, Franz zosen. Nevertheless, he acted in the interest of Germany-lands, that is, in the interest of his purse. God Don't make me blame him for that,
I myself am not a supporter of Thiers and the Rhine.

Frankfurt am Main

with nationality. 41

border. From a French point of view, however, it's fine.
The procedure, however, is somewhat cosmopolitan and anti-national.
had been, and so the ministry is called that for nothing Guizot is not the minister of P'Etranger. Nothing=
Nevertheless, the explanation James adaeta
It should be assumed that his children are French.
As you can see, this dilemma has already existed.
as the Berliners say, and it immediately became garish
It stands out at the slightest friction. If so the German Rothschild German and the English
If he wants to be English, then the Roth crowd remains—
The sign left them with no option but to separate.
and move into different houses—
solve it, otherwise James' explanation is merely a A juggling act. One cannot be many masters' servants.
to be all at once. The art, the poetry, the Literature, philosophy can be European, the
The stock market does not have this prerogative. The thought sticks.
Not on the flounders, but the stock exchange has nothing to do with it.
To create ideas. Above all, it must be national.
to be, if not in times of peace, but to certain eras. Rothschild, however, is so far a
The main obstacle to national development. And He is not doing it in the name of philosophy and the World freedom, but in the name of the interests of his own house.

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
University Library Frankfurt am Main

Dun

Rothschild as head of the railways and
Channels facing the governments.

When one reads the old chronicles, both France's as Germany's, but especially those on the Rhine, you can find them every five hours:
one different barrier, one different toll, Different money and different laws. Albrecht Dürer

specifically all the places where he was stopped.
It seems unbelievable. Most of these Rights belonged to aristocratic private individuals – because more were not – who now have a right to it):
ten, which their ancestors used to call the tip
They forced their way through with the sword. In addition,
nor the special rights of cities, so that it
It seemed like it would never end. With civilization
These private rights gradually disappeared.
The French Revolution gave them de jure the They're finished; because in fact some still exist today.
Who can explain the different monetary systems in German?
Praise the country if he is a good patriot, who has not yet annoyed by the different highest

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library

Frankfurt am Main

Rothschild as head of the railways, mt. 43

arbitrary prices of the German dozen-colored Drivers? What German doesn't feel the same way about that?
Lack of unity? It's true, Austria has Recently, steps have been taken to improve the postal service.
to reduce fees and to negotiate with other states about it Treaties concluded; but Austria also has state= railways. Justice must be served to him.
let them drive.

The German customs union has been given a poetic name.
A side to be gained was sought, and rightly so. Not for example, that he brought this unity into life was summoned; but since he was once in Prussia to Protection of his factories had been introduced, thus preventing the heterogeneity in trade relations so much,
that the other smaller states had to follow.
This is how it will be with every major measure taken by Prussia.
fine, which so deep and so sharp into the German national-life cuts in.

Should we believe it? An invention?
as only happens every couple of centuries in history
appears, suddenly emerges in Europe.
Invention of steam power as a means of transportation.
This invention now threatens to plunge Europe back into...
to reject individualism and the state in

Where once only one strong fist ruled, now a Gesellschaft, a corporation, and these companies
Everyone is involuntarily under a boss, because this

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

Dun

44 Rothschild as head of the railways e

The main one, if it wants to, can destroy all the others.
And this boss is Rothschild! And the state...
almost everywhere he voluntarily gives up his initiative and...
gradually expresses all power, all central authority= sational power. Is it really worth the effort? By-to have games in history, like that of a Charles and Frederick the Great, and in particular the of the public health committee, to whom one should certainly cannot be accused of not knowing what it was.
means to govern.

As early as 1822, Fourier said: "The Con= Shareholders' centralization unites the heads, but Not the contributors. This is a specific one.
A product that makes a brilliant impression and is characterized by large and
It recommends useful work. But what influence will it have?
Once organized, this concentration will have
They offer all branches to the companies and shareholders will have been passed down through industry? It will be then a federation of related and separatedtiered monopolies form, the brutal beginning of a Commercial feudalism, as the fourth phase of civilizing Movement. Civilization has with the leagues
the great vassals, both patriarchal, oli-Garchisch, begun as a noble family, it will ending with the great vassals of another kind,
who will be the heads of the trading companies.
That is where civilization will be led by its course.
towed. First, however, she will become more and more

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library

Frankfurt am Main

to the governments. 45

and incur more debt through the tax authorities and the Decimation of the future, in order to then be completely under to fall from the yoke of the feudal monopoly."

Despite Fourier's usual sluggishness,
These words are truly prophetic.

A young poet and statesman at the same time,
Lamartine avoids expressing his opinion on this fundamental question of life.
more clearly and in more detail. I cannot Therefore, here is a condensed excerpt of his speech.
to give, which he in 1842 in the French
The Chamber of Deputies held, as it debated the matter, whether the railways should be owned by private companies Whether or not it should be left to someone else.

"What is the purpose of a government that only acts in a limited capacity?"
Nation is, to exclude from the works that the—
Is the same nation called upon to carry out its mission? Why?
this outcry, by using the word government or state in any enterprise—speaks? —"

"Separating the government from the country means the
To take up weapons to fight oneself,
which were otherwise forged to oppress—to attack the governments. I cannot
It is no wonder that such blunders by men
nern, who so to speak have been for twenty years,
have become entrenched in opposition. —"
Mr. Lamartine hits the nail on the head here.

Head, but the cause doesn't apply in all countries.

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

EU)

46 Rothschild as head of the railways.

from the opposition. When the governments
They have no trust in their people, so they pass on.
They themselves handle all important private companies or to calculate and to say "a nous deux" in a brotherly manner need. But the people always pay, only it comes then fine money instead into the state treasury into a Privatkasse. Lamartine himself, by the way, took a jab at the Ministers who have been in the office for 20 years. They have frozen their position. Because it is precisely the current one that is so rigid. The French government can do the least for the people. She doesn't trust him because she doesn't have his trust. 180,000 electors cannot in any case... Representing a nation of 35 million inhabitants. Lamartine continues:

"This is one of the biggest things, that a country has ever had to accomplish: to overcome challenges the iron streets a political, commercial, mis to create military and industrial life, none of us still understand its importance can calculate. So, will the nation, or its Will the government itself act, or will it abstain? carefully from this, by considering all individuals or What is left to societies of individuals? The question is incredibly big! The question is immense. It is more than a political question, it is social! She will either put you at the top or to the tail of the industrial nations, which

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library

Frankfurt am Main

to the governments. 47

confines an entire generation to the restricted The spirit of individualism, which is incapable is to accomplish truly great things, or It turns 30 million people into one individual being that moves in its freedom, with all his strength and his will and in In view of its eternal continuation as a people! "Perhaps when we speak of political freedom, of the right of participation and activity, that free governments give to each of their citizens They should be left free in order to draw from them, a right whereby the action of the government It merely puts everyone's thoughts into action. – I am a staunch supporter of this type. Decentralization. The greatest portion for all citizens.

let the political process be free and open in the elections.
Let justice and freedom radiate everywhere
let, on all classes of the people, on all Individuals of the nation, like the sun, which encompasses everything heated so that everyone could have their share and so that every citizen in the state may be so free to say, to parody the word of a king by saying, P'etat dest moi. That is the Decentralization, which I demand. But, if firstly, the negation, which in its political context Nature is free, its mandate, its power, its right has created in this decentralisation; if

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

—

48 Rothschild as head of the railways c.

in which the government is concentrated, then changes

The role. The state must then...

general will with an intensity and a almighty unlimited power in execution—
j rung bring in full confidence that he 0 the whole nation itself is and wants to remain so."

"I say the state must all the more..."
Concentrating activity in fine administration, each more political law through the form of The government has spread and scattered this information.
the free governments felt as if by instinct,
France felt this particularly strongly.

"When it was in 1789 by despotism
When it transitioned to freedom, it began by all to break up his provinces, all his federal and local administrations and re—
to throw presentations at each other, it's level
He lent everything and related everything to the focal point.
of the center. Thus it melted around and formed to become a whole in one throw, a reductive power, to the most remote innermost
To give strength and life to parts, and in one national clumps (eomme un seul bloe national and to resist outer Europe at the same time"

"Should the government fall into the hands of the Iron Curtain?"
railway companies resign or 0

9 ji

Once the idea of public opinion...

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
UB | Frankfurt am Main

to the governments. 49

She should be systematic and social with jealousy
Certainty, to consider the execution of this as a principle Reserved for a large factory? I don't hesitate to ask.
"A moment to explain myself in favor of the latter."
"The companies are a trade guild, which does not act out of patriotism, but
Out of selfishness, out of greed. Out of a Greed, which, if you will, is to be praised,
but they always have a personal, selfish side.
What is the motive? What is the main result?
of this? In good, populated areas—
the one where there are many transports and much to Winning is, the companies will Laying railway tracks, however, at somewhat long stretches where there is no development or unvisited areas, but where they for various reasons at the very most—most necessary, especially to the
To give the whole a unity, who—who they should beware of, these with iron—to supply the railways. Because the main—
The purpose of companies is profit and personal interest. What does it extend to?
So, their subsidies? They want privileges!
They have power and monopolies. But what do they offer?
The state for that? — They want secure pros:
have centen, your guaranteed shares on the Börse ausschnaun, fie in journals with large Weill, Nothschild, and the European States. 4

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

EU)

50 Rothschild as head of the Eifel railways.

Letters praise the certainty that they will never
'If it falls below 4 percent, it will be over all expectations are raised by the premium and so on.
They win millions on safe railways,
which the state has done for them in part – because without a minimum of guarantee– their interests, or the permission truly barbaric and folk–
to be able to ascertain depressing prices,
They will not make any serious offers, –
but if they asked for nothing at all and everything
If they did it for free, the state should give them the money.
to refuse permission for that; not even for that reason alone.
to declare incapable of filling something large too full:
to prevent power from falling into the hands of a few

to put down usurers, so that he would finally not be able to... soil, the blood and sweat of its citizens
to give some speculators a price that...
Break and divide the state's power, and a individual power as feudalism of the general oppose national power."

"A powerful feeling has always been with me—" mastered, as often as I read in the story. It is this the impossibility of the true pro-aggressive state freedom with the Exiftenz of the corporations and the industriular societies. I know that It's not generally thought that way; one sees in them

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library

Frankfurt am Main

to the governments. 51

On the contrary, a correlation of freedom, but One forgets that their freedom is always aristocratic=
It is selfish and selfish. – You can probably be powerful

They stand, but they certainly oppress those who are un:
find them. Once they're there, fo
They will be your lords for centuries.
You won't know where to start anymore,
And they will rule you. And what The worst part is the other interests that scattered, isolated and without solidarity, will perish alongside them and thereby the
"States will become even more of an obstacle."
"The people will complain in vain if..."
The state puts everything in the hands of corporations.
laid down. It will be their prey, as well as the
The state itself. You, who with your Bleed the feudalism and the street
money and the barriers abolished
You have, now you want to unite the people Bankers deliver and your
"Have the country walled up with their money!"
"Before ten years have passed, the societies in the chambers and absolute master in the cabinets—fchen. The administration of the country amounts to only 300 million annually, the railway companies

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

Dun

52 Rothschild as head of the railways and

A number of people and a sum in their power to exploit have, which far exceed those of the country will exceed."

"Societies everywhere are becoming aristocratic—"
Lay out tables and tracks, the state is already on it.
and is democratic in itself and cares for its people.
On state railways, everyone travels at everyone else's expense.
On private railways, one travels to Giniger's advantage.
Shareholders win here, profit is there,
"That's a social gain."

So much for Lamartine's main reasons. I
However, I feel compelled to add a few things—

Eldorado of bankers, the deputies have said,
Basically, all those who have a lot of money, many Influence on the ministry. It happened now, that, after Rothschild built a railway from Paris to Versailles docked, Mr. Fould was jealous and also wanted a railway.
Deputy and could threaten! Right in the middle of it Companies halted work. The government gave Then money was added and the train was full ends. With it, the misfortune of several hundred Families were informed. Who doesn't know the horrible Disaster of late May? Or do you believe the Could this have been a coincidence? The writer of this was Eyewitness to this nameless tragedy. I saw

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library

Frankfurt am Main

in contrast to the negations. 53

the machine, said the unfortunate ones, and only one I heard a voice saying that the misfortune
the competition and the most unforgivable negligence
to owe its origin to the nature of society has. The name Fould was on the lips of the Dying, and not forgiveness was their last.
Word. His house has brought nothing good to France.
brought, as little as the Rothschilds.

But will it be said that justice showed Yes, the plaintiffs. I have pointed this out.
that outside the Jurisprudence France the
The magistracy that deserves the least praise is, indeed= just like the administration. Numerous lawsuits against Both prove this. I dare say, and I know from experience that the French
The justice system is the most corrupt in all of Europe, with With few exceptions. And do you know if It is no coincidence that those judges themselves are shareholders of the railway.
Are they? I'm not saying they are, believe it.
Not exactly, but it is possible after all, and so
It can easily happen that the most honest judge in
He should sort out his own affairs. A conflict with A civilized person respects their own conscience.
It looks good, but it's something else entirely when he's with
This conflicts with one's own interests.

What is happening in French societies
to say, that all fits even more into German-

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

EU)

54 Rothschild as head of the Eifenbapnen x.

land on Rothschild. Rarely will companions-Form groups without fine patronage, and form
She does, and he lets her alone rule, that's how it is.
Certainly not much money to be made from it. Through the
We get railway lines from companies,
But never railways. They only bite where It's a hefty chunk. But now it's easy to er= know that especially in populated, visited areas
The railways are at least currently causing more damage.
as useful. They are only useful if the whole country is cut through uniformly from all sides.
You can find them directly on less busy highways.
in deserted or less visited provinces far more useful and beneficial. If the state... takes over, yes, one covers the other, the company=
But companies only take the profit, whatever it takes.
They are to the advantage of the state. If Prussia would be the direct owner of all fine railway lines,
That way, the Düsseldorf-Elberfeld district wouldn't be so bad.
stand. In addition, if the veins are not well-endowed...
tirenden railways, which society has neglected,
So that despite all supervision, accidents are very real.
will probably happen.

That's just how it is with the canals.
It would take me too far to want to include all the bits.
perform games that the phalanx, over the wolf=
The greed of the shareholders of Canale brings. The tariff-Elevations of the Rhone Canal are even found in all

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library

Frankfurt am Main

in contrast to the negations. 55

It has been discussed in German newspapers. The praise-levies paid to Rothschild at the opening of the Danube-Main Canal will one day be connected with a
The accent must be pronounced. Only one ex
I think so. A canal company in the southern France had set a tariff for timber transports, according to fixed to the cubic foot – that is, one calculates—Measure the width, height, and length of each piece of wood and then paid customs duties on it. But now she measures the
the whole load or the entire cargo together, so that the emptiness between a tree and the Other things must also be paid for. And the
The difference is expected to be half a million annually.
And society does this: because it is his plaisir and because the word of their tariff law their So it seems. Whoever doesn't like it, let them complain and litigate over the interpretation of a word.

And despite all this, the governments continue to drive away and let companies there railways to the Place them where they yield good returns, let them still complete freedom to speculate, at the risk
there, not alone never state railways from a to preserve the end of the country to the other, but still risk that they will be in the state itself,
two or three other states will rise up, which,
Even if they bend down now, in a short time a will speak a completely different language. To my surprise=
It's not a [missing word], by the way; if they [missing word] a Rothschild

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

56 Rothschild as head of the railways 1c.

allowed him to arise, and even cared for him, so that he
The consequence is that other companies will also...
to transport. Whoever snakes and crocodiles er-
He is not afraid of lizards. But I I have other things on the railway lines of the
to highlight companies, things that are important for the poor man wished that she would rather be completely would have been omitted and would have damaged our civilization in to cast a bright but barbaric light. I mean:

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

The different classes and prices of the Railways and open carriages.

A characteristic feature of our century
Is that the elegant idler about the farmer and the hardworking but less gloved Workers believe themselves to be superior, and at no price in the world would be driving alongside him. So it had to be different classes and places on the railway to be applied, all the more so since one is in Frank-rich countries and Germany merely imitators of England was from a country where, as they say, freedom reigns where the people are miserable, poor, and crude is almost as raw and barbaric as the English Aristocracy. Once the classes were divided, it was necessary to Prices can also be set at different rates. Proper Ideally, one could have noble, bourgeois, peasant and other departments should do it, but the iron-
The railway is not as aristocratic as it looks; it
She wasn't concerned about the issue itself, but about the money.
Those who pay a lot are received like kings.

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

—

58 The different classes

Those who have little are treated like a calf led to the slaughter.
goes, thrown onto the cart.

We once divided the squares into sections in all our public buildings. Our customs,
Our education has not yet led to pure de can bring democracy. It's all from to defend from a certain point of view and to Excuse me, but the point of view of the speculation and private profit is certainly the most wretched, most inhuman that no government has ever claimed takes or has taken, even the aristocracy-
You don't table.

Suppose a private company builds a theater.
What would the police tell the government if... the speculator arranged the last seats in such a way that It rains and snows inside so that people can see the Take second place instead of third? She would would not tolerate it under any circumstances; at most, she would allow it if to admit to a fairground booth. But she did that at the
The railway was tolerated. Our speculators have the I've observed that there are a lot of people, without prejudice, who prefer the cheap third option
Place, as the expensive second, despite the mixed
They elected society. They thought we wanted this.
Humanity will drive you out; we want to Set up the space so that no dog can get in it for three days.
It lasts for hours. In good weather, you'll be greeted by...
Eaten dust and coal waste, in rainy weather,

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library

EU)

Frankfurt am Main

and railway prices, etc. 59

When it snows or hails, people chatter that it
It's a pleasure to see, by the way, the doctors must They also live. There are plenty of people, and they Stocks are up 7 percent! That's what they and the others thought.
The government no longer has the power to do it to them.
to prohibit on behalf of the medical police. One will then ask why there even is a third class
Is that where it is? – I've already said that we're Eng= land owes its existence. But the truth is that the Second class is already so expensive that it's not even possible.
If the third class were filled, it wouldn't be jo mens Murderously arranged. But what follows from this:
that two classes are doing quite well at the railway=
That's enough. Deutsche Post is much more democratic.
here. But only the state could do that. A
The company, which is based on shares, has nothing further in mind.
as percentages. The whole world can perish,
If she only gets her percentage. The whole thing
The past and future of history is hers for One-eighth of a percent is for sale. It's sad, but That's how it is, and unfortunately, it will become more and more common.

That's just how it is with travel luggage. You know, that national division has completely taken hold in Germany excellent in terms of the weight of the luggage and reflected in the postal prices. Ten hours have passed. 30 pounds, then 40 again, then 20 pounds again free, depending on whether one leaves a fatherland and

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

EU)

60 The different classes

enters another. The railways would have
This problem can be remedied if they are implemented everywhere would have become state railways. The prices
They could have been made equal everywhere, just like that.
The weight of the luggage. That there is any luggage at all.
Railway excess weight calculated, belongs back in
The story of the speculative werewolves.
Steamships do not include an overcharge for passenger luggage.
weight. Through the various companies
But not only are the prices different everywhere,
Instead, one pays for being overweight, just like in the old days.
The post office. It's probably worth the effort, iron-to have tracks!

Several German newspapers have discussed this topic.
Terung drawn, as soldiers on the Gifen-transported by train, whether on the third class, whether on special vehicles. I have here for the time being to note that this is quite common in private companies.
These are secondary questions. It concerns, from a military perspective, Far more important things for them. The king of France buys up all the shares of a railway company.
He can do that. – What kind of military qualifications does she have?
Benefits for the country? –

In war, such tricks are laughed at.
"Given," one might say. – But destroy.
He can leave his property. That will be fine with him.
No one should be denied. Or is a society so pa-Triotically invulnerable, so that they cannot be bribed

Frankfurt am Main

and prices for railways, e.g. 61

can let, cannot, as by chance,
several battalions were blown up with the steam boiler.
jump. I'm not saying that will be the case,
But it is possible, and a state must do everything.
Foresee possible outcomes and potential possibilities
can prevent it. – Should I give you more reasons?
against the existence of private companies and the Rothschild's trade efforts, I believe,
This is unnecessary. Let's look at how... is it possible for the state to exercise the power of these new
to break feudalism and undertake the great enterprises to manage trade and industry itself, in– to which he also invited all its members to participate.
can be taken.

a University Library Johann Christian Senckenberg
University Library Frankfurt am Main

How can the state escape feudalism?
the bankers.

A government must above all be strong, not weak.
alone, violent and repulsive in turbulent times
as in tiger leaps, but also in completely my calm, like a lion who has awakened his consciousness

which he carries within himself, his power and his magnanimity.
This strength in stillness, however, can only be achieved by...
have, if they are the true expression of the people is, when they, by on the one hand the somewhat stormy– mixed wishes are mediated in a conciliatory manner, and others:
since the deeply felt needs of a people, calm and follows at a brisk pace. If she does this,
Thus, it has neither the extraordinary from the outside,
nor to fear the ordinary from within.
She will always remain master of herself and the
Do not bend your neck, not even under threats.
powerful neighbors still under the rule of intrigue inner false friends. The first goal of a re–

How does the state escape it. 63

Government must be governing that is independent moved in all directions. The purpose must be that Everyone is well off, even at the expense of individuals, and The more powerful these individuals are, the stronger the force must be.
the government defend its rights against them.
She must constantly level by a whole head.
to be larger than the body politic, and in order to achieve this Head with pride and honor, with freedom and with
To be able to bear and raise trust.

The state is a miniature concept from the Na=
This concept must be pantheistic. Everything must be able to develop freely within it, the grass= chen both like the cedar, but according to certain or Chinese laws. But the grass must be almost They need even more care than the cedar, and if it stands under her shadow, so that it does not
If it can grow, then the cedar must be cut down first.
will be, because the many small things are, as measures, the
The whole is more necessary than any single large thing. A forest with hundreds of thousands of thin, greening trees is more beautiful, shadier and healthier than a heath with a hundred colossal oaks, which the growth of the Prevent small trees. Our newest state but it's nothing other than such a heath, well-mentally the constitutional state with fine census=
deputies and banking ministers. -

Only a state that does not trust its people, or whom the people do not trust, must, in large numbers

Opportunities to take refuge in individuals, in order to
to borrow money or undertake large projects—to be led. He then uses these to Lord of the house, but a sulking or pouty one
He wants to remain in control, but doesn't immediately realize that he is being controlled It's like putting the frying pan into the fire. Rothschild wouldn't have... can arise, as a state-backed loan provider, if the European states since 1813 with their people—would have lived in peace. One needs precisely that.
not to make any cannon noise, in order to indicate, that there is no peace in the house. It is the case that...
This is just like an unhappy marriage.
The most warlike scenes take place in the boudoir. There People say the harshest things to each other; they sulk publicly.
People behave decently, but they kick each other while under the...
Table on the corpse thorns. Each part follows the Friends of the other side. A stranger sneaks by.
He introduces himself, presents himself as an intimate friend of the husband,
For whom the law is, lend him money on good terms.
Interest, he says all evil about the faithful wife, seeks to worsen the relationship in order to gain his
to assert power, and to consider oneself necessary received, without, however, a break occurring.
let them, out of fear that they would both marry elsewhere and They don't pay him, because the man pays the interest.
with the woman's dowry. But it would be time.
to restore peace within the household and to remove the stranger to throw the friend out the door. — — —

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library

Frankfurt am Main

Dun

the feudalism of the bankers. 65
So embrace each other then, and let us be more
question!

The European state only resorts to general measures.
Measures in extraordinary cases, such as find: war, plague, and revolution. The so-called Ordinary, quiet things are none of his business. And yet
It lies in the ordinary, as Lessing already says,
the greatest miracle, the most extraordinary= liche. Our state doesn't even provide for the nō= most effective means. The Bible already gives information regarding this.

The state leaves the fruit, timber and potato industry to the public.
trade with private loan sharks. He thinks in good years=
Don't go to the bad ones, and the government has a Magazine, so she lets her things spoil, or will profit from it himself. Two bad years are coming.
One after the other, she doesn't know what to do. But Why doesn't it release the salt? Is salt
More necessary than bread and potatoes? And salt
It always does. – It doesn't turn out badly like the fruit.
But it all comes down to one cause. The state does not dare to withdraw this trade from the market.
He doesn't dare anything at all, because he can't, because he neither trusted nor believed in him from a moral point of view.
is trusted; because he mostly relies on diplomacy
going astray and never feeling at home
Hits the nail on the head.

An invention like the railway emerges.

Weill, Rothschild, and the European States. 5

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

66 How does the state respond

The consequences of such an invention are still being felt.
Unpredictable. What does a strong state do when... does not have enough money in the treasury to do it alone
To execute? He prescribes boldly and with certainty= unity – because the common good is paramount – a forced loan, un emprunt forcé, je according to everyone's taxes and assets.
And if even one citizen only has ten guilders
he must sign; the state guarantees his 4 or 3.5 percent. And the state can do this;
because if he covers his entire country with railways,
This protects the busy area, which has fewer mountains.
drive and cover them. In Germany there would have been more– several small states form a society, or the German League itself could have handled the matter ten could. Or Prussia could have taken the initiative like | should take part with the Zollverein. The same everywhere.
Prices then, and only two classes, both be Comfortable and beautiful, only the first one is a bit more elegant.
through certain conveniences, if only one aristocratic difference takes place fol. Even the

that. If the track throws more, then the
The government wants its members to benefit.
let them, and reduce other taxes, such as Prussia did it recently; it yields less,
Yes, every fine part must wear it. If the ver:
different railway lines in Germany with each other in

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
[IB] Frankfurt am Main

the feudalism of the bankers 67

If a state union were to occur, there would be nothing to it.
to be feared. This is still possible today; because Even today, the state can control the railways—
take away companies and seize the shares, after they had, of course, spent all their premiums on the
The stock exchange forbids it.

The same applies to bonds.
The government cannot redeem it, so it pays for it.
The interests, however, would have to prohibit all premium pricing.
Because a state cannot tolerate that everyone
He offers his skin for sale on the stock exchange every day. Of course.
Money should not be the primary means.
fine, whereby a state protects itself against fine citizens=
over. It must not be an espartostate,
The armed forces must not be the first to...
State funds are needed to maintain the status quo. But this requires completely different things, and in our case...
halkhnissen, this is still a chimera.

Rothschild will remain in power for a long time to come. And If it isn't Rothschild, then it is England that is its He takes on the role and pays subsidies. With his However, subsidies would not have overthrown Napoleon.
The Prussians were fighting for something different than for English money. But Rothschild is still there.
not above the state. He does, after all, enjoy the rights and protection of any State. So let him bear the burdens.
of the same state with its sufferings and

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

Joys, and then there is a main-
State-owned enterprise, so a fast-
The state cannot dictate laws to him,
but he dictates them to him.

The entire project is based on this last phase.
The secret of statecraft compared to Rothschild. I
I don't think it's necessary to describe them in more detail.
act. Because the conditions are precisely what they are.
Not specified. The highest principle of the state cannot be defined.
usually, as in philosophy, in one sentence reduce.

With confidence in the people and the strong Progress is neither a Rothschild nor any other power.
to fear that this power, on the contrary, must States themselves can be liable for interest. However, through mistrust and rigid refusal of any truly felt Freedom, rise up on these ruins of the state, other powers, which are gaining a more and more firm foothold to seize power and patronize the state itself.

The European state, Germany in particular
There's still a vote to be taken today. Tomorrow it might be different.
Too late.

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library

Frankfurt am Main

Dun!

Attachment.

I can't help but write a letter here=
print, which a sincere French state= a man wrote to a German publicist, and the
in various points, with those in this brochure expressed ideas, albeit indirectly agree= That's right. I readily admit that this letter has given me the
The first idea for this brochure came from... Which...
If he came to my face, that is probably

as follows:

Sir!

I can only thank you for the effort.
open ideas of the state that you encounter here and there in your Remarks about Germany, specifically about Prussia is woven in, – enchevetrer. – It is found
They are only outlines, but they prompt further action.
think, and that's already a lot.

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

EU)

70 Appendix.

They tell me the difference between Frank-rich and Germany, be the one that with us the Laws are better than people, and that in
In contrast, people in Germany are better. than the laws. If that is the case, then I hesitate no longer.
For a moment, I will declare myself for Germany; because the legal customs – les mœurs – find better than written paper. – But I believe,
You are mistaken, all the more so since you usually a mass of observations into an axiom for:
to tie together. This is a special day.
lent, a chemical inverse reducing talent, but Many misconceptions also arise. Firstly, there are
Our laws are nothing less than universally good, Secondly, I don't consider the Germans to be any better than...
us. They will attribute that to my vanity,
But overall, I don't believe that the Germans are individually better off than the French-zose, although he behaves more awkwardly, which is much-
I easily taught you that paradox; because you
They love to turn things upside down, and Since everything in our society is wrong, we meet
They are mostly the right thing to do.

On the contrary, I believe that in Germany more firmly embraces the term state than state-has held up, as is the case with us. Not

I prefer tresses, but various converging ones

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library

Frankfurt am Main

Appendix 71

Reasons have caused the philosophical idea of the constitutional state in France
It wasn't understood for a single moment. And That's a disaster.

I feel grieved, (je ne m'apitoie guere) about the fate of a people. I know that when a people wants to decide something, and when this His wish is a general need, it is him with time quoyque or parceque, wimporte – will enforce. What you therefore tell me about the aspirations of the German press and the
What the German people said doesn't interest me much.
The days are over when France concerned itself with its internal affairs.
Disputes in a neighboring country are troubling.
Richelieu's politics and the Guizots are two ent= Opposing poles. I believe the truth lies in of the middle. Would the juste milieu have no such thing in our country?
Bad sound, I would be inclined to believe it.
But we never had a juste milieu. I
I clearly understood that, but unfortunately too late.
The term "juste milieu" has been misused to describe the
To cover up the reaction. Now it's all too late. That The state ship sails fully backwards until it hits a sandbank and then sauve qui peut. Cest triste, mais cela est.

However, I am interested in everything you tell me.
of Prussia and its king said. Prussia
It seems to me that it has never relinquished the concept of the state –

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

Schilds still the other loups-cerviers. His Pa=
Pipers are not listed on the stock exchange, and
It recently converted government bonds without...
| that one had previously, for the purpose of the agiotage, something there= who knew about it. It also has the Agiotage in spa= niche papers prohibited; perhaps it suppresses

1

U

the stock exchange entirely as a market for government bonds,
j and that would be a nice example.*)

God forbid that I should thereby... wanted to downplay what the newspapers were making such a fuss about do, although as a Frenchman I have my national I fulfill my duty and understand none of it. But If I had one wish, it would be this – in
To be a Prussian minister. I believe in the 10. The Future of Prussia. Where once a Frederick the Great Great was, if 658 step back. Great men, are the dividing walls between past and present Future.

I would like to draw your attention to this concept of the state.
Direct attention. Tell me how the Prussian railways are, whether they also the Ge–
They will be left to companies, as is the case with us. They are
This collective monster, with which no minister as soon as it's finished. Dragons with a thousand tails,

The letter writer, however, forgot that Prussia also had a
The bond was issued in England. However, it will not be listed on the stock exchange.
gerothschildet

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
B. Frankfurt am Main

Appendix 73

how she describes the fable. I'd rather to deal with Rothschild alone, but that Proverb: entre deux maux, il faut opter Pour le plus petit mal, ist hier nicht gut an= turn to; for both evils are found like the morning.

Railways. Will Prussia follow suit? What can we expect?
As far as I'm concerned, I don't think we'll get any at all, what still better than Rothschild-Fuldisch=
Aguado's –

You see, I want to make a statesman out of you.
I will also inform you here at the Ministry.
recommended as – village schoolteacher.

What you told me about Lerour's misconception
I have to report on Hegelian philosophy
Didn't understand it himself. Lerour is a rambling person.
Philosopher. What you are too short, he is too long.
You never really know what he wants. But seriously...
I believe that one can make something out of Hegel
one wants to.

I am withdrawing more and more from politics and more back, live for science and my fa= milie. Continue telling me about Germany, that Most interesting to report. As soon as the official Works of Frederick the Great have been published, send
She did me a favor, but lose in one
The state never uses the concrete term. It's not everything.
as the newspapers report and if you

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
B] Frankfurt am Main

74 Appendix

Write about the state, that's how you make money–
feudalism the war to death and Life

Yours sincerely

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

The publisher of this publication has the following interesting works available.
published by A. Weill:

State proposals

above
Prussia and Germany.
From
A. Weill in Paris.
8. Elegantly bound.

Anhalt: Preface. – Introduction. The State and Philosophy. 7

Part One. 1) The Germans in the year 1830.
2) What preserves Austria? 3) The Prussian friends.
4) Prussia as it is. 5) Prussia as it is with the Juherkunft fer sein. 6) The Jews in the Christian State. 7) Constitutional Germany. 8) Mos narchy and press. 9) The organization of the press.

Part Two. 10) The German Political Science Institute.
11) The family and the free state. 12) The Ger Society and sociability. 13) The school and Life. 14) Art and the State. 15) The Music. 16) Language and character. – Conclusion.
The diagnosis of Germany.

The richness of the matter can be seen from the Inbalt des Büchers snÿe ven, doch ist dass snÿebe fo ab= Deviating from the usual state writings, it bears
the author's originality is so pronounced in the Forehead, who considered the ideas and questions of the time – the
The present and the future – with a philosophical Sharpness, with a crushing logic, the statemen like thinking citizens
Eyes reveal that we do not urgently enough em=
They can pfeblen, convinced, the thanks of all well-meaning for the state and in the state, to harvest for that.

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

The State and Judaism.
From
A. weill, in Paris.
8. stapled.

Not only the statesman, the national economist,
the people's deputy, but preferably also the

The above text is indispensable for the field of "economics" because It is, as it were, the key to List's book.

Siteu painting
from Alsatian folk life.

Bon

A. Weill, in Paris.
8. Elegantly bound.

The value of the above novellas is twofold.
It once refers to an indestructible German Nationality that lives on in the Alsatian people, pointed out; then find the novellas, what form and
As far as the subject matter is concerned, it's so freshly drawn from life that We haven't known a German poet since Hebel who would have described the life of the people to us more masterfully, like A. Weill! These qualities will suffice,
to spread the "novellas" in such circles,
where the poet's name has not yet penetrated
is, because for those who already know him,
No further recommendation is needed.

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library

Frankfurt am Main

Furthermore, highly recommended works can be found

Political fantasies from the Papers of a deceased person.

Published Don
Heinrich Edun.
8. Elegantly bound.

Contents: 1. Memories from the year 1832.
II. The image of the prince. III. The birth of the Game. IV. State Medicine.

With a sense of humor like only our most excellent Ghosts: a Jean Paul and a Ludwig Börne possessed it, but in a quite original way, describes The author's recent past fantasies and even current conditions, such as ours
– literature, which is already poor in humor and satire –
which was not evident at this time!

The author – anyone who glances at his work can see that.
throws into the book – belongs to the claffifch = ges formed spirits of our fatherland, which was based on the area he enters is neither a newcomer nor an unnamed person, although he is unknown
I want to stay!

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

poem e

Leodor Löwe.
8. Elegantly bound.

The Ver= enters the circle of contemporary poets.
Fasser not as a newcomer and unknown, but wobl Already loved and appreciated by many; it will Therefore, a collection of his poems, which will be used for largely consists of previously unpublished material, which Friends of genuine Pocfie would greatly appreciate a donation.
fine, but for Württemberg the book would especially like to= They gain in value because the appendix contains (le dense, the author's: Festival play for the five and 20th anniversary celebration of King Wil= at, printed is.

5.

A priest,
History from the area was.
Told
by Dr. Scherr.

8. eleg. prayed.

From a well-known patriot and poet
According to Dr. Scherr, we receive in the above book a ild aue der Gegenwart, das, in romantic ge-walls, the much-tangled machinations, dissonances and purposes of the time, the state, and the church and about other parties, with candor and a artistic assurance, which the book, from aesthetics=
as viewed from a contemporary historical point of view=
tet, to a true gem of original literature.
Friends of witty, entertaining reading material,
Both spiritual and secular people will find a rich treasure.
of truth in the guise of poetry, about
the highest interests of society are represented in the book.
But especially in Switzerland, whose ver=
The conditions therein will be discussed most frankly,
Friends and enemies alike will find plenty to like.

|
|

zn

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
UB | Fran tür erm Main

Prison and love.

From the papers of an amnestied man
8. elegantly stapled.

Already considered a psychological oddity
These poems arouse the greatest interest; the originals=
but nality and the high artistic vision which These dictions permeate the air; they can best be understood by the best.
to set aside what national poetry best Furthermore, the title of this book is not one.
wegs eine Fiction ist, sondern allen Gedichte im Dungeons were created – The poet is not flirting with Suffering for the fatherland, with no pain for the freedom he didn't feel, for which he didn't pay had suffered for a long time, and draws sick wobl before some from those who use their mediocre talent for this.
through perhaps feigned pain for freedom and Fatherland attracts the attention of the nation.
ziehen and so forth to a not exactly dearly bought Ce= poems

from
. Ua u,

(Author of Kosciuszko's)
8. elegantly stapled.

As is not easy in our present times, an owl can win the love of the nation if he does not also he plucks the string of his lyre, which is in the heart of the people the loudest beats – we mean the battles of the Time – so too are the political poems of the
To place the author alongside the best,
was in recent times Übland, Grün, Platen, Herwegh, Pfizer, Hoffmann von Fallersleben and Ortlepp sang babes, and who does not the unnaturalness and the Phrafens
The turning of some modern poets, the pure taste
Whoever has been corrupted by true poetry will find this Poems which, – we are convinced of this – in The commons of the people will become fine in short, the ver»
Recognition should not fail!

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

The Prima Donna.
A Theater novel
from
Fr. Ludwig Bührle.

2 volumes.

S8. Elegantly stapled.

Also a theatrical novel – but not one by Ges of the ordinary kind! The author is – besides Tieck – one of the finest connoisseurs of human nature in fine novels, a listening observer of inner creation and Action, as it moves the true artist's heart, in whose external representation Goethe and Tieck alone
This is now excellent in German novel literature have produced. Bührle is striving to achieve this.
With modesty, yes, but with undeniable certainty

A fine work from the past twenty years with greater rights to the art novels of a Goethe and Tieck can be lined up as this Prima Donna, which is probably the most beautiful work of art, what has flowed from the poet's pen so far, and that not only all friends of dramatic art and the performing artists themselves as a valuable gift em-can be foaled, but as a classic Ge=maälde
from the still life of a singer, love must win over all friends of beauty!

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library

UBS | Frankfurt am Main

Johann Christian Senckenberg University Library
Frankfurt am Main

INN

French

English

Full text of " Du Molochisme Juif Etudes Critiques Et Philosophiques "

See other formats

mm m ; * 1a

tl«ies eritlpés el FMh séfMpt»

G vp TRIDON

A lawyer ' "V-

êÊ^m HflaklM ift fl|A)||Uig McIImmU d± fa Cmambb' ÉM fa»U

. iâ tmM Ai MH NWc, «lo., «ü.

; ■i*'- 4 ~ * JEfcà

M v'Ia» , fôl*ÿ t &&&?

■ y. \ * .'

' ; /> i : j-î /

BRUSSELS

■ï' ; ÉDOUARD MAHEU, PRINTER – PUBLISHER
;;i:.'. ' ')8d RrSjïis Éabib*, 18

OF

JEWISH MOLOCHISM

III

lILtCUSU JUIF

Eludes erili(|iies and |iliili>su)iliitiucs

G VE TRIDON

LAWYER

Former Member of the National Assembly, of the Commune of Parle, of the Committee of Public Safety, etc., etc.

BRUSSELS

ÉDOUARD MAHEU, PRINTER/PUBLISHER
18, Rue des Sables, 18

IC OKI*

1884

S0I99

NOTICE

The book we are introducing today, damn the published, is the posthumous work of Gustave Teuton.

We were planning to give a later edition
complete works of ve imitating citizen.

At the same time, we will publish his biographical information.

The short life of Teidan, – but how dramatic!
Tick! We can say that he didn't leave Fardcnle's furnace.
which forms the tragic point of the 19th century, that for
to enter into death.

This life, so full though it may be!, can be summed up
In two words, or rather, in two cries. – Cry (Humanity and tenderness towards the oppressed; cry iFéternetle reprobation against the oppressors.

Brussels, August 31, 18K4.

(Editor's note)

WARNING

The history of the Jews, said "history oozes," is the only that Christian nations should be taught seriously, because What is the foundation of their religion? Seriously, here? does not mean truthfulness, but rather abundance. Tell a story. For a peasant, the memorable events of his homeland are... Hebrew. Speak to him, on the contrary, of all the Hebrews possible: Abraham, Isnnc, Jacob, Joseph, Moïso, J >aué, David, Solomon, Herod, Jesus Christ, etc., etc.; he knows them by heart, the veiled man in the land of knowledge, he will tell you tera commonly this litany of old things. Posso for Old things! But lies! Lies that have spawned so many others 1 *

The Bible, a collection of these Jewish texts, is nothing but a long... perpetual disguise. What conclusion can we draw from this book? Strange! This: that Israel, inventor and guardian of the Mono-Theism, has faithfully transmitted to us, through the ages, the doctrine of the unity of God. This is proven above all by the Pentateuch. What is the Pentateuch? The collection the alleged works of Moses, the great lawgiver: The story of the creation of the world and the early days of humanity; Origins and adventures of the Jewish people; Promul deposition of the laws of the Eternal on Mount Sinai; finally.

WARNING

Kt'uui'ü codes enacted to organize and maintain the worship of the one God

Thus, from the Patriarchs to Jesus Christ, the Monotheism, according to the Mil of, constantly the national religion back to the Bronx, it's not without poino, This is true, for he appears to be in perpetual struggle against the idolatries of neighboring peoples and no repellent except at the price of more violent efforts their invasions often victorious. In short, however, the one God is indeed God of Israel, and the intruders always unite to be put out. This is the conviction that reading "the sacred book leaves "the approach, the spirit, conviction, nnivorsello by all the Christendom.

of a colossal hoax. Why haven't we since Long-discovered lie? 11 blatant lies that are open. But faith keeps them formed. Ello believes without see, for the examination would be sacrilegious. He had two Protestants is not "a derisory simulacrum. 11 has as its starting point the faith; for a pre-established and agreed-upon purpose, worship. Let us do,
We, a serious investigation.

Solon la lliblo, Moses dies, after having made accepted & his people the laws of the Eternal, and without having been able to enter in the Promised Land. Joshua succeeds him and conquers the country of Clianaun, later called Palestino. Here com-, mer-coût really the Jewish Annals. No doubt, ollos will be filled with the great name of Moses, the creator, in a way, of the nation. Well, no! Immediately disappeared "from the scene of the living, it is no longer a question of
Him. Eleven or twelve centuries passed silently about him.
Only once or twice, long after his death, his
The name is mentioned, but vaguely, as that of a indifferent, obscure. When one reads, in Leviticus and the Denteronomc, the meticulous prescriptions that regulate minute by minute all the occupations of the Jews, a Such an oversight is judged not implausible, but impos-

AVKBTI8SEMKNNT

It is possible, the memory of such a legislator should have been preserved.
parmanonco on everyone's lips and oeoupor in the place of hon-
A neon A chaque ligne do la histoire nationale.

This is what has happened, in fact, since the Pentateucho has truly become the religious code. From Judea, Moses,
His putative entourage dominates the entire Jewish nationality.
like the Eloehor domino, the village. We only see him, we
He only thinks of himself. He is the representative and the epitome of everything.
a people. How did this notoriety of Ost-0lle become so recent in The Hebrew Chronicles, <and why such absolute silence during the long period of the Judges and Kings, do 1(100 A Before Jesus Christ? That means Moses never existed.
Moses is a myth, an imaginary being, Lo mutisme dos Biblical annals, one would find sufficient proof, if one
There were many others, which will be found further on, eollo-ci in particular, which I do not want to postpone: According
According to the official chronology, Moses lived naked in the 12th century BC.
Jesus Christ. However, a careful reading of the texts of the Penta-touquo demonstrates that this work could not have been written that eleven hundred years later, in the 6th century, laying or memo from the captivity of the Jews at Jlahylono.

The true author of Ezra's collection, the reorganization principal leader of the Hebrew people, after the return of the captivity. Let us add that, by an exception This audacious deception, this gigantic forgery, is quite rare. tesque originated from the most legitimate motives, and that, far from deserving blame, Ezra would have a right to better applause, if he hadn't overstepped the bounds born from the suppression or alteration of works historical records acquired for posterity. It is also impossible to pass condemnation on the shameful mark of greed Dity and priestly tyranny that is displayed on every page of the Pentateuch.

It is not permissible to grant amnesty for such scandals, although that this is the most glorious goal: to transform a atrocious religion and destroy the horrible statue once and for all

•VVKUTI8SKMKNT

•lu Molooch who had devoured so many millions of victims. Because, it's time to say it, the so-called cult, elected" the Jews, of God alone, creator of heaven and earth, are not that a most egregious historical falsehood, Jehovah, the God national, no other than the ordinary idol of all the Semitic peoples, the brazen Molooch, naked hollow belly ot rougi, which consumed alive all the firstborn of the pnulation.

liion far from having been the relentless onnomi do Boni that one He imagines, according to the Bible, that he himself was Baal, he* memo the Golden Calf, or rather the heated bronze bull & hlnne who devoured the living victims. Baal, U a reigned; Baal, he exterminated, under the kings as under the kings. judges. David was dancing in front of the open arch of the Ossomonts The backs of little children were burned. Solomon, Rehoboara, all the kings of Judah and Israel, worshipped Danl-Jôliovah and nourished him They knew the firstborn of their cuplo. What a dreadful picture! will unfold right before the reader's eyes. In this Momont, I only sketch the main feature to stop my frame.

Since the settlement of the Hebrew nomads on the land of Clianaan, two relations had opened between Judea and The powerful Assyrian empire. They dominated the races Aryans and Consolata, far superior to the Semites by character, customs, and enlightenment. There flourished a A gentler and more humane religion, that of Zoroosters, A this civilizing contact, what elite souls there were in cities of the Hebrew cult, and soon a war began in order against the dreadful Baal-Jehovalx.

Their task was arduous. For they had come to fight the national superstition that borrowed a double force from its very ferocity and the antiquity of its tradition. The experience The passage of centuries attests that a custom is all the more difficult to uproot, which it imposes on its followers more cruel sacrifices. The superior men, known in Judea

WARNING

under the name "the prophets, they did not back down before your perils "lo la lutto ot s'.v will throw themselves with as much "skill "pu* "Do courage and humanity. An liou do s'on prendre" Jehovah himself and uncle his overthrow diroot, they pretended to believe A- a false interpretation of sus orders and relentlessly attacked the human sacrifices comroo a violation of his will, an outrage against his laws.

The prophets Ames and Hosea open the campaign. They are furious at the areUo, this chest filled with bones charred, on the pedestal of the red Midoeh, they curse the aahbath, day of burnings. They insult the toplmtli, the Dark valley, back sacrifices. Always they speak naked name to Jehovah and to remind people to respect his intentions little known. Their tactic is* admirable, tact and do diplomacy.

Soon Jérémie, a more powerful genius, rises in his turn. With a sorrowful eloquence, he thunders against Molocliismo. He too speaks out in the name of Jehovah against the immolators* tions offered to Jehovah. His anger, his pain never cease No anathemas. Indignation drove him to memo all the way to A so faieo the auxiliary of the Assyrians who were besieging Jerusalem. Preferring humanity to the independence of his country, he counting on the victory of the attackers to destroy everything Suddenly, the horrors of the Haaliquo cult. Also, at the capture From the city, we see Xabucliodonosor, the victor, treating him With distinction, as an ally and a friend. Jeremiah paid dearly cos expressions of esteem. He had the imprudence to stay after the departure of the Assyrian troops and was massacred in Egypt by the Molochists, as a traitor to religion and to the country.

About one hundred and twenty years before this catastrophe, the king Hezekiah, following the voice of Isaiah, had attempted the abolition of the Molochist atrocities, substituting lambs and encountered no sympathy. The women especially, pheno strange business! They mounted the most violent opposition.

warning

n'avaient quo ilos rires contemptant* pour eos simulacres of holocausts that cost them more than the blades and showed a preference)» »H> cannibals for the idol to Anne blushed where their children were swallowed up. Always.
The worst superstitions* have, in the low sound, their most formo appui.

The first attempt at reform hardly lasted, Mnnassès,

(they and successor of Exeohlms, hastened to relight the fools do Jehovah'llal ot their delivered fear victim his own (They. He had Isu'in sawn between two planks. One A new and more energetic attempt was made by Josins who employed a ruse, assuming the discovery of a book dictated by Jehovah, who prescribed the priests by the Fire. These alternatives for overthrow and restoration continued in this way for the Haal-Moloch textile, up to A
The fall of the kingdom of Judah. King Sodom, defeated taken, fled, and taken to Allnbylono by Nebuchadnezzar. It was a fanatical Meloclùslo, ot, during the siege of Jerusalem, he had abundantly supplied do jounos enfants los flânes
blushed at the idol Jehovah.

The Babylonian captivity dealt a mortal blow to the torriblo furnace of brass. F,o stay of main families Jewish women, in this country of gloomy hills and gentler customs, char.goa their character and their ideas. When Cyrus los returned to their homeland, they carried there the resolution to reforming the old cult and instituting new rites, or partly based on what they had seen during their stay dence in Chaldea.

It was then that Ezra wrote, or had written, under his direction
tion, the set of books known as the Penta-
This collection can be divided into two parts: the story and the legislation. We won't say anything about history, otherwise that it's a fabric of fables, a novel that isn't memorable historical, but purely fanciful. We are not writing To refute these legends, they are not worth the effort.
despite the harm they have done and continue to do. They are judged elsewhere or it would be possible at a time when it began "no demonstration now superfluous.

The legislation will hold us back even more; its influence has
It was bigger and especially more disastrous, Carollo created the Shiism, very unpleasant, sweet, detestable son in the Islamism, on the other hand, the idololatry of the Jews goes take in the Jewish monotheism, out of the Pentateuch had discovered it and roamed the Perses,

It was a big change. The difficulty was... to accept by a people passionately attached to its "old" gods. He was presented with the new code a work of art by Moses, contemporary with the most poetic times of the nation. Why Moses, a stranger who doesn't know Nowhere since Joshua? No doubt the choice of name had
There are two patterns, but they remain ignored.

The Pentateuch had been combined with a great deal of art. He did not clash with the centuries-old cult of the High God. Everything, more or less, was maintained, except the sacrifices human beings replaced by holocausts of animals and of animals, abundant enough to satisfy the dominant passion The nature of religious murder. In this respect, the Reformation was much less radical than they had demanded Amos, Isaiah, and Jeremiah. Jeremiah overwhelmed with his evils The words were read, the tablets were in the ark. He demanded it loudly. deletion. The name and the use of the instruments of torture gave him convulsions.

The Pentateuch, on the contrary, retained the ark, the holocausts, as well as the Sabbath. Only the ark became a harmless coffer, and the Sabbath a simple day of rest for the intended for animal sacrifices. The brazen serpent, formerly inoculation, received a trivial explanation and in medical-technical, known to everyone. He cured the bites from desert snakes. As for Jehovah, for to facilitate the transition, it retained its terrible aspect, its language of curses and threats, its infernal atmosphere ardent ones that flattered the old superstition.

WARNING

These modifications, associations on appearance, transformation. They completely, in reality, embraced the religion of "the Hobbies, Ubi «latent, as consequences «the alleged laws do other peoples and the fierce isolation of the Jewish nation,

The goal of Esdras and the reformers was to improve the rotten social conditions «but remained the custom «like neighboring Semitic peoples and could have introduced themselves "to Rehoboth, he favors "your international marriages." We see "that this prohibition is a social law «like Pontotouquet prohibited subjected to the most rigorous criminal penalties. The expedition The lessons of the past had revealed the peril. It is permissible to believe it. that the numerous massacres recounted in Exodus and the Numbers, for the "enforcement of this law, were simple means of intimidation, which only cost the back fresh imagination.

The cult instituted by the overseer after the captivity, seems to have encountered resistance. The march of Time pushed back the ancient barbarians. Soon the great War of Independence against the Antiochians. 1st century before Christ, came to consolidate the established institutions by Esdras under the name and authority of Moses. The pontiffs violated the Seleucids. to install on Judea the divine Greek nations, were to give to the new legislation all the strength that draws a religion from a glorious nationality suddenly in his name and under his auspices. The struggle of the Hebrews against Hellenism was long and terrible. relentless. They will emerge from it fanatics of the religious code which had presided over the most heroic era in their history.

The old Jehovah-Moloch was now forgotten and imposing impossible. It continued in a rejuvenated Jehovah, more impossible Health, more universal, more, always strongly repulsive. From The fact remains that contact between the Greeks, although enemies, had produced Its effect and determination sparked a movement of ideas among the Jews. which would soon turn the world upside down and decide its fate for a long succession of centuries.

WARNING

To explain, with some clarity, the development of Hebrew history from its origins, it is necessary to to give us "perceived two Semitic races, of their cult, of Our habits, their moral organization. We ask gifts to the reader, indulgence for the aridity of details indispensable to understanding Judaism and Christianity nism itself. Everything fits together in the series of stems. The The chain of ideas and customs is never interrupted, has Surprisingly, it's sometimes difficult to find the right timing and dear, the peoples buried under the layer of centuries, the explanation still sounds the yoke.

INTRODUCTION

I

"The man is apprehensive," the impulse leads him. It is he who... grabs by the hair, the squirrel and rushes him, flees one atheist or a Catholic, a heron, a criminal or a martyr.
Also, these movements that shake the universe, these cracks the foundations of empires and dogmas, which we shudder at Through the centuries, these floods of ink and blood where it drowns humanity – mere ricochets of the supreme pension, philosophy whether philosophical or religious, – we find it again and study it in the corvate of a single individual, as in the masses not in history.

Calvin burns Servetus and Luther, and Tetzol is on the ground. Alcibiades breaks the Hermes and Saint Dominic exterminates the Albi geois. Julian the Apostate established an index for Epicurus and of Inquisitors sat in Rome. Under these men and these acts, Setting aside the decor, the swords, and the rhetoricians, two aspects of the human mind present themselves irresistibly.
Struggle. Imagination and Reason, Theism that imposes itself in the name of faith and Atheism which rebels in the name of doubt;
Man and God, these are the eternal strugglers.

The whirlwind of dust, glory, and horrors that they

He

introduction

raise around dVux, allows pou to watch them fiico at faeo.
Let's be bolder,

Imagination is the faculty that every mind possesses.
to give a fictitious existence, not only to his desires more legitimate, but still any fantasy dictated by Human ambition. She speaks, and on this side of the world, alone and a true Eden for the wise, man creates a world for himself false and bizarre, crushing him with its full weight. He will take refuge there.
in his hope as in his misery, instead of opening the Naked eyes, riches of all kinds that nature lavishes upon him,

The bond, on the contrary, is a seed deposited on us by the truth, is the most forceful affirmation of superiority of man and the dignity of matter, the feeling of reality pushed to its ultimate consequences.

This is not a narcotic, it is not a drug, and it provides us with visious délieiousos, but the eternally just rule that It serves us to measure our universe, to contemplate the beauties and imperfections, to make the most of them as outlined by the nature. Reason is no more despair than a Boredom. Eilo finds in the vio uno an inexhaustible source of observations and conquests. She too is searching for the word do creation, but in reality, of which never a fanciful idea no one will surpass greatness, and it creates all enjoyments through its discoveries whose eternal pages the sci-fi unfolds for him.

Cotto, valiant companion of man, distinguished herself by a A supreme desire for truth and justice. Ello believes only in this. She only judges what she sees, hears, and only listens to what she has heard. each party to its tribunal and dismissal of its summons categorically Gorique, the aerial castles and the enchanted vistas that its rival continues to build.

It is because Imagination, that audacious fairy, evokes from her baguette the brightest panoramas. It is the real the subject of our dreams and, as co-minister to a queen of France, repeats to the enthusiast: "If it's possible, it's done; If it's impossible, it will be done.

INTROM'CĪION

III

The Being is afraid of dying. He does not understand this intelligence. Nature's license, a hundred times more wonderful and more sublime than the sicnno, and attaching itself to its personality pre- He feels with the despair of the shipwrecked man, he lets out his cry of anguish. KUo rushes in, the comforter, and murmurs the bion- stays happy, the celestial metamorphosis, azure word, rev golden, which man wants to believe at all costs, and which he does not love not to be disabused. The mystery of our existence, made nature becomes the theme of the most varied tales, of the most risky excursions into the realm of the maybe. Above the bull, the object of his affected disgust, the image Nation places Paradise, a mirage for its believers. In the middle From the clouds or in the depths, she invents the sky, which exists only in his brain. His brain gives birth

Wallinllas. His paintbrush draws its colors from the rainbow or in the mud of the Phlegethon, to draw cos frescoes which fill us with admiration, or make us pale with fear boasts. She reveals intelligence, "the man, the depuncture of all matter, the fullness "lo tous sos dons. Then, Pythia, mad with the spirit she has just evoked, Imagination no to support the appearance of his own creature. Before the Master of Nature and King of Heaven, the crushed priestess
The dust strikes the forehead: "Blessed is! God is!"

The only true ftsoxoxo;, Imagination so présente A we are like the Madonna with the Bambino in her arms.
For the idea she has just given birth to, she feels a love of mother. She speaks to him, she wants him to exist, she sees him, this God, his work.

To satisfy it, science will exhaust itself in a search
If it's impossible, teleology (1) will bring its own little logic and his silly laugh: a The nose is made for wearing glasses,
a. So we wear glasses. The order of nature sup-
"It poses a supervisor" and other reasons for this force.

(1) Teleology, theory of final causes.

IV

IKTROOUQTIQN

When the man utters his sic rofo, the proof is everywhere. She no longer shows herself anywhere, when the mind opposes his summons to appear, to which a response eternal flaw. In vain will he search all the spaces & the search for contemptuous men. Exhausted soon, he said, in a dream living on earth: "Let us cultivate our garden; let it become a "Floor. Let these sublime flowers bloom: Honor,
"Knowledge, and that one in particular, shining brightly among all the rest, and which we
"One can only pick at the price of countless peiuos, the " Freedom. "

II

Imagination dominates the childhood of peoples and islands.
They haven't yet had the time to come to their senses.
Cotte Rudo experience do la vio. Everything then appears to them like a kind of formless existence. Nature, being inuunonso, who lives and is constantly creating around us,

The whims of the elements, their benevolence in some respects
a gruff sort, disasters alongside productions, life and death, endlessly united and reproducing themselves in a cycle infinity, the irony of the waterspout, the anger of the volcano, the present
The trees form the shadow that descends from the high peaks.
of nature's impact on humanity. This shadow, with its aspect mysterious and terrible, it was soon to pass from subjugation real to the tyrannical empire. At the first stammer of man. God was in the passing cloud, fertilizing the meadow, as in the storm that strikes the fields devastated. Appearance rose above Reality, its mother, and the slap of implacable contempt: Theism placed his foot on the globe.

Theism! At that name, I see the centuries opening up and,
From the depths of time, this swell of tears has reached me,
of cries and sobs, which, constantly growing, finally

iSTiîcmrcTiox

V

flood the globe and leave on the front of humanity a seal of inoffuçaño tristosso. Jo sees emerge from the back deserted, wild tribes offering their crude idols
The firstborn of their children; the Moloch will rise up in Carthage will devour generations; Martyrdom will appear, religious creation, active or passive, in which the bour-Reau becomes a victim in his turn. I hear the confused braying theological disputes and the horrible death knell sounded ten-eight centuries by the Roman Church in its quæst to heretics
I see God, assassin and avenger, creating only for to create victims; the man, a schemer and a traitor, to strike.
to curse in the name of God.

Everywhere blood, massacre, rage that kills with brotherhood
Hypocrisy, everywhere, lies placed between dogma
The superhuman and its impossible realization. When I 03 Ages
As things soften and the era of torture comes to an end, here is the Moral destruction, intolerance.

Theism is the most absolute subjugation of life and of thought to the principal Place, which becomes its tin and the cause. It is the subordination of existence to the entity.
du fuit A l'hypothôso.

From these words alone Elohim, Bara, De us créai'il cœlwn et

"Quurc Deus errneit cceltrn cl tcrum?...Who was flying," replies the sophisto Augustine Aurelius, better known as of Saint Augustine. Thus, we are men, thanks to the good pleasure, for those of us who no longer wish to be subjects.

If God created heaven and earth, virtue is but one Order, nature a whim; art, the ideal, progress have no
no longer has a reason to exist.

If God exists, despite our senses and our reason; if the pure spirit, the fluid, Non-being, that which we neither feel nor
We do not conceive, Nature dominates, the vivified Nothingness grinds the matter; physical man, that is to say, man in his entirety the whole world is outlawed; the world is collapsing with a crash; the
The body in its beauty, life in its joys, the mind in doubt

VJ

INTB00l'CTIOU

And whoever thinks that everything must be denied and trampled underfoot for this a strange state that has been defined; to lose oneself in contemplation of God, mystical Nirvana, more desolate and more horrible
a hundred times that of Buddha's dream.

If we are no longer part of the eternal cycle, if we no longer
we are not forced actors in the great drama of existence, regardless of civilization, regardless of science 1
Children of a whim that a conprico can destroy, condemned Born hoping for torture, what need have we to amass and
To know? Suppressed humanity vanishes from itself and Progress is now nothing but death.

If an idea that passed through Jehovah's brain was enough to
to make us hatch, if we are to him like the pot to potter, slave to master, no matter the prison where we Let's sing life, oh, bent under the whip, we adore the prison guard! Let's plunge into the abyss, let's tear down the veil of the Divinity, let us tear ourselves away from life, this force of Satan....
To love, to feel, is to sin. These flowers are here to tempt you.
These fruits are for your downfall. You should only weep on the chevalet or nail the vio to you, for your country is God, that is to say Nothingness; and pain, torment, and death are the consequences.
lons until he reached him.

Man sinks into misery and suffering. He struggles under the anguish. He unleashes all his fury against himself.
The deception of a cruel enemy. The only ideal becomes the mask livid, with sunken eyes, with the awful smile that they call there Death. The sun is veiled by the bat, with wings black ones bearing the motto of old Durer: Melancholia.
This is the age of unhappy consciousness, of divine terror of the Middle Ages.

From the depths of these miseries rises towards the heavens the impure monologue, the solitary pleasure of prayer, where the self is object
His activity falls back upon himself, heavier and more desolate.
Therefore, any man corrupted by the supernaturalist idea felt seized by an implacable fury against anyone who

MTROlHLCTIuX

Vtl

He does not share his suffering. He throws Galileo to the Inquisition and he carries his pious bundle to the pyre of Survol, as he sends Gloots and Chaumette At the scaffold of the Supreme Being. The science, heroism, work, eloquence, everything that He disturbs his rest, becomes the object of his hatred. This Galigula of thought would wish for humankind a single intoler-liaison to stifle it.

Hatred of humankind", Oclitim genei'is Immuni, a Taoito wrote when speaking of the first Christians. And that we
He did not accuse the old Roman of ignorance. His powerful his gaze glimpsed the crimes, the pyres, and the hell of our world.

Who could have so fascinated man and turned him against him?
Himself? Faith.

Faith is the refutation of sounds by the imagination.
The challenge thrown down to reason and to nature. Your senses show you bread and wine. Faith commands you to see flesh and blood.

"Est Deus, et, post ilium, nos," says Faith, and clothed
In her livery, she believes herself to be above free men.

It is absolute: yes or no, Christian or heretic,
devout or infamous, condemned or chosen.

are the enemies of God whom they continually sacrifice in their thoughts and actions. The rest of the wicked puts the long martyrdom of the believer in question, an insult to his miseries. Only universal assent can justify faith.

She is worried because the slightest shock can become deadly to the rotten dogma. Folded in on itself and there Drawing on all its strength, faith is necessarily bilious.
It breeds hatred and evokes, even in our public squares, the flames of Hell, of which the terrifying apparatus will be a part eternal pleasures.

A touching accord of abuse and error! Theism,
The thick oak tree shelters all enemies of the humankind. What king hasn't crowned P? What executioner?

VIII

INTRODUCTION

Hasn't he granted amnesty? What victim hasn't he burdened with his Holy curse! 1 The tyrant of heaven and earth is the ally natural "all despotisms." A debate that sometimes seems to arise.
To divide them is a quarrel between oppressors fighting over the prey. For these sworn enemies recognize and acknowledge each other.
soon they will be exploiting the people or the state. The CNAR from heaven, to which all beings obey without question, gives birth on earth to his perfect image, the monarch absolute. Hell becomes a branch of the Bastille for The heretic and the rebel. Paradise opens expressly for him.
for the slave, a prey thrown to his despair, so that at Instead of looking at his arm and his sword, he stretched out his hands towards the space where we call to God who sneers in his cloud.

That is why the Thêismo shines in the foreground in the government tableware, and the throne is placed next to the altar.
In this way, the (supreme Being) becomes humanized in the incarnations the humblest nations. The policeman-god arrives, by a series of gradations, to the God-sergeant of the city and to the God-snitch, to end up at the God-lock, at the door of bourgeois safes and according to the formula:

"If God did not exist, he would have to be invented."

When I contemplate the formidable unity of this dogma oh
want, muddy and bloody, all the contradictions;
when I see the idea conjure all the forces of man

Was humankind able to survive? That's what it carried with it.
He is the seed of the future, his national and patriotic idea: Atheism.

At that detested name, what horror seizes the mind of my Reader! Education, religious and political ideas, all 1 m
The ferments deposited in his soul rise up in anger.
Let him calm down, let him listen before speaking, and remember shovel how many times, on a gloomy scaffold, the people amidst curses, he immolated the guilty man for having wanted to save him.

Provoked by insolent pretensions, Atheism strikes

IXTROPUOTIOX

IX

with his feet on the ground, saying, "It is mine," and his eyes plunge headlong into the wonders of nature.

Atheism is life rising again, man who asserts itself with all its might and throws down the gauntlet that has never has been noted. It is nature whose rays, like those from the sun, absorb all the mists of the human mind.
It is progress, a pillar of fire that humanity follows and which It will lead her far beyond all perfections. That's the science, Minerva emerged fully armed from the brain of man and which makes the elements its domain. That is poetry, illeur august, blossoming from the very depths of matter, the kingdom from heaven demanded relentlessly on earth, the social idea substituted for the unjust fates of Providence and the non possumus of the Diou or the Papo responding: "Let's try!"
Finally, it is this name that resonates for the Gods, the Kings,
The Dogmas: Freedom.

Atheism is the heroic athlete who follows the chariot of triumphant cults, the martyrdom of all parties and all The sects; and when humankind was gagged, ot A the torture, where all that could be heard were the cries of the horrible
The machine tightens constantly, alone, to prevent everything proscription, he protested.

Is it therefore a crime that the self-denial of the atheist, one faces
the mercantilism of believers, and his contempt for a pride
The use of immortality replaced by the memory of nobles actions? Guilty without a crime, condemned without cause, he per of Earth and Heaven. Raised above dogmas, of gods, religions, and all the remnants of history accused strengthened by the centuries, he contemplates them without anger as without pity, awaiting the day of justice; and when the idea tyrannical, he tries to crush him under his wrath, he shouts at him Resolutely: "You are nothing but a lie."

Everything that exists in its intrinsic strength and power sèque, everything that falls within the domain of Goodness, Beauty, and Yrai scoffs at theological entities. The Law is atheistic.

X

i.vrn«i>i'cTi»x

the morality that subjects even the gods to its dominion, the justice* Tieo, sublime balance, humanity, the facts are atheist. Read The motto, though not very ironic, of our society is not ost-ollo again the l.or populi, vas? Del, and the Ligurian devolution in history as the triumph of atheism, not not only religious, but political, so rebellious central to everything irrational fetish, God or the devil. With human sacrifice* nitaire, bien différent dos macérations stériles, vkgai me lui-mômo rises to the level of social intuition, forgets his personality in the interest of the entire genre.

With myself alone as a foundation, we will rebuild this A splendid edifice, this immortal monument of society. The necessity man arrived at love. He formulated the rules of his oxistenco in a poetic form that veils them the source. Above creation and nnture, he made his own, which he has the right to restrict and whose existence, after such formidable assaults, he protested against his enemies eternal.

Humanity has not taken a step nor invented an idea without Having to fight the sky, and this fight tells the whole story. Every advance is a victory won over God; every discovery, a conquest whose reunion forms the trophy of man.

A distinguished mind, whose testimony no one will refute. gnage, he confesses, in one of those fleeting hours when Even doctrinaire intelligence converses with doubt:
» The miserable spectacle of the decadence of the empire
"Roman is so confused by the sight of the Church's triumph that "One had separated me from the other..." And further on: "I haven't » Roman in the 4th century, by A. de Broglie) as much as "I would have liked a demonstration that I was looking for there with "ardor and whose absence, in all Ira books which "related to Christianity, has always caused me a real-

"A table of troubled minds. Why the Christian religion" which, in so many respects, has improved the individual and perfected iSTitomvnos

if

* Given IVspécn (P), did she exercise, especially at su nnis-mnen,
"If there is little influence on society? Why?"
"As men individually devoted themselves
"More humane, more just, more temperamental", more olinstrs (?),
...it seemed they should shock more foreign to the day
"Public virtues P Do such that the society grumbled"
"National seems more broken, more doe-like, more infirm," » in the memo time when the small society do ia familio is

"The best adjusted. The striking contrast, right from the "early days of Christianity, between the Christian virtues"

"tionuoteco, which I called public virtues, is
b often reproduced since. U n'y on a point dans lo monda
"U qui rao pareisse plus diflioio A explication.. etc."

These tender expressions, which are explained by the position and the
The name of A. do Tocquoville, are all the more striking. I I would like to know what Albert do Rroglio's response was.

Why, off the record, this fatal concordat? Upon arrival Christianity, cataclysm and obscurity. Homo su does he revel and reason about the restriction of the idea of God?
its subdivision into nature, its formal negation.
Also, in the book of accounts held by history, God is on the rise when nature is declining, and vice versa
ment.

Let us question the martyrology of science, let us open the works of the saints & in which theism serves as a weapon,
of blessing or anathema: the man expelled from Paradise,
"Peace," that his lips had touched the fruit of knowledge; Galileo
In the clutches of the Inquisition, that is the eternal myth.
The mind and reason are anathematized under the name of Satan. Every thinker is an atheist, an impious person, at least one wizard, and each of the scientific revelations that make siastics. Religious instinct is not mistaken, for the goal science is the liberation of humankind.

These predictions have almost come true. The debris of Superstitions litter the ground, and each turn of the hourglass brings down a section of the old manor. Dion was dispossessed and disarmed. 11 has lost its sky, its thunder, its demiurgic attributes, his quote olte-mèmo, U a fai before a new Olympus which are called oxygen, hydrogen, gas, solids, liquids, organic or inorganic elements. It no longer appears in the sky that, in the state of a nebula, Ootto idea, emerging from the nature, of which an optical defect showed it to us clearly, tailored to all desires and all ambitions, for a long time Motionless, naked, Zenith, has returned to its starting point. Kilo described his 0100,

XII

INTROMVCTION

In co sous, et dans lo mémo qn'anarchie contraire A des- potism, atbeismo is the demolition of the place, worn out without ceasing through reason, retreating before civilization and progress. He has to his credit every ardent initiative, every idea generous courage supported, ot cotte suite non intorrompuo do ponsours ot do génies qui, dans los scionoos as in the arts and politics, form the revolutionary series lutionary two centuries.

The dualism continues between the human idea and the divine idea. cotto antithesis of progress ot do lu foi, illuminates the most high peaks of history. History with its crimes triumphant, his righteous oppressed, is this not the negation God, his act of abdication, formalin as governor Therefore, history is the most important energetic man. <• Help yourself and heaven will help you -, said-ollo To those credulous intelligences who rely on the justice of one Cause for his triumph. Truth must not reign except A condition of being forced.

Two periods are characteristic. In the first, man affirms himself through the most splendid creed ever seen the eye of the sky and confirms its symbol through the wonders of sciences and arts. In the second, he places the ideal outside of himself and of nature and no testifies for his intelligence has brought together two eras more dissimilar than the world Greek and the Middle Ages. Christ recommends judging the tree

INTRODUCTION

XIII

Let us see which fruits the difference has produced.
"the principles."

Lo ürou, this compound "read Pelagius and "the Hellen, lively spirit amidst a diverse natural environment, he deified himself with His vices and his virtues. Beauty appeared to him in its forms the most varied, and he had an altar for every one that struck his delicate sounds. Superior genius, he raised no gods but he a limited distance from himself, mixing them daily
h sa vio et il ses travaux. La plain d'Ilion vit plus d'un Aeschylus forgets the battles between Humans and Gods
"To make him his eternal Jupiter. Plato himself is the king (one misty stay, where sad shadows will growl forever
the vanished existence. This familiarity, combined with restricted desires and an ardent love of the life, prompt he l'Ifollène do décor sa partie do chofs-d'omvros, et do faire
"lo ses cités des Champs-Élysées près dont l'Élysée would have seemed very poor. Polite with Socrates "places as with two older brothers, he saw on us the perfection of man, the
the power of nature could extend into morality, philosophy philosophy and politics, further than any spiritual people Sociological and civilized. Greek religion is therefore atheism.
deified.

O Hellenio! true homeland of the wise, Ithaca lost to our dreams. The Greek gods never died for us.
The thinker is the poet; his soul is the tomb where they rise, arranged in double and triple rows, their statues, where celebrations take place
the eternal Panathenaea.

Happy and blessed centuries of holy tolerance I Man
He has not yet invented the one and only. He admires and Respects all aspects of the human mind. Epicurus reduced
God at a minimum and makes his place a sinecure: 'the Stoics
Ancients dream about the world's blade, and that is that Pythagoras Pyrrho believes he glimpses the transmission of beings, orders to doubt everything. The incomparable death of a philosopher
The philosopher gave this gift to the world, and Socrates' hemlock was atoned for by centuries of tolerance.

XIV

ixrnowcTios

Opposite free Greece, the object of his jealousy and our attacks, the despotic and terrible East was rising; in facodo Apollo Pythion, deified in all the strength of the jounosso and do la vio, la machina Moloehisto, dreadful compound do man and animal, worship of death and pain.

Thus gentle worlds touched: the Orient with its religion mysterious and fatal, the enchanted West, playing with scs God, like the child nveo sa poupéo. Two neighboring worlds separated by abysses I

Greece, which, by gentle faith, saved the human spirit from The Grand Lloi's attacks should not have obtained the memo. success eontro the metaphysical breath Venu do Porso. Aveo Plato, she leaves the bull and loses herself in abstraction. The man no so sees more ot turns his gaze towards the in* known. So commonoo the chuto.

Christ, whose Oxistenco no me seems no more doubtful than that of Muhammad, had appeared. His glory, if it is one, was to prepare a long future for Jewish Monotheism in making it possible to embrace humanity. Such is the conclusion. sion do co Jesuitical code of the Gospel from which one has drawn enough to fuel discord. Moreover, the weather was pro- piece. Antiquity, stupefied by Caesarism, did not understand plus its myths and gods. It had lost that philosophy Phile, who was his life, and would have gladly written on his tombstone like Trimnlcion the "Nunquatn pktlosophum aitdi- "laughs." Asleep in slavery, she forgot herself in the middle vain will think and, crushed on the earth, took refuge in the metaphysical domain.

The memoirs of Apuleius and Petronius are the explanation of the Christianity, or the feast of Apicius was to have for dessert The Catholic diet. It's the Caesars' fault. They are the ones who, destroying initiative, spirit, art, and reason, delivered the defenseless man in the hands of the young sect; and such was the first link between these two principles so well created for to come to an agreement, despite an initial misunderstanding.

The Christian religion arose in these circumstances.

INTRODUCTION

favorable. Powerfully organized secret society, sowing at the four cardinal points SOS sales and SOS adoptions, join-Gnant, drawn to the allure of mystery, the dogma of his infallibility and
 In her triumph, she brings the infernal and jealous element.

We know the rest. After the look cast upon the Greek world so bright, you would be ashamed to go down into the middle age, fatal society where Dante only had to walk to find his Hell, a long night lit by a back-burning tree whose
 The reflection allows us to glimpse dark, ossuary-like masses.
 ideals of humankind, I cannot think of the Golden Age of the Theology, where she would still like to sweep us clean, without horror and anger.

The Middle Ages is the most damning testimony against lo thôismo, and this long experience, which would not be To renew, proves the absolute impotence of any idea supranaturaüste A moraiyser, ordonner et mémo poetiser
 the company.

Here are the results: the man was naked, a gallows, a symbol too truthful of his suffering. The distinction of the flesh and of the mind, unknown to antiquity, raised in him a Eternal conflict. Intelligence was in danger. It would have perished perhaps, if she hadn't turned her gaze towards the world ancient. Life and hope emerged one fine day from the manuscripts.
 Writs escaped from the hatred or ignorance of the monks: and The broken link was re-established. Soon the mind, in a dazzling eruption, sent the sacred owl back to its trunk darkness, scholastic jargon. The muses, mothers
 The fertile seeds of genius put to flight any barren virgin.
 moral crusade, for which forced celibacy is a crime and who, ready to forgive enemies worthy of forgiveness,
 will retain an eternal hatred for eternal adversaries of reason. The morality of Socrates and Epicurus, of Cicero and Cassius drove out the disgusting rival who reigned in his place. The man finally regained his titles of nobility and began the long claim that lasts Again.

See the finger of Hollenio: the nrts are reborn. But,
like the colors of a flower suddenly faded, the
The statue has lost its serenity. Melancholy becomes the expression the state of our world. That's because our society has been in the process of...
to the dreadful practices of Christianity. A hard escape in the dungeons of the Inquisition, he still retains the a-Freuso Traco and no one can chase away the infernal vision. Such Christ on the cross is an Apollo crucified by the hand ferocious monks. He weeps, and his tears accuse humanity nity.

This is the dawn of the Renaissance. Luther tries in vain to consolidate Eastern Monotheism by bringing it closer to its origins. "Read," he said, distributing the Bible, and this This blow kills the Bible. It breaks the celibacy of priests, and its Reform will be powerless. In vain Calvin burns Sorvet.
with the approval of the gentle Melanchthon, Protestantism will, despite himself, become an aid to human thought.

The history of humanity reproduces the struggle between of Ormuzd and Ahriraano, the struggle with its twists and turns, its triumphs and defeats. But Ormuzd must not perish and Truth will prevail. We can say it loud and clear: after the Great Crusade of the 18th Century, a Just and Holy Crusade whose motive was not a sepulcher that almost became that of Europe, but the assertion of our rights and of our dignity.

The 18th century was the revenge of the Middle Ages, the triumph of Atheism. The heroic age had for him the modern era, the day when imitators of Hercules and Theseus dedicated themselves to the destruction of monsters: Ignorance, Superstition and misery proclaimed the Right in the face of bastions and cathedrals and engaged in the great battle which is still ongoing.

Sarcasm, genius, courage, wit, they fought with all weapons. Never was there a more ardent love of the Justice, a more grandiose hatred of Immortality, horror deeper than these ferocious imbecilities that bloody

INTRODUCTION

XVII

Los nations; Hegel was able to say in a magnificent pen
"The French philosophers of the 17th century carried ot

"Science, Conviction. They said to man: 'You conquer*
"Cras by co-sign."

What would such an effort not have produced? The philosophy of The 18th century gave birth to its practical essay, the Revolution, the miracle of modern era and the accomplishment of time ancients. What is Golgotha in the context of this great Redemption? Any co who, not only since the blow of the celestial state of Jesus, but for centuries, suffered, acted and wanted, victims of religion, of society, of History, thrilled with joy, and hailed the hour of the justice. The flood of impatient revenge, of pro-government ideas* criticisms, of tortured truths, piled up for three thousand years, suddenly shook like a vast sea, broke chains and dikes, and carrying away thrones, castles and cathedrals drales, spilled over into our world.

Finally, are we free? P La Penséo nt-olle rompu sa Longe and the Hellonian times, tenfold thanks to the progress of sciences, the scum of the slave and the oligarch, will they
To bloom again P Not yet. Freedom is such a precious thing that it is not acquired without effort and seems to be contested by uuo hateful fatalism. A myopic rhetorician, around whom our
The Ptolemies wanted to run the great system of 83, had no sooner thrown the Revolution at the feet of Being supreme, that the reaction reappeared with its long procession; and
The Concordat now only needs a signature.

Corso, Ricorso, still Yico's motto. The same elements of attack and resistance constantly reappear modified. Like the circles described by a turbulent wave, the circles of history glimpsed by the illustrious thinker represent
They feel identical, but shrunk. Their orb is decreasing.
The day when the lake presents nothing but a majestic sheet of water...
The killer isn't so far away that we'd have any interest in seeing her to persuade. Because philosophy has its casuists. Like the

XVIII

INTRODUCTION

A very Christian religion, Ollo has perverse Jesuits which couple the true with the false, the just with the unjust, and, covering social exploitation with gilded sophistry and nuns of all ages, they say, extending their hands towards Power: "Aren't we the clever ones?" They don't They don't sin through ignorance, those people. Their sole concern is their scholarly research. Huddled in faith like Like La Fontaine's rats, they prefer to avoid any conclusion.

by a mystifying logomachy, the word for which has since long since removed from the inner sanctum of initiates. Divinity in parti' reduced to the status of a spectator, she listens to the rhetoricians and obeys their physical or political laws. God constitutes tional admits man and his ministry as an indis-Guizot, conceivable.

But why so much anger against this philosophical mule?
A sophist without posterity? At the moment I write, time has does justice to this inconsistency of mind. His pontiffs
They themselves are tasked with disillusioning the public. Overwhelmed
From all sides, carried by the new current, these scouts of Ultramontanism retreats to the army and throws Voltaire's mask to appear under the cassock of pure Jesuit. These men are no more. Dead to reason and the freedom, may they rest, if they can, in the shroud of Loyola and that disrepute throws its 'laughter' upon their grave.

Visor needed in the 18th century to deflect the blows from the enemy, a motto inscribed on a butcher's knife and which does not Deism fooled no one; it has completed its task. It must to be fought to the bitter end. For, in less than a century, it has
He had two revolutions crushed under his rule, without bringing down any of his claims.

This cautious and illogical philosophy, which demands a a screen for discourse, has not yet put an end to its burlesque creations. His Pantheon, still new in history
The tower, teeming with deities, torment of the archaeologist
The future. After the god Soliveau, the god Infinity.

ISTaojll'CTION

XIX

No one recognizes the immensity of these spaces more than I do.
whose depths the man could not fathom, and where his watch without
The veils of Nature's fairy tale. No one admires the power more.
sance infinio of the Spirit which plunges intrepidly into the oceans of floods, as in those of thought, and & for whom the future imposes no limits. This show is great, like everything that pertains to man and nature.

But it is no longer a question of these tangible and perceptible facts.
The being foretold by poets, logicians, and critics, invisible, magnified indefinitely by the microscope. Sometimes it swarms in the depths of Trophonius's lair, thrashing about the tripod of Delphi or perched on the ohêne of Dodona. Among his hierophants, some believe they thirst for God, Some were delighted by it, others immersed themselves in it completely. everyone is obsessed with it. The Infinite God is not even a vain concept of imagination like the homunculus of the alchémists; it resolves itself into a formula. Some unhappy souls dives, alone, feel it weighing on their skulls with the loss migraine relief, or they catch a glimpse of it beside them like Pascal's abyss. We could twist it for a long time, without to get nothing out of it.

Facts alone exist. Wanting a cause and placing it In God, resorting to last resort is a petty idea. Those who slow so much infinity should also evoke it in the past. The center of matter is everywhere its circumference is zero part. It is multiple and one: $e \times x \ll i$

The atom alone, the molecule, is eternal. Life or rock, Dust or odyssey, flower or statue, she wanders in the middle worlds, always the same as itself.

Thus each century brings its shipwreck, and the coast is littered with the debris of dogmas. Religions are failing. like ships battered by the storm; the flood casts back on the shore, green and blackened, the gods, these shipwrecked souls of the ages. Faced with destruction and continuous change In the past, nature was always serene; man always acts and thinks, holds in his hands his Pandora's box, is malndo or bien portant at will.

XX

INTRODUCTION

Man wants to know, wants to understand, in order to examine it Moreover, this nature to which he owes everything. Then the image gination brings to it a lawful and misleading element, of which The consequences are disastrous, and humanity struggles in cm diseases which are the crises of history.

A healthy man accepts existence, takes care of himself to adorn his home and immerses himself in infinite pleasures nees of art and science. But when he is troubled by supernaturalist ideas, his clouded gaze cannot offering their alluring or sinister perspectives, and dazzled Deluded by the mirage, he thinks only of fleeing nature and life.

In this sense, Religion is the nervous disease of the genus human.

Ancient religion was art, family, poetry
in their highest expression. Modern Religion,
This is the paradox, the reversal of human meaning, the Sacrifice, the anti-nature. Ancient man is man well-balanced, letting himself go with the flow of life, exhausted indulging his instincts without cursing them. The modern pietist is the relentless enemy of nature, the sworn torturer of its being.

The miracle, a pagan expression of the wonders of nature, which, according to Christ, has become a deviation from the eternal laws,
marks our progress in speculative perversion.

The Parthenon, a symbol of eternal beauty, conveys
On our foreheads, a breath of happiness and love. But beneath the enormous vaults of the cathedrals, surrounded by shapes strange things press upon her and surround her, and her thoughts twist.
gripped by a silent terror. Greece was flourishing of strength and health; the Middle Ages is the disease of which the effects extend as far as noos.

And why this thirst for torture and suffering?
when life is there with its joys and wonders P For what this oppression of the body by an aristocratic intellect-

INTRODUCTION

21st

Ligonco? The believer only has to extend his hand to grasp this that he searches far and wide, and the earth, like a bride, awaits the man, his bion-aimô.

To believe in the future of man, in the extinction of prejudices and abuses, in the building of the great city, in the effloroscento
The completeness of art and idea, isn't that a religion?
To affirm the triumph of humanity, with all its strength, by his actions as well as his words, to have the privilege of suffering To cherish her even more, isn't that faith?

Every illusion is a lie, and lies are fatal.
The people of France, no more than those of China, should

He kneels, silences his reason, and says: "I "Believe," when everything within him protests, that's his problem. We let us not believe in the need for lies and falsehoods eternal appearances. We need facts and reasoning ments based on reality and experience. The time of the Logomachy and metaphysics are a thing of the past, let's play princely candles on the table.

You arrogantly proclaim: "There are some words that are a little
"Perhaps heavy things that philosophy will interpret in a
"an increasingly refined sense, but one that it will not replace"
"Not (1)." I see the danger, but I don't see the use.
of these invalids of grammar. Or else science reta-
He will either clarify what is in question, or he will fall into the abyss.
from which he should never have emerged.

Science has saved the world. It cannot take another step.
without lifting the supernaturalist veil, and each of the the truths she established have as a backlash an error which collapses. It is the weapon that every man must carry to his side to defend his virility. Only criminals of those who harm humanity can make the goddess a privilege of letters, an odalisque destined for the pleasures of old men powerless. It is the scribes who hold the key to the

(I) Essays on criticism and religious history (Renan).

XXII

IXTRuorcTIOX

science in their pocket, condemning the generations in love-reuses of the beautiful, drawing endlessly from an impure amalgam of errors and half-truths.

The Scionee must embrace the Universe; to know is to be God; to learn is to become divine. The serpent Samraaûl
He remains the great philosopher of antiquity.

"The people, you say again, only see the sides
"Great and saintly figures of religion. 11. He seeks the ideal, the » basis of morality, the explanation of nature, the realization-
"The union of his hopes and desires." Now, these aspects Great and saintly people are human beings. Every dogma is petty, objectionable, bad, and supports justice as The ivy supports the oak, which it strangles. Therefore, give back i\ man what is & man and & God what is & God.

This is the idea of the just, the future and progress of humanity.
What is God, or is it intolerance and persecution?
the obstacle, jealousy, the despotism of heaven on earth.
Let him take back what's his. We won't argue with him.
To believe in something outside of humanity is to betray it.
And if man needs fetishes, as you keep saying Obstinately, doesn't he have humanity? What greater God is there?
Nobler, more ancient? And he too suffered.

Humanity was scourged, the priests delivered it up, the kings
They condemned her, the soldiers crowned her with thorns, and he Holding up the cup of gall, they shouted at him, "Man, you are a king!"
But I tell you, the Immortal One will rise again before three days and the stone of his flying sepulcher will shatter into pieces to smash the skulls of his enemies.

the question is posed between the henchmen who write to the pediment of barracks and temples: "Timor Domini, in ilium sapientia est, and the men who proclaimed, in Facing the stake and torture, the law of peace: "Love
hominis erga hominem initium sapientiae".

PART ONE

General characteristics of the Semitic group

CHAPTER ONE

Etymology

The robust faith of the Middle Ages did not see in the sciences that the Levites of the ark, the scribes destined to demonstrate endless biblical infallibility; and, God and the Inquisition
With her help, she convinced them.

The human spirit has long been stuck in a rut.

The Arabs, it was taught, never knew the cko-
"Neither the word nor history. Their writings are worthy of the rhapsodes."
"barely reveal a series of buried facts"
in detail. Every historian, a copyist of his predecessors-
"He adds, subtracts, or moves things around as he pleases." The "Storytelling and illustrated narrative form the entire series of their b annals, b

teté and the impeccable quality of the most Arabic book that ever was, the Bible.

This disorder has ended. The human mind, in its march generalizing, questioned the usefulness of two weights and of two measures, the reason for a rule, fair for the Brothers of Israel, unjust to this people alone. Stripping away

3

«'AHACTKUKS OKXKH.UX

Without any frivolous fear, he crossed the saerôo enclosure of the Testaments, and the books of the United States and Ezra, in their revelations They finally understood, revealing to him the arbitrary construction. often artificial, hence biblical historiography.

Salon l'expression île Voltaire, les antiques historiens are tones more or less (I 03 1 Inhalais serious, narrating without To chuckle, Gargantua and Pantagruel. Nations, cities, mountains, rivers, everything comes alive under their magic pen, pupil up to the sky our colossal forms ot so meut «huw les worlds of imagination. Ifellen and his descendants, Æolus, Porus, Ion, and Ahoms descend upon Greece. Oegyptus He holds his scepter in Egypt. Heber leads his people. Noah and his three sons, Jacob and the twelve Patriarchs prepared themselves* They are tangent between Asia and Judea. Explore the continua and the annals, the mythical memo ost emerged from popular consciousness.

ltion do commun cntro l'ethnographie ot ces créations poetic. No more than the Iliad or the Vedas, its sisters, the Genesis has no awareness of races, and the enumeration of Chapter X is based on a kind of passionate geography who classify the pouplos for reasons of antipatiio or of friendship.

CHAPTER X.

"Verse 1. – Here is the enumeration of the fUsdoSem,
"Chain and Japheth, children of Noah, and these sons were born
"of them after the flood."

Verse 6. – The sons of Chain were Chus, Mizraim, » Phuth and Ckanaan.

Verse 15. – Canaan fathered Sidon, who was his son
"elder, the Hothen."

» Verse 16. – The Jebusite, the Amorite, the Gergesite.

» Verse 17. – The Hivite, the Aramean, the Sinai.

» Verse 18. – The Aradian, the Samaritan, and the Amathean.

Verse 21. – Shem, who was the father of all the children
"d Ho ber, and the elder brother of Japheth. also had several sons.

ni' ftn0t'PR BKMITUJVU

has

"Verse SS. – And these sons of Shem were Etain, Assyria,
"Arphnxnd, Him! and Arum."

Verse 23. – The sons of Aram were Us, Hul, and Gethor » andMès.

» Verse 24. –• Now, Arphnxnd ongem!. a Sait! from whom was born » Hebor.

» Verse 20. – Hôhor had two (Us. One called himself Phnleg,
"That is to say, division, because the bull was divided in its time 5"
"And his brother's name was Leetan, etc., etc. "

Cortés, it would take kindness to draw anything from Cliso
This mess, the opposing claim, entirely dogmatic, is refuted by the puerile and uncertain nature of the genealogies biblical stories where wordplay, infernalism, and passion play a role the main role. Thus, next to the names of towns (Sidon, Arad, Samaria), the mountains (the Masch and the Uisptath), the countries (Arphaxod, Aram, Chnnaan, (1) are placed islands names to which is linked an often unknown event (Phaleg, Shelali, perhaps Hebor). One frequently finds peoples under different fathers and in different eras (2) as in all cyclical genealogies. And the desire to faire poetic and interesting stories alone inspired these Infinite personifications.

If, lacking his divine breath, the book had been animated
With a somewhat rational idea, she would not have arranged among the sons of Shem the Lydians (Lud), Persia and Assyria (Elam and Assur), Aryan and Conshite regions.

(1) Aram, the upper country; Chanaan, the lower country.

(3) Chapter X, verse 7. – The sons of Chusaba, Hevilah, Sabbattra, Regnia st Sabatacha. the sons of Regnia, Saba and Dadaü, Chapter XXV, verse 1. – Abraham then married another woman named Cetura.

Vcnót i–Who bore him Zamran, .Jeesam, Madan. Madrian, Josbor and Sné.

Verse 3. – Jeesam fathered Salxi and Beulatu

I l'AHAt'TKUKS üKNKIi.US Itl MlllH'l'K XKMiTIUI K

Kl lu n'eutht pas renié les Chanaiièens, sus frères j»a»* le sang and the language, the companions of Israel in Egypt according to 1" testimony of Josephbo, Aram soûl, on offot, brings us to the Semites proper. Yet, it is not confined that one plot, while its counterparts are relegated in the race of Chant, récoptaclo tlo toutos los colères.

Geography cannot explain these connections and these arbitrary exclusions have a political purpose They carry with them their "lato." This is around (11 BC*). Christ, whom the prophets prophesy, will deliver Israel from worship. Chananeon was brought back to a counterfeit of Parsism. He Did it matter to these reformers to disarm sensitivities? national and to unite victors and vanquished by the lion of one Common origin. Is made cui pradest. There are none left. minus a strong, improvised thermos that we are forced to use. to serve us. We will therefore call Semites, not the sons do Sem, a good part of which are Aryans and Conschitos, but the peoples of the Syro-Arab family, in other words The peoples speaking the Hebrew, Syriac, and other languages Arab.

CHAPTER 11

General characteristics of Semitic peoples

Our mummy is the best in the world, because he pn.vo his rhetoricians. Our sad freedom, doctrinaire daughter of fifteen centuries of despotism, Guizot lets himself be told; "Per and "Mèro honoreras." Intrepid optimism closes the yox, so mouth, ears, and forget the people's ills. signing off. Sated and well-paid, he pushes, from the top of his

O Pangloss pot-bellied cynics in gilded armchairs, who you Bow down to Alexander, you make us laugh after we...
to have brought so many tears. They explain gravely that everything is established in the most logical order, the most fair. Black people are created to cultivate cotton, the Helots to serve, Tartars to ravage the earth. And The Semites? Pangloss so troublora perhaps. "The Semites,

"He said, they gave us Monotheism and moral ideas."
"And high."

Ridicule! The Semites are the shadow in the picture of the civilization, the evil genius of the earth. All their Gifts are a plague. Fight the mind and ideas Semitic is the task of the Indo-Aryan race. The dualism begins in Plataea: continued with chances various up to Constantine, it ended with the Revolt of the Rebirth. The victory of the Indo-Hellenic spirit opens the horizon of the future.

Physiology does not see in the Aryans and the Semites that only one race, the white race. "The Semitic type or

ü

CAHAOTKUES GEXÜUA't'X

"Arabic," she added, "offers a more pronounced character."
Philology, for its part, does not recognize any analogy.
Neither processes nor roots entered the gentle tongues. But What a headache for the psychologist!

The godfather of Semitism, on Franco, M, Honan, lo declares categorically: a The Semites, compared h the raco iudu'ouropéenne, present an inferior combination
"Rieure do la naturo humaine."

Fins of this vivid design that covered the Greece of chofs-d'o'uvra. The Semite presents something It's steep, hard, concentrated. A wall seems to stand in its way.
between him and other nations, from a moral point of view
However, because he never failed to enter into a contact with the Good Guys in order to exploit them. I'm appeals to the Jews and Phoenicians,

Instead of this need for intellectual and physical expansion

The Greek ristic, the Teraclutus, was dignified, cold, taciturn, weighing his words and thoughts, disdainful sciences and arts that he despises or uses to his advantage bizarre, independent, and egocentric oaks. Allah, Moloch, or Jehovah is the deification of this fanatical pride and little enlightened by the Semitic races.

For the first time, the most rounded humility is coupled giant and the most ambitious abjection. The Semite identifies with his God and the fullness of all gifts. Submerged in the sublimity of the Almighty, he pays homage to him every aspect of his individuality. To help him grow. Furthermore, it deteriorates to the very bottom of the scale; but this God will have dominion over the world and will reign over all peoples. ples, in the person of his servant, the Semite. The man annihilates himself before Jehovah, only to rise again as a tyrant of the nature. Such has always been the reasoning of peoples Semitic, the source of proselytizing fury and the cause of these rapid conquests of intelligences as well as empires.

üü uttoviti «ümitwcr

Illicity is therefore the supreme condition of the Imitated between man and God. The manna succeeds the jwnto. Chasms, fires, and snakes are the arduous stages. from a land of milk and honey. Such violence in anger or in love displeases less than an Aralto character than a benevolence monotonous. And doesn't it finally spread out in In all its glory, after the persecutions of the Middle Ages, this Jewish empire, foretold by the prophets, whose purse is the Temple of the .'1 percent the prophet? The monster of the ero modern, the exploitation, raises its titles up to the Judaism, which condemns Chain to slavery and contemplates in the nations its future proio...

The concepts of cos races are clear, but not very extensive. The number of ideas they possess is quickly counted. Los The monuments they left us are, in general, except the moment oh they marry To the porso civilization, of one great drought of thoughts and forms; and if the Imagina tion adapted nude tale deployed on Arabia sos glitter los brighter, it does not complement these conclusions morals, from this point of view, are distinctive of the spirit Indo-Hellenic (1). The Semite ideal has never been more far from the quick vision that makes dos mundos (lovant) pass eyes dazzled.

They will admire the beauties of the books, I will tell them; "Are you "Are they sure they have a Semitic manuscript?" But, throughout literature Judaic culture was molded by Persian culture. The pen, in number of places, ideas, memo letters (2), everything is became Chaldean.

The Jnif, moreover, is no more familiar with abstraction than

(1) Again, according to the latest work, this wonderful collection of Could One Thousand and One Nights simply be an Aryan work, passed from hand to hand? in hand to the Semites. The etymologies, the names, would be Aryan. The The descriptions and customs would transport us back to Persia or to India. (See the preface to One Thousand and One Nights, Oidot edition.)

(2) Saint Jerome. Biblia Sacra. Prologue galcatus.

8.

l\\«M"ITKK8 OKNKUAVX

The symbol, we (unit judged by the book of Samuel, one of the more authentic as antiquity, of the natural dryness real of their annals. Sacred poetry, fierce reverie, it goes back and forth on itself like the mirage of the wave.

All the works that escape these conditions, the Ivoheleth, do the same as proverbs are almost contemporary of Jesus Christ. The theological and explanatory aspect Catif alone would prove it if necessary. Ecclesiasticus, the book of Wisdom come out of Alexandria, and Renan himself, Invoking all his optimism of good company, he removed obliged do rovonir on his first and imprudent allegations.

Thus vanished the fanciful evocation of an enlightened century and literary of Solomon, melted foot and foot by apolo-accomplices or dupes of Arab storytellers.

The ivoheleth, which prefers the state of the animal to that of... man is the product of skepticism, into which the Sadducees under Autiochus, while the harsh genius of The Maccabees inspired the Book of Daniel. Job, with his Satan, familiar of Jehovah, his angels and his stars divided into two camps, its dragon ever rebellious and ever defeated, is a Persian piece of which Ahriman is afTaibli. The Psalms my, to which a certain antiquity can be attributed, do not They barely exceed seventeen. I'm quite willing not to The argument, drawn from the style of all these works. There are serious reflections on the relationship between man and God, doubt, in short, which stands at the door of humanism, are unknown and even hostile to pure literature Semitic ment (1).

Critics have searched in vain for a stage idea in The Song of Songs. She moved, at every step, against the gap, the result of expurgation. This collection of

(I)Vatke, Religion of the Allen Testament. Biblical theology. p. 580 and stiiv. – Hitziu, Begriff des Kutik, DI, 101,103. – Hartmann, Eng, Yerbindung, 245, and in Yiner's Zeitsch far Wissenchafi, Theology 1, 29. – Ken an, The Book of Job.

MC 0» RO 11 MR SÈMniQlT. 0

love songs, in connected fragments, not* initiates one side vibrant and little-known aspect of the character of Israel, the eôté orgias-tick, manifested in the Adonia, Raalpeorism and the A Dionysian festival of Tabernacles. The vicissitudes tested by the piece, the revisions of which it was the object is inscribed in gentle expressions which are of truth tables dates. The comparison of Tersa to Jerusalem could not it was only after the separation of the ten tribes, including Tersa was for a time the capital, while the word Pardes, synonymous with garden, transports us back to the time per*sique (1).

We will not discuss here the entirely modern origin of the Pentateuch. It will be the subject of a special chapter.

To summarize this brief overview, the mixture of imagination Aryan tradition with Jewish dogmatism emerged from this monument Strange and unique, biblical literature. The semi- sentence The landscape, arid and barren until then, suddenly changed color; the The number of common ideas has increased; memories, the Memories of the past took shape. The book emerged! The much-admired biblical images are most often than Persian councils. From this a portion of the Bible, all antisemitic, and this influence is undeniable by this that there is the best in the Bible; the Prophets.

Nothing is warmer in any language than the the lyricism of the prophets. In contact with the Aryan breath, the Semitic thought has expanded, humanity speaks through the The voices of these men. The Aryan influence has passed through here.

I regret to find myself in disagreement once again.

a reaction that is more fruitful than an anti-national and anti-Semitic one, introducing a foreign element.

The nabi or prophets undoubtedly make use of ideas and even the sword of the Persians. Isaiah is almost a Deist. Jeremiah, a contemporary of the miraculous discovery

(I) Renan, Song of Songs. – Evvalb, Geschichte des Voikes israel, 1.111.1" part, p. 173.

10

OESKUAEX CHARACTERS

du livra do lu Loi, receives the money from Nebuchadnezzar. Kzéohioi is a disciple of Zoroaster, and the explanation of Some of his visions are reflected in the sculptures and the symbiotic animals of Poraepolis.

Judaism, which we have, is nothing but Parsism. The main dogmas: Angels, Resurrection, Hell, Eden, Plagues of Egypt, Deluge, creation of the World by Eloliim, Orand God, Satan, Mediator, Messiah, etc., are exotic products, and it is not always easy to determine to return to the old religion.

I know, it's unvirtuous to say frankly his opinion on the Jewish question; we abandon you all the other Semites, bound hand and foot, but don't touch them to the Jews*. Noli tangerc, under penalty of clashing with The crowd of prejudices and interests. Righteous compassion for biblical illusions will not go so far as to put a sledgehammer on it day to truth, in the interest of those with photophobia. Thus the Semite, this secretary of the Most High, is no more a historian than poet, scholar, or philosopher. History is never appears only as a theme to his own glorification and to the curse of others, and, at the risk of scandalizing Orgon And Tartuffe, I prefer Tacitus and Sallust to the Holy Spirit. Herodotus and Thucydides.

This poverty of the Semitic character becomes, under the influence of a flow of compassion and propriety, a tendency general to unity. Weakness is strength; poverty, Wealth; monotheism, a quality. The appearance of the desert more or less known to these peoples poetically colors the rash claims. "The desert is monotheistic" 1 word More spiritual than profound, certainly false. Without addressing

The desert is 'in the brains of the Semites.' They were limited in their general arrangement. Nothing is as fruitful as the multiplicity of aspects.

\I) See below.

SEMITIC GROUP

II

Thus, the Semite was never able to rise to understanding of nature, he sees in the field of creation only a letter dose or the work of El or Jehovah which him-He himself created man (and this is the crucial point of exaltation) triumphant) in his image. The Semite formed his intuition has He never bothered to study, nor did he understand science. "God is all-powerful! God is God! » Crushed under this deduction Logically, the believer conceives nothing of these investigations scholars, honor and joy of humanity.

And don't let me be pitted against literature and philosophy. 10th-century Arab, a lost reflection of the great civilization Greek. This flame of a day had to be extinguished. Never. Can we still call them civilized? Phoenicians who combined the refinements of luxury and religious fury P Sombras, cruel, rapacious, sometimes they rush from their ships to the Greeks. The girls are abducted For sacred prostitution, the melodramas for the Holocaust of Slavery. Never was a nation more hated by the people. to whom she brought the torch of civilization incarnate in Moloch, and their colonization could not succeed, because that it rested on the infamous. The Phoenicians were led lured by the prospect of easy profit extracted from ignorant men rants. They held their subjects in endless tutelage; and the oligarchy, the harshness, the rigidity, the genius of the establishments travel brings them closer to the Anglo-Saxon type Semitic Spaniards of Pizarro and Cortez,

Another Semitic characteristic is sadness. These men They know nothing of joy. Fate hangs over their marked brows. of the darkest seal. The Greek walks joyfully, enveloped of serenity. Nothing like it exists in the Jew or the Arab. Sometimes it's a wild and unrestrained orgy, where reason... breaks like the cup, where the body is like a mad steed The beggar escapes into every pleasure. Sometimes sacrifice, Abstinence, the torture of body and mind. Life so love.

i'AUAOTKUES UKNKR.UX

li.

Why then, despite his brutality and his contempt for the Human dignity, the Iliblo nt-ollo passed into our laws, our
Our customs, our prejudices?

From what mysterious source does a sanctioned suceôs originate?
through the centuries? Of borrowed qualities; of a poverty of forms and ideas more accessible to rustic souls; of comparisons mistakenly taken for images, since The Hebrew language does not use abstract terms; on the one hand unity, finally, which is absorbed by three thoughts: anger, hope, revenge. The Middle Ages, plunged into darkness, seized the Piblo like a branch of salvation. In the middle of a world
Ailing, Jehovah becomes the eternal vanquisher.

A new metamorphosis. Jealous of his happy son and
This rival god abandons orthodoxy and becomes the leader of the opposition.
Here's the key to this dramatic turn of events. The Arab only wants one king and overlord, his god, refuge from all despotisms Easterners. Also, caliphs, sultans, shahs, are all more or less the pontiffs or lieutenants of Jehovah, of Allah and others. A simple disguise satisfies pride.
Semitic. He bows without a murmur under the double slavery and confounds the despot in the respects of his God.

Is this independence? The disorder of the Nomads, the city's lack of intelligence, the abrupt convulsions of a
a horde of slaves, vainly feigning the 'reflective freedom of the Agora.

Yet it is this feeling, commented on by the races and the misfortune lies times, which sustain the 15th and 16th centuries.
saw with surprise the first enlarged texts spring forth reclamation of rights. Religious color served to the first time armor was used in reason. His speech muel, an expression of theocratic jealousy, became the code freedom for the Puritans, and the Old Testament
he raised his voice again in indignation against the doctrine of Ueddile Cæsavi.

What remains of the marvelous Semitic gifts? Their to attribute our initiation into the higher realm of reason

Ut' UHul'l'l'K SKMtītgt h* la

is more than folio and lies, it is an outrage to the family from which we are emerging.

Jewish morality differs from that of the Aryans. forced resultant of organic functions, bundle where the needs and passions of the citizen come to fruition, limited by the needs and passions of humanity (1), That's the moral of the story. Athens subjugates the gods to him. In Palestine, On the contrary, in Arabia, in Tyre, in Sidon, in Mabug, in Ilaby-lone itself, morality is not an essential condition nor of holiness, nor divinity. Jehovah is a profound being, wicked and satanic. Some prophets offer lo a spectacle of frenzied energy, whose exploits are due crimes. Moses, David, Solomon, commit serious acts. ambiguous, which does not prevent them from being friends and representatives of the Jewish god, on the contrary. It is the anthropomorphic a physics pushed to consequences previously unknown. Morality becomes an order or a whim of Jehovah. It is annihilated, just like science, serenity, and humanity.

A sad sight. Dry, arid, ferocious peoples. The intolerant France is the Semitic legacy to our world.

Herder said (2): "The people of God, holding their homeland from the sky itself, goes vegetating on the perennial trunk of humanity. The Semitic race represents the negative side of humankind, and we will rediscover these characteristics in his religion.

(1) Mens sana in corpore sano.

(s!) Philosophy of humanity.

CHAPTER III

General characteristics of Semitic religion

Gentle aspects in religion as in nature: of green countryside covered with harvests, meadows scattered flowers, watered by rivers of silver, or Two desolate sites, full of precipices and abysses. The peaks so podent in the clouds and on the flank of the groaning mountains including the eternal thunder. It's life or destruction. the gods, subjects or tyrants of nature, friends or enemies of destroyer, honored by Destruction, the god of pride and of jealousy, the wicked and deceitful god, enemy of life and Nature constantly conjured against them.

The most anti-human metaphysics (if one can call it that) (This metaphysical) offers the expression of the Semitic cult. Everywhere the Spirit of vertigo, son of Night and the Abyss, Dread and terror rise up, divinized beneath all the forms. Fear is the only argument, Yultima ratio Numinum, the foundation upon which everything is built, since the Morality bordering on wisdom. Never has heaven been more ■ crushed the earth!

Did the Semites have one or more of these tyrants? will. The Divinity has no proper name. It responds to epithets that can be unified at will, singular name and plural, generic, and appellative all at once. A particle added to the original epithet gave monotheism or polytheism h discretion (1),

CAHACTKRRS ORXRR.MJX !>!' OR0l'HE SKMtTKJt'K 15

Do memo for the lineage of Saturn, the Christian gods. Their Notre-Dame is falling to pieces. Notre-Dame Is the Fourrière Notre-Dame de Lorette? And Notre-Dame do lton-Secours the same as Nuest.fa Sonora del Pilar? Yes or no.

Thus, black ombre that can be cut into pieces, a vague noun, designated by the Semites as El, with the power to create as many gods as nicknames, This is the abstract concept of Semitic religion.

The concrete offers a wider field. El, Saturn, the great god of the Semites, so huche in the seventh planet (Sabaoth, Sabbath) relegated by ancient astronomy to limits of the Universe. The fierce divinity occupies the celestial body sterile, the great misfortune of the Arabs, the Typhoon of Egypt (2). Below him lie the harems of the goddesses and los phalanxes of the gods, like his celestial emanations. His Moloch, the active representative son, occupies the red planet of Mars. The flame, the bull, the murderous boars Adonis's rays, the sun's rays, and the blazing defilement of simoun, all that burns and devours, is the symbol of these gods advancing in a cloud of flames. Lion of the fire of God for the Arabs (Ariel, Urotal), king of fire do Tire (Malcandre, Haal-Ilhamman, choir of Bobylone), Lord of Fire (Dhosair Thyandrites), they set fire to the

Archai, or the Phoenician Hercules, recount the struggle written in broad strokes in nature, the struggle of the elements against destruction, darkness against day, of Health versus disease, like Hercules versus Typhon. The

(1) Baal, Adonai (the Lord, the Master), Metech (the King), Shaddai (the All-Peasant), Baalti (my mistress), Melicket (the Queen), Chabirini (the Powerful) etc...

(?) H oral, OJ. H, 17.22. – Propei-t. IV, l, 84. – S&'nius ai OeneiJ.
1U, 141, 0le.

CAUACTÈUKS OKNKUAUX

1(1

violently clashed nature seems, in a conclusion Fatal, to kneel before the wrong principle. Without a pod defeated, without a pod reborn, he laughs at every attack.
He lays the Messiah at his feet. Dionysius is martyred.
Hercules is burned by the rays of his sun. The Jerovanes
The Medes see his Als torn. Adonis, the Tyrian Hercules and Christ succumbs, but rises again.

The female of these gods is four times the height of a mule. Everywhere, Indeed, the wife, the daughter, the mother, the sister, all the con normal editions of the woman are sacrificed to the Virgin on
The prostitute. A sterile, insensitive, and cruel being, occupies Etheret jeto from the top of the moon its pale and gloomy gaze.
This is the Astarte-Tanaïs, or warrior Amazon of the Scythians, if warmly adopted by the Semites, the Sâmiramis or Very-High above Nineveh and Ilabelle, Dido the Erxante) (1) of Cartilage, the Artemis of the Greeks and the Taurians.

Sacrifice of public and moral life or excess in I 03 vital functions, that is the narrow cycle of Semitic religions ticks. Also, the Semitic temple is a brothel that has the Feet in blood. Happy again, when debauchery had The assassinations do not unite their criminal streams. A cèté'd'As-Tarte-Tanais, Aschera (2) and the mother of the gods, the Mylitte
The people of Ilabel call the believer under their impure shadows.
God-Goddess, Atergatis-Dagon, seems a reminiscence of flood seals. Naama and Derceto flit about with the dove. The serpent gods, Taaut, Surmubel, Kadmus and Armonia (3) raise their heads on the altar or & side of the sacred revelators; and the setting itself, the seas, the Bloody star, the Semitic god emerges from the bosom of shadows and from the night, gradually rises to the zenith and sets again behind the high mountains.

(1) See Appendix A for this explanation.

(2) Aschera (to be upright) designates in the 6th century a column, a star or a sacred grove, like the irminsul of the Germans.

0) Hence the Greek talisman, necklace, after the symbol of God.

!>l) UHOL'l'K SKMITiqVK

17

Combine the most profound feelings with this magnitude of Lorrilos designs. Before the personal conquest, never the God did not create heaven and earth nor did he claim dominion over them. universal. The place of the Semitic God is a kind of tyrannical domesticity, where ltaal makes the "flairs of a nation h fair price. But on its own the sacrifices and the prayers; and if any rival presents himself to the worship of peoples who signed the alliance, his jealousy erupts through scourges. For he is the Healer (final Adonni), the Koi (Moloch), the sovereign cliof; and each tribe thus possesses its idol, ferocious tyrant and tormentor, whose influence pro- Protect yourself against attacks from foreign idols. All cos beings are enemies, embrace each other, tear each other apart like Cats and tigers. After the victory, the nation and the idol were divided. gentle the loot. At Moloch the men, the animals, the harvests, everything that lives and breathes. The Earth is Moal» or h Israel. To Moloch the violence and the blood.

The dwarf extends his stunted limbs according to the memo The law that the giant raises his proud head. Cotto religion therefore underwent the ordinary phases of her sisters. Fetishism, Poly-Theism, Monotheism, the threefold aspect under which it presents itself The Semitic cult, like all the others. The divisions are less distinct (the poverty of the Arabic character (explains it), but they nonetheless exist.

Thus, all Semites began with the fetish. The Baal, adored in the form of a block of basalt, even later, during the time of captivity, in the form of a column of stone or wood, the good Asherah (1), her sister, the stones Bvth-El or Houses of God, are continuous fetishism.

Persian culture rubs shoulders with Arab legend, the ancient patriarchs erect an altar, set up a stone (Beth-El), choose a sacred tree or grove, to speak and sacrifice to Jehovah.

Polytheism succeeded, if one can give the evocations...

(I) The word means *imi>l«m«nt pulls straight.

4

CAU.U'TKHRS OKSKUAtX

JS

Semitic lions the name of the humanitarian religion back Hellenes, Arabia, cotto palrio i léalo of Monotheismo, unfolds up to Muhammad, a list of more numerous gods more tenuous than the beasts of fate. The Dhusaïr, Thyan-drito, Ariol, Sohar, ZahoL Satan, Uamphan. lo goddess Alilat. Embryo of the modern Allah, etc., etc., populate these vast solitudes where our poets sing of the One and YUnique. The era of the Sophotissi or judges, first century Israel's history offers a disordered form of Islamism. Move forward: The religious carnival fills the temples and souls. Here The army of the Molochs. Astarte rears her head horned. The Llolphegor, Llekebuth, Adonis, the Hadnd, The lteritb, the Dagon swarm in a hundred bizarre forms. It's an alTrous pandemonium.

In Jerusalem, streets, houses, and crossroads each have their own divinity. particular. The temple is a Pantheon. The Aschera boundary stone gleams with orgies. The women carry the cake to Astarte and mourn the death of Adonis, while the great Baal and the the great Moloch of Israel, known by its national name Jehovah, so regalo grave de victimos. 11 n'est pas still jealous and suffers from the sharing. Hardly, when the Moloch moabito Chamos or the abomination of Ammon Mel-"Ebom is stealing his vogue," he grumbles, forgotten in his corner. He no decided what, through the voice of ÈIio, to declare the. war against the liaal invaders of Phoenicia.

But a wave of a wand rang out across the mummy's stage. The Chaldeans burned the idols. The Persians approach, human movement, therefore anti-semitic liqnc. We speak of a single God, pure, ethereal, enemy of The orgy and the victims. Jehovah, the best-drawn image

damn the titles of Baal and Moloch, his former epistles Thetes, cast off his former finery, his golden covering and of bronze, and converted by the voice of the prophets to Parsis, that's the truth. A religion has been slandered in exempting him from the ordinary conditions of humanity.

Iir OB0l'l'K SKMITIQDR

1!)

Going down further is "worth it, it's walking into crime and the Shame. No description of Hell could equal the horrors by which the Semites honored their deity. This idol Satanic love of blood and flesh, and he needs it without released.

This is the final point of religious fury, when Man attacks man, tramples underfoot the feelings
the most sacred things, he throws his child into the flame naked the massacre before God, in the manner of Abraham.

The inventor of God did not only lend him his senses his desires and his anger. The idol did not have only He was hungry and thirsty. Kilo haït ot tompèto. Also, after having placed on the temple table the bread, the wine and the Roast, a healthy and succulent meal, served everywhere to the divine, the priest still burns the incense pleasing to the nose, accusing mule gold and silver, works of art, hideous shapes or perfect, massacre before the idol, angering the dissidents, the heretics, the impious. Molocli's belly heated in furnace or pyre of heretics, always the holo memo caust.

The believer trembles before his God. He feels surrounded and walled up by him in the unknown, he constantly sees him as Leo quasrens qitem decorel. Besieged soldier, sailor Driven by hunger, he throws down a victim and the divine beast and saves his life, his family, his city, the whole world.
God is then judged by the darkest feelings. He revels not only sacrifice, but tears, cries, and convulsions of the sacrificed. It revolves around humanity, including
He envies grandeur and joy. God is jealous.

The man lowers himself below the beast. He is a murderer.
becomes cannibalistic. The animals do not attack their
a species that, under the influence of necessity, is the faithful Semite.
will devour human flesh with furious joy.

A certain satanic pleasure was mingled with these ceremonies.
well known to the pathology. Lawrdaire spoke very loudly.
voluptuous mules of abstinence. Now, abstinence is not-

1'ARAL'TÈUES GÈSKIIAIX

Isn't it a sacrifice? The pleasure of it, the torture... aroused even more by terror and hope.

And then the offer of man to God, not confession
the most striking manifestation of human subjugation, the dimo taken on humanity? when the victim groans under torture and the tears, the God grows from all the contempt devoted to the creature. Every religion, pushed into its consequences ultimate inevitably leads to physical and moral sacrifice
the homino. A crucified God crowned the building.

The Christians, those fanatical worshippers of saints and of images, crushing the Scipios and the Lucretiuses under the epithet
The cruelty of idolaters has always struck me as quite ludicrous.
pagans (I'm referring to that group of philosophers, poets, and heroes, eternal inhabitants of the Elysian Fields), the pagans, dis-jo, while attaching himself to the N»o; of Anaxagoras or to the
"No more of Aristotle, they rendered no less public worship"
t\ religion, so sublimely human and symbolic of Greeks. It is art and nature, before which they bow.
They were born without deviating. They admired, though certainly less idolatrously. They a than their crude and fetishistic detractors.

But in primitive times, a time of ignorance and Unfortunately, the idol is barely a transition from the fetish.
The Image is God himself. The Nabi flatter it or insult it.
They consulted, according to its docility to their calls. The Phoenicians
They chained her up to stop her escape. She walked in the middle armies fought alongside his people. The believers...
They give wives and companions. Finally, beautiful idol bloody, burning, and killing, this insatiable machine of flesh
And blood, it's a living monster. Chance becomes its Providence: prosperous events, his good humor,
The plagues, his wrath. He is a God! We are very far away masterpieces by Phidias.

Look at this idol, black as bronze or brass, whose
It is made, an unprecedented being, where man and animal mingle, horribly fused. She wears horns of bull. His enormous eyes, with pupils fixed like those

The tiger's eyes emerge from a contorted face. The limbs are stiff. Their hands are jerky, they seem feverish, their hands are joined or hold a grill (1). Below, beside, everywhere the fire, king do la fèto, launches its big red tongues, Los cannibales surrounding them, shouting, singing, waving instruments bars, sistrums, eyinbales, tympanons, or else plunged into A dreadful silence.

The priests are dressed in black or red, depending on the country, tonsured head (2), blackened or red Ligurian. If the victim is a child, the parents flatter him and the child brave, for tears are forbidden, we throw her on her red-hot grill or in the belly of the God carved into a furnace, or well, she embraces the idol with an indecipherable, enclosed embrace heated to white-hot. The instruments drown out her cries, the The howls intensify, the idolaters mingle their dances. joyful. The fat burns with a crackling sound. But, at the moment where the priests attentively observe the movements convulsive symptoms in the victim, all of a sudden the face of the The tortured man, his contortions constant, a laugh resounds. a foretaste of eternal joys, a horrible, strident laugh that It transcends the realms of joy and pain (it). It is Everything. The roast is perfect. The sacred feast begins, the Passover or Easter continually modified by the raco moio-Schist. Each one detaches a piece of the victim, including the Bones are preserved like relics. God and man are content in their dreadful complicity.

Sometimes the victim was immolated before being thrown into the ground. in the flames, and the blood mingled with the loaves.

With progress, the idol is hollow. Scipio finds A Car- the famous Moloch with a bull's head and belly

(1) See, for example, in Cbkdtzer and Guignant, Religions of f antiquity, the planks of Phoenician idols unearthed in Sar- deigns by La Marmora.

(2) Herodotus, III, 8. – Leoitic, 19,27,245.

(3) The name of the son whom Abraham wants to sacrifice, lusse (laughs), renders well in its staccato accentuation the painful sound of ultimate tortures.

hollowed out in a furnace, or the arms, worn by a mechanism, throw human victims. This murderous monster had devoured by generations. When Agathocles besieged Carthage for the second time, sweet thousand children of the first Families are thrown into the abyss and, after the victory, one immolate the flower of the captives.

On the shores of the Tuurido rises the Black Stone h the horned head, covered in blood, the dreaded Artomiso of the shipwrecked man.

Later, the Lydians, worshippers of Artemisia Anaitis, The Pontians and the Cappadocians claim to possess this idol: naive Pausanias (1) gives the palm to the Spartans and for several reasons: "Like the image preserved in "Laconia has already exerted such a terrible influence that the "The first Greeks who looked at her face were immediately "became furious and massacred each other or "died of illness, I conclude that this image is," "In all likelihood, the true image introduced in "Greece, through the princess and priestess Iphigenia."

To do justice to this formidable guest, the Laconians They killed one of their own once a year. Lycurgus evaded this rito by having young men flogged, in such a way that Their blood splashed even onto the altar.

In the Hinnom Valley, amidst the precipices and rocks, whose appearance gave rise to the idea of Gehenna, rise the Tophette of the children of Israel, artificial height on which we make the sacred fire, next to the Siloa stream (2). This remarkable institution can even be found among the Mexicans (3) and the Scythians..

There must be victims to justify such massacres. Also, the firstborn of humans and animals are the normal prey of the God.

(1) Pausanu*, bed, 0.

(2) Jeremiah, Vit. 31 –According to Jehenius, the word Thopheth is Persian and means to shine.

(3) See Appendix U.

a Semitic orthography

By one of those favors always reserved to the captain—
 In this way, the rich can substitute mercenary victims and their own children, and trafficking fuels the markets for sacrifice. The Greeks have long served as food to the Molochist idols. In Crete, the Athenians pay a trilmîmain to the Minotaur, and the Locrians send each Annérfleux jounos filles à la Pallasdo Troie. On les brûlo vivid, on expiation of the crime of Ajax (1), and according to the law, all Semitic, to sacrifice the innocent for the guilty.

Sacrifice, such is the bloody fog that hangs over dark religions and, through the Phoenicians, invaded hit all of antiquity. Hamilcar, in Sicily, sees his
 The army weakens and throws itself into the flames. The priest Carthalon has himself crucified on a gigantic cross, for to give the victory to his father. Drusus throws himself into his abyss. Epimonides orders the Athenians to offer a sacrifice human (2). The Romans bury gentle Gauls at Loïarium. Athens immolates criminals to purify the people; and Marseille, when the epidemic comes, takes a beggar, fed him for a year on the most exquisite dishes
 and hurls him into the sea, clothed in magnificent attire.

At the mouth of the Tiber stands the temple of Diana
 The African woman, oh, the priesthood is the price of murder. The
 The high priest always had to be a deserter slave who,
 By his very flight, he finds himself subject to punishment.
 capital. 11 held this position after having killed his predecessor sister in a sword duel and kept it until a Another came to send it. For added security, this gladiator sacred, constantly confronted with death, is held, moreover, to accept once a year a fight and death with a slave any. The temple colonnades bear the images fighters who did honor to the goddess (3).

(1) Calumaque.

(2) Herodotus, V, 71. — Thucydides, 1,120.

(3) Strabon, V, 239. — Pliny, Hist. m!.. XXXV, 7. — Suetonius, Vtdigule, 35.

The priest's immolation was for a moment a general, t'omauro publicly fed a priest for this service.

Jehovah of Numbers (1) states unequivocally that he chooses the Levites instead of the firstborn of Israel, according to tradition continues until its ultimate expansion, the Messiah.

In the eyes of Saint Paul, Jesus is the high priest who reconciles God gave the Hebrews, not by the blood of calves.

heifers, but by his own.

Shall we talk about the sacred wager, Iphigenia's death warrant?
and of Jephthah's linden, of the Oak or spell cast upon the pers Sons and even peoples?

The God, considered from the solar point of view, gives birth
The great Semitic creation, the torture of the cross.
leave the crucified man immersed all day in the rays of the sun, only to remove it in the evening; and for a long time afterward After Jesus Christ, the punishment of criminals remained a pretext for sacrifice.

With a refinement that her granddaughter would later recreate, the sacred-Holy Inquisition, the Semitic faith tears from the victim the flesh, piece by piece. Dionyse the Ripper (0 |m&w;), Phalaris and Jehovah revel in the moving music of the flesh torn, and Samuel cuts King Agag to pieces sacred cens, just like his counterparts in Chios, Lesbos and Tenedos.

Also, from all corners of the ancient world resound
the screams of three sacrificed men mingled with a sardonic grin, memories that long weighed on the Greek mind
A bad dream. The cow, pursued by the burning goat, which wanders through a hundred lands and crosses the mountains and te mers, it's the Molochist machine set up by te Phoenicians in every country where they set foot (2). The
The Greeks saw these machines as veritable monsters.
Destruction. In Crete, the Minotaur devours the Athenians.

(1) a I have chosen the Levites in Israel instead of every firstborn.
Numbers, 'J, 12.

(2) Hence the expressions: Ionian Sea, Bosphorus, etc.

UU UK0l'i'E SKM1T1QIK

reddened the human victims. Oacus crouched near the Vesuvius, then come the Dionysos, Tavoondos, Tavoox-scados, Apollo Ouadios. the Artemisia, the Jupiter ironi • hospitable, the legom of the tyrant Phalaris, remnant Rock 'nance. Kronos Saturn devouring his children, the former king Israel, priest of his son Jeud. as Abraham, are the emblem of those impious races who failed devour the world (1).

Such a cult could not long weigh upon Hellen-Denial. From all sides rise the illustrious Greek heroes humanitarians, who destroy the horned and headless monsters bull. Theseus kills the Minotaur; Perseus, the Bull of the sea. But the sublime expression of Hellenic rage, its Heroic champion, he is the son of Jupiter and Alcmene: Hercules. 11 purges the earth of Semitic monsters, the Cacus, the Geryons, the Antaeus of Libya, the Nemean Lions. The twelve immortal labors force the Tyrian Hercules to retreat, Melchart, and his latest effort opens onto the ancient world a world carefully hidden by the Phoenician races in the legend of the Atlas Strait (2).

Everywhere, moreover, the oulte molochisto cho' ->o le» esprits and tends towards modification – progress almost as wild that the rite has been abandoned; but the trend is clear and will to become the poetic and civilizing religion of the Greeks. In Arcadia, Dionysus still has a festival where the blood of women whipped to excess flow on his altar (3).

Bellona, goddess of the Romans, like Astarte goddess From the war among the Philistines, the mother of the gods wants human blood, and the priests, to appease them, make themselves copious incisions on the arms and shoulders (4). The

(1) Diodorus, XX, 14? Plato, Politics; Sinus Italicus IV, Punishment, and the Church Fathers.

(2) See appendix C.

(3) Pausanias, 8.23.

(4) Horace, Sat. II, 111, and Tibble, 1, G, 4,5; Apuleius, Metamorphoses, Book 8.

general characteristics

more orthodox than logical, they fulminate against these horrors. idealized, moreover, with luxury through Christian macerations Yours. Happy humanity still is, if these new Philanthropists would have been content for their God of blood of its priests and goats (read paganism!

Little by little, the bloody sacrifice is losing ground and its The gods decide to grant mortals the charter of failing powers. Their fierce clemency abandons the victimo ontiero for a little blood, the loss of virginity nit  or of the hair, the piece of circumcised flesh.

The law of contrasts is inescapable. Alongside the cries of sacrificed, the howls of the Bacchanalia. After the degradation dation by asceticism, all excesses of the senses. The exaltation of the Virgin and the castrato has a backlash the wild orgy where one throws oneself upon life and its pleasures, of all the holy horror drawn from sacrifice. The Semites no kid seems to be plunging so violently into the quagmire, what to escape, the devouring flame of the Moloch. Not that there is antagonism between the orgias cults-ticks and bloody. These two institutions, one of which inspires rather than disgust, they intertwine lovingly like the vine and elm. Everywhere, indeed, the Phoenicians in their trading posts, in addition to the Molochist machine intended for consume the enemies, the rebels, the competitors, They import Asherah, the cult of the Phallus and Baal, combining this dual influence: passion and terror. The islands of the Archipelago, Sicily, Carthage, and especially Iberia teem with prostitutes or Kedesches. We know the repugnance The tarantella, originally from the dances of the women of C diz. Phoenician, has been preserved to this day.

This is not the metamorphosis of the sacrifice of life human beings sacrificed to virginity, the shameful exchange accepted by Moloch in despair. These are orgiastic deities, applying to debauchery the special theories expounded from our days on art.

OF THE SEMITIC GROUP

27

1.0 Molochism chooses the mountain caverns, the wild and devastated places, an ideal of horror in unison of its bloody ceremonies. It is in the middle of the Vegeta-
■ the most luxuriant tion, in the shade of the cedars and the terebinthes so many times cursed by the prophets of Israel that raises its phallic head. First a wooden post and then a column of stone, it becomes in time a column of gold and stones precious. To her right shines the feminine symbol, the Ascbêra. The goat, the pig, wander beside the Gods, that they symbolize. Ephraim prefers the donkey, a symbolic animal who carries Diortyse and Jesus Christ and even offers to the anti-left a mysterious philosophical meaning.

From Egypt to Phrygia, religious debauchery spread its muddy stream and its leafy huts (1). The lingam, pine cones and pomegranates roam the temples. Gigantic phalluses pierce the walls. In Cilicia, they have several hundred feet, and the German School was able to, Without irony, to trace the origin of our church steeples back to that.

Prostitution establishes its empire on the streets. of the altar and in its sacred groves. It is an institution priestly, a heroic way of honoring the divinity. At this no street, prostitutes are priestesses, the courtiers sanes of the saints, and the battles of Cybele with the women a love considered sacred (2). The impure dialogue of the Santon and the Shulamite, with alternating responses, has transmitted to us set aside the haunting song of the Israelite orgies, and Sodom, transparent allegory, preserves until Josiah his huts at the Temple gate.

Rabelais's orgy certainly has its grandeur in the sublime butcher's stall offered by the priest of Meudon to the world emaciated by the eternal Lent of the Middle Ages. But among the Semites, all nervous and frenetic, jerky and dissonant.

(1) Feast of Tabernacles in Palestine. Feast of the Sacred (hoods) at Babel, in Syria and beyond.

(2) Lucien, De Ded Syrid.

GENERAL CHARACTERS

28

Joy suffers and deliriums. Sardonian laughter does not resound. only in the care of the bronze bulls and idols hollow. It bursts forth in the midst of these feverish circles, do these furious contortions, by which the Semites honor their divinity. The orgy is not only immoral, to the point to attract to David dancing before the ark the scorn of his Michol's wife, she becomes fierce and dangerous, returns in the pathological field.

At the festival of Thammuü-Adonaï, the douil prepares for joy.
For several days, the women tore at each other's hair
They will mourn and weep for the death of Adonis. But Adonis rises again and his triumph is celebrated with delirious joy (1). The Debauchery pushed to its extreme, she joined the fury.
its martyrs and wounded, even more horrific than the mutilated by Moloch.

The Welsh are torturing themselves by dancing. They are brandishing swords, da.a. their sacred frenzy, and every time the iron strikes
A breast, blood moistens the earth.

To the sound of frenetic music, the young people present in the temple of the Syrian goddess, they seize phlegm exposed for this purpose, they castrate themselves, then in gripped by madness, they roam the streets, their bloody phlegm gleaned by hand and throw the object of sacrifice into a house (2). The Babylonian women, as we know from Herodotus, are forced to prostitute themselves once a year to foreigners; and,
In the time of the Macedonians, prostitution degenerated into general debauchery, without religious idea (3),.

On the banks of the Euphrates, except for a few ceremonies, ancient, early disappearance (d), the field has rather remained in the in-Aryan and Conschite influence. The Semitic race did not have added its satanic stamp. He shines, however, in the

(1) See, on Adonis, Appendix A.

(g) De Deâ Syriâ, 51.

(3) Qeikte Cesse, 5.1 – Ghillany in Evrcrbsek.

(4) At Ninivo, in the Sacaea, the immolation of the Zogan which traces the
The legendary end of Ninus and Sardanapalus. – See appendix E.

nr uAori'R Semitic

has"

Bacchanalia and Saturnalia, I, antiquity, fetas oxcitantos which are jarring in the concerto-llellôno. This overflowing joy-Rim, untamed passion, an ambiguous state between all delusions,
where the phenomena of hysteria and catalepsy are intertwined, It's a Semitic pesto. Los Bacchantes tear the members of the poet Orpheus. The Monads are rolling in a torro Without a care, I respect their modesty and their bodies. They roar and they wiggle, until the heavy violin runs out and ferocious, the first wave from the Orient, fertile in monsters. These Furies retain until the very last moment the character more suspicious. Moloch hides beneath Uacchus, and the dance of Saint-Guy will become the Christian Bacchanalia.

Will it be surprising that, under this regime of continuous excitement, the Reason falters and gives rise to the most phenomena singular? Men shaken by these shocks on Humans lose their land. God had the breath that... Inflammo, the whirlwind that sweeps them away. They speak to this being that roars around them and their mouth becomes the door-voice of Baal, Moloch, or the adored Artemisia.

For all these reasons, Semitia is the homeland of prophetism. Each deity has its own battalion of Nabi or Seers. who falls into all cataleptic delusions, makes miracles, predicts the future and declaims against the God of face. The Nabi lives with his idol in a singular familiarity liere, and, if the God is reluctant to work miracles, we see the prophet to apostrophize him in the manner of the fish-girls of Saint-January. Because the Nabi is above all a popular orator, aiming to strike the masses, and the mimicry almost all the costs of his inspiration. Thus, Jérémie, this friend of the Assyrians, out of disgust for his fellow citizens, set a battle on the back and sends bits to all the petty kings of Palestine. As the enemy approaches, he walks around completely naked, like a crazy, in the streets, and, on the other hand, buys a field in the the general discouragement. Another time, he seeks in Jerusalem the righteous man whom Diogenes seeks in Athens.

80 GENERAL CHARACTERISTICS

Zechiel swallows a book to absorb divine knowledge, Sometimes even the parable becomes excessively realistic. Jehovah gives orders to Hosea to take the prostitute Corner, then to commit adultery with a married woman and to have children. And that's just the tip of the iceberg.

The Prophets of Israel and Judah, of whom we possess the works, are representatives of progress, of writers Even so. What must their adversaries be like, the fierce ones? Apostles of Moloch or Seers of Artemis? Already notro An older acquaintance, the prophet of action, emerges from the background ages, like a wild beast. Los Samuel, the Klie, as terrible as their gods themselves, prophesy their hands in blood and have for digno lignéo, up to the The end of the Empire, the Waleses and the Chahlëens, these Bohemians from antiquity, accused of so many secret crimes.

Siberian Schzmano, the African Obi, the Indian Sorcerer, Pythia or wild prophets, whose bizarre gestures and grandour has certain features that strike all travelers.

Apart from these necessary reservations, the struggle supported by the prophets of the Hebrew canon against fierce religions is Worthy of the Greek heroes. Admirable comforters above all! When they see in every plague a punishment sent Regarding Israel, this narrow explanation offends our delicate tastes. cats; but also what a magnificent look cast into the future! What a magnificent compensation! The Nabi foresee for Israel, the New Jerusalem. They raise the great hope of the Messiah, the pride of an entire people; and this Messiah avenger, this conqueror of the world who must raise up Israel and give him an eternity of glory for a few moments They call upon him in their miseries, they prophesy him endlessly to bring it into being.

Certainly, the events had their influence on the prophetism and, when Chamos invaded Judea and that the children of Lord Malchoin united with the sons of Dagoft dragged the Jews into slavery, national enthusiasm

SEMITIC GROUP

m

was allied with religious sentiment. The prophet is then a spontaneous product. Wild and abrupt Nabi who have humiliated in his Gods, he rises up, in the midst of Israel, liberated Rater like Godeon and Jephthah, Brutns barbarian like Aod and the woman Jabel. Later, with time, the pro Phenomena becomes an art. He possesses uno reeotto, a recru Regular training, schools, a salary. Los macérations, The young, the solitudo are excellent. Often the Vulgate advocates music. Uéjè K lies, this man, this wild beast rather covered in hair and encircled by a strap for everything clothing, which appears at long intervals in Israel to kill and curse, he begs his disciple Elisha to play him of the harpoon. All means designed to disturb the mind, to influence Norwegian sympathy, have always done so sick people and prophets. The fluid was contagious, the immediate and terrible effects. King Saul, seized by the spirit of vertigo at the sight of the prophets, so it rolls for three days and three nights on earth (1).

The same excitations produce the same effects until inspired by the Semitic book, the Hussites, the peasants of Munzer, the Camisards, and a thousand other sects find the spirit of the Otkoniel and the Aod. To what height does not Sometimes the imagination of these men doesn't rise! It's at the environmentalist of the Jeremiahs and the Amoses that they learned to speak.

Let us not forget, in this brief review, the accompanying forced ment of the Semitic religions, the holy ark where hides the God in all his ideal horror. These boxes oblong, probable models of our coffins, are widespread due in several countries, but especially in the East (2). We It is even found in America where Mexicans descend into their country, led by the sacred ark of the god Huixftpoxtli.

Like the mysterious names of the cities on which their

(1) Rais, I, io.

(2/Hkkouuib, II, 08.— Plctajujce, Ve ht and Osiri, VIII, 440 — Paisa- kms, VU, 19.—Tacitus, Gerinania, 4U. — Eusêbb, a, Pnep. Evang.,2, 3.

\>i CARACTKUKS (IKXKI+AIK HL llK0tl'E SKMITUJI'K

These religions possess a terrible idol that no one Liras no must touch, that no human gaze must con to temple without flinching. Legends tell of misfortunes of an impudent curiosity. The hero Tarypilo opened the Dionysus' sacred box, his share of the spoils, and he becomes furious. to the appearance of the nudochist idols (1).

No distinction between impiety and lo r.èlo. Moloch strikes blindly. Lo Palladium, statue of Minerva, removes the sight of the one who snatches it from the flames, like the God Jews killed his Adele USA.

The cult of relics is a direct result of Molochismo. fierce conservative backs of immolated bones. For the archon does not contain not Soulomont the idol, but Oncoro the bones either of the God, or backs of victims or islands, religious objects, symbols or talismans mans, npf r,T* (the unspeakable things) to speak like the Greeks. Movers (2) proves beyond a shadow of a doubt that the arches were filled with the bones of sacrificed infants, and the plague proves before him. A Roman soldier having opened one of cos arches in the sanctuary of Daal Chômé, a scourge, the a post is sent out to strike the city and the Empire (3). From Note: the statue of Apollo rests in Amyclae on the tomb of young Hyacinth killed by God: the column of Dhusair, in Petra, on the bodies of sacrificed children. Such is the appearance of these religions. Men and Gods are indistinguishable in terror.

Victims of all kinds. Formless vegetation, fatal creation, these horrible products of the divine idea, biting into man like an acid, are unique in the world, and nothing is like it. comparable to this dark group illuminated by the sacred fire.

Like Dante, in the midst of an infernal world, we will to go among these peoples and find there more pronounced the rules of carnage and defilement that we have just outlined.

(1) Pacsakias, VII, 19.

(2) Movebs, Die Heliyon der Phoenicier, 1,357.

(3) Animien Makceu.in, 83.7 j Apimen, HIV, 173.

CHAPTER IV

Semitic Ooamogonies

Both science and religion seek to explain the nature; that is their only resemblance. But science does not is based solely on facts and relies on reason. The religion, on the contrary, is the daughter of Imagination. She rises in the air on the enchanted hippogryph, and from the heights Oh, the celestial steed, scornful of earthly things. She knows everything; she has an answer to every question: Link God created heaven, earth, man, evil and law Good. God is the continuous zero brought to the numbers of This eternal algebra: Nature. Also, while the science aims at an essay in geology or biology, and, well ambitious yet content with little, religion becomes poetic. She edited one of these poems, which Torquemada would annotate and which Ignatius will chant. She creates a cosmogony.

Paradox in natural phenomena, the Cosmogony However, it represents progress. It is a sign of inter- a timid question to which religion will victoriously respond to answer. Flooding thrown under the walls of the imprudent temple dementedly constructed; it's a scientific regret.

Two replicas were made. Endless palaces of Nineveh And from India came an immense, heavy, pyramidal work. grounded, ladder of the Gods, human summit. This It was a materialistic and scientific cosmogony, but little scholarly. As she has become, effeminate by The eunuchs of Alexandria, she smells of Hermeticism. One on However, it senses the depths. Chaos, matter, source of all things, the marvelous animals, reflection of a primitive state that is certainly not contradicted by the discoveries paleontological greens, successive creations and personal nified, the unity of substance in a mystical form and sometimes burlesque, they constituted in short the profound Belief of the Chaldeons and the Magi. Everything indicates that he So, this Evedo leaves empirical explanation far behind, this defeuse put on the path of science, which we call the Demiurgism. Certainly, it's easy to shut up with a gag, to say tUofiim Bava and to worship the clouds.

CAKACTOHKS HK.NKKA1'X

The cosmogonic idea, a scientific idea after all, entered very late in the minds of the Semites and when all the little ples possessed the lour.

Indifferent to nature, they blushed one day to remain behind their neighbors. From there, the recent era of Genesis and all Semitic cosmogonies, their Conschite and Aryan character. The Semites made of all shares of the loans to fill the gaps in their system religious. Babylon, Egypt, and India paid tribute. The Zoroastrian Persia did the rest.

Scientific cosmogonies, dogmatic cosmogonies, all was mixed. Brutal translation of the lofty idea of the Chal-Deans and Magi, profanation of dogmas in the idea vulgar, a partisan weapon abused by Euhemerus and the Christians, such is the mythical cosmogony. The castes members, who make man walk on his head and see In every mistake, an ally to defend, they emphasized The myth pre-existed. A fatal theory that would distort history. religious history! The myth is, in reality, only the explanation a vivid and dramatic representation of a general idea, the vulgarization A fictitious application of an axiom, often ethnographic. Minerva It didn't spring fully formed from Jupiter's brain. First fleeting shadow, pale glimmer of darkness, specter of the plains, A fleeting vision that vanished instantly; she received only strong Bacchus, conqueror of India, later revealed his magical attributes. Managed in their search for his daughter, Sèmiramis and Bélus, the

UU aitoU'K SKMITIQI'K

Minotaur of Crete, isn't that the story of intuitions and domestic imports, an even more symbolic gesture
Ideal rather than historical? We must therefore not follow the myth that with caution and to test it through philology. For its arrival is later islands.

Alexandria was the great factory of myths. This city presented, in the early centuries of our era, one of the more curious spectacles than have been given to philosophy to contemplate. It contains an inventory of the old world and the analysis was as energetic on the part of the attackers as defenders. The three Church Fathers were following the skeptical philosophy, Saint Paul parodying Euhemerus and Eusebius, relying on Philo. They did not foresee that Jupiter, reduced to human nature, would lead Jesus into his downfall, that Euhemerus would be the precursor of Strauss, and that tearing off the masks of the ancient gods was tantamount to ripping them apart the very veil of the Temple. Such was Lucian's conclusion which, in a marvelous and thoroughly modern development, dominating Jews and Greeks, trampling with equal footing the ancient dogma and the new dogma, cursed by its bitter word, these machines monstrous things that cluttered the future. Last of the philosophers ancient sophists, defeated with honor and to the detriment of humanity manité, dead standing in the Voltairean pose of his century.

11 there was, in the middle of this seething center of Alexandria, a constant fabrication of Gods, ad usum philosophi. They stripped the dead to fight the living. We wanted to find it even in the most religious foreign to this idea the Platonic demiurge or the historian euhemeristic risk. This preconceived viewpoint distorted all the questions. The fragments of Berossus, the Anchonia-Tuna, Abydene, Mochus and all the others we mention, have They underwent these complicated operations. They served Porphyry, to Proclus, to Eusebius, to the Euhemerists and to the Christians, and have retained from this amalgamation the false appearance, the hollow sound, adulterated taste, all sorts of unappealing qualities which! we must nevertheless overcome.

'WUAOTKUKK (JKSKRAI X

:u> ■

The slightest study reveals the elements of any cosmos

ideas of profound science, of astronomical systems, of first center of enlightenment and human knowledge, raise their magnificent shadows up to us.

The God who imposed himself on such minds was Science. So all the fragments and idols that haunt us, are found gentle parallel versions that we could call that of educated people and that of the people (2). In the first, the two principles, spirit (force) and matter, unite to to procreate life or bright air. The second couples the "Old Bel, Bel-ltan, the Father and the Holy Spirit with Mylitta" or the mother of the Gods, to give birth to Bel-Jao, Bel-Junior, his (they unique, the Demiurge and the Messiah of the world.

Science, if you will, but also lethality. We are in the midst of Christianity, perhaps ten centuries before Christ. The deities spring forth like the vegetation of the forests virgins. Avatars, Messiahs, crosses, dogmas

(1) This name is Aryan. How to explain this preserved Aryan title, & through all your conquests, 4 ls priestly caste of Babel The lists es primitives of the Babylonian kings, whose etymology is Aryan, resti- They killed this first scientific creation of our race. We conquered Babel. The caste of Chledians continued to rule through science.

(fi) See all these etymologies and all these fragments in Movebs, 1, ehsp. d'El. Los here, moreover, briefly: Chaldean version of Eu-Demas reproduced by Damascius. Apason (Desire) unites with Tanthe (ta Matter) to give birth to the son Aoymis (Life). – Cosmogony baby lo-Nienne of Berossus: first the darkness and the formless beings upon which He gnaws at the monster Omorka (the Solid's mother), then Bel cuts into two the monster. – Abydene at first sees only a water called Thalata, later solidified by Bel Mochus, unites Kther and Breath, hence the opener Cbnsorus (the organizer). – Cosmogony of Sidon, according to the same Damascius > Time and Cloud unite to produce, all the beings. Pbiton exhibits three versions end to end. First, the Dodo; invigorating (the Desirl from which came Mêt (the primeval silt) and the animals wondrous and motionless, the Zaphazémin in the shape of a work. Then the wind Colpiak (the Breath) who unites with the goddess Baan (the Night), the Venus Bosth of Appaca. Finally, the drama of Earth and Sky, with their strange loves, followed by the castration of Uranus by the harp of his son Uos and his companions, the Elohim.

DU rtRûlPfi 8KMITIQI K

:!7

superimpose and move, like the images of the kaleidos-

whose symbol is the triangle, is represented in twelve divisions units themselves divided into four triads. They are a And there are twelve of them. There are still nine of us, and they are embodied in the Bel's tower, itself an enclosure of eight symbolic towers.

Conclusion: science, or rather the desire to know, is the the source of all Cosmogony; Dogmatism, the form; the Myth, popularization.

These three elements, whether united or separate, are thus found in all the Genesis accounts to which a sound is thus added continuously double, if not triple.

Suppose the Hebrew Genesis is lost through the centuries, its chapters scattered, its verses tortured to the hands of philosophers and theologians; the entire work, a memory weakened into scattered fragments.

Never would a more baroque parade have offended thought, the Tohu and Bohu (Tanthus and Baan), the Phoenician Cloud which rising from the earth, the mysterious Elohim, a vague collective which Salvador still translates today as "the wax forces" of Nature, would become in turn, at the whim of a Philo or a Damascius, men, gods or scientific agents.

However, a special place is reserved for Genesis in Holy Epigraphy. If popular saying is shown there in in many places, for example, the mysterious song of Lamech, the blessing of Jacob, a type of blessing futures, the legend of Babel, etc., the whole book carries a distinctive appearance. He is learned and critical. His Scholarship drew from the best sources. A complication serious work was carried out in Phoenicia and Babylon, of the same in a similar way, except for the enormous difference in time, from which Philo Herennius's Cosmogony was written.

Same method of presentation, same accumulation of ideas And indeed, the same repetitions, and, I will emphasize this point later, same mythological system.

GENERAL CHARACTERISTICS

:>

Genesis was composed based on comparative cosmogonies. from Persia, Phoenicia, and Chaldea, and she carries with her Its date, the captivity.

As early as the 18th century, Astruc pointed out two things in Genesis. superimposed texts, one of which uses the name Elohim and the other the name of Jehovah. Now, the Elohim of the first chapters is not the Jehovah to whom the rabbi attaches it. Jehovah's Witness, the last editor of the piece. He's out of it. distinguished by a less limited action, a more universal air salt, and creates Heaven and Earth according to the method of Ormuzd.

The tragedy of Eden, that exquisite monument of wisdom Eastern, translates the traditions of the Persians on the Cypress pyramidal (1). This superb, flame-shaped tree, with dual sex, is for all of the Orient the revered symbol of the Life, death, and the afterlife: Immortality. In it lies summarizes the dualistic struggle, good and evil, Ormuzd and Ahri-mane. Genesis itself betrays this origin through the title Parse: Tree of the knowledge of good and evil; and the leaf Age, from which love springs, casts a shadow over the stone of tombs.

It is the tree whose fruit gives intelligence, the tree of science and life, hated by gloomy Saturn, the tree paradise, from which Zoroaster steals the sacred branch in the blissful sojourns. Planted in the presence of King Gonch-step in front of the Kirchmer pyre, the sacred branch immediately acquires such height that the prophet he built a chapel there.

This wonderful tree of ancient memories was cut down by Caliph Motawakkil. It was thirty-three cubits long and quarter circumference.

Richer even than the Hebrews, the Persians had ten-seven paradises created by Ormuzd and are seen successively chased away by Ahrimane, who slips in once in the form of a snake.

"In the midst of paradise," says verse 10, chapter II,

(I) Hdmboldt, Cosmos, II, p. 113, leaflet. Galnaky. Research on the Pyratnidal cypress, | (Lajabd. Memoirs of the Academy of Inscriptions tions, new series, vol. XX, part 2, p. 129.

DD SEMITIC GROUP

"A flower flowed, dividing into four branches."
The Boundehesch Pelhvi, combined with the books zonds plus ancients arrive at a similar theory of waters. Arg, the Veh, the Arvand and the Irat come from the same source, flow a shared moment around the world, 6t part ways to irrigate, under various names, the most distant countries.

Two of the paradisiacal rivers of Genesis, the Tigris and the Euphrates, both belong to Hebrew myth and Porsan. We could not find the Phison and the Gihon which surround the country of Consch. It is, moreover, impossible to to fix these sketches of the human mind which follow the little ples in their migrations. The Arvanda of Bordj becomes, from river to river and by way of a final stop, the river of the Euphrates. The Aztec Aztfcn is nowhere to be found, like The Brachman Meron. Their origin is rather in the The brains of all these peoples. Science cannot arrive to the top of this Jacob's ladder, the end of which touches upon darkness.

Will we deny the borrowing made from Zend theology, when The word Paradise (Fardés) comes from the Persians, when the editor The author of Genesis places them with Asshur among the sons of Shem, to the detriment of the Canaanites, when the same myth is it inscribed in all Aryan imaginations? Without to stop me & the sentimental argument, these descriptions of the nature, this need to explain and to know, this dream all Aryan landscapes of delightful scenery, are foreign and even anti-pathetic to the Semitic spirit.

But religious terror persists, even in the most

(1) "Verse 10. – In this place of delights a river flowed forth to watering paradise and 1& dividing into four channels.

"Verse tl. – One is called Je Phison, and it is he who flows around from the land of Hevilath, from where the gold comes.

Verse 13. – The second river is called Gihon, and it is the one that flows all around the country of Ethiopia.

Verse 14.–The third river is called the Tigris, which flows towards The Assyrians. And the Euphrates is the fourth of these rivers.

GENERAL CHARACTERISTICS

40

minute details, the mouth to our scholars. Lajard, to se to exonerate from the results that he is forced to acknowledge, attributes plagiarism from the Magi and even the Brahmins, may it be logically, and he further accuses them of having taken dogmas from the Jews of the Resurrection and the Angels, since he finds them corn* common to all these peoples.

More skillful, but also less serious, Ronan dodges the difficulty assuming an anblistoric contact of the Semites and Aryas.

Any man who studies without fear and without bias
The history of the Hebrews will easily convince one of the fixed
The late suppression of their cult. Only in Babylon were they arrested the Moysic dogmas, the gaps of a an incomplete religious system; and the stories of Eden, of the serpent tempter, tree of knowledge and original sin, present, with certain Brahmanical fables, and especially with the myths of Yendidad-Sadé, the cherished concordance of the Indo-Aryans of Berlin. The Persians alone were the intermediaries.

But while the overall tone of the pastiche is Persian, the elements
Semitic languages reappear along with our ancient knowledge.
Tohu and Bohu (the Tanthe and the Baan), Tune, empty matter and deserted; the other, the black night of Chaos.

"The Earth was Tohu Bohu (inanis et vacua, translated Saint Jerome). "Darkness covered the face of the abyss"
"And the breath of God was hovering over the waters."
The breath of Elohim is none other than the Holy Spirit, the principle male, the Aposon and the roQo; of the Semitic Genesis. He broods the world with the loving tenderness of the dove, (it is the Syrian meaning of the Hebrew word), and attained in the Trinity Christian, its definitive type.

One of Elohim's first creations is Jao, or air.
luminous, which an honest cosmogony cannot do without.
This Joa, dn remains, as well as Bel and Chusorus have learned to Jehovah his way of dividing the waters and the firmament (11.

fl) Verses 3 and 7 of chapter t".

ntl SEMITIC GROUP

41

All these nuances are so subtle that we witness almost a work by the author of Genesis. We see it sees, consult, summarize, enter into its tracing the most disparate elements. His ideal is creation of Ormuzd, which he wants to endow to Jehovah, not forgetting However, there is no Semitic element. One idea dominates it:
to compose a complete treatise on cosmogony where nothing essential does not leave one wanting more. Ain," after giving the version forget.

He writes, chapter H: "Thus Heaven and Earth and all » their adornments are created »• and, further down, vorset 4: «Veiled the "generations of heaven and earth, when they were created"
"by the Elohim Jehovah. Then no tree was in the b fields and no grass sprouted, for Elohim Jehovah
"had not pleased and there was no man for the » work, b

"But a cloud was rising, enlivening the entire surface
"of the earth, etc.?"

This is Damascius's Fertile Cloud, a new fragment of cosmogony stitched together by an awkward transition.

The generations of Genesis still highlight the striking analogy, already noted, between it and the fragments Sanchuniathon's theogonic principles.

Like Genesis, Philo unfolds super creations posed, interconnected myths, a wealth of versions and Disparate knowledge. He knows Adam (Being); Seth (Genos and Gonea), the Caln (FVvo;), the Esau; he attracted The invention of the arts to personify divine beings the nations, the cities. The mountains, the rivers. Chance or plagiarism, this strange coincidence cannot be put in doubt.

Ewald, Bunsen and Movers, the latter especially, after They proclaimed, after many years of meditation and work
the importance and authenticity of Sanchuniathon's book Produced by Philon Herennius.

general characteristics

42,

Renan gave the Academy nn of these ambivalent judgments
gus where his Sulpician skepticism indulges (1).

"A Phoenician," he said, "from the time of the Soleucids, wished—"
"Lant to highlight Phoenicia, and imbued with a system of exegesis"
"Mythological, created in Phoenician a large collection where
"He put them end to end, attaching them one to the other of the
"In the crudest way, the traditions of the different »cities of Phoenicia and earlier writings whose unity
"It still allows us to glimpse. The author's name was, or pretended to be."

Thus Renan, while placing the original work in the time of the Soleucids, cannot deny the trace of traditions and documents previous comments. Moreover, he expressly acknowledges, A few leagues further on, the rhythmic manner of the T/iolc-Doths, the verse system, and believes in serious study sacred stelae or tablets. Why then all these... traditions?

Several passages appear to him to be borrowed from works known examples include: a hermetic book from Egypt on Taant, Hesiod's Cosmogony, and finally Genesis.

First, what relates to the Taant is not necessary Egyptianly speaking, since Taant is a god and a name Semitic, with its history, origins and monuments undeniable.

I admit that the expressions of Ge and Uranus applied the first elements emerge from the limits of semi-genius tic. But isn't this one of those euhemetic misinterpretations? translator's errors, of which Renan noted a certain number? Moreover, the Eastern origin of the Cosmogony Hesiod's account would suffice to explain a certain community of details, without so many and such profound divergences that separate the two plays, without the presence of the Elohim, Ilos and beyond Harpé, these powerful guarantees of authenticity.

(1) Memoirs of the Academy of Insa-iptiom, torno XXtlt, part 2:
On the origin and true nature of the Sanction Cosmogony piaton,

OF THE SEMITIC GROUP

43

As for Genesis, it was at bay in the face of its res-bearing similarities to the Sanckoniaton, he published a system which would be destructive of all historical certainty.

Forced by the text to reject direct copying, he assumes gossip. "Sanchoniath would have arranged the "The babble of a Jew living in Phoenicia." It's from high fantasy,

I believe, "for my part, the existence of myths and of common items of the Israelites and the Phoenicians. Which Sanchoniath, I concede that. But the Colpiak wind and its Bnan women do not go beyond the Bible or the Tenth Babylonian or the Venus of Apkoca. The Usov do Saneho-Niaton is our Esau by etymology and lineage; he is the hairy, wild man in contrast to the race of shepherds, Canaan against Israel. He maintains relations with his brother Mem-Rouraos or Hypsouranios, the quarrels of Esau and Jacob. But the myth of 1 2 Snnchoniaton has a purely local aspect. stelae recall the memory of Usov et of Memroum (1); they live, according to Eusebius' own testimony (2), in the Tyrian adorations. Cassius and Lebanon, Tyrian heroes of the Sanchoniath, are not the Masch or the Risphatli of the Genesis, and yet these personifications are sisters. Kinship does not imply plagiarism.

And not only does it exist between Genesis and Sancho Niath identity of funds, but identity of form and of invoice.

The two editors, after having presented their charts of creation, pass before the eyes a long parade special beings, the embodiment of mountains, cities, and more early inventions. They are euhemerists, each with their own way. One subordinates all divinity to his system philosophical, the other & his God Jehovah.

When Sanchoniath created the Earth several times,

(1) The Old Testament speaks of a lake Memrum in Palestine.

(2) EusÈBEi De lauttibvs Constant, C. 13.

•14

GKSKRAL'X CHARACTERS

ü unfolds its series of Gods and deified heroes, The wind Colpiak and his wife Ilaan gave birth to Protogonos and Aion who find food from the trees. Then come Genos and Genea, who raise their hands to the sky and see Ueoloamin, the Great God II:? and 4>Xof, the three manifestations of madness, the Casius, Lebanon and Anti-Lebanon. Momroum fights against his brother Usov. The first pastor And the first fisherman exploited the globe. It's all complicated. of a compact series where all the Gods and Goddesses of Canaan, and abruptly ended with the Trinity Babylonian: Cronus, Lielus Junior and Apollo Chomaens.

What more did Diblo do? She also brought back & some human conditions, the Gods and heroes subservient to Jehovah. Genealogy is just mythology.

Of all these early patriarchs, some are gods. several of which were still worshipped in the good old days from Greece; the others, simple brands intended for to observe the passing of a generation.

Let's take the two genealogies of Adam, the first by Cain and the second by Seth. Both result in Lamek by different paths and fathers (1):

FIRST LIST

SECOND LIST

Adam

Adam

Cain

Seth

Enoch

Enos

Irad

Cainan

Maviaël

Mahalabel

Methuselah

Jared

Lamek

Enoch

Mathnsalem

Lamek

Lamek married Ada

and Zilla

Jabel and Jubal.

Tubalcain and Nenraa.

(I) The first genealogy, ch. IV, boars 16 et seq.; the second, echap. V.

I1U UR0l'PK SKMITIHL'K

4.*»

In the first list, there are descendants; in the second, nine, and to arrive also extraordinarily at the kid Lamek.

This is the arbitrary method of cyclical poets, varying their theogonies according to a moral idea or simply poetic. It matters little, in fact, that these terms Seth (principe, rae), Enos, Ennoh, Noah (the young) be displaced These. We only have the father's relationship to the children or the appearance of a new breed.

These duplications are not, as we have seen, particular & the Hebrew method. The Protogonos, the autochthonous Geinos tones of Sanchoniath, the Kessaré and Assoros of Eudène are of the same family and the same inspiration. A stronger link The narrow bond unites Seth with the Genos and Genea. These see to manifest the Lord of heaven. Enoch, son of Seth, begins to invoke the name of Jehovah.

I won't dwell on the round numbers found by Twald in the years of the patriarchs, because it is too convenient to play with numbers and to lend to a compi-barbaric author of almost modern ideas. I bow down, On the contrary, in the face of the research that has revealed & this tireless critic of an entire pantheon buried in the chapters Books IV and V of Genesis.

Iconium has worshipped the god Enoch since time immemorial. (Aw*xo«), good genie who dies and is resurrected in the manner of Adonis, and whom Genesis has taken up to heaven by Jehovah. This city, founded by Cain, takes, according to chapter IV, the Named after his son Enoch. Not far away rises Mount Ararat where the meMUES with the sacred vessel, and the attributes diluted come; the Neo inscription confirms this singular syncretism ism (1).

Lamech, Lydian and Assyrian god (2), is the genius

(1) Iîûuungek, Dissertation on Elijah and Enoch.

(S) Diodobb, IV, 31; Cedrenus, 1, 3U.

•It» CHARACTERS oènèravx

Fierce, he accuses himself, in a mysterious song, of having killed a man and a child and confided this horrible secret to his gentle women: Zilla (the Dark), that beautiful infernal woman nale Laraia who kills the children of sleeping women and seduces young men to slaughter them (l), and Ada (Beauty), the Babylonian Juno of Hesyclnus.

Métliusélach, the man with the back of his arms or Mars, stands beside this representation of vengeful and inexorable death.

Mahalabel, a veritable Apollo, reflects the sun's rays.

Jéred is the wet element, while Beltis or Venus

Phoenician took its place in the Bible under its own title from Nema.

• Without abandoning the philological explanation, the Chetas, These Semitic invaders of Egypt, were dragging themselves along with their God, the terrible Seth or Sutcoh, assimilated by the Egyptians at Typhon, whose cartouches are broken on all the monuments of the Delta.

Lamek's family even seems to reproduce in a New cycle: The Three Sons of Adam. Jabel is the father of the pastors. Jubal, the Carthaginian Eshmun, whose temple dominates from the high of the Byrsa the ports and the seas, invents the music. The evil genius reappears with his name, under the features of Tubal-cain, god of weapons and war.

Noah partakes of both Dionysus and the god and king Xixuthrus, the Chaldean Deucalion, whose story may well have to serve as a role model for him.

Finally, three gigantic figures crown this pyramid mide supported by God himself: Shem (the Most High or Chijoun of Saturn), Ham (the Burning Baal-Hamman of Tyre and Apollo (Chômé of Babylon), and Jehoshaphat, whose The Aryan air defies comparison and who would perhaps be the Bel-Jao, as in the mystical hymns of Greece,

(I) Phjlostbatb, Vit. Apoll., IV, 25, VlII, 9; Clement of Alexandria, Stromal., I, chap. 15, §70.

OF SEMITIC GROUP 4?

The mythology of Sanchoniath would fit the Bible more closely near as one would generally hear it.

From Noah onwards, the genesis enters a phase where the Mythology gives way to symbol. It is now nothing more than a of these idylls placed by all peoples at the head of their story, one of those refreshing tales where duit, in all its details and with the most imperturbable contlanee, the life and death of heroes.

In those heroic times, a minimal distance separated Gods and humans. Jupiter sits at the summit of the handled by a simple prerogative, and Abraham, the intimate of Jehovah, himself a God, with his Sarah, as his Drahma, namesake, companion of the goddess Sarnsvati.

Image and successor of the Bel, Abram crosses the Tigris and introduced the Semitic horde into the plains of the lower Asia. The Arabs call him the High Father, whose statue The infernal throne in the Kaaba until Muhammad. Syria They adore him; the Persians mistake him for Zoroaster and the Phae-Nicie, in accordance with the Bible, conceives of the father of the Hebrews in the guise of Kronos-Israel, the murderer of his son Jehud.

The mind rests, however faintly, on the legend of Isaac and of Rebecca, one of the most graceful wrecks of the imagination Arab, when here is the genius of cunning, the father of the twelve and symbolic tribes. The Jewish Hercules has just put the final touch to the nation, under the dual guise of the Archal Phoenician. Initially subject to evil principles, Esau, the Samuel of the rabbis, crawling, full of baseness and prayers; Then, wrestling with El Saturne, the great God himself, he He withdraws victorious, and takes the title of Israel (1) (victor d'El).

Thus, the identity of the Semitic and biblical pieces.

Perhaps I became more attached to these than was fair.

(I) The son of Alcmene and the son of Rebecca are two men thigh in this fight. The coincidence is a singular hand.

■18 CHARACTERS OKSERAL'X IH' SEMITIC UROUPE

antique pieces; but they are to me like the first
First stutters of science.

She was then wrapped in the swaddling clothes of religion which later nearly suffocated her. Now she has deployed Its wings are pushed away, and it kicks the impure chrysalis away.
plunges into infinity and, bringing back worlds and the armful,
She said to her unworthy adversary: "Go away, we have no
I don't need you anymore. >•

The spirit (by which I mean the sublime property of matter)
(and not the haughtiness of spiritualists), the spirit has finally triumphed over theological monsters. The scalpel of criticism tique met h nu ces ficelles que la peur et ignoranceco transformed into heavy chains. We arrive at this core Scriptures compared by Bruno Bauër to pure zero.
Finally 1

TABLE OF RELIGIOUS PERIODS

OF THE JEWISH PEOPLE

FIRST PERIOD

FROM THE CREATION OF THE WORLD UNTIL THE 16TH CENTURY
BEFORE CHRIST, ACCORDING TO THE ORTHODOX

A fabulous period in which legendary figures will be placed daires, Noah, Shem, Chain and Japheth, Abraham, Jacob and his twelve sons, Moses, etc.

No certainty, nor any serious details.

SECOND PERIOD

HISTORY. – SINCE THE 16TH CENTURY BC
UNTIL THE END OF THE 9TH CENTURY

The Cult of Baal–Moloch–Jehovah, by Vorgie and human sacrifices.

the Orthodox.

Individual dictatorship of the Judges or Sophetime.

has

00 CHARACTERS OKNKRAL'X

Centralization of all the tribes, under the priest Hêli.
towards I lîN), *

Samuel, 1112-1080.

Loyalty.

Saul. 1080-1040.

David, 1040-1001.

Alliance avoo les peuples molochistos de Tyr.

Solomon, 1001-962.

Confusion of the Raolochist temple of Jehovah, by Tyrian workers.

Separation of the ten tribes.

962.

Kingdom of Israel, Cult of Moloch

Kingdom of Judah,

in Bethel. cl

in Jenisalem.

Jeroboam, 961-943.

Robam, 962-946.

Nadab, 943-942.

Abram, 946-944.

Raasa, 942-919.

Ela, 919–918.

Josaphat, 994–880.

Zambri, 918.

Joram, 880–876.

Amri, 918–907.

Ochosias, 876.

Ahab, 907–888. Elijah and Elisha

Athalie, 876–870.

Ochosias, 888–887, prophesy.

Joas, 870–831.

Joram, 887–870. Fight of Moloch–

Amazias, 831–803.

Jehu, 876–848. National Jehovah

Joacham, 848–832, against the Baals

Joas, 832–817. from Phoenicia imported by Jezebel.

SEMITIC GROUP

51

THIRD PERIOD

The struggle of the reforming prophets against the cult Jehovah's Molochist.

Jeroboam II, First Appearance

1 Ozias,

817–766.

Assyrians

Amos,

803–752.

Zacharie, on the Jewish stage

Osée,

Jonathan,

766–765.

around 760.

Michêe,

755–737.

Sellum,

Obadiah, ^

i Achaz,

765.

Joel, Isaiah, |

737–723.

Manahem,

prophesy.

Hezekiah,

765–754.

!

723–694.

Phaceia,

First

754–753.

attempt

Phacea,

of 753–726.

reform

Osée,

-

of the cult

726–713.

Molochist

Destruction of the

of

kingdom of Israel

Jehovah.

by the Assyrians,

718.

Kingdom of Judah alone.

Molochist cult.

Manasses, 094-640.

Amon, 640-639.

Josiah, 639-0)9.

OKXRR AUX CHARACTERS

52'

Reforma do Jasias, with the aid of the prophet Jeremiah, 629,

Destruction of the idols. First appearance and so-called discovery of a new law of Jehovah for the needs of the cause.

An immediate return to the Molochist cult, under the successor of Josiah, Solim or Joachas.

609-608.

Joachim, 608-598,

The capture of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar.

606.

Beginning of captivity.

606-536.

Jeconiah, 598-597.

Second siege of Jerusalem.

Transportation of Jeconiah and ten thousand Jews, among which Ezekiel, in Babylon.

Sedecias, 597–587.

Third siege and ruin of Jerusalem.

The end of the kingdom of Judah.

587.

Destruction of the idols of Baal–Moloch–Jehovah, by the Assyrians, aided by Jeremiah.

New transportation to Babylon.

Captivity.

OF THE SEMITIC GROUP

53

FOURTH PERIOD

Writing of the Peuiateuque. – Triumph of the human cult of Jehovah. – Constitution of your Jewish nationality.

Ezekiel and Daniel, 587–536.

Cyrus's edict which allows the Jews to return and ends captivity.

538.

First return of the Jews under Zerubbabel.

Reconstruction of the Temple.

536–520.

Zechariah and Haggai prophesied.

New edict of Artaxerxes, and Second return under Ezra and Nehemiah.

458 and 454.

A general reform of all holy books,

Translation of the ancient script.

Final redaction of the Pentateuch, and Defense of marriages with foreigners.

Jewish nationality, according to the so-called Law of Moses, is constituted killed.

452.

Malachi and Ezra prophesy.

JH

GENERAL CHARACTERISTICS

FIFTH ERA

The struggle of Judaism against the Hellenism of the successors of Alexander.

The Maccabees, etc.

PART TWO

Jehovah, Moloch of Israel.

CHAPTER ONE

Historical.

When it comes to the Bible, one must expect & all the mystifications, and the expectation is often exceeded.

The colossal deception that concerns us today is neither the least curious nor the least difficult to unravel.
First. It has the sanction of centuries and has reigned for two thousand years in every chair and in every mind. She is accepted without question as a historical dogma by

So much consideration, they could not shake this chain and believe They simply refer to the myths invented by Ezra.
sanction this audacious fable that Israel, alone among all the Semitic peoples, from the most remote times, adored, by special privilege, the one and only Punic. All these Skeptics, with a touchy sensibility, swallow it without batting an eye.
the God 4' Abraham, of Isaac and of Jacob, the legislation of Moses and the monotheistic path traced by Israel through the ages.

Nothing could be further from the truth than these beliefs. Not that I blame them.
the motives that inspired them, the spirit that animated their

:>«

iAimvair

around'", they watched over the wolf, the naked nation, the most
"We will read who has ever dishonored humanity and who had not Not the average choice. But what was useful for... weak brains of naked cannibals should not hinder the cri-
Tick. Its sole aim is the truth.

(Ju'on no is therefore not surprised to find no point in finding a beginning do co rapide exposé lo lVntatouquo. I<o collection tout moderne Hebrew legislation is not in its rightful place at the head of the Hebrew canon ot no vient logicaliquoraont qu'npres los Judges, les Unis ot Es Iras qui est oortainomont son premier éditeur.
All the details and circumstantial descriptions that fill-are VKi mto ot the Nombivs, therefore have no effect on us criteria nor historical importance. It's a re-read novel.
pure and simple. Their surroundings did not propose anything.
iiu rosto, to write the history, but to give and prescribe humanitarian actions, as unsympathetic as they are foreign to Jewish populace, the attraction and the outrage of ancient dogmas.

Indeed, if, as we will prove abundantly, the
Not Jehovah, the one God, and the law of Molso are two im-
all modified ports, borrowed from civilizations
do la llauto-Asio par dos juifs du vi° siècle avant Jésus-Christ, what then is the old Jehovah repudiated by the new?
calf, the ancient institute that the so-called lot do Molso had for but to destroy and replace i We will respond boldly ment: Moloch and Molochism, the cult of the orgy and of human victims, the only normal and traditional cult of the like Mabug and Jerusalem.

It's a real shame, given the many beautiful stories that... resolutely elaborate and for all the illusions that reside there are grafted, but the Jehovah of our poets and of our prayers, the God of Isaiah and of M. de Lamartine is only a Moloch defrocked. Moloch lived and acted until his captivity.
speed. Moloch was his name. Moloch presided over all the debauchery and devouring the roasted flesh of small children. The Renegade is so identified with these odious titles that,

ME.tU'll h'|SI!Ai;l.

after his conversion, U no put «'on débarras ot, force of habit I spread out in the middle of Leviticus and in the Prophets (1), eèto & coast with the most powerful defenses* lontes dn piler nu llntl or nu Molaah. In nunneo dut etra very few snisissnblo nu beginning, so much kinship and of relations between all our divine words. And I ask him to men of good faith, what a difference against the Self gneur (Daminus) of Christians, lo Soigneur (Html) and lo Koi (Moleoh) do Channan ot lo Healer (Adonai) of the Jews Orthodox? A simple quarrel over words. By an anonymous person It's a rather strange lie, oh Jehovah, I'm puritanical about the epithet, it was prondro lo title d'une divinité equivocale et partage encore today, the ineffable substantive of Adonai with Adonis Thammuz do Byblos (2).

His name, proprio do Jehovah, escapes us; we must...
to recognize, in any etymology, the Jewish apologists or Christians can triumph over them, he is their niso. Lo vaguo ot
The unknown are their undisputed domains. But they do not per will suaderont personno. Vainomont their fantastic Moiso does he give h the fierce idol the etyinologio do Jno-L'/m!-.SYv-Ehiè: "I am the one who is or who will be"; that's too much philosophical and too beautiful for us not to come to Uabylone.

t)uo the Jewish reformers, for scrupulous one makes of ety-mologies, whether they wished, after or during the Captivity, to bring Joo closer to Jehovah and to confound their Moloch roughed out with the luminous etro of the Persians; that in their turn your Church Fathers, those who escaped from Platonic schools, enthusiastically greeted the Master's beloved entity, I
He finds nothing wrong with it. But it could not be proven up to this point, by what sleight of hand did Jehovah come from Jao?

towards. 32 and chap. XXV, verses. 18 – Psalm X., Secundum Hebræos, verse 10, etc. – Hosea says, chapter 1, verse 16 ff. – Then will come the day when Judea will call me her husband, and no longer Bual.

(2) See Appendix F on the relationship between Adonis and Jehovah.

&X •

Salvador lu tire d'.lnvi (I am) who, he read, no prononait Orra, Kwald Ut stubbornly î "Lo Plou Jahvo. » li'autvo pnrt, Adonis. The namesake of Jehovah, porto nn title quite, vague and rather unexplained back (the nas. We would do and we have done Folio islands of all these comments and hypotheses, without y to join ours, Nights we will stop short At the etymology do Uaumor(l), in accordance with the pre-existing conditions and the notes of the God: Hum, J/mra, the Deslruotian, greetings to Molac/b Jchova/i, to the savage liai tic the Destruction.

Because not only did the Israeli God carry the title back binding and back Moloclis, his brothers, but he shared their sinister rites. The so-called sacred history has cast its veil A demi sur cotte nffrouso réalité et accuser Ūaal-Moloeh. Ihual-Midmdi until the captivity, it is Jehovah. Until cotto era, that is to say up to the 5th century BC Christ, in the law of Molouh-Jehuvuh was murder; his alliance, the annual and regular gergomont back firstborns, not to mention the other victims. Kzéchiol lu déuluro caté- Gorically. Co is, I think, neither an ntliéo nor a libre thinker, so that his testimony was rejected. "Because they had not, said Jehovah, carried out my judgments, but "reprobated my precepts and violated my subbaths, and that "Their eyes were turned towards the idols of their "Fathers, then, I too gave them pre- "Copts that were not good and judgments in the- "which they should not live. And I have defiled them in "Their gifts, when they offered me the firstborn children" "of the vulva, because of their sins, and they will know that "I am Jehovah (2)."

This precept, which was not good, has left its mark even... in the Pentateuch, oh it is found disguised as a silver tithe and linked to a plague in Egypt.

Already the Jehovah of Numbers declares, twice and

(1) Dacmkh, edited Ewwieck. Quesi-ee y«e Ai Bible?

(2) Ezekiel, chapter XX, verse 25.

in a rather suspicious way, having prayed to the Levites, the piano backs of firstborns (1),

But here is the law of death and of onningo dau i tauta non dreadful purity:

"You will give me the first 11 A to you all. You will have strength."

"Do the same for the law, light and here sheep, that he" vsle seven

"days year In mt't'o and In nie le, rendres le Ituilihna (2)."

And in the Meilique (:t); "Everything that has been offered by » a consecrated Itommo ot \ Jehovah » ie his rnohitem point,

"He omitted /hmlm nemmircment that he die,"

The reformists have the ability to follow these pieces
formalins of a buyback rate for firstborn law do rimmo ot do l'iluo.... Thank you for the assimilation. But it is evident that this redemption, unknown to the ancient Ages, was condemned throughout the nation up to the 6th century, it is a whole revolution solution.

Before that time, the child or the Alton was, naked at the end of eight days, thrown into the law, he was devoured by the Moloclt-Jehovah, who, even among reformist laws, preserved his aspect do îlnmmo dévoranto (1). •< Qui d'ontro vous, s'écrite
"Isaiah would like Rostor near Doco, mad devouring Otdomou-" » ror daus the eternal furnace (. 1). 0 The metal furnace Isaio's physique is a mystical cūiraèro that the painter strives to make it frightening and, at its core, poses quite a challenge.
Innocently, for the terrible. I wouldn't say the same about the furnace, less eternal and more realistic, of his adversaries where the purest blood had been swallowed up for two centuries of Israel.

C'ost with dreadful cotte idol continually

(I) Numbers, chap. III, von. 12 and chap. VIII, vars. 10.

(?) Exodus, chapter XXII, verse 29.

(3) Leoitic, chap. XXVII, verse 29. – See below the critique of all the texts, in the chapter of the PenUteuca.

(4) Genesis, chapter 15, verse 22.– Deuteronomy, chapter 4, verses 24 and
Yes. – Exodus, chap. XXIV, psalm XL.1X, verse. 2.– Jkbbkjiik, chap. V, towards. 14, chap. XXII, verses. 9. – Hais, lib. 111, chap. XIX, verse 11, etc., heated In Idano, column of smoke the day and do fou lu night, that In hor-lo of fate emerged around the sixteenth century we Cannnn. Lo Moloooh-Jehovah has already provided for a whole Molillior of idols. Have you made me sacrifices?

"Jehovah, laying forty-one in the desert, house » of Israel, says Jehovah of the prophet Amos refusing to do so "Will we recognize in the burning image of the first Ages?"
No, you were wearing the tonto of Moloeli ot lo Kijun, vostro
"idolo, l'étolo do vostro Dieu que vous vous avait coulée-" »> tionnéo (1). »

l)o toute évidonoo, Amos ignora les saints histoires made after the fact on the pramonado mornlo of the fate ot we see gifts lo Jehovah of the taliornaclo ot do the ark that a repulsive Molouh. In rovancho, he enumerated the interesting objects on which the Ilihlo no nous donno
not a single detail: the Kijun, column of the figured Saturn on Atlas or buttress "ta Ciel ot do la Terra, (Solomon
He raised yet another do cos Kijun of brass A la porto do son temple (2) ot the Star of Moloch, probable smur back stars of Astarte preserved in the temples of Tyre).

And this tradition of Amos, who ranvorso with a stroke of plumo the scaffolding of Pontatouquo, there is not a leak isolated in history. Ello survived, or despite all efforts, in Jerusalem, have been perpetuated in such a way
ment iudepondonte et originalo, que saint Étienne, du temps of the Apostles, reiterates the accusation in other terms and substitutes the Arab idol Ramphan for the Kijun, a simple variant of Saturn (3).

For anyone who has penetrated the Semitic instinct, there is no doubt that one has not been sacrificed to the dark Baal, the destruction one part of the conquered peoples, but not all of these peoples mass, as the editors have an interest in making us believe.
reformist authors, also great mass murderers in painting

(Il Amos, chap. V, verse 25.

(2) See more las.

fi) Acts of the Apostles, chapter VII, verse 42.

that they were in reality. They believed, "veo "os furious blows, a feather, erecting an insurmountable barrier between Israel and its neighbors, idolaters and terrifying the Moluccas

that two waves and its dress in the Testament as a scarecrow A Mnlnoit. It is not mnliaureusomently so do memo of the red stream of blood which, for two centuries
at least, n Flooded the awful idol Jehuviquu.

Because this wretched nation was so resistant to any idea of humanity that the Jehovah of the Prophets wants to conquer
"Having too bloody a rival, he is forced to surround himself with a artificial horror, to attribute to itself all the plagues and to appear to be more infinite and more defiled than its ancient image.
They were harvested by the sword and dragged into slavery.
vage, "after seeing their village in Ilanuno and their idols on powder, which the Jews so subdued from the war lasso naked Jehovah reformed. They believed him to be the author of the terrifying cotto.
table catastrophe ot lo sacrèrent Dieu 4 co titre. Il ne déra-cina Molocli qu'4 force do furies. Lu terreur do Jehovah Allouai was for this time the beginning of wisdom.

This is the religious reason for these spectacular massacres.
generously granted 4 for the building up of the Jewish people, while that they were taking away from him, not only the practice, but even the
It is necessary, according to all probability, strong to reduce the extermination of the Canaanite.
Joshua and the Judges already painfully lay out a rather long list complete with exceptions and attribute 4 of these weaknesses cut all the misfortunes of the future. Even without cos somewhat forced admissions, the incorporation of the vanquished people is part of every step in the sharing of the country, on the other side of the conquest and settlement of the victorious people.

If blood was shed, and I believe it was, it was a holocaust & Moloch-Jehovah and not an extermination of idolaters driven by anti-Molochist zeal, as the insinuates Bible. Everyone was a Molochist then, Israel too.
although Moab or Amroon. Ghillany. Daumer, Movers and Longorko (1) all recognize "no period continua oft In

The religion of the Canaanites and the Hebrews is identical, Honnn lui-mùmo xo rallia A cotto opinion nvoo an manner elusive: <■ related lv>itmjuo patriarcimlo, los Abrnhamidox
"They accept the lions considered sacred, the oomino
"trees, springs, mountains, etc., used by the Ghanaians" » betyls or bnth-ol (5*), » Why not also lo Motooh ot
In Mnlnoiiixmo? G'ost quo M. Renan wrote his work
Semitic for the purpose of serving the Institute, but not for learning Porsonno. He has succeeded amply.

To make people believe in the age-old horror of Israel against "Neighbors, little ones, memo religion, memo language and memo"

Judges, so compromising in their half-revelations. Go collection of old national poems, composed, or completely bare less expurgated than the Ishra, rounding out the aspect of Israel quite well after his invasion of Palestine. Each tribe, each village, Each family there lives its own existence, governed by its elders and its chiefs, worshipping its Hanls and Molochs private, its woods, springs and sacred mountains. Often divided
In the midst of violent conflict, the tribes seem united under Héli around the archer who then makes his first appearance rition and resides in Silo near an aschera. We know of no, of the
There remains no more system of laws than of regular priesthood.
to link. The priests have neither hierarchy nor power, and do not think They hardly feel the privilege of Aaron. They join the ranks of a few families around the idols and live by sacrifice spells and oracles. Human victims regularly immolate themselves.
liably and the tragic legend of the Levite of Ephraim renders,
in all its murderous fury, the frenzy of debauchery religious women of Israel. The raid is carried out not only by

(1) Dauraer at (Jhillany, in What is the Bible? by Ewerbeek; Movbbs, Die Phœnisier, t. I", p. 8 and 9j Lengerke, Kanaan, p. 837 et8uiv.

(2) Renan, General History and Comparative System of Semitic Languages ticks.

MOMa'li l»'lSti.u:i.

ot

people to people. But from hourgado to bourgade, as
"Even today, apart from the restless Uruzos tribes, dos Mutualis ot dos Maroni tas. Touted* cos pouplados sn recognizing lords by race and by religion, which no los prevents him from playing the nastiest tricks; ot
Israel did not hesitate to ally itself with them through marriages.

That's the general idea. From time to time, when...
Paya suffered under the yoke of Anmloc, of the Median or of the Philistines, a liomrna se mot à la tête du peuple ou il'unu tribu et retains power until his death. That is the sufficient Carthage.
Ginois, the Judge, dictator by right of public safety. !<o sou-
The coming of these liberators lived on in national songs.
the splendors of a tribe, collected and embodied in a particular era Quite modern. Jeplité. rimmolntour "lu sa llllo, est lo héros Galaad; Deborah, the prephostess or memo the goddess
"I read Nurd(l); while Samson, the first Nosirô or Naza-

He locked up his twelve labors, the exploits of several warriors.

Let us not forget the greatest of all these suffètos, the van-queur of the Madinnitos and the glorious Messiah of the llaal, of which he Porto Haut Lo Nom, and to which he erects his great golden statue of the weight of seventeen conts siclos, Gédéon Jérobbaal (2). Lo pious scribe who put end to end, distorting these ancient legends, must have been somewhat scandalized ot do la golden statue (it) and the title do Jerobbaal whose meaning is clear. God inspired him with the glorious misinterpretation that transforms the victory of Baal in his defeat. According to this Jesuitical version, disagreeing with the etymology and the facts, Gideon

(1) The prophetess Deborah delivers "the oracles under the palm tree of Bithel" which bears his name, chapter IV of Judges, verse 5. Now, this chcoc is precise the one in which Deborah, nurse of Kebecca, was buried (Genesis), chapter 35, verse 8. This coincidence shows that it is of a religious tradition and not at all of history.

(?) Nickname of the Phoenician Hercules, the champion of Baal, the victor of Baal.

(U) Judges, chap. VIII, verse 27.

IG .h:iiovaii

would have taken his title, after having mined on pieces an altar of Huai (1). Singular prelude, one will agree, h dos érec- The statues are torn down! The altars of the gods are rarely destroyed. which was then cast in gold or bronze. The compilers The judges, having caught him, punished Gideon's idolatry. on the back of his doseondanoo, which is miserably exterminating itself, But what osteo that cola proves for the sons not do Jôrob-Baul and the golden slatuo?

It is impossible, moreover, to discern in the biblical details ques si cotte idol était élevé & Hnnl-Jehovah ou il quelque other. For, strangely enough, the Israelites of these first Time seems to make no difference between Jehovah and Jehovah and his colleagues. It seems that Cotto, such a superb idol, what Centuries later, it has not yet obtained primacy nor She holds the exclusive position of national idol. She is a central figure. with the asoherins or sacred trees (2), the liaal-ltérith of the ancient city of Sichoïn (), the great Ilaal of Gideon and the small private liaals, such as those of Michos. She even speaks of the god with unusual politeness back Ammonites by the mouth of Jephthah (4): "What your "God Chaos possesses what is not rightfully yours? Do

"in our possession." Jehovah should have reasoned this way.
by invading Canaan. And Clamos could have... him to reply. But, since he did nothing about it, we repair this inconceivable oversight.

It was all the easier, at that time, to confuse all these gods of the same family, that the fact still happens to the prophets, who are usually so sensitive on the matter
Isaiah, liaal-Moloch, greets his Jehovah with the incendiary title

(!) Judges, chap. VI, vers. ifi.

(2) Judges, chapter IX, verse 6.

(3) Judges, chap. IX, verse 46. Baal-Berith is the lord of Al-alliance. And since Shechem is marked as a Levitical city, it was perhaps one of the forms of Jehovah.

(4) Judges, chapter XI, verse 24.

Mol, «ntl |i'|K|UKI,

Im

of the Arab Urotal, Ariol, the Lion and the Fire of God" who waved his torches on the medals of Uabbuth: "Misfortune » In Ariol, the villa of Ariel, Jerusalem 1 (1) », ut Èzéchkd no found for "one autol paciltquu quo lo nom "the one furnace homollile of Moab (d). Jeremiah himself, the pure Jeremiah, ask » why did the healer Molchom invade the "country of lînd (.!)", so much kinship still existed at of memory" among all" these" Moloehs.

AIDS» prophets, implacable enemies of savagery ohann-neon, arrived A to mix thus your case Gods, To stronger (reason: the early Israelites) Jehovah did not distinguish himself
First, we have nothing to do with the crowd of people and we have a serious breakthrough.
it was during the time of Ilêli, when power came to the country of Ephraim, general quarter of idolatry and of priests until the Captivity. It is then that the first once the ark of the covenant was the great idol of the god Moloch-Jehovah who sits enthroned over the cherubim.

First, what cherubs, of whom he is so concerned?

The wind spoke, and if so, devoid of explanations in the lliblo? Nothing less than the joulllus and rosy poupards of our paintings of the church. Ezekiel depicts them with four faces: of a four legs of a young bull, the body all covered strewn with eyes (4). Philo briefly calls them los imagos winged, ot Josèplie, quite pleasant. At times, assures that No man can have any idea of it (5). It's done more quickly. We brought Ezekiel's description closer to the passage in San-choniaton (6): at Taaut Ht an image of Kronos where he placed

"Eyes and wings to express omniscience and the

(1) Isaiah, chapter XXIX.— Paralipomena, chapter XI, verse 22.— Kings, book. II, chap. XXIII, verses. 20.

(2) Ezekiel, chapter XLIII, verse 15.

(3) Jebemiah, chapter XUX, verse 1, ilelchom (our King) is the God national of the Amtnonites.

(4) Ezekiel, chapter 1".

(5) JnsÈPBS, Jewish Antiquities. Book XXXVI, g 8,3.

(0) EusttiE, Preparation éeangéHiue, book I", g 10.

7

"Majesty of the Moloeli." (Test do c" side that must be roohor)
Dear libation of these fantastic beings, they will not go.
(/rtibinx or griffons dos raeos nryonnos totaloiuont incon-Nude Semites before In Captivity. Not that I deny a mixture |mssililo. but late, hence the Phoenician conception
ot do l'idée persiquo, tlont lo symbolisme animal déteint already on Zechiel. But the word t hi't'iih so translates all naturollcmont by Imml's ut it is more \ raisomldaldo tlo see tlaus lt*s gentle companions of the Jùltovuli gentle monsters inolocltistus â têtù do ImuuI. Salomon, l'allié dos Phoeniciens ut lo roi molochisto by oxcolloncu, drawing tics cherubs on each wall of the Temple and they erect gentle of colossal size (1),

L*Arche, moreover, accempagoumont obliged do toutes cos religions, contains throughout the Orient the statue of the lliou and the relics of the immolated. Lo Livre dos Hois assuro nous assuro, avec a sort of suspicious innocence, which contained only gentle tables, stone island (ü). Moses had also had it placed there.
of the manna and Aaron's staff (•!). 11 It is true that I do not
I, for one, hardly believe in manna and Aaron's staff.
no more so than the stone tables, a probable metaphor
The island, the double sex idol of Jehovah (-1). The terms of the üildu: "Jehovah is sitting on the ark... Jehovah pierces on "The cherubim... The ark is Jehovah's footstool."

do sa boîte on solemn occasions. The expression
"The face of Adona'i" applies equally to the arehoqu'à
the altar, called holocausts, these two revered pieces of furniture of the year religion. Under Jléli, during the unfortunate war against the Philistines, Israel raises howls of enthusiasm at seeing Jehovah enter his "camp"
standing above the cherubs (5), which, incidentally,

(1) Kings, book 111, chapter VI, verse 23.

(2) /times, book Ul, chapter VU!, verse 9.

(3) Exodus, chapter XVI, verse 33.

(4) Votka, Die Religion der allen Testament, t.1", p. 321.

(5> /times, book I*', chapter IV, verse 3.

. li'isu.VHI,

H7

no 1'eropéohô no o*suvor nne complete defeat and abandonment to give one's idol into the hands of the one who is a numismatist. In another...
During the war, King Saiti ordered Acliias to consult the ark do Jehovah like Lo Dion himself (1). And ca caisson anorô, dragged by oxen, the animal of Molooh, exercises a inHuonoe is so satanic about everything surrounding him, that The Philistines are eager to purge their soil. Dos Uothsamitos, who, in Uéritout, are struck in their turn for having plunged an impious gaze into the sacred depths of the goullro(si).
On the day of triumph, under David, when in the middle of all the eccentricities of the Semitic orgy, the arelio Mount A Sion, newly conquered To his idol, this machine do mort tuo onoro lo Hdèlo Usa, qui avait extensible his profane hand to support him. It is naked to the point that David him-mômo, a king to shear, doesn't dare take him do suiteo and the
It will still be three months at Obodedom in Goth.

If this murderous coffin had contained only the tables...
Moses and Orthodox staffs, one would hardly be able to explain the cries of fury and the execrations of the first prophets Su vue sanguinairo (.!'), Co n'est qu'npres la destruction of the Temple and the idols by the Assyrians, when,
Having vanished into ruin, it no longer posed any danger.
seriously, that the Jewish reformers decided to uncor to incorporate into their optimistic history the ancient envelope of

The story of Michas, lost, we know not how, in the Judges, and without rhyme or connection with what precedes it and with what follows, gives the final touch to this Baalism disordered from the earliest periods. The mother of Michas, of the tribe of Ephraim, commissions a worker, for two hundred shekels of silver, a statue of Jehovah and another bronze idol. Michas places them in a chapel with a

(1) King", tiv. I", chap. XIV, verse 18.

(2) Kings, book. I n , chap, VI at VII

(4) Jeremiah, chapter 11, verses 14 and 24; chap. IV, verse 2.

iis

IMTOYA

epilod ot other theraphim (1) and institutes a priest on an island his sons. Later, he added to him a member of the tribe of Aida (eo who, by the way, demolishes the hypothesis of a tribe priestly service of Levi), with wages of ten siolos of silver, with He lived and he wore clothes. This small business prospered, when one fine day, five emissaries from the tribe of Dan, on in search of adventure, they will stay at Michasot's place and consult his idol. "Go in peace," replies this Jehovah, "Adonai "Protect your lanes and your road," they said, entering into... Lais, a Phoenician trading and open city, in inspect the strong and the weak and return to their tribe will report on this entire mission. An expedition is decided. Six of these buccaneers return to Michas's and They removed, despite her cries, her idols and her Levite. Lais ost surprise, delivered to the flames; its inhabitants, passed naked, son of the sword. Then these bandits settled on the smoking ruins They solemnly install the idols there, and the priest... The tribe of Dan worshipped this Jehovah, according to the Judges, until the plays on his captivity, which was probably, whatever anyone says Mr. do Sncy, The Babylonian Captivity (2). 11 is far from this striking reality in the hazy novel of Penta-touque.

The disadvantages of such anarchy and the need for a energetic centralization is being felt, particularly when the power with Hélot Samuel arrives in the country back priests. Israel appoints a king to resist the Philistines of Syria and Phoenicia. The cult until then simply

The bestial Moloch will surround itself with all the refinements of Tyrian civilization, and the Semitic destiny of Hebrews will reach its peak.

The first Jewish king, Saul, led a very bad marriage

(1) Thcraphim means image and statue. Véphad designates alternatively the idol of Jehovah or the sacrificial robe of the high priest.

(2) See for all details, and in full, chapters XVII and XVII Judges.

with the priests whom he wished to supplant, Samuel, we par
In particular, he never forgave him. It is permissible to suppose that only the man of warriors followed, only reluctantly in the path of these atrocities Samuel, the man behind the priests.
Such, at least, is the sound of the scene in King Agag. Saul, marching against the Amnléritos, vouo on c/uhvin to Jehovah everything that is from Anmleo, according to the somber formula: "Since "Man, woman, even the little children and" » 'Coux' which are still at your breast, up to the Eggs, to "Camels and donkeys (1)," But, after the victory, he spare the elite from the sheep and king Agag. the priest of Moloch rushes forth foaming at the mouth, 11 reproaches Sail in furious terms Disobedience and cutting half-bites Agag, "who was strong large (2) », technical detail, « in front of the Adonw dotlalgala », Undoubtedly an idol. This fleeting sentiment was fatal.
He Said. Neither his repeated avnneos nor his repentance until wanting to sacrifice his son Joimthas, victim of a cherom, no could soften the old Molocliiste, altered by human blood.
He crowned David, a condottiere as cunning as he was ferocious, David, the man of Moloch, the man of all passions and of all the crimes, which brought to Zion the ark of sacrifices somewhat neglected under Saiil (the Para/ipornhies admit it) (3) and did not shrink from the accomplishment of his cherms. Example: "Having brought out the inhabitants of "Rabbath-Ammon, he cut them with silks, passed
"On them were carts with iron wheels, the tailors..."
"pieces with knives and threw them into ovens at "bricks. That's how he treated all the cities of the Am-» monites (4). » Moloch-Jehovah could not refuse his ten-trains such a faithful servant.

David, even in the orthodox Bible, only moves with a full procession of idols. Already, when he flees the wrath of the

(1) Kings, book I, chapter XV, verse 3.

(3) aralipomeres, book. I", chap. XIII, verse 3.

(4) Kings, Book U, Chapter XII, verse 31,

7Ü

JKimv.Mi

King Saul, his wife Miehftl, word in no bed a thèraphiiu Rocouvort "one wig of goat hair <1), and, more Later, the priest Abiatliar brings him a nursing home marked with the Itiou .léhovali who gives him all his oracles. Does David want consult the healer, he says i\ Ahiathar î "Train the èplmd
"or the ephod," and the idol answers no," "Jehovah
h all the questions addressed to him (2), The Bible, Moreover, he took care to "the no-no" "longncr" the slightest detail on cos ephnds and these teraphim, including the humanized Jehovah of the
The prophet Hosea still speaks without disgust. He looks at memo as a calamity for Israel "to remain so for a long time" without "First, without sacrifice, without altar, without theraphiin and without"
» ephod (3). »

But the great idol of Jehovah-Moloch, carved in an oven naise, the brass nutol & tanreau horns, then resides with lo Tabornaclo û Gibeon, center chananeon and levitiquo at the times ot, what's more, perched on a do these high places that ana-
The prophets will discuss them (4). David left us one Realistic description in foundry pen: "Smoke gushed forth"
"From the nostrils of Jôï.ovah, a devouring fire crackled from his "Mouth. Red-hot coals were lit beneath him..."
"Before him shines a light that ignites coals of
b fire (5). b ()a Jehovah is simply a statue
A hollow metal object that is heated until white-hot over a good fire. 11
It's not difficult to guess what purpose is used to make people blush.
This is a hollow lolc. Were there only this single piece of evidence for
To attest to the worship of Daal-Moloch in Israel, there would be no doubt.
Not permitted. For this is not about so-called fires.

(1) links, liv. I", chap. XIX, verse 13.

(2) Kings, book I, chapter XZ XI, verse K).

(3) Hosea, chapter 1H, verse 4. See i»ur the list of biblical statues of the Jehovah, Yatka, Opuseulalum, t. I", p. 402 et seq.

(4) Paralipomenae, book. I, chap. XXI, verse. SU.

(5) Kings, Book II, Chapter XXII, verses 7 and 13. If some were found slight differences between translations of your Bible and your Yutgaie, which we This is not surprising. We follow, along with all scholars, not the Vulgate, which is faulty, but the German translation of de Wette.

Mttuiotl ll'tSUU'.t.

Tl

Gods smuggled into neighboring nations*, May of Jehovah, of Jehovah, the true God, "duration (mi-the holy King David who danced before the ark, (You are for this Jehovah heated with red coals* that the holy one i'«i would have composed these psalms sung today throughout Christendom, in Latin by Catholics, had vulgar language by the Protestants,

11 is & suppose that under David, this (places Moluehisto,
the red coals were often lit ot quo
The idol blazed from its mouth, devouring it.
Men sacrificed. The Book of Kings, in one of the things sinister escapes that allow us to rebuild the year-Cienno religion, narra on détail un sacrifice humaine du holy king.

Politics has as much to do part h oot act pio quo religion, and the victims were no less agreeable bles & David than to Moloch. They were the last descendants teeth of the mad King Saul. David had, however, sworn to him solemnly in the Enggadi desert to spare his race(l). We will see how an oath is taken.
Semitic.

Here is the account of the Virgin: Consulted about a famine which has tormented Israel for three years, the idol Jehovah, sudden
She was moved by Jhanaan's plight, but declared herself irritated by the cruelties.
committed by SaCd against Gabaon. What cruelties? The
The Bible, so hateful towards Saul, never uttered a word.
They appear just in time to explain the atrocious
King David's sacrifice. Nevertheless, David addresses to the Gibeonites, who answered him with these words significa tives: "Neus, we don't want your gold or your silver,
"But to Saul and his household. We do not want to go anywhere else."
"Not that a man should die in Israel." And David takes the seven descendants of Saul delivered them to the Gibeonites who crucify all seven of them on the Mount (the high place in

'lj liais, liv. P', chip. XXIV, vey. 23.

IKildVAU

question), and the mountains "before the fire of Jehovah".
first days of harvest (1),

We have read about the great Semitic creation, the saeri-flco do the cross, which does not ornpéelm pus lo sncrilico uni' lo Foolish, David knew the sweet species. O'ost \ co Jehovah, heated with red coals and surrounded by raw vegetables, what holy king, solon his titra inolochiste preserved nvoo sons ot legend modi II To the pure reformers, resolved to elovor uu Tomplo worthy of him. He had already bought it for cot offleo Tairo of the Jebusite Arovnn, whose name strongly recalls that of Aaron, the air of the MALocli Arovna, comrao called the Riblo (2), when death came, he was overtaken, he was trausmottro, he was oxécution do son dessein A son fils ot suocossour Salomon.

I,o Molncldsmo reaches his npngéo with Salomon, co worthy Dis do son père, l'assassin do son frère Adonios, l'allie dos Moloohistos do Tyr from whom he borrowed two architects
two workers to build the temple of his idol.

The original details of the editorial space could not be spared.
naked editor back Kings his confession shaded by an idolization vieillotto do Salomon séduit pur los fomiuos étrangères (3).
Everything in this tomplo parlo of the Moloch and its awful mysteries. First, 11 is built on the plan of the sanctuaries analogues of Atergatis & Mabug and Venus in Paphos. Her furniture made of cast bronze based on three models and by the workers of Tyre, its hollow horned altars, its vats, its limestone
drons, his pots, his forks, his bronze bits
-supported by massive oxen, her cherubs and her lions colossal bronze figures that are even found embossed on every wall of the Temple (4), everything recalls the bloody

(1) Liais, Book U, Chapter XXI. Solomon again sacrifices on the high place of Gibeon, which was the most important of all Israel," Kings, book 11, Chapter 1, line 4.

(2) Rais, book II, chapter XXIV, verse 15 et seq.

(3) Rais, book. 11!, chap. XI, worm". 5.

(4) Kings, Book 11, Chapter 6, verse 40, See the description of the Temple, Chapter VI and VU in their entirety.

Mtiuiült l>'|SIUi:|.

T.'!

kitchenware of the Molclerton typions mu earlhnginois.

The Temple of Zion has no day approx. Like its to entrust" to Tyre, he has before his port sweet bronze oolonnos surmounted by an ornamented ol d'uno Imuln capital, oit Chlllnny (1) sees gigantic phallic* eyes, ot iimn, avoo
Movors (1), do simple saturnian oolonnos, you're sweet Jehovah's Witnesses' Utilities bear Memo Fias Names, ooinnto dns porsonuages, f/une is, in proper terms, the Kijun (Jakun)
of Saturn; the other, lo lloax or Diou in his fury, that is, Jehovah under the double aspect of God binding and destructive (,'t). Gentle case. Idols are rospoctêos Josias' memo, the great iconoclast, and they disappear that at the Jerusalem prison, with the furniture of Tomplo.
Jehovah, the one God, himself recounts the adventure.
spoke without anger of singular symbols by the loop
of his prophet Jeremiah (4).

I.'usngo do cos marmites ot do .toute catto ferraille n'ost point diflicilo h dovinor. The books of the reformers themselves* memos, which retain the form while removing the content, will teach us. "We promised to bring all the
"Years in the house of Adonai, the first fruits of our tower,
"the first fruits of all the trees, the first
"born of our sons and our flocks, as it is written "in the law, and the firstborn of our oxen and of our
"sheep to offer them in the house of our God to "priests who serve there (5)." Leaving aside the era and the reforms imposed by Nehemiah, these are the terms same as the offering to Moloch. In the time of Ezra and Nehemiah, this presentation of the firstborn is no longer a mere formality. Under the judges David and Solomon, it was

(1) Ewebobek, What is the Bible? p. 228.

(i) Die Religion der Rhrenis-er, 11", El Oder Saturnus.

(3) Kings, book III, chapter VII, verses 15 and 41.

(4) Jeremiah, chap, XXVII, verse, il); Kings, book. IV, chap. XXV, verse 13.

(a) Nehemiah, chapter X, verses 35 and 36.

StilloVAII

Regular bed roiniso due to victims |ioui' élra slaughtered in front (l'iiluU) naked burned "milks in their depths, the great Passover Judaic.

And In snicro-saint tomb of Sulnmon no fut (ms smitomnnt un ulmttoir Humain, mais un hideeux liqinnni'. Io Jehovah sung H the pure classical universe romantic* is all H read times Moloeh do maurtro ot d'argio. Su grenade, lu puiumo d'amour do Uionyso, sous toutes les formas, so innrio in the tombolo at the cauldrons and at the lotteries of "hrouf"
Not printed until the rattan of the high priest.
around the tomplo extend the deaf United where the courts
sanes priestesses ot los gulllos impurs so livrent au croire(l).
The Asherah memo, cotto old companion of Jehovah since the Judges, trûno with him to Jusins in his sanc-tuaire ('i).

The arrogant Jehovah has not always witnessed severity of nuuurs that is attributed to him. His Song of Songs ticks, cotto priupôo dos bacchanulos isrnèlitos, already appears risky enough, despite the fact that they see it as a problem, one might think.
complaisant uni, lo dialoguo amoureux do Jésus-Christ ot do son Eglise. Jehovah, du rosto, no s'on tenue pas aux words. He too, at the example of his fellow Ayrieus brothers, was a phenomenon.
The Nicés possessed Kedosches or Thnmar exercising their heroic profession on the Temple forecourt. "Iléli learned "that his Alsations slept with the women who kept watch" » (obse>'vabant)k la porto du sanctuaire{:i). « Another passage Lost in the Pentateuch: "Posoléol Ht a bronze basin"
"Mirrors of the women who kept watch at the gate of the Ta-v bernacle (4). » Now, the Pentateuch cannot suffer a women, whether directly or indirectly, in the service of the Temple, and the ruthlessly outlawed. These women who beat their quarter (obscuring) at the door of the sanctuary, up to the

(1) Kings, book IV, chapter XXU, verse 4.

(2) Kings, book. IV, chap, XXIII, ver*. 7.

(3) Kings, book I*', chapter II, verse 22. – And Juyos, chapter XX, verse 33.

(4) Esxuli!, chap. XXIU, vera. 8,

Captivity, therefore, were Redashes or courtesans sacred; ot lo Deuteronomy l'oxpliqno jvwox clearly:

"You must not bring gifts to the house (on God)."

"Jehovah, according to some random source, the salary of one » prostitute or lo price of the dog. Cor lo cliion ot la prosti-
"tueo are also detestable nnx youx do (on Dion

» Jehovah (I), » Il on est do co((o (nrdivo defense oomino do the following; "You will no longer plant Asohera next to do
"Jehovah's (ÿ)." Ello no longer existed for Abrnlmm who planted the tainarisquo of Ueerschn, we invoke as for the Healer; for Ranc who raises one to you; for Joshua who plays the arch under the terebintllo of Sioliom; For SaniuiU, Snul, Salomon tui-mômo; fear all the ancient heroes

the prophets of Israel who held their assemblies or ron-dniont dos oracles à l'ombro do l'arbre sucré (11). K(,puisquo
we are currently observing the perfect record

Two sacred texts, let us cite yet another deconstruction that is of interest Solomon; "Tu nu foras (complexion of imago do scuipturo, ni do
"Ligurian of everything that is high in the sky, or low"
» on the torro, or who lives in the waters or under the torro(4)...

"If you make an altar of stone, do not build it

"with hewn stones. If – you curl a knife around it, > it is defiled (5). » So much so that Jehovah, reformed at a memory of the Monchist machines, it rattled everything that had a connection to bronze. What would Solomon, the pious Mulo–, have said?

If he had known what those people were like, so insensitive to the Greeks

nades, with bull heads and bronze altars, went

To count him among their Orthodox ranks?

(1) Deuteronomy, eba?. XX1U, verse 17.

(2) Deuteronomy, chap. XVI, verse. 21.–Itow, lib. IV, ch. XXII, vora.15.

(1) Genesis, chap. XIII, verses. 18; chap. XXI, verse. 31; chsp. XXVI, verse 25. – Jost'R, chap. XXIV, verse 26. – Judges, chap. IV, verse 5; chap. IX, verses. 6. – lias, book. 1", chap. XXII, verse 6; book 111,

Chapter XIU, verse 14, etc.

(4) Deuteronomy, chapter 5, verse 8. – Exodus, chapter 20, verse 4. – técitig0e, chap. XXVI, verses. I.

(n) Exodus, chapter XX, verse 24; chapter XXV11, verse 5,

?(J

Lu centralization «lu culto «lu Moloch à Jerusalem, wto of Huuto politics, the attachment of the memo, a blow read by the nation to the capital ot to the throne of David. Also, when the charges necessities for the maintenance of our court and the claims arrogant do .ludn had pushed the brother tribes to their limits their needy hands, the first concern of the dissident king, Jeroboam, is to cut the cable of elovor altar against altar. Redouboth for its new subjects the dangerous memories of a religious journey. In Jerusalem, he copied the idol of Zion. With a head do bull and on Ht pull a double that he pinched A Uethel and To Dan (1). These are the golden calves, in prudish pen back reformists who would like to swell in the bowels of 1% terrorists commit crimes against their own people. But they forget to cite for us the gold mine from which Israel drew its water in London do sa revolt against the taxes of Uohoam. Cos heu-
The great Temple's rivals were no more on or that the cherubim, the hollow altars and the idols do Solomon.

How, indeed, could one imagine that a people steeped do la loi dite do Moses ot façonné A celte harsh disciplino to bow, without a word, before simulacra of animals?
The memorable struggles of the Maccabees against the attempts Antiochus's works demonstrate the contrary. The Israelites Jeroboam's tribesmen returned to sacrifice their children to idols of Dan and Llethel, after a short stop near of the centralized Moloch of Jerusalem, because the Moloch was the age-old God of their race and that they had not never known any other. The return to the sacred sites of Bethel and of Dan, ancient seats of Moloch-Jehovahism, where they removed the memories and the altars of Abraham and doses children, was a new protest against the attempt unitary of the Davids and Solomons. Jeroboam only did to bring ancient sanctuaries back into fashion.

From then on, until the fall of the Somme and Jerusalem, the

- (I)llois, tiv. bed, chay. XL, vera. 27.

ME.OCII ll'(S)SAKI.

times t\ Dan, t\ Itôthel ut, as the Uiblo says, "suc all
"a high place and in the shade of every leafy tree," The Mothers
They vie for the honor of offering the fruit of their wombs naked Saturn, parricidal. A kind of emulation of carnage ensues.
by the petty kings of Israel and Judah; and, remarkably quable, before the 5th century, not a word, not an anathema,
Not a single prophet spoke out against this cult, a historical rite.
the ric, national and traditional Jewish culture until the confederacy
tion of Pontatouquo.

It is this horned Jehovah that the /.mon, the Mnnssôs ot
The Zedekiahs sacrificed their children; it is more than Jeliu
He immolated the priests of Tyr's rival, Ltaal. This is...
Jehovah-bull, whom Klie and Kliséu preached, and of whom Us
They reaffirmed the exclusive cult against imports "the Ahub's wife, Juzabol. All these fantasies of a struggle of the true God against foreign idols, with peri-Little turbulent times, they don't support the oxamou. If one On closer inspection, this pre-darnel brought by the simoom of neighboring nations abounds until the Capti-vité como un produit indigène du sol isruùlito. Je prends the galls or sacred pederasts, these ignoble monks of Mole-schism, whose destruction the prophets will pursue like vile vermin. Well, Asa, the first, is supposed to drive them away (1). However, he drove them away so little that Josa-
He in turn exterminated them (2);, and Jehoshaphat exterminated them so little that the role still falls to Josiah (3), and not for The last time. The same goes for the idols that are constantly being broken.
constantly reborn, and so intact & the fia that, except for the great bronze serpent executed by Hezekiah and Josiah
They are all there. The princes, to whom the Bible bestows the crown of piety, Solomon until his old age,

(t) Kings, book. lll, ehap. XV, clothes. 12.

(2) Kings, book 1U, chapter XXII, verse 47.

(3) Kings, fiv. IV, ehap. XXltt, verse. 7.

7m

4KI1MVAII

A su. Johnphnt, Joas, Jontham (1) all sacrificed or left sacrifice on the high places which were "the ancient the sanctuaries of Jehovah's Island (2). And, decisively, these places will cry out for destruction: Galgala, Uabaon, Hêthol, etc., the Judges, the Kings in their first books, Memorize Genesis, they offer them as their favorite dwellings of this Jehovah who, from the 8th to the 5th century, imperious oxigo* show their overthrow.

This Liaul-Meloch, quite a snotty fellow at first glance. Syrians or Arabs, became tenderly irritated at the arrival of the Uaal Tyrions of Jezabol, tlllo of Hivam. Kilo brought with her a series of Phoenician priests who cast a shadow on the Savage pontiffs of the brazen calves. That is the controversy. of Elio and Elisha, all directed centrally, the Gods of Tyrot for the account of the two voaux of Jeroboam. Jehu himself, the avenger of the Jehovah on Jezabol, and priests, and renowned for his piety towards the bronze calves (3) which were, until the destruction of Samaria, the Jehoiachin of Israel,

It was a struggle of races, of influences even, nothing else choso. She had her contro-comp h Jerusalem in the triumph momentary and the fall of AthaUc, the famous daughter of Joza-beautiful. It is at least singular, one will agree, of voiries Orthodox kings, such as the saint Joseph, married their son to fanatical Molochists, such as Athalie, and ally himself closely with secular kings, the Ahabites and their consorts. This single feature would be enough to ruin the entire structure. biblical and unmask the embarrassment of pious forgers of Ezra.

Lear's task was arduous: to glean princes from the orthodox mine. doxe in this mess of Molochists, in order to build a bridge

(1) Hais, li". 111, chap. 111, verses. 2 et seq.; UV. IV, chap. X, verse 29; book IV, chapter XII, verse 3; book IV, chapter XIV, verse 4; Chapter XV, verse 35, etc.

(2) Kings, book. 111, chap. III, verses. 2; UV. I", chap. XV, verse 21, etc.,

(3 Kings, book IV, chapter X, verse 29.

Miil.dt'll 1MSIUK1.

7)1

entre leur* rûfovmo* nt the fabulous drowned Moses hold the Ages. For they had sounded the reef where the broken ones were removed first prophets, where the positive traditions are missing, the strangeness of this ashamed MoloeU who denied without flinching

at all costs the gaps in their history, redo everything
 They took advantage of the past and the religion of the Hebrews.
 the dreadful interruption thrown into thoughts and memories Semitic peoples through captivity. The kings renowned for their conquests or memo by their piety Molochisto 4 Jehovah, the builders and re-builders of the Temple, the chambers pawns of the Ilaal-Jéhnvnh against the Ilaals of Tyre, were chosen to play both good and bad the role of utilities in Room 4 surprise moysiquo. By a strange illusion optically, the hated foreigner, a chnldèon and porso God settled in the house, while the old Jehovah-Moloch was the intruder who was given jotor 4 port wine. His cult secularism became infidelity and idolatry; abandonment by the Israelites of our traditional rites, a tour of beliefs of bears. Thus national pride was found interested and satisfied, and the Jews of the Maccabees were sucking themselves had them killed to the last man, a testament to the sanctity of Solomon or the zeal of Jehoshaphat who could not bear it.

For us, little sensitive to the motifs of Ezra and do Nehemio, the Baal-Moloch is, until the Captivity, the Jehovah regular, traditional and national of Israel.

Until the 20th century, he calmly enjoyed his ration.
 of small children and satiates his gaze with the exciting spectacle so many Semitic orgies. He had never heard of the laws of Moses, no more than giving human orders or peaceful. It was only at this time that Amos and Hosea rise up for the first time against the security atrocities laires ot affirm the disapproval unknown until then of Jehovah for the orgy and the massacre.

This bold initiative ushered in the heroic era of pro-phètes. EUo coincides with the appearance on the Ju- stage

J KII<J VA II

80

Unique Assyrian backs, fanatical iconoclasts, who wore in their camp the great sacred fire where they melt like wax the idols of nations (1). In contact with a more refined, the honor of the mortuary cult had invaded these elite jurors known as prophets. They do not they said that their courage to rise up resolutely against the neither the fear of torture, nor torture worse still, nor contempt and the disapproval of their compatriots, will not be able to push back these courageous melodramas. Amos, the first of his... blood the road where Isaiah and Jeremiah will embark. The Bible still preserves for us its answer to his executioner juridiquo, the priest of Llethel, Amazias, who forbade him to prophesy: "Jo no suis ni proplièto, ni (ils do pro- » phèto, but I lead to feed the oxen and I am fed with "Sycamore trees. Adonai took me when I was leading my "beasts," and he told me: "Go, speak like a prophet to the "People of Israel (2)."

The tactic of great men is perfect in its skill and diplomacy. Facing the prophets of Moloch, he orders committing murder in the name of Jehovah, they involve & their turn Jehovah to repudiate these burnings, to order The term "ot" threatened the unruly. Their inexhaustible verve, inspired by the most generous sentiments of the human soul, relentlessly attacked everything that, directly or indirectly, resembled milk the official cult of the iiaal-Moloch. The ark, this lair of charred bones and the infernal idol, the horns of altar-furnaces, which were sprinkled with the blood of firstborn children of Israel, the pig, that sacred animal of Moloch, the Sab-baths, Saturn's day, the Passahs or new moons, these cursed evenings where innocent blood flowed, all that paraphernalia, Rejuvenated by the Pentateuch, it is trampled and trampled underfoot. like the bloody and detestable apparatus of Moloch.

(1) links, liv. IV, chap. XIX, verses. 18.
(8) Amos, chap. VU.

ME, 00 11 K'iHUVKl.

81

Worn out, "I will break your orgies, your parties, your news"
» moons and your sabhaths (1). »

Amas: "Jo will visit Israel; I will visit its abominations."

"I will visit the altars on the island of Bethel. I will cut off their horns."
"and I will throw them to the ground (3),"

And Jeremiah: "The sin of Judah is written with a "iron pen and a diamond point. It is engraved on "the table of their hearts and on the horns of their altars (3)."

And further on: "Rovonoz, my apostate sons, I am your "Master. I will give you two pastors who please me."

"They will guide you intelligently, and no one will speak..."

"No more ark, no one will think about it anymore, no one will..."

"She won't miss it anymore. No one will make one."

"Similar. On the contrary, the city of Jerusalem will be the

"Jehovah's great throne (4)."

And Isaiah: a Offer me no more sacrifices; your incense

" is an abomination. I don't want to hear from you again.

"Moons, your snub, and your other holidays. All your "Assemblies are tainted by crime (5)."

As we can see, none of these great men know again, the compromise signed in the so-called books of Moses,

where all the revered furnishings of ancient Jehovah's Witnesses. Their reform truly revolutionary was something else entirely!

that the narrow mold of Ezra and exceeded by a hundred necks*

the petty and troublesome mythology of the Penta-

Teuce. For the reformed Jehovah of the prophets repudiates all anything stained with blood, anything that is pointless carnage, even that of animals. What he wants is "a heart

"pure, an honest soul, a spirit ready to follow him in the

the path of justice.

(1) Hosea, chapter H, verse 11.

(2) Amos, chap. Ut, verse 13.

(3) Jeremiah, chap. XVII, verse. 1.

(4) Jeremiah, chap. III, vere. 14.

(5) Isaiah, obap. 1", vera. 13.

JKIIIOVAII

82

Oséo: "It is mercy that I want, not the saert-

"Uce. And I will better understand the knowledge <the God that the "Holocausts (1)."

Rlichéo: "What shall I offer to the Lord that is worthy of Him? Shall I offer him two burnt offerings or year-old calves?

"Will he bind fat goats?" I will sacrilegious him for my crime.
"my eldest son and for my sin some other of my >> children?

"O man, I will tell you what is useful and what Adonai
"demands of you: it is to act according to justice and to love the "mercy (2)."

And Isaiah: "He who slaughters an ox is like one "who would kill a man. He who sacrifices a lamb or
"A kid goat is like someone who would knock out a dog."
"He who makes an oblation is like one who offers..."
"the blood of a pig. And he who burns incense is "Like someone who worships an idol. They took pleasure in it."
"They have become accustomed to all these things; and their ūmo a
"He delights in these abominations (!)." "The incense itself-
even, an abomination 1 How the synagogue of Ezra Did she abandon this heresy?

I could fill this volume with quotations. One more and one of the most significant passages from Jeremiah: "This is what the "Lord Sebaoth, the God of Israel: Add, as long as "You will want your holocausts and your victims and eat them."
"Of the flesh."

For I did not command them to cooperate on the day when I
"I brought them out of Egypt, to offer me burnt offerings and..."
» victims (4). ■>

Moses said yes, and Jeremiah said no.

And the Pentateuch, Exodus, Numbers, Leviticus, the

(1) Hosea, chapter VI, verse 6.

(2) Micah, chap. VI, verse, fl and sniv.

(3) Isaiah, chapter XLVI.

(4) Jebemiah, chsp. VII, verse 22.

.M01.00U It'iSUAKI.

nji

Deuteronomy, all these collections of meticulous proscriptions which regulate even the smallest details of all the holocaust ceremonies, these sacred forms of sacrifice

the Paschal lamb itself, though so twistedly substituted & the What becomes of human victims when faced with these animals?
sharp pronouncements of the early prophets?

Clearly, these sacrosanct volumes were not still invented. Neither Aiuos, nor Üséo, nor Joël, nor Michéo, nor Neither Isaiah, nor even Jeremiah, a contemporary of Josiah, have No idea, Micah, one of the few prophets who speak of Moses cites him simply as a liberator of Israel, and this,
two verses before the magnificent passage where Jehovah
He condemns burnt offerings. Therefore, the name Moses did not evoke... no images yet of legislation or codification whatsoever
This fabulous character had not yet donned his shell. This fabulous character had not yet his posthumous costume of Numa of the Jewish nation.

But, if Moses never legislated, if the Pentateuch does not exist before Ezra, if the humanized Jehovah is a Late innovation, rejected by habits and customs Inveterate members of the Jewish people, who is the Jehovah of the ages?
worshipped since the Judges, the Jehovah of Abraham, Isaac and of Jacob, as of David and Solomon? Our old con-birth, the Baal-Moloch, the national idol of Israel that he taken from Egypt at the cost of his firstborn, whom he endowed with Canaan in view of gigantic sherems, and of which he raised so high the glory beneath the pious slaughterers, David and Solomon. The old fool threatens to eliminate his assistant, if His human ration is eliminated. Tit for tat.

We can see the full difficulty of this situation for the prophets, lost children of civilization in the midst of semi-hell
tic. Without any other proof than their hearts, without any other tradition tion that the feeling of justice, they come to attack a an age-old and undisputed ritual, invoking a Jehovah in spirit and truly before the face of the devourer of little children and lend this beast the language of humanity. Under their burning inspiration, the ferocious beto pushes back its horrible pasture, ronio its bronze ovens h cornos, rojetto onfln with disgust sos ancionnos epithets do Oaal and do Molooch, under which she presided over so many impure and dreadful mysteries.

NJ

JEHOVAH

But a metamorphic canvas is not accomplished without snags h the grim reality. 1, 'ox-Mölüeh, barely cleared lost the clear and sharp tone of the future Klohim of Moses.

How often have the prophets, when cornered, not been not forced to humbly admit to shameful solidarity which links their God to the bloody epithets I Oséo begs Israel to no longer give these titles to Jehovah execrable: "At that time," said Adonai, "Judea called me—
"I will be his wife and no one will call me Uaali anymore (my Self—» gnerr). »

'* I will remove the name of Baal from her mouth, and she will not
"will no longer remember this name (1)."

It is with the redness on his forehead that Ezekiel confesses the ancient Molochiste covered it with a sad explanation: "Because
"that they had not carried out my judgments," said Jeho—
"Ah... so, I too gave them precepts." which were not good and judgments in which they "must not live. And I have defiled them in their "present, when they offered me the firstborn of the
"o vulva because of their sins (2)."

Jérémie, more intractable, finds in his indignation the courage to lie. Facing the Thopheth and the dark Valley of Sacrifices, he denies in the name of his God every part to the carnage: "They have erected high places to the Baalim
"to burn their children in the fire and offer them to
"Baalim as a burnt offering, which I did not command them."
I didn't mention it to them, and it never came up in the conversation.
"My heart (3)." And again: "They built at Baal the

(1) Hosea, chapter 1, verses 16 to 17.

(2) Ezekiel, chapter XX, verse 25.

çî) Jeremiah chap. XIX, verses. 5.

Mol.OL'Il u'iSBAKI.

83

"High lions who are in the valida back son of Eunom for
"to sacrifice A Moloeh their sons and their daughters, although jo no
"I did not order the heavy, and may he never have come to me." <> in the spirit of pushing them A corner to put similar "Abominations and to wear them thus, Judn naked sin (1),"

Jeremiah hardly agrees with Ezekiel. However, his phrase construction niontro to what extent the Jehovah
Two prophets found themselves compromised in their worship

Moloch-Yohovah, whom the Jews sacrificed on the Topheth their sons and their daughters. Otherwise, he wouldn't have had anything to do with les rofusor ot d'onvoyor son prophète Jérémie.

Los défenses mêmes du Pontatouquo, dans leur forme embarrassed, are une nouvelle preuve ajoutée A so many others very of the identity of the liaison-Moloch-Jehovah: "You no
"You will not give any of your children to be consecrated A"
"The idol Moloch, you do not defile the name (see it)"
"God. I am Adonai (2)."

"If a man from among the children of Israel or a foreigner—"
"Gera, who remain in Israel, gives his children A"
"The idol Moloch, may he be punished with death. May the people..."
» stoned.

"I will fix the eye of my anger on this man and he will..."
"I will cut him off from among his people, because he has given it of his race A Moloch, that he "profaned my sanctuary and "defiled my holy name (3)."

Thanks for the indiscretion. So the sacrifices did take place.
in Jehovah's own sanctuary and in his own name of Jehovah-Baal-Moloch. It was hardly worth redoing.
the entirety of Jewish history, from accumulating Ossa on Pelion, to invent and write the great novel of the Pentateuch for
to make such an admission.

These scattered passages, escaped from the shadowy inquisition

(I) • Jérémie, ehsp, XXXH, v[«]™. 35.

. (2) Lévitique, chap. XVIII, verset 21.

CI) Lévitique, chap. XX, verset 2 and following.

Neither

JEHOVAH

Ezra's remains are our providence. Eloquent fragments, they pop.
motto «rebuild it from all pieces the leviathan
rénovons-le,

Thus the Book of Kings points out all the broken gods by The reformists, like exotic idols, unduly introduced by special infidelity to the great Jehovah, it is necessary an idol by the liars and canonized by the reformers (1).

 But here are many more; a crucial passage from these memos
 Liois restituo tous cas monstres d'brain et tous ces lieux of cannibalism and their true owner. The confession comes from an authorized and educated source. It's Rabsacôs do Lacliis, the envoy of Sennacherib, who addressed the Jews of Hezekiah; "You tell me: we place our trust
 "in Adonai, our God. Do not be like the God whose Hezekiah destroyed the altars and the high places, having
 "This special co-commandment was made in Judah and Jerusalem:"
 "You shall worship only in Jerusalem and before a
 "only altar. (2) "Is that clear?

Cotte's about-face, the Jehovah-Moloch repudiating his titles,
 Its rites and statues, which are accentuated in the new alliance, alliance of peace and truth, proposed by the prophets on opposition to the bloody pact of Egypt, of which the ark was the too visible a symbol (3). Their radicalism struck at the heart their corner doesn't even allow the substitution of lamb Pascal. Among them all, Ezekiel, who was in almost contact Certainly, along with the Mages, she feels all the infamy of the cult.
 antique, and continues in a moved voice the renovation.
 The work is a long mea culpa: "This is what the Adonai says
 "El: Because we told you that you were removing land which
 "devoured men and suffocated its own people,"

"You will no longer deter men in the future and you
 ° You will no longer cause your people to die, says the Adonai El.

(!) Numbers, chap. XXt.

(2) Kings, book IV, chapter XIX, verse 22.

(3) Jeremiah, chapter XXXI, verse 31 et seq.

MOIAICH U'iSKAKf.

87

"They lived among the (spinning tops, oh they had gone and they "have (IMionore my holy name, when it was said of them:

"C'ost lo peuple d'Adonni. These are the ones who come from "His land."

"And I wanted to spare the sanctity of my name"
 • that the house of Israel would read dês/mn oty! among the

"Jo will make a covenant of peace with my sheep. I extor—"
 "minorai do la terre los bôtos les plus eruolles, et l'on"
 "will be able to sleep safely in the desert and in the middle of the back » wood (2). »

This struggle between two alliances of the twofold Jehovah, this Perpetual dualism gives birth to the most dramatic dialogues.
 Ticks: "We have made a pact with death, let's say
 "Isaiah's opponents, the servants of Hunl-Moloch-
 "Jehovah, we have made a treaty with the world" » terrain. Therefore, the scourge when it arrives no
 "Will not touch us (. 'J)." What about the prophet of Jehovah?
 reformed riposte: "Your alliance with death will be un-
 "Duration, your treaty with hell does not exist, and the scourge"
 "When he arrives, he will exterminate you."

Los Molochistes, like their compatriots from Tyre and do Carthage saw in the misfortunes of Israel the fury of the Moloch neglected; while Jeremiah and his companions there read the wrath of their God Jehovah against the practices of the Mossi
 The destruction of the temple and the idols, followed by
 So much misery, could only Vaison give reason to the reformers.
 It is by sheer force alone that the skull of Israel, this hard Arab head, recognized his true God, according to the sounds of this all too true a formula, repeated so many times following the more terrifying threats: a And then they will know that I
 "Follow the true Jehovah, the Lord and the Adonai."

It took four hundred years and foreign domination

(1) Ezêcuxel, chap. XXXVI, verses. 13.20 and srâv.

(2) Ezéi iiiiei,, chap. XXXIY, vore. 25.

(3) Isaiah, chapter XXVIII, verses 15-18; chapter V, verses 19 and 8.

88'

JEHOVAH

to arrive at the result. As long as nationality existed Jewish, the Innohisto society, with its writings, its dogmas,
 Its history, its logic, and its indisputable antiquity remained to the very end, the national society. All the genius, the sacrifices and the heroism of the prophets, no parant rien eoutro An inevitable fate. Moreover, each of their tendencies of a wild protest.

. Ezekiah, the first, with the help of the noble Isaiah, tAoho to stop the flow of blood that runs from the great temple Jerusalem (1). He destroys the bronze bridge, Nohostan, this rêtissour melochisto, before which the Israelites sacrificed lit since time immemorial, not all idols, since, except for the sorpont, Josias will find them all again. Did he go so far as to substitute Fassnli or human sacrifice? The current Easter tradition, symbolized by the lamb, I highly doubt. despite the temptations of the Paralipomena; for the Kings The most ancient and frank ones don't taint a word of it. The essay Ezechi's efforts were fruitless: "Most of the nation laughed at the » bursts of laughter and turned away with contempt (2). » Hilarity and understandable contempt among cannibals accustomed to A spicier stew, and finding a piece of mutton bland, after a centuries-long feast of human flesh. Also the son and Manassas, Hezekiah's successor, quickly reverted to his old ways. Molochists and immolates her child in expiation of the sacrilege of his father. Jerusalem, under this prince, was, in the twilight of the Bible, literally flooded with human blood (3), and Isaiah, The instigator of Hezekiah's attacks perished before the eyes of the king, sawn between two planks.

This was only sixty-seven years after the death of Hezekiah that the reform had to be revived a second time and, by a clever plot twist, relying on the magical evo-

(1) Kings, book. IV, chap, XVIU.

(2) Paralipomena, Uv. II, chap. XXIX, verses. 7; chap. XXX, verse 15.

(3) Liais, Uv. IV, chap. XXI.

MOJ.00II d'isr.vri,

ko

cation of the past. We agree to match a written proof Jehovah's intentions. Uien no supplée lo Livre des Koïs, Book IV, Chapter XXII:

"Verse 3. – The eighteenth year of the reign of Josins, ■ the king sent Saphan, the sons of Aslia. (they of Mossuhim. u sorilw of the Temple, saying to him:

"Verse 4. – Go naked, high priest Holuias, afraid to gather
"Purgent who was imprisoned in the temple of Adonai and that •* The doormen received some pouplo.

Verse 3, – That the masters of the house of Adonni
"They give it to entrepreneurs so that they can distribute it."
"those who are working on the repairs to the temple of " Lord.

Verse (1. – To the carpenters, to the masons, and to those "who restore the walls opened, went that we aehèto"
"also wood and that which we will read about stones and quarries, in order to "Do to restore the temple of Adonai."

» Vorsot 7. – That we do not fasso them rondro compto
"The money they receive and that we rely on their good
" faith.

» Verse 8. – Then the high priest Holcias said to the scribe
Saphnn: I found a book of the law in the house
"of Adonai. And he gave this book to Saphnn who read it."

» Verse 1). – The scribo returned to the king to give account of "the execution of his orders, and said to him: Your servants have "gathered the money that was found in the house of Adonai."
"And they gave it to the overseers of the temple buildings."
"to distribute them to the workers."

Verse 10. – The scribe Saphan said further: The priest
"Helcias gave me a book, and when Saphan had read it..."
"The king's presence"

Verse 11. – And that the king had heard the words of
"book of the law of Adonai," he tore his clothes,

~ Verse 12. – And he ordered the priest Helcias and Ahin.cam, son of Shaphan, and to Achobor, son of Micha, to "Scribe Saphan and Asaiah, royal slave:"

JEHOVAH

"U

"Vorsot IM. – Alton ot consult Adonai, especially Judo," » ot on the subject of the words of the volume that we have just done
"to find, for the fury of Jehovah was kindled against"
"us, because our parents didn't listen to the words of

"Vorsot 14. – the priest Helcins, and Ahioam. and Aehobor
"So Saphan and Asaiah went to find the prophetess..."
"Holdu, wife of Sellum, son of Thecun, son of Arnns,
"Guardian of the garments, who lived in Jerusalem in the "Second, on the corner, they will speak to him."

"Vorsot 15. – She answered them: a Here is what he said"
"Gentle, God of Israel: Say to him who sent you:

Verse 10. – This is what Adouaf said: I will bring the "plagues on this place and its inhabitants, according to los pnrols"
» of the law read by king Josiah;

» Vorsot 17. – Parco, whom they abandoned to sncri-
"Bound to foreign gods, they irritated me with all their..."
"works; my indignation will ignite against this place, do"
"Tollo, in a way that there will be no way to turn it off."

Verse 18. – As for the king of Judah who sent you
"Consult Adonai, and tell him: This is what Adonai says, » (Israel): Because you listened to the words of this " volume;

Verse 19. – And that your heart was afraid and that you
"You are humiliated hearing the words against this place and"
"its inhabitants who must fall into despair and
p the execration,

Verse 20. – I will gather you to your fathers and you will rest
P, at peace in your tomb, without seeing the evils that I
I will unleash, p

The following, in all their details, is the summons by Josiah, from all the elders of Judah and Jerusalem,
all the people, including all the priests and prophets,
the reading aloud of the law, the conclusion of a new
New covenant with Jehovah, the celebration of Passover reformed, and finally the execution of idols and their followers.

MOLØCH «'ISRAEL

m

Josias and his fanatical band reduce statues to dust,
the altars, the Asclierim, the Tophotes, the high places
by Solomon In Chamos, in Astarte and in Mileltom, the heights
They kill the sacred horses.

Tomplo los cabanes des Rédoschos où les femmes ao livaient
To sacred love, like A Mabug. For self-completion.
Da-fé, the priests of Daal are slaughtered, their bones burned on the altars.

What more can be added to this detailed account, except that Josiah, at the place of the quiet death foretold by the inspired tlolda, was to die of an arrow At the batnillo of Mageddo. Jehovah lo
He thus decides at the last moment, despite his promises.
ot we punish the impieties of Mannssôs, the grandfather of Josiah. The false prophecy crowns the find.

Obviously, this law found in a corner of the Temple
read by Josias a few hours ago, it's not yet ours Pontateuquo, (the Kings would not have failed to say so), but a meager collection of anti-Molochist prescriptions. If this embryo would have been attributed to Moses, Jeremiah and Ezekiel would have cited it under this heading. Now, Jeremiah declares that Jehovah commanded nothing in the wilderness to subject of burnt offerings; and Ezekiel, already very familiar with the current laws, never mention Moses, it even seems ignore it.

This is the first appearance of the new law of Jehovah on the biblical stage, certainly one of the most remarkable appearances modest, if we compare it to all the commotion of Sinai and which yet he didn't fool anyone at the time.

Thus the two sons were successors of Josiah, Joashes were Joachim disowns his father's businesses and book.
return to national horrors. He was peremptorily demonstrated that the reform, without ties to the past and in contradiction with all the practices of the Jewish people, was powerless to establish itself by its own strength. The pro-Phetai are forced to ally themselves with foreigners against the bloodthirsty Iilolo resteo until the last day lo I)iou national. That's the whole secret, the island, the strange driving do Jéréinio pendant la dernière époque du royaume do

JEHOVAH

02 •

.ludn.

Josiah's failure was a disgrace to this great citizen. His
The magnificent Chapter V showed him wandering in the squares
They roamed the streets of Jerusalem, searching for a man that was not tainted by the horrors of the mnlochistex, and without the Having fallen from the infernal path where Israel was rolling, he preferred humanity. loyal to his homeland, he allied himself with the Climacans to destroy one One single blow, the idolatrio and the idols. Three times, so to speak. will say, to his nppol, Nnbuchodonosor melts like an eagle on Jerusalem, where the Jews first showed do cetto tenacity ot do eolto indomitable energy which were later to characterize them so strongly under the era-Roman piro. But, while the cursed kings of the saints Books, those purveyors of the Jehovah heated in a furnace, Joachim, Jeconiah, Zedekiah remained until the end the chams pawns of independence and national faith, Jeremiah, him The prophet of the true God, the beloved child of the Ilible, was not in the eyes of the people, he was a traitor and a conspirator of sacrilege. with the enemy. This explains all the anguish of this desolate soul and the bitterness of its accents: "Cursed be the "The day I was born! The day my mother gave me—" "Fanté may not be blessed" 1

"Cursed be the man who brought the news to my "Father, saying, 'A male child is born to you, and who "Thought to give him a reason to rejoice" 1

"Why did I come out of my mother's womb, only to be » overwhelmed with worry and pain, and seeing my » days in confusion (1)! »

He was then the public ally of Nebuchadnezzar, predicted and which he called the punishment for abominations

(1) Jeremiah, chapter XX, verse 14 and following.

of Israel, the man and avenger of his Jehovah (1), For This foreign monarch, Jeremiah, deploys all his resources With mimicry and prophetic verve, he sends packs and all the Semitic kinglets and the sum of Zedecius to surrender without resistance, along with all his people, to the powerful king of the Chaldeans (2). The siege of Jerusalem finds it occupied to disrupt the defense, to defy Molochistos and announce to loudly proclaim the capture of Jerusalem, the ruin of the Tomplo and the slavery of the raonarquo and of the nation. This role emir The suspicious behavior was not without peril. Struck by the pro-phètes of Jehovah-Moloch, laden with chains, several condemned to the ultimate torture, Jeremiah did not owe his life than to the fear of Xabuchodonosor and the uncertainties about the outcome of the struggle (8). After three years of siege, which were For him, a long agony; he would have swelled with the pain of seeing the triumph of his ideas and the ruin of his homeland. Nabucho-donosor against the living force in Jerusalem; and the rity of the cotte

and the brazen seas, the cauldrons, the boilers, the ches Rubins and the arches, drown Molochism in blood and him deals the fatal blow by taking all to Chaldea
the upper classes, the princes, the warriors and the protros(4).
His first concern upon entering Jerusalem had been to break the chains of Jeremiah (5) and to fill him with gifts (ti), of even pardoning, at his request, the high-ranking officials who had protected (7). Initially, he recommended him to his general Nabuzardan, and, fearing for him the vengeance of his comrades patriots made him offer to come to his court in Babylono (8).

(1) -Jeremiah, chapter XLIII, verse 10.

(2) Jeremiah, chapter XXVII.

(3) See for all this conduct of Jeremiah chapter XX and following

(4) Jeremiah, chapter 39 – Be, book 4, chapter 25. – Appear pomenes, book. II, chap. XXX VI.

(5) Jeremiah, chapter XXXIX, verse 13.

(6) Jeremiah, chapter XL, verse 5.

(7) Jeremiah, chapter XXXIX, verse 18.

(8j) Jeremiah, chapter XL, verses 1-5.

Jeremiah, overwhelmed by the misfortunes of his homeland and faithful to his mission, preferred to remain with the remnants of the people. But the MoloeUists, after assassinating Godolias, the governor Nebuchadnezzar's men took the prophet to Egypt where, according to the rabbis, they ended up putting him to death as a traitor to religion and to the fatherland. His last Prophecies still fight against the Molochist atrocities.
predict the conquest of Egypt by Nebuchadnezzar and They beg the Jews to return under his law. Death alone put an end to his accents.

Triumph and revenge were being prepared by another way: Israel makes bed its education in Iabylon. For, the trans mass portation, this barbaric mode of civilization, was the renovation of Israel. It struck the toto of Judah, the aristo cracy and the clergy, until then ardent supporters of the rite and the Molochist tradition. In contact with the Chaldeons and The most enlightened of the captives, the Mages, blushed at their bloody practices and attempted to assimilate into civilization tion or they were submerged. No doubt that the priests in particular have not seriously studied the hierarchy

once in their eyes and thought of recreating on this model the the gloomy religion of their fathers. For scratch away all that Grand mosaic, you will find Parsonage.

One and universal God, angels, resurrection, creation, flood, a good part of Genesis, the whole organization political and religious development in Israel, a new current of Feelings and ideas, such is the spoils taken by the captives on their victors, booty certainly more precious if one considers dère the results that the vases and bronze ingots carried off from Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar. The work of Ezekiel initiates us, so to speak, day by day into this work profound transformation that took place in the minds of the Babylonian Jews 600 to 500 BC.

The prophet, from the depths of Chaldea, on the banks of the Chobar River, where he is relegated, sends his instructions and MOI.OCH li'LSKAKt.

IV»

80 epistles to the Jews of Judea. He gives them the conditions of the new alliance, all peace and humanity, that they must sign with Jehovah the plan for the new Temple the furnishings seem to be modeled on the Temple of Babel (1) The very ordinary nature of this renovated sanctuary, its ceremonies pure, and inaugurates the sacerdotal hierarchy, unknown until him, by excluding all priests from service, all more or less tainted by Molochisrae, with the exception of the reformist family of Sudoc.

All the rites, then in the possession of the reformers, timid embryo of the great book of Moses, fit comfortably in the eight chapters of Ezekiel. But, a bizarre and argued phenomenon decisively, Ezechiel, who masterfully rules most of the ceremonies that we will see revised and expanded In the Pontifical, Ezekiel does not mention it even once. Moiso, their supposed founder. Quite the contrary, he gives his prescriptions as a direct inspiration from Jehovah (2). Both the operation of the Pentateuch and the legislative role The staff of Moses are personal to Ezra

- This remarkable turn, the subtle introduction of the reforms under the guise of a fabulous hero, might well not be not as original as one might think, and copying Zoroaster again. We know that this name designates, throughout Central Asia, the purification of the fire cult, the conversion of Moloch-Mithra as a harmless deity. Contemporary of Darius, son of Hystaspes, by Aristotle, referred to six thousand years before Plato and God himself, Zoroaster is a flag and could well, having existed no more than his fellow Moses to whom He would serve as a boss.

I offer this hypothesis for what it's worth. It doesn't borrow no less a certain weight from the interests of all parties a strategic move by the kings of Persia following the success of Nehemiah and

(1) Compare the description of the Temple in the IIIBlo with the description of the Temple of Bel in Herodotus, book I", g 181-183.

(2) Kzéchiél, chap. XL and sniv.

. 'Neither '

JEHOVAH

of the Ezra, all these princes, and kings like the kings, spiritual and temporal leaders, make pins or less do cotte business, their personal affair, with the help of their cassette, multiply the edicts and display a zeal and fervor literally inexplicable, without the intervention of proselytism.

For, if we examine closely the Jehovah's return from Babylon, no resemblance to him can be found anymore
The host flees, as some escapes from the Judges and Kings. Co-Jehovah of Babylon, creator of heaven and of the earth, would never have consented to be buried in the ark Putrid, immolated bones, and no, wouldn't that be better? lent to the disguise of the bronze oxen. Co "God of Heaven" h mine astrological, co God of Nebuchadnezzar, of Cyrus, Darius and Artaxorces, which has so greatly influenced the Bible, is a foreigner. He led the armies against Jerusalem mies (1), their book the city, the idols and the Temple, and s'immi poses by their weapons to a vanquished people. This pseudo-God The God of Cyrus, his Christ (2), is Jewish, whom he has p>'is by his hand to subjugate the nations and to whom he inspires the patriotic thought of building him a temple on the debris from the Molochist slaughterhouse (3).

It is to these motifs of piety and religious brotherhood gilded rather than the overly chivalrous design of raising of subjugated nationalities, to which the favorable edict must be attributed Cyrus's rable and the persistent help of his successors.

The reconstruction of the Temple according to all instructions Zoroastrians of Ezekiel and the establishment of this post were an official and national work of the kings of Persia who had to intervene personally on several occasions against the Canaanite intrigues.

(1) Be, lib. IV, chap, XIX, verses. 85. – Jeremiah, chap. XLII, verse 10.

(8) Isa IB or rather a forger who, after captivity, added chapters & this prophet, chap. XU1 and XLV.

(3) Paratipo.uenes, book. He, chap. XXXVI, verses. 83.

MLUOCIL U'ISJUE),

!>7

Cyrus had led the first Jewish caravan of all four the gold and silver vases carried away by Nebuchadnezzar and not the destroyed and repudiated brass equipment as a stigma mate raolochiste. After him, Darius returned a new edict to order the continuation of the Temple, to assign to it sums of money and threats of serious penalties which conque would be an obstacle. The Persian governors of had specially sailboat 4 the royal work and provide each day everything that was necessary for a holo-caust and prayers in honor of the great king and his family (1).

Who would have thought it? The biggest obstacle to this restoration was above all the lack of eagerness of the Jews to take advantage of Cyrus's edict. For this alleged captivity, true the incubation of Jewish faith and nationality, had been so sweet in the end, and so advantageous, that the captives were not very concerned about leaving their positions and jobs to return to their savage homeland. The meticulous spirit the Jews, their natural propensity to handle money, a great servility of form rather than substance, in had made the indispensables of the lower domesticity of the palaces, stewards, watchmen, guardians or intermediaries of the seraglio, of which their Esthers were the most beautiful ornament. This position provided daily access to the souvenir rain and allowed him to refresh his memory on occasion on his edicts or those of his predecessors. This small detail, which the Holy Books take proper account of, was not without influence on the ultimate success of Nehemiah and the Ezra.

already for eighty years at the head of forty-two
A thousand Jews and the reorganization effort was not progressing. One a new expedition, almost exclusively priestly, was decided under the auspices of the great king, who ensured through him-

(1) Ezra, Kv. 1", chap.

as ■

JEHOVAH

memo of instruction and religious principles (1) of Ės-dras, the head of the company.

Ezra, this figure so important in the annals Jewish women, scribe and doctor of the law, who, from the very beginning of the Orthodox, fixed the sacred texts, left armed with powers extraordinary. Artaxerxes had lavished him with gifts and of offerings for his God in heaven (2). 11 carried away, in Furthermore, a bond on all the coffers of the great king, the example tion of all taxes for the priests and Levites, and right of life and death on Israel for everything concerning the faith (3).

This dictatorial authority demonstrates both the grandeur of the obstacle and Ezra's intentions. For the return to the
The national soil had been somewhat favorable to new ideas.
The Jews had rediscovered memories and habits there against which they had not sufficiently guarded themselves.
Ezra and his priests must have shuddered to see Israel fall back in its blood-soaked abyss. So they did not hesitate to cut the evil at its root.

To stop the contagion in its tracks, Ezra began by... to a measure of which the necessity and proximity of the Molochists justify the harshness. All the united foreign women & Hebrews and the children born of these marriages were ruthlessly expelled; and the defense of such unions, unknown until then, it became established as a fundamental dogma
mental on the pediment of the new Jerusalem (4).

This coup d'état was not accomplished without resistance.
Ezra had, for four years, been committed to a path of struggle and violence, when Artaxerxes sent him a rendezvous very opportune in the person of his cupbearer, Nehemiah, who came with the title of governor and the license to relieve

- (1) Ezra. book. I", chapter VU, verse 14.
- (2) Ezra, book. I", chap. VU, verses. 16*21.
- (3) Ezra, book. 1", chap. VU, verse 26.
- (4) Ezra, book. 1", chap. IX.

MOI.0CII u'iSHAKI.

This crucial operation, executed flawlessly, trowel in one hand, sword in the other, absolute rest of Sabbath ordered under penalty of death, strict proscription reuse of foreign alliances, finally annihilation or
The expulsion of all opponents allowed Ezra and b Nôhêmie de so deliver all their entires to the radio reform which is their work.

Witnesses to the stubbornness and indomitable tenacity of The Jewish people, for their national traditions, resolved to to win over these hitherto hostile forces. Ezra dared to... because he was a priest and, by that title, accustomed to doing based on human credulity. A codified system.
for Jews of the 5th century was placed in the urges, to origins of the nation, under the guise of a fabulous prophet they, by some enchantment, became the creator and the legislator
of Israel.

Tell me then all of Jewish history and religion were... raised. At the same time, the long idolatry was explained Judges and Kings and all the plagues of Israel. The subjugated submission to the orders and reforms of Ezra was no longer that natural return to the primitive path; resistance, a apostasy and treason... The name and the shadowy person Moses's identity was probably chosen only for break the dogs and thwart any search, just like any other.
control.

And, in order to make every step and every looking back, Ezra, aided by the authority and the sword of
The Persians did not hesitate to substitute the ancient alphabet.
Chaldean characteristics that he brought back from Babylon (1) and inaugurated on a large scale the reform of literature national ture.

All the writings of Israel were carefully examined, scrutinized, reviewed, corrected, or destroyed. The great syna-

(I) Saint Jerome, Prologus Galilaius.

JKHOVAII MOL.fK'll niSRAKI.

UHJ

"an," and that's only 432, four centuries and barely before Jesus Christ, whom Ezra, undoubtedly the bold forger who ever existed, presented to the people they lay known as Moses and concluded with Jehovah the covenant that still endures.

Since then, separated from neighboring nations and the rest of the world, walled in by a history and a legal system through the harsh discipline of Ezra and Nehemiah, the Jews shaped the new institutions during the long peace of the Persian Empire. Kith had become their flesh and their blood under Antiochus where they sustained a struggle heroic and glorious, which is no longer within our control.

We will examine the Pentateuch in detail.

CHAPTER II

The Pentateuch

11. You have to be Christian or Jewish to get a share, right? conch To Moses in the redaction of the Pontifical Pontifical. The ortho* The doxie places Moses in the 16th century. However, the Pentateuch is written in the best form of the 5th century BC— Christ, glued to the backs of the prophets, ten centuries after his author Putative. It's steep.

But orthodoxy, accustomed to breaking and more— oxyperte h this maneuver, which all the Xenophons in the world, do not Not troubled by such a small thing: "There has been a rejuvenation,

"She will say, a makeover & the new fashion of a work"
"Antique."

Faced with this ignorance and bad faith, virtues nuns, we will double the dose — not only the the form of Moses, or rather the books called Moses, is from 5th century, but the core, the details and the inspiration are from that era, could not have been materially manufactured before that era. The work, for the confusion of faith and the triumph of the unbelievers, is stamped and initialed by the The least objectionable way. You just have to open your eyes to to convince oneself of this.

Now, if some Chasles were to present us with a manuscript written in the finest style of the 19th century, like a a contemporary work of Philip the Fair, we would be at first greatly astonished. But if, in this manuscript, he

Wi

.lÈlIOVAII

He had talked about electricity, astronomy, or the war. Crimëo, we would say that Mr. Chasles is either delusional or a forger, and we would be right.

Those deluded here are the believers; and Esdrqs, lo faus- saire. Forger for a good reason, I recognize him. proclaimed Bion loudly. But his falsehood must nonetheless be rolovù in the interest of historical truth.

We still dare to speak of the unfathomable antiquity of the Penta- The allusions to the Babylonian exile fill this volume (1). Modern geography is taken from this point. of the Jordan. The procedure dates back to the time of Kings (2). The measures, The coins are glued to the Temple (3). A small passage, contemporary with the Maccabees, alludes to the Romans in Balaam's blessing (4). The regent Deuteronomy The Kings; Leviticus, the priestly caste of Jerusalem. Remove the great Temple of Zion, and the Pentateuch will vanish. night in smoke. And, when I say the great Temple, I do not not targeting the Molochist Museum of Solomon destroyed with the aid and to the applause of the reformers, but their very modern monument, the Persian building, built with gold Persian, on the Persian plans of Ezekiel, five hundred and twenty years barely before Christ.

This gold has rubbed off on the work where deeply the priest's five hooked fingers were pressed in.

What became of high morality in the hands of Ezra? of Isale and Micah and their subhuman detachment? Relegated, just like Moloch, to wandering From the past, these great men would have blushed, and the reading of

(1) Deuteronomy, chap. XXVIU, vere. 88; Leiticus, chap. XXVI, verse 33; Deuteronomy, chapter IV, verse 27 and following.

(2) Deuteronomy, chapter XXIV.

(3) Exodus, chapter XXX, verse 13; Leotitus, chapter XXVII, verse 25; Numbers, chapter 111, verse 47; Kzécbiei., chapter XLV, verse 12.

(4) Numbers, chap. XXIV, verses. 24.

(5) Nehemiah, chapter X

MÛIQU D'isBÀEL.

10 AM

h the enumeration of the rams of a nn, the fattened calves, the pure and spotless heifers than the Babylonian Jehovah demands, with grotesque curses, less for the altar only for the priest's table. Jehovah of the prophets, frugal and backward, do not know what to do with blood and meat from the oxen and heifers and was content with a sliver pure, 0 innocent one! The illustrious scribes and doctors of Hnby-rented him out, taught him how to live, and explained the ordinances of Moses. Their prophet, Malachi, a contemporary of Ksdras, Cursed be the perverse men who would offer up a victim lame or thin, and recommended before anything else. like the cutmen of wisdom, the payment of tithes the beginnings (1). Good for him, veiled is he who speaks.

The Levites, throughout history, have not listened to reason about this chapter and go straight to the point. At the slightest sound of money tin, the scribes of the Pentateuch plant the mannequin Mosaic and a sentimental walk through the desert to extend their greedy hands. They want to make their puppets & ten centuries near in the Ages, but & the provided that neither the chest of Ezra nor any counterfeit coin arrives, nor unwieldy coins. This sacristy Jehovah, already "Worthy of Gobseck," he said seriously to Moses on Sinai, between flashes of lightning and thunder: "All those who will be counted" "in the census will give an and a half shekel, according to the » measure of the Temple » (ten centuries before the foundation of the (said Temple 11!)) "The shekel has twenty obols, the half-shekel will be "Offered & Adonai (2)." Adonat has a good excuse; and his priests, Good belly. But that's not our concern for the quarter hour.

Our issue is the mental state of so-called scholars who place a book thus dated and initialed ten centuries before the ed. fact of which it is the official regulation. For this passage is not not isolated, but one of the most constant concerns of

(1) Malachik, chap. I" and lit.

fl) Exodus, chapter XXX, verse 13.

him.

JEHOVAH

God vowed to the monetary limit. 1.0 Leviticus, the Names
Bres reproduce, whenever needed, In pancarto Utilitarian, this opinion is interested in publishing and copied into Iizéehiol (1): "Do not forget the measurement of the sanctuary, if it
"Please." The Exodus, even more naked, makes one shed naked people of money according to the measure of the sanctuary, had every sanctuary in Israel and for the construction of the Tabernacle (2). What do all these priests matter, the contra-Dictions and anachronisms! Four the fixing of the shekel, cotto supreme reason, they would have made light of their mannos, their plaoes, their arches and all the mobi-Anron's link. And that is how professional vice is imposed at l'ontatouquo sa marque do fabrique et le donne le mil-lesime do la pièco qu'il porto douée au front.

Co people, in the time of Saul, did not know how to sharpen the point of his hoes³ and his plowshares (3), to more
There is a strong reason to mint coins. As for literature, there is none.
Don't think (4). The Jews were unable to receive their alpha bet that at the time of David and Solomon, where they fought began to clean themselves up and to deal with people as one people to another. Until-
They were just a band of brigands lying in wait, ready to pounce.
rushing to the first opportunity, the trading cities of the coast (5). They had no more letters than of
In morality, no more disappointment than from blacksmiths and legislators, except, however, the law faithfully observed of immolating one's children.

A father like Jephthah, a condottiere like David, a Priests like Samuel never had the slightest notion of Decalogue. Ignored by the prophets, none of whom are mentioned.

(1) Lacitiqite, chap. XXVII, verse 25; Numbers, chap. 11, verse 47 et al.; Ezekiel, chapter XLV, verse 12.

(3) Itois, book. I, r, chap. XIII, verses. 19.

(4) The reformers anticipated the objection so well that they make will write A JnsnA the Deuteronomy on "the stones (Josve, chp. VIH, verse 32). But they forget to tell us what became of these pre-skies, rubble stones, and who has snatched them away.

(5) Judges, chapter XVII, verse 7.

MÜMMİJI MSBAKI.

1(13

word. this summary edict of justice, in complete opposition with all the conduct of the Jews, could not be composed that after or during the Babylonian captivity, we all io remains of the Pontateuch,

Furthermore, consider each law in this collection individually. auouno was neither observed nor even enacted before the Captivity,

1° The Levites, far from Aaron's descondro, never existed as a tribe (1). Their mythological ancestor did not figure obviously only for form in the legend of the twelve sons of Jacobs, destined to unite the people through the conquest of a common 8oucho. This name, even of Levites, is just that at the Pentateuquo a professional title which designates the tiring work of the rite, which was called the sacordoc of the second order (2). We saw it in this misplaced passage Judges, where Miclms hires for his idol mm levitate of the tribe of Judah. Leviticus is not even a primary Jehovah's village. His colleagues, Baol, Moloch, Astarte, They, like him, have their priests and Levites. One A stroll through the Levitical cities of the Bible leads us to Liaalam, to Astaroth, Shechem, Gibeon, to all the centers idolatrous practices of Israel up to the Captivity (3); and I am not told will hardly make people believe that the Levites of the city of Astaroth will serve They burn pure incense to Jehovah. For it was back cities of Judea, like all the ancient cities that bear they invoke the names of their patron gods. Ezekiel himself, The most frank of the prophets agrees with our opinion. He does not recognizes regularly that the Levitical family of Zadoc, remained the only one faithful to the reform (4). Note that it is the fa-a thousand of Ezra.

In vain, the author of the Paralipomena tries to raise

(1) Waltz, Die Religion der alien Testament, t. 1", p. 221 et soir.
. (2) Kings, book 11, chapter XV, verse 24; book 1, chapter VI, verse 15;
book. IB, chap. VIII, verses. 4; book. IV, chap. XXIU, verses. 9 et saiv.

(3) Joscê, chap. XXI, verses 21 and 17; Paralipomena, book 1", Chapter VI, verses 67, 70 and 71.

(4) Ezekiel, chap. XLII, verse ID; chap. XLIV, verses 10-15.

100

JEHOVAH

their genealogy back to the mythical Aaron, with the help of the proceded that the first Christians would reissue for their Christ. He gathers and arranges end to end all the names of pontiffs scattered throughout the Book of Judges and the Book of Kings,
But the slightest dare breaks the poorly knotted threads of this plot; and nothing I prove, for example, that Achitob, father of Sadoe, that is, Achitob, son of Phinehas (1). The family d'IIéli, & Inquollo co scribe se rattache on désespoir de cause, disappears quickly from the Saâne, despite the curious reservations of Jehovah, inserted after the fact (8), and one cannot deny that it had not been very neglected, if not completely put in place side, under David and Solomon.

2* The monopoly of ceremonies between the Levitical hands is a completely modern innovation. Gideon, Samuel, Safil, David, Solomon, She, everyone sacrifices, without restraint.
to doubt the horrible death of Kore and Abiron, of which no one has not yet heard of it (3). These brave Molochists sacrifice on all the high places and in Combres of all A leafy tree, as the prophets say. They have not
They could, moreover, have obeyed the repeated commands of the Pentateuch (4), which orders them to go and sacrifice to Jerusalem six centuries before the capture of this city by David, since it had hitherto been in the hands of the Jebuséi.'.

3. The Sabbath was, throughout antiquity, the day of Saturn, the seventh of the week, dedicated to the seventh planet. Therefore, he is abhorred and detested by the first pro-phètes like the horrible day of Moloch, a day of celebration, of

(1) Compare the Paralipomines, Book I, Chapter VI, verses 30-31 and Chapter XXIV, verse 0, with Hait, book 1 R, chapter XIV, verse 3 and book U, chapter xvrn.

(2) Kings, book I, chapter II, verse 33.

0) Kings, book. I", chap. VU, verse 9; chap. XVI, verse 2; chap. XIII, towards. 9d delivery. II, chap. VI, verses. ITj chap. XXIV, verses. 25s UV. m, chap. IX, verse 29i chap. XVIII, verse 30; Jugts, chap. VI et seq.

(4) bimtvjue, chsp. XVIIU; Deuteronomy, chap. XII, verses. 5, He and 21.

MOMHJH D'ISBAS!.

107

massacre and trade (1). Wanting to tie the hands of Molochists, Jeremiah recommends absolute rest during the day of Saturn, but everyone ignores it and goes to Moloch (2). Nehemio would have to, two centuries later, take over This law was to be enacted under penalty of death. That's when... writes the entirely moral story of a man who is going to pick up dry wood in the famous desert and that the lapida people at the express command of Jehovah (3).

4* "Do not marry pagan women!" said Ezra, by the voice of Moses. And Moses himself, is it chance or tradition f violates his law, marries an Ethiopian woman (4).

5 * The Israelites had no idea of the degrees of kinship before their Babylonian upbringing. They sleep pell-mell with their mothers, their sisters and their daughters. The unfortunate Thamnr, raped by her brother Ammon, prays to him to ask their father David for her hand in marriage (5); and when the other brother, Absalom, drove out this pious Molochist, the Wise Achitophel, "who speaks like Jehovah," commands him to sleep quickly, and coram populo, with the women of his father, which was done (6).

6. The great year of the jubilee and the seventh sabbatical year The utopias of the prophets, which were never implemented, were never put into practice. neither before nor after the Captivity. To believe that at each jubilee we freed the serfs and that each piece of land sold would return to be born to its first owner, that is to know little of the spirit Jewish. It was the same among the Jews as everywhere else. We have the testimony of the scholar Michaelis: "We speak well "Violations of this law, but we were never..."

(1) Hosea, chapter II, verse 1; Hosea, chapter VIII, verse 5; Isaiah, chapter I. verse 15.

(2) Jeremiah, chapter XVII.

(3) Nehemiah, chapter XIU, verse 16; Exodus, chapter XVI, verse 13; Chapter XX, verse 8; Chapter XXIII, verse 12 et seq., and chambers, Chapter XV, verse 30.

(4) Numbers, chap. XII, verses. 1.

(5) Wood, book. II, chap. XUL, verse. 13,

(6) Kings, Book 1, Chapter 16, verses 20-23

JÈHOYAU

108

P cites a soul-execution. Never does your Bible deign
"Counting according to the great years, which would have been more
"More convenient than the chronology based on the Kings." And he he added: "While reading the Panalipomena, book II, clmb pitre XXXVI, verse-21, I am not far from seeing in it a b omission of sixteen-ten sabbatical years, an omission-
"sion for five consecutive years. Moses himself hardly "relying on the strict execution of this order; and,
b Leviticus, chapter XXVI, verse 34, he supposes that the
"The solemnity of the great year will cease when the population"
b will be increased. The country must celebrate it when it has been b depopulated and devastated (1). b Oh, the good chopping block! Jeremiah, the in-"This year's windfall," he categorically declares. that she never received an execution (2). And she did not have one even more so after him. For this prophet, inspired by such a spirit modern, had taken advantage of King Sôdécias's difficulties to to wrest from him the liberation of all three Hebrew serfs and made the king and all his court swear the pact in the great temple, between the two halves of a sacrificed ox. But the Chaldean army, recalled to the rear, did not soon given a moment of respite to Jerusalem that Sedeias and his
The nobles hastened to recapture their serfs and renounce their Words. All the protests and execrations of Jeremiah were in vain. After him, Nehemiah, in the midst of his crisis...
He was forced to revert to this popular measure (3). He inserted it throughout Leviticus, but accompanying it with reservations which completely nullified its execution.

7. The second book of Ezra clearly attributes to this reform the feast of Tabernacles or leafy huts, such as that she celebrates in the new rite: a The children
b of Israel, it is written, had not celebrated this feast in this way

(I) Michaelis, Mosaic Law, book U, chapter XLV1.

(?) Jeremy, ehap. XXXIV verse. 14.

(3) Nehemiah, chapter V.

(4) Nehemiah, second book of K-sdraa, chapter VII, verses 14 and 17.

ME.0l'II p'iSRAEI.

10!

This festival was not celebrated in this way, how did it come about?
celebrated from Joshua to Ezra? The prophets tell us
They learn: the Feast of Tabernacles hides beneath its Orthodox mask of the abomination of Hosea and Amos, the debauched vulgarity without any deciduous tree, of which is indicated
The first prophets were less radical, as we
As we have already seen, Ezra did not try to eradicate this lust.
centuries old. It reads the share of the fire, even if it means adding a new one chapter on the wanderings of the desert. Thus whitewashed,
The Feast of Tabernacles nonetheless retains an air of Bacchantes. • For eight days they celebrated the festival of the • groves, carrying ivy sticks and beautiful "branches, also palm branches (1). "This is not from Lucian, nor from Petronius, but a simple extract from Maccabees. Yet you'd swear it was a Dionysian festival. "The ôpo*
"that and the way of celebrating them are the same (g)," Plutarch wrote that these similarities were striking and the cry
Alleluia! Alleluia-Jah! resounds in Athens as in Jerusalem Salem.

Jehovah, for the occasion, became the solar God and Fertile. Wine is poured, fresh water is sprinkled on the altar.
always moistened with blood. Tents of foliage are very Dances performed on the rooftops and in the streets.
the disheveled revelry continues for seven nights by the light of torches. These are, quite obviously, the remains of a grand orgiastic ceremony, unrelated to the desert so useful to the reformers (3). Josiah had already destroyed nearly of the Temple a certain number of these unclean huts that per sounded undoubtedly not meant to go back to the desert of Sin (4); and the sabbaths or fêtes of the huts are celebrated in Syria, in Persia, in Assyria, under the most varied motifs.

8. The great festival of Israel, Passover or Passah, no more

(1) Maccabees, book. U, chap. X, verse. 6.

(2) Plutabqoe, Symposion, 4.35.

(3) Leoitic, chap. XXII, verse 42.

(I) Kings, book. IV, chap. XXIII.

1)0' JKH0VAII

that the Tabernacles, was never celebrated & the way and on Moytic motifs. O'est la fête Phoenicienne et Carthagini-Ginoise, human immolation, forced accompaniment of the Molochist race. Even modern descriptions do not they speak no more of lamb than of deliverance from Egypt (1) and hint at bitter drinks, spilled blood, tiny orgies and the sought-after darkness of the Syrians to burn live animals and suspended men due (2). We will return to this important subject in detail. J1 It's worth it.

9° The annual redemption of the firstborn is not, like the lamb Pascal, that a lucrative transformation (3). Obviously, Moloch never accepted this thing about captivity. Until there he needed his child or his donkey cooked and not in his furnace. The prophets react against this dogma of death and with such energy that they condemn any effu bloodshed, any victim, even an animal. They had to succumb. More cunning and less selfless, Ezra and consorts proposed both to give satisfaction pla- tonic to old instincts and to fill the coffers of the Tem- They succeeded. This caste, which came out of Babylon, closed his omits to Micah, whose purified Jehovah prefers the good works to the oil, to the ram, to the eldest son (4). The Jehovah, a graduate of Chaldea, puts the oil and the ram on less so in terms of good deeds. He erases great heart a human immolation of no relation, but in exchange of a fattened ram or a sum of money. His administration The practice is an allegory for the sacrifice of Abraham.

Here first is the label of the reformist bag, the law of

(1) Saode, ehap. XXIII, verses. 18 etl9;ehap. XXIX, verses. 2; Deutéronome, ehap. XVI, verses. 17; Amos, ehap. IV, verses. 5.

(2) De Ded Syriâ, g 49.

(3) Exodus, ehap. XIII, worm". 2; ehap. XXII, verses. 20; ehap. XXIV, towards. 20; Léouïque, ehap. XXII, verses. 26; Numbers, ehap. III, worm".

Chapter X, verse 19.

(4) Loaves, ehap. VI, worm". 6.

M01.0CI1 u'tSRAKI.

neither

Moloch in all his hideous purity. His archaic form and its strong color cuts through the banal monotony of Exodus says, "Adonai said: You shall consecrate to me all that "The firstborn of the vulva is born, for all this is mine (1)."
And further on: "You shall separate for Jehovah all that is
"First child of the vulva and firstborn of the herds. All
"What you have of male sexuality, you will devote to "Jehovah (S)." And Numbers: "Every firstborn is mine,
"since I struck down the firstborn on earth"
"From Egypt. I have sanctified all that is born first."
"In Israel. From man to animal, all of that "is mine (3). " And again.* "All the firstborn of Israel
They are mine, both men and animals. I consider them mine.
"0 be sanctified (4) etc." It's clear, concise, precise.

Here now is the silver amendment of the rôfor*
put yours: "You will replace the first donkey's no with a "Sheep. If you don't buy it, break its neck."
"As for the firstborn of your sons, you shall redeem him at a price > of silver (5). » Since Ezra, at least, the Jewish priests
They give credit to the poor and do not harm their children.
Before him, what happened if the Jew had no money and not of credit with the priest P. Exodus also teaches us this:
"You will not delay in rendering your tithes and firstfruits. You
"You will give me the firstborn of your sons; you will make of them..."
"Even for oxen and sheep. Let seven remain."
"Days with the mother and you will return it to me on the eighth (6)."
The obstinate repetition of this order (7) introduces us led to the most intimate details of the repurchase of the nation en masse by its firstborn³. We left the en-

(1) Exodus, chapter XIII, verse 2.

(2) Exodus, chapter XIII, verse 12.

(3) if shadows, chap. IU, verse 13.

(4) Numbers, ehap. VIII, vain. 17.

(6) Exodus, chapter XXII, verse 22.

(7) Exodus, chapter XXXIV, verse 19.

112 •

JELIOVAII

either the calf seven days with the mother and the eighth They broke his neck, just like a rabbit, in front of the idol.

In light of these details, circumcision, a fragment of Flesh and blood thrown to God is the mark of Moloch.
She put on her protective suit on the eighth day, the precise day when she broke the nape of the neck (1). It has not always been practiced, since the Bible confesso, of its own accord, the inoircircision Israelites of the Desert (2). They had, however, the chance to not to be devoured by their God, as almost happened, in-A similar occurrence occurred with Moses' eldest son. This mythical According to Exodus, this character was going to Egypt with his woman and her still uncircumcised son, when Jehovah
She pounced on the child like a hyena. Sephora only had time to take a sharp stone and circumscribe his son, saying: "You are betrothed to me by blood (3)." Jehovah Letting go, soothed by this patch of flesh. And again Today the symbolic piece of flesh is offered to Moloch tamed in the flames (4).

10th The priests of Ezra, quite adept at marrying off greed Dité and anti-Molochism have minted coins with all these cannibal laws. They could not forget, in this mess tage, an inexhaustible source of benefices, the cherem be individual, or collective, by which one dedicated to Moloch the enemies, captives, and his own family and his own
no one. Because the Semitic religion, dark doorkeeper Hell, opens all the paths to destruction. Here again
Ezra and his associates adjust their begging bowl to the law of Moloch.
But their blind gluttony betrayed them. Didn't they
The audacity of inserting the law of death right into Leviticus? "Everything
"that which is consecrated to Adonai, whether man or field,

"Either animal, nor can it be sold or bought back. Everything that

(1) Léeiiiique, cltap. XII, vers. 3.

(3) Exodus, chapter IV, verse 24. ' ié . , -

(4) Kibcheb, Jewish Ceremonies, p. 162.

MiU.notl IWSliAKi I IJ!

. will have been consecrated once i\ Adonai will be the Holy back
"Saints for Jehovah."

"Everything that will have been offered by a man and dedicated to
"Ailunal will not be redeemed, but it will be necessary."

"Lies that he dies (1)." And this same chapter where it unfolds Throughout this formal defense, it's nothing but a long price tag.
Wergfield of people devoted to Jehovah. A melodrama of twenty to sixty years old, he pays fifty cents of silver from the measure of the sanctuary; a woman, thirty shekels. fie five
At twenty years old, that's twenty shekels for the thousand and ten for
The women. Oh, Semitic gallantry!! The little children
From one month to five years, the values are five and three shekels. And furthermore Doesn't this table include the firstborn who, the Verse 26 takes great care to implicate it, neither can be nor devoted, neither Raehotes nor ot already belong to Jehovah. For the locturo do ces textes would make one believe in a time of transition where the buyout by the rich and the slaughter
The poor walked in a row, if redemption with measure of the sanctuary (2) did not date this innovation after the Capti-Jephthah certainly wouldn't have quibbled over ten shekels for to buy his only daughter. And Jonathan, the king's son, guilty of having unwittingly fallen into his father's cherem, awaits Death without hope. Moses had not yet been invented. This would be the case of do refairo the verse by Voltaire.

11° Chapter XIII of Deuteronomy, this code of the external mination by which Jehovah commands the destruction of all
A city where idolatry would be introduced would have been a death sentence.
of Israel before the 6th century. It worthily continues the cherims Molochist kings, with this difference that the cherem was a vast human slaughter, and that Deuteronomy sees it as the systematic extermination of idolaters.
This entirely deliberate confusion has earned us the conservation
tion of precious pieces for the reconstitution of the cult

(1) letitics, chap. XXVU, verse. 28 and VJ.

Ci) Lemtique, chap. XXVll, ver». 23.

•IKJJuV.UI

111.

ancient (I). We would have seen the roses if we had the Bible acted with national sacrifices as with wars/wars Backs of the Gentle Ones,

Finally, all the articles of the Pentateuch, from the first until the very last, prohibition against making and worshipping images, to plant nsv/iMni i\ next to the autol of Jehovah,
dét'onso d'élovor dos autols on brain on on piorro taillée, let's do the conservation of objects and places sacred Canaanite backs, etc., as many testimonies as ancient Molochism, as many demons inflicted upon the fable to the fabulists of monotheism. Caria Pontateuque is not,
t\ properly speaking, that the inventory of the old religion erected in the 5th century. Each defense, each order of Jeho Moses' teachings should not be taken literally, but evoke a rite or ceremony at Romettro on its legs. There's a whole awful world you have to have lo courage to rebuild, the materials of which are found wind in a flurry of details, disagreement with the onsomblo official.

Sentimentality has no place in this useful work.
N'ost-co, moreover, is no pleasure in relegating to the Perrault's tales, this mystifying God, emulator of the Count of Saint-Germain and Sleeping Beauty, who slumbers
Eleven hundred years to awaken all at once under Ezra?
Isn't it magical to see Pompeii gradually being unearthed?
Molochist buried beneath the verses, while vanishing
In the twilight, the mirage of castles in the desert. Isn't it?
This is not justice, it is inflated to restore to Abraham, Moses? David, Solomon and so many others, their iniquitous Molochist crown was it torn away by the clumsy effort of a saintly zeal?

For if, by chance, Moses did exist, far from having rendered pure and orthodox decrees, he had to, like all his colleagues, immersing themselves up to their necks in human blood.

(t) Deuteronomy, chap. 11, verse 31, and chap. 311 – Joshua, chap. 6, verse, ÿl; chap. VII, VIII and X.

me, ocii o'isii.m

ur.

But this fantastic portstunngo, truly Dion tío la machina,
Has he, I won't say, legislated, but merely existed? What?
tion grave ot obscure.

What is most striking is the silent role of the legislature
Hebrew author up to Ezra, by contrast to his role Noisy from Ezra to Jesus Christ. Iirumouso and almost unknown in the earliest Ages, this singular per
The sound emerges and suddenly becomes clearer from the distance.
ment.

Now, if a legislator of the fore of Moses had endowed a people, thirty-four centuries ago, of an organization somblablo A glue that governs all its actions, memo the more intimate, with meticulous care, the whole life of Hebrew, his name should fill history and the nation, so bump on everyone's lips and register on toto do toutos the annals. And this is what has been happening since Ezra, while Moses' personality and role are focused. He is the law ot the Prophets, the flag and the nation. 11 the domino, Like the cathedral, the city. The Jews are less the people of God that the people of Moses.

Let us mound in view of all co fracas lo silence dos Hebrew books to which their very foundation gave a character a more reliable source of authenticity. You can read the Book of Judges in its entirety and the first two books of Kings, without You might suspect, I won't just say laws, but even of the person of Moses. Nothing of him under Jephthah, under Gideon, under Samuel. This prophet wrote the law of the kingdom.
by anointing Saul (1), which he would not have done if he had had in The Deuteronomy is the main text. Nothing from Moses yet under Safd.
David, Solomon, even Josiah and all the rest. It's only at ten centuries after the founder of the nationality Hebrew magically sprang up from scratch, with legend, legislation and odyssey.

The first prophets themselves, these self-proclaimed heralds

(I) Kings, book 1, chaji. X, verse 25, tlo the law tlu Sinai, no speak never neither Moses, nor the enta* touquo. nor Sinai. A poino Oaèò and Miehôa (1) they quote Moses, passing by, like an imlifiter, a darkness, and again, on the side of radically opposed passages, naked, the enta* touquo. Miehôe, sweet verses after quoting the prophet Moses condemns his Jehovah for the blood of his victims.

 Animal memo. No less formal, the Jehovah of Jeremiah declares that he ordered nothing in the desert, regarding the ftoloiwts/es (2). The books we have before us
 They were therefore not invented. I) The same Kséehias breaks the great brazen serpent, the Molochist roasting spit. He ignores so the pi. > use and posthumous explanation back Numbers, the lmuffait de Moïso.

Even more seriously, Ezekiel, editor of a good number of îvglcraont moisiques, the signs like its specific inspiration* ciale, granted to him personally by Jehovah, on the banks of the Chobar river, on C00, ten centuries after Sinai.
 Therefore, the prophets never knew a law-giver.
 in the manner of the entaecule. It only appears in Malachi (he), contemporary of Ezra and the memo that Ezra, if we the rabbis believe. A law of Moses is not read, by their own admission.
 from the Bible, that by the same Ezra, 452 years before Jesus.

I conclude that Moses is a myth, or that if he did exist,
 we know nothing, absolutely nothing, about his existence
 tence. Let's examine his legend: A symbolic figure, Moses was born in Chrisna's cradle and performed miracles.
 and the conquests of the God Bacchus, brandishing the serpent of sacred revelators. His place is next to Manu, Taaut, Zoroaster and Hermes. Let's rid history of them.

She has nothing in common with these moralizing reiters, simple framework of prescriptions and threats, sanction and con-astounding barbaric laws.

Did Israel itself go to Egypt? A question no less

(1) Hosea, chapter XII, verse 13. – Mithef., chapter VI, verses 4 and 7.

(2) Jeremiah, chapter VII, verse 22.

(3) Malachik, chap. IV, verse 4.

Mol, ««U tl'LSU.VKl.

obscure than Mujjo. We can at least say that if Israel has having touched Egypt, it's a completely different way and in a all other conditions than the biblical actors.

What alone would prove it, if necessary, is the powerlessness do the orthodox band i\ show, even today, a a truly historical testimony of this stay. Kilo It brings outrageous allegations to every soup, as one throws them from people to people, or two fabulous tales- Diodorus, Chaeremon, and all the ancient polemicists see in the .luifs the expelled lepers, while the Bible narro sa legondo burlesque et pompeuse h la fois avec Pharaohs like he had never met and back customs which greatly astonished Egypt. Only the historian Josephus, with some likelihood, to attach the Israel's stay during the Hyksos invasion.

11 is exceeded by several lengths by scholars who, more orthodox than Genesis and more zealous than the Rubii, decipher the Hebrew name in the mysterious Apcriu (1) employed to build the royal residences. They have already seen the bounty in the mushrooms of Arabio, the Sea crossing, moving in the current that almost engulfed Bonaparte, and the Sinai mirades in the resounding thunder amidst these lonely liars. When will the Sara's slippers and Jericho's trumpets

But, if they will allow me a respectful observation, Josephus was also learned and a friend of the prince. If they are Christians Look, he was Jewish, educated in holy books, anxious to establish the antiquity and predestination of his race. He had under the watchful eyes of the vanished springs. Did Josephus succeed? To demonstrate Israel's presence in Egypt, he cites documents in complete disagreement with the Bible and, apolo- clumsy giste, gives a bloody rebuttal to the cause he wants to defend.

(1) The moLa Apcriu » is found in the apyrus cited by t'icyte. U he boldly translated it as Hebrews.

118'

mmv.Mi

Everyone knows Josephus's (1) triangular story
My million fine priest: Egypt, sweet once conquered by the seconda by the leper priest Ocareoph who, according to Mnnê-Tuna, no, would be none other than Moses.

This piece, tlo Mnnéthnn, relies on an irrôcusaldo style. based on the testimony of hieroglyphs and monuments. I<03 Modornos works establish, in offot, vors la quator. xiômo dynasty the invasion of Egypt and its occupation poudaul five hundred years ago by peoples of Semitic origin. Having been driven out once, they renewed their conquest and were only definitively expelled by Amosis. Flavius Josephus himself is the guarantor of the version Egyptonomy only makes reservations about the lôpro attributed to Moses, a Semitic plague, without a pod revived by the Greco-Latin controversy.

I ask the men of goodness, what a connection between this invasion of the Hyksos or Chets and the Joseph's dreams, the bloody robe, Potiphar's dream, Lean times or fat times? The shadows "the The historian Josephus gouges out the eyes and his manifest suffisament by resorting to such pieces. Now, precisely Manetho, the alleged witness, testifies against him. If his Ancetros conquered Egypt with the Chets, under the Orders of Salatis and Moses, the Bible is a lie, since she remains silent about a glorious conquest and him substitute for wound narratives. If they have gone out with arms and baggage, after an honorable surrender, as Josephus wants Manetho, a link to the team. of vagrants, which is called the Exodus, then there are no more of certainty in this biblical narrative. He walks alone in history. its texture, more legendary than historical, must to be accepted or rejected in its entirety ipso fado.

Orthodox science will object, with great fanfare

(Il Josephus, Con'iù Apionem.

MilUlt'Il U'tSKAKI.

11!)

glosses, the similarities between the religions helu-m'ipio of Egyptian. Egyptian education, Mo'iso and other routes aralms. Or, loin do devoir quelque chose i\ l'Kgypto. In The Hebrew religion is his creditor. Soth-Typhon. Iliou of the pig and of the dno (1), assassin of Osiris, lo Imit llaxaïd. In Vnclto Rousseau, circumcision and other ceremonies communes with gentle cults, are an import from the Ilyksos.

no one has hardly entered Palestine except during the time of Solomon.
disputo un instant lo terrain an chaldaïsimo, et battue à ünrchôn.is by Nebuchadnezzar, definitively abandons the place. Chaldaïsimo has carried it everywhere and inscribed its triumph in the somber refrain of the deliverance of Egypt, Apollo threw against the closed armies of the Pharaohs.

In summary, the Pentateuch is the humanitarian novel of the Jewish nation, a spèco do Tçlfonaqm tout mndorne, of which Moïso is the idoménée ot Ksdras le l'ouélon. Plus hou-Rouso, like his sister, this new Salonto became a reality.
Kilo embodied a whole populace in his Vorbo made flesh and created one of the longest-lived nationalities of history.
No hoax ever succeeded. Humanity
all of it went astray on the learned path of Ezra.
honored, as thirty times a centenarian, nn delivered almost contemporary of Jesus Christ.

Because the work published by Ksdras, fixed by him in its main points, did not remain stationary. 11 underwent encoro do nombreuses ramboures, et no s'est vn arrêté et definitively closed only one hundred and fifty years before Jesus-Christ.

It was at this time that Judas Maccabeus took advantage of a
• A moment of respite to gather the books into a single volume and chapters scattered throughout the last war and put the

(1) Typhon [the red-haired one] is the ht-hreu name of the ancestor, who, in the entatcuque, is placed on the same rank as man.

(2) I'lkytk, The Reli'jion of the V/rè* Israelites {Ctrccht, l$S2). – Aoui« Wci f, chap. XIX.

190'

ÎÉIMVAII

seal h the work of Ezra (1). He has, from the rasto. amply paid, having a prediction made for him, and inserting a a dramatic passage to humans in the middle of the lion-ion do. Hnlñaiu (9). This addition, which serves as a date, was the last. Since Maccabeus, the Hebrew Bible, baptized of the purest blood of his zealots, a true palladium of Nationality and religion were sacred in every respect.
The Jews would have torn to pieces anyone who had

They hadn't always been so rigid. Because nothing had sorvi d'inventing the Pentateuch, if ie remains of literature
Jewish people inflicted a long and perpetual dismantling on interest.
Under penalty of grave failure, it was necessary to put the annals in diapason moïsiquo, will violently introduce into this mill Molnchs, kings, ceremonies, etymologies and idols, fair
l'kUtoira ot la nation.

Such is the work of Ezra, that bold prophet who, according to His apocryphal book, containing more than two hundred chapters, under the influence of a sacred punch, brought by an angel (3).
This is the secret to that uniform color and those catchy refrains.
repeated sounds that unite, in a monotonous nasal tone,
Books so diverse in so many ways. "Breath of God!" they say.
The good women and the orthodox scholars. No, work of the priestly caste of Jerusalem.

And this work is not a myth, like Moses and Aaron.
Even the most skeptical can follow him, the trail is found to see the mark of his scissors in a multitude of details
They miraculously escaped. How can these apparitions be explained?
strange things that clash with the official set and protest against the burial of an entire world? How to reconcile, by
For example, the Pentateuch with Amos, who does not see in the

(1) Maechsbêcs, book. U, ehap. He, ver*. 14.

(2) Xomires, chap. XXIV, verses 17 and 24.

(3) Ksuras, book IV, chapter XIV, verse 33: "Your voice tells me:" Open
"Open your mouth and drink." "Open your mouth and they handed me a cup."
"whose contents appeared to be water and resembled flame, etc."

MuLOCII ll'LSUAKI.

121

The place of the desert, Saturn and Moloch; the Uililo with Ezéchiol, who cnnfosso bien bas the age-old taste of Jehovah
For young children, the simple explanations of the ark,
•You Sabhath and of the 1'aque. With passionate execrations Worn back, Isaiah's back and Jeremiah's? Eulin, how to agree between them the Kings, the Paralipomonos, the Judges, certain terms mente of Pontus, and this onstassement of contra-sayings raised, so to speak, with pleasure, went from discouragement
All research and a complete halt to criticism? Eclecticism

Moloch, Ezra or the prophets. If the Penthouse says True, Isaiah, Jeremiah, and their predecessors lied. If they spoke according to the truth and their conscience, then Ezra He's a forger. Choose. As for us, our seat is... do.

All the writings of Israel have been reviewed, expurgated, scrutinized and sifted through, and even more than once, since Ewald recognizes in the pontifical three and even four redactions superimposed tions (1). Those who discarded the ancient Israeli alphabetic characters were burning idols and even the bones of priests, should not to show less zeal against the writings. Also a whole Is the aspect of Hebrew literature lost to us? Los idolatrous centers: Rama, Bethol. Gilgal, Jericho had renowned schools of scribes and prophets (2). The great Molochist society of Jerusalem boasted of its traditions, its books, its prophets and its scribes who were more or less unreliable, against whom the reformers are often reduced to shameful explanations. What What became of all those antique pieces? Wrapped in The general proscription, annihilated. The Orthodox Bible

(I) Ewald, Geschichte des Voûtes Israël.

(1) Kings, book. I", ehap, X, vara. 5; ehap. Chapter 5, verse 1, – Isaiah, chapter 29, verse 10; chapter 9, verse 15; ühap,XXV|ll,verç,7.– Jeremiah, chap. XXIII, verses. 11–, chap. XXXVll, verse 19. – Thrknes, chap. U, verse 14; chap. IV, verse lit.

122–

JEHOVAH

ello-memo contains the titles of a number of works gos that have not reached us: the Book of the Just, the Livres dos propliôtos Ga i, Natlmn, Anias, Addo, ln delivered of Dosai, the great annals of the kings of Israel and Judah (1), on which they were composed, in the reformist style, the Book of the United States, etc. All these works have perished. The index Ks Iras probably did not admit these books, which were too imprecise. Molocliismo's children and those who dedicated themselves to him, 4 uno impoliyable destruction.

From 14 double current and double influence: suppression On one hand, addition on the other. We have an example of this. instructive in the Book of Kings, a copy of a lost work,

The scribe of the Paralipomena still finds the Book of Kings. It removes what relates to the statues of Jehovah, 4 the idolatry of Solomon and of Abijah, to the famous a bronze bridge destroyed by Hezekiah (2). In rovancho, he immolate thousands of oxen and sheep, beat a million of Ethiopians from Zara and revels in exaggerations.

On this path, there's no stopping. We manufacture until... Under the Maccabees, hymns attributed to 4 Davids or 4 sons Music master Asaph, and an enlightened man who knows the Captivity and Cyrus 'joust twenty-six chapters 4 Isaiah.

Thus was the entire Hebrew canon produced.

And don't cry scandal, novel, utopia. History toire, cetto inflexible mécanique, has taken charge of you to refute. The phenomenon of Josiah and Ezra 4 at the same time has reproduced before our eyes, with the same circumstances, the same Adventures, same inspiration.

It was in the heart of the 19th century, on September 22, 1827, that JotapSW Smith, the new Ezra, receives the book from the hands of an angel

(t) JosUK, chap. X, verse. 13.—Kings, book. bed, chap. XIV, ver", 19 and —S*; book. IV, chap. XX, verses. 20. — Paralipomenae, book. I", chapter XXIX, verse 29 —, book II, chapter IX, verse 29, etc., etc.

(2) Paralipomenae, book. 1", chap. XIV, verse, 10; liv, II, chap. XIX. verse 19,

M0L0C1I II'ISRAEL

l?: 1 .

of the Mormon prophet, to whom he belongs, as his model, of numerous additions. A book which, by a singular Coincidence, unites the Hebrews in a common origin and the Americans, was composed, under Zedekiah, by Mormon, as clear and as well known as Moses. His sacred book on Smith preaches the reign of God on earth and appeals To Him belong the Latter-day Saints, the immense crowd fanatic responds to his voice, and after having suffered persecution Following the Pharaohs Yankees' movements, the long caravan plunges deeper. in the Montagnos-Rocheusos desert, h la rochorcho from a land of milk and honey.

They found it on the shores of the Great Salt Lake. They built their Zion of the last days and are there two hundred million.

fanatics of the Mormon prophet, which the Jews could never Moses's narrow-mindedness. It's not good, apparently, to go there.
contradict.

nor A PITRE III

The Moloohist Easter

Every year, on the first full moon of the month of Orisan (miiou island in March), the Jews celebrate the Exodus from Egypt.
their ancestors. Each marks their door with blood, and in the evening,
At sunset, eat a portion of the Paschal lamb.
It's oncoro, the great national and traditional holiday of Israel, the one to which they all remained faithful and which they formerly they would celebrate under penalty of death.

Nothing seems more innocent at first glance than this banquet.
A family affair, like the Jordaens. The mysterious departure of Egypt, the tales of Moses and the desert, the lamb, tender victim and harmless, all these details are not lacking
a certain freshness that gives rise to melancholy. But Let's dig a little deeper into this fairy tale, let's strip this lamb bare, Let's analyze this festival; all of a sudden the sheep will become a man; the party, a horror; the family meal lit up by a warm evening fire, a cannibals' feast to be held Atreus and Thyestes pale.

First of all, what is this word Passah? The Christians Look, fierce etymologists, find its root in "passio, pati, mnyn," suffering and pain. Josephus and Philon gives umpëxoia and Sut&m] p,x. Cesenius (1) finally,
More seriously, see in Passah, first he jumped, peace
he jumped over or he passed, finally transition, deli-

fl) (Jesemus, Themurity . t. II.

JKlIdVAII, Mol.ocll li'LSUAKI.

liû

n'anoei explanation to which its indirectly relates Exodus (1). God passes by the gates marked with blood in this massacre, of the firstborn of Egypt, which was

Children of the Jews, thanks to the blood that satiates its tallow.
The Exodus narrative has only one meaning: a human victim replaced by a lamb.

"The Passai" therefore removed the period when Israel was liberated annually, the divine obsession by sending (2) SOS children by fire, where the old pact was sealed and rejuvenated with human blood.

And from what darkness, from what thick clouds they reformed Didn't the mists surround him? They only present him to moment of its radical modification and without the slightest information about its early celebration. The name, we
As we have seen, the origin, the rite... so many mysteries.

Indeed, one can read the book of Judges and the gentle the first books of Kings, endowed in the Hebrew canon with a relative authenticity, without suspecting a Pique or a
It was just another day. And yet this religious festival and national Jewish festival, solemnity, capital of their worship, had The privilege of captivating them at all times. A Passah, on which provides, with little more than a few indirect notions, celebrated not in the first month of the year as since Ezra, but in the month of harvest when the Gibeonites
They offer on the cross the descendants of King Saul. The seventh •our, Saturn's day, was especially the day of the festival;
and it was no more a question of lamb than of deliverance of Egypt (3). The lamb is entirely modern, since Ezekiel,

(1) Exodus, chapter XII, verses 23–27.

(2) Compare the term Passah with the expression used by the Bible to designate sacrifice & Molech – to pass one's children through fire.
See Rais, chap. IV, chap. XVI, verse 3; chap. XVII, verses 17 and 31;
Chapter XXI, verse 6, etc.

(3) Exodus, chapter 23, verses 18–19. – Deuteronomy, chapter 16, verse 7.

JEHOVAH

1*8 '

later "Josias, no lo connaît pas et célèbre su l't\qne with calves and goats (1). The calf and the goats do not go back much further; for the predecessors of Ezoehiol, Aines and Isaiah (2), attack the Passing with a

Quite right, if it's a matter of slaughter.

The Book of Kois and the Paralipomonos, according to their habit Studies, no, do not agree on the time period of this innovation. One attributes it to Hezekiah, while the other honors him And Josiah, the great reformer. Furthermore, the Paralipomena, after contradicting the Book of Laws, they find a way to to contradict each other. Thus, Book II, Chapter XXX, They say of Hezekiah: "11 There was a solemnity in Jerusalem "as there hadn't been any in this city since the "Days of Solomon, son of David." Then the editor forgets his first date, and, defeated by the evidence, adds to Josiah's section five chapters after Hezekiah: "And "A Passover of this kind had not been celebrated in the country" "Israelite since Samttel the Prophet. No king of Israel" "had not celebrated a Passing like that of King Josiah. Nor" "Neither the priests nor the Levites had seen anything of "same (3). ■" So if a Passing of this kind has not been celebrated since Samuel, though no king has celebrated anything like it, Solomon and Hezekiah celebrated nothing at all, and the Paras Lipomenes lied about it. The extravagant editor of this the collection forgets what it just said five chapters earlier facing and unmasking her deceitfulness. Her terms are mutually exclusive. properly.

The answer to this priestly charade is not difficult to find and give a new specimen of the shameless back sacred historians. The Book of Kings, on which were written the Paralipomena, with the embellishments of a

(1) Zechiel, chap. XLV, verse 21.

(2) Amos, chapter IV, verse 5. Isaiah, chapter I, verse 13. – See, on all these subjects, Vatke, Die Religion cler Alton Testament.

(3) Paralipomenae, book. II, chap. XXXV.

MOUH'll d'isUVKI.

127

Saint Zelo had the idol Nohestan destroyed in Kzechins. Quickly. The editor of Paralipoménes, who seeks to place his Passah, the adjudicator, a pious iconoclast. Do memo les They have pointed out Solomon's idolatry: therefore they guard themselves "It is not appropriate to attribute to him any celebration of the Passai." Their tormos are, on the contrary, full of reserve. « l T n

> under the kings of Israel, and under the kings of Judah (1). » A very natural reserve, since Salomon is classified among the idolaters; and Josiah alone, the great actor of the tragedycomedy from the book of Jehovah. But the compiler of Pnralipomènes makes light of any annoying detail. He
He removes from his leader the idolatry of the son of David and does not see
No one else said Uculté to decorate it with his Passah. And there you have it.
how history is written, otso botches religion.... things Semites I

All these expressions... have been around since the Judges, since
"Samuel, Solomon, etc..." prove two serious facts:
first, the impudence of the reformists in congratulating themselves on precedence teeth in the ages, then the novelty of the Passah remarked denied, for which no one could recall the analogue. For the Passah has always been celebrated... under the judges David, Solomon,
The people of Israel and Judah. There is no unemployment. The reformers themselves confess it in their shadowy Phraseology: "Never a Passah like it, never a cere-
"No such ceremony had been celebrated, etc..." Only They refuse to provide any details about this ceremony, embarkation reassuring.

So who was the hideous victim replaced by the lamb, the rites so appalling that one tries to
To bury them forever in the folds of lies? Lo
The silence of the holy books speaks volumes; the Molochist spirit, known; and anyone who has delved into the gloomy mythology
Jehovah will answer: In Passover, they sacrificed backs

(1) links, liv. lY.clmp. XX1H, ca. 22.

J Kilo VAI

J';!*'

men, we ate their flesh, we drank their blood in a communion of crime and horror, and that is what makes Dait Cotte, a festival so dear to the Jewish people.

History teaches us that a savage people tiont i\ ses rites in direct proportion to their atrocity. Also, never race Phoenician could not completely extricate himself from the immolation human tion, imported by its ships throughout the world ancient, still cursed by Augustine on the ruins of Carthage. In Jerusalem, a monk, the old Moloch-Jehovah still exists side by side with the new one, and, even under

He was considered to have murdered Jesus Christ.

Co n'ost pas seulement à Jérusaloraqu'on oût pu retrouver traces of the Molochist Easter, metamorphosed by the Josias process. This substitution is so natural that co king reformer counts, if not imitators, of the less than two rivals. From heroic times, King Düphile in the city of Salamis substituted the immolation of a bull at the sacrifice of a young man. Until him, the priests very swallowed sacrifice annually an unfortunate that they pierced with a lance in the side to burn him solemn holocaust (1). Eusebo sharply reproaches these rites to the poor pagans, without suspecting that he carries the same baggage in his Eucharist.

The lamb of Jerusalem, this father of the host, is of the same family as the Salamis bull, but does not enter It didn't work with the easy memorization. The entire Jewish people laughed at bursts and mocked this lamb (2). These cannibals, habitu killed for human consumption, they wondered if Jehovah consented tended to descend from man to animal, and, up to the Cap- tive, and even as far back as Ezra, stubbornly rejected a barter deemed ineffective. So Manasses, the son of Hezekiah, offers his own son to Passah, and the two sons are sack-

(I) Ei'sèbe, Præparatio Ecangelii, liv. IV, §0.

(3) Paralipomenae, book. II, chap. XXX, verses. 10.

MUMJOU li'LSKAKI.

there"

Josiah's sisters raise up the idols that their father had cut down.

Because the culinary details of the Easter lamb are not less significant than its etymology and origins. First, the temple is the great slaughterhouse. Every Jew there he slaughters his lamb, puts the fat in the flame and pours the blood against the altar (1). 11 must, in addition, immolate equally ment of oxen for the chagiga or preparatory feast (2).

After the butchering, the roast. Moses commands this method of cooking for a dual purpose: the defense of the oxpressed and reiterated to eat raw flesh and to drink warm blood (II) denotes the taste of hardened cannibals. Furthermore, Jehovah, God of fire, must lick the victim with his big tongues reddened. Also, in the case where the Jew doesn't want to cook metal must be pierced with holes (4), so that, according to the expression

From the Persians, the Lord of Fire may eat. This vase
The fact that it was riddled with holes attracted the attention of commentators. It is,
It seems, the popularization of the Molochist machine. Because Nothing is left to chance in this dark kitchen. Should we Brooches?' They are made of pomegranate wood, the tree of Dionysus (5). Do we need two? Besides the concrete that crosses the one body, another must pass between the front feet and for sea cross (6).

However, this method of skewering a lamb shocks everyone culinary law is not natural. On the other hand, the crucified sacred death, the great torture, has always been a fatal flaw.
divine. Replace the lamb with a child or with a man, as before Josiah and Duphilus, you arrive at
The result, as follows: the victim is crucified, grilled over the fire.

(1) Exodus, chapter XII, verse 17; chapter XXXIV, verse 25.

(2) Liohtfoot, chap. XVIII.

(3) Exodus, chapter XII, verse 0; chapter XXIII, verse 18.

(4) Exodus, chapters XII and XXIII. – Deuteronomy, chapter XVI, verse 7.

(5) Exodus, chap. XXVUI, verse. 38.

(6) Saint John the Martyr, Dialogue with Tryphon, p. 218 (Edition (from London 1722)).

he

I. 'W ' JEHOVAH

The meal was served with great pomp. The canvases are the three divisions.
of the Molochist drama (1).

Cotto caisson même is progress. From verse 85,
Chapter XXXIII, of Echiel (2) compared with the passage explained from Samuel, book I, chapter XIV, verse 32, and increased defenses against drinking warm blood and manger of raw flesh, GhiUany (3) arrives at the hypothesis of Passing through Molochist territory in its primitive reality, the victim
She was crucified in broad daylight. In the evening, she was killed with a blow to the head spear in the heart, it is dropped after sunset,
We drink the blood, we eat the flesh. The Bible forbids...
eat the Easter lamb before sunset, at the time

quable and for fortuitous coincidence restored the old text.

Thus the victim is ready, cooked, roasted, and done. We don't
He hasn't eaten yet. The Jew prepares himself with the chagiga, a feast.
hearty and enjoyable, dominated by beef. But, at
As the end of the meal approaches, dread grows with the night; women who feel faint are excused;
Caribbean Jews even have children removed. So, arrive had the piece of horror that every Jew is obliged to eat at least the value of an olive. No plot no must remain the following morning.

If it was only ever about lambs and the Exodus from Egypt,
Why this violence, these precautions? Why the rebuff?
bin even orders the poorest to procure

(1) The word used in the Bible to express crucifixion means)
To dislocate or dislocate (Genesis, chapter 32, verse 25). In palo suspended. Luxadit member, translated Geseniua (Thesaurus, book II, 620).
Furthermore, the word Chaldean (Joshua, chapter VIII, verse 29) means in Arabic To roast or burn meat. Gdihany, in Ewerbeek, What is The Bible? p. 324.

(S) Here is what the Lord, or rather God, says: "Poss&terazJ-vone cetto "land as your inheritance, you who eat meats with the "Blood, when you lift your eyes to your impurities and your idols and who "Spread; human blood?"

(3) What is the Bible? p. 325.

MÜLOCU ll'LSUAKL.

i:n

Wine? Why these bitter herbs, a strange diet intended to overcome the disgust for cannibalism, these unleavened breads Monüles formerly of the blood of the victims P The Exodus is my guarantor: "You shall not sacrifice beyond the pressure"
» the victim's blood (1). •> Why this darkness of crime,
Who will cover him with their shadow this night?

There is no room for doubt. The very care of the Jews & ne not broken the bones of the lamb, these holy things remained intact relics once buried in the putrid depths of arches.

Such is this unique fetó in the splendors of the horrihlo.

tomorrow, and don't wait for Jesus to infect the world.
Myths tell of Dionysus being torn to pieces by the Titans.
They skewer it, roast it, and eat it. The grenadier, if famous in the myths of Passah, born from spilled blood of God. A divided ceremony, like a drama, reproduced knows this passion (jrefaiima) in the Dionysian myths where a live bull was kept, its bloody flesh eaten.
advantageously replaced God (2). We see that Dionysus-Jacchus and Jehovah are brothers.

But the flair of Molochism, its resurrection in all
The radiance of youth is the newest invention, the Christian Easter. In vain the Assyrians and Chaldeans have Having destroyed the ancient Passah, the Neo-Persians concealed its origin under apocryphal fables; in vain the major part of the nation forgot even its origin and history.
11. There are still Sadducees left to repel the spirit prophets. Molochism had its revenge and its
The triumph was complete. Jesus sacrificing himself to his father, wasn't he?
not the mask of Kronos Saturn, immolator of his son Jeud on the altar of Sidon? The God dies at Passah on the

(1) Encode, chap. XXIII, verses. 8; chap. XXXIV, verses. 25.

(2) Clement of Alexandria, Adversus gentes, chap. XXII – Cheeks Fiemicds, De errore profane religionis.

l.'fc} . JKllûVAl, M0UÛCH IllSHAKI.

sacred cross (1), 11 dies from a spear thrust like life* Timo was in Crete and Carthage. His bones were left intact, at him, holy Jehovah's Witness, while their legs are broken of his companions; and, laid in the tomb, mourned by Holy women, he rises again like Adonis.

This is once again no more about lamb than it is about Exit from Egypt. Molochismo is frank at least; "This "This is his flesh! This is his blood!" The critique of Passah demonstrates the perfect heresy of the deniers of the divine presence.

(1) Us lamma sabachlani, falsely translated as "My father, for*
"What, have you forsaken me!" means: "My father, why have you-
"You are sacrificed!"

The God of reformists

We have just united with Moloch. Now to Jehovah of the reformers, co-progress on our side if repoussing
of the Jewish people

We were unable to make it presentable, despite...
All the patching up, this Moloch cleaned up. All the efforts,
The embellishments and the pruning have failed. Yet he traded his cannibalism for simple gluttony;
His thirst for murder, against the thirst for gold. He turns many unleashing his fury against his former disciples and ancient allies of Israel. But he remains nonetheless a fierce, hateful God detestable.

The prophets themselves, those respectable men who
We have praised humanitarian morality on so many occasions, were unable to completely extricate themselves from the awful reality which surrounds and encloses them against their will. They have no opportunity to wrest Israel from its bloody practices only through pro-mass of a universal massacre of the Gentiles and by the threat ideal butcheries of Exodus and Deuteronomy, From there, amidst the most beautiful pages, these howls, these roars...
wild sions, these frenetic fits that transport us far removed from their moral precepts and bring us back right in the middle of Moloch.

You can't change human nature. Let's examine it then.
a little like the God of Ezra as presented in the Bible, within us 134.

1ÈHØVAH

placing, no fût-co qu'une minuta, au point do vuo orthodox.

Without being as strict as lo Tulrnud who reports, ù uno
To the nearest league, the length of Jehovah's beard, one can see in the revised God of Israel, if not a human being,
at least a being endowed with sounds and human faculties, who talks, walks, looks, gets sad, gets irritated and his reply like man. His very form, when by an old habit he does not turn into flame, is that of man as Abraham (1), Moses and the seventy saw old men; his usual dwelling place, the sky, from which he no sort

Tomplo. He was strolling at midday under the cool shade of a beautiful garden (2) and loves to play in the Carmel forests, to fulminate from the top of Sinai, and to reign on the holy mountain Tagne do Zion. The Bible is unanimous in attesting to this in more than fifteen places the finesse of his sense of smell which does not yield to him nothing like that of Homer's gods: Noah erected an altar & "Jehovah and burned clean animals, and Jehovah felt "That sweet scent," he said to himself, "Never, never." "I will curse no more (3)." A promise poorly kept, moreover, like all those of the Gods. Leviticus (4), Exodus (5), Numbers, etc., speak of sweet aromas for Jehovah. The Jews flatter this delicate taste for good food. feed the most comfortable meals to this monster devour rant whose fury does not subside, whose good graces no are acquired only through satiety. If they no longer give him Rather than livestock, God focuses on quantity. For his His appetite is ferocious; his hunger insatiable. Calves, heifers, Goats and yearling lambs parade continuously on his altar (6). At each meal the wine waters the flagstones of alen-

(1) Genesis, chapter JU, verse 5; chapter XVII, verse 22.

(2) Genesis, chapter 11, verse 8.

(3) Genesis, chapter VII, verse 20.

(4) Leviticus, chapter 1, verse 13.

(3) Exodus, chapter XXIX, verse 18 – y shades, chapter XVU–, verse 18.

(6) Leviticus, chapter 1, verse 4.

MOLOCIL IIIISRAEI,

rjô

turn (1). God especially recommends not to forget the salt (2) and dislikes both honey and fermented products. CUaquo Saturday, Sabbath day, twelve loaves of bread, the finest Hour of wheat, take placo on the golden table of the sanctuary, Each one contained, it is said, so many food substances that a piece the size of an olive was enough for satiate nn man (3).

In the grip of a bloody sorto do dipsoraanio, this Jéltovah clamoring for blood! Every priest must watering the symbolic horns of the altar with blood and the days the autol of the holocausts ot the areho on ost humoctéo at least once a year (5). Every sin is expiated, every treaty so A sign with blood! (fl) Blood! That is Jehovah's cry to through the ages. When the murderous God throws himself upon Molso

With her son uncircumcised, the mother only has time to appease him with blood. If he delivers Canaan, it is for blood, in return of a large harvest of human and animal victims males, to satisfy his innate love of destruction, his Antipathy towards life and nature. Nothing equals the joy of Jehovah, seeing the butcheries, as fictitious as they are colossal holy books. Drunk with blood and victims, he belched
So, for once, from his bleeding mouth, back words of gentleness and contentment. When David introduced the ark, that sweet casket, in Jerusalem, we stop at every sixth step to slaughter a calf and a bull (7).
His worthy fib. Solomon, at the inauguration of the great temple, sacrifice one hundred and twenty thousand sheep and two hundred twenty thousand oxen. It's fair to say that if the figure is

(1) Numbers, chap. XV, verse 5; chap. XXVII, verse 14.

(2) Leoticus, chap. II, verse 13.

(3) Exodus, chapter XXV, verse 30 – Josephus, Jewish Antiquities
liv. Et, g 10. – Lmjoius, Antiquités judaïques, p. T46.

(4) Leoticus, chap. XVn, verse 3.

(5) Leoilique, chap. XVI, verse 2.

(S) Deuteronomy, chap. 1 "MV.

(7) fiais, book 'U, chapter VI, verse 12.

JEHOVAH

13G.

The intention itself is not questionable. In a century less fabulous, under Herod, at the time when all the Jews of the empire
The worst Romans gathered at the rebuilt temple, the altar Johovic floated, like an island, in a sea of blood smoking.

God takes the trouble to explain the reasons himself of his predilection. Not very advanced in the science of his time, He believes he sees in the blood, the animus, that life he loves both savoring and destroying, and reserving this divine dish for oneself

If we delve deeper into the morality of this God reformed, what a somber gaze cast into the depths of evil and the abysses where nameless things are perceived, Formless creations such as the mind has never dreamed of!

Certainly, there are relatively honest individuals involved. You are among the people of the three Gods, and the Greek deities, for example, keep until the middle of their passes or of their vices something human. But the Jehovah, However reformed it may be, it retains a ferocious and evil nature Dangerous to approach, deadly to behold. "Anyone who has seen Jehovah must die (2)!" Such is the resounding of the Holy books: "Woe to me!" cries Isaiah, seeing Jehovah in the Temple (3). "Woe to me!" he cries Gideon, seeing the angel (4). a. Sanctify Adonai. I am "your terror and your horror (5)" repeats the tender Isaiah. The psalms perpetually call him the terrible one, the afflicted one Rook, the atrocious one (6). His holy ark, receptacle of the idol, participates in this poisonous influence and strikes indiscriminately He lies to everyone who approaches him, friends or enemies.

(1) L'Entifjue, chap. XVIIU, verse. 4 and 11.— Pbieon, De eo quod deterius, p. 170 (Paris 1640).

(2) Numbers, chapter 15 II, verse 13; chapter 18, verse 3 – Exodus, Chapter 31, verse 20 – Kings, book 1, chapter 5, verse 10.

(3) Isaiah, chapter VI.

(4) Judges, chapter VI, verse 22.

(5) Isaiah, chapter VIII, verse 12.

(6) Psalms, LXXXVIII, verse 8; LXXV, verse 12, etc.

MOL.OCII u'iskaki.

137

God, despite all the efforts of the prophets, is not not just wicked, but perverse. 11 allegorical this love and this silk of evil, this cruelty at the same time This base and envious jealousy, this system, was both sophisticated and refined. of Jesuitical temptation, finally this whole cycle of misdeeds com taken under the general term Satanism. Hypocritical and Cowardly, he is horrifying. This monster revels in evil. 11

He provides opportunities to strike. A subtle tyrant, he consoles the temple with ironic joy the torments of its victims and blows the whistle on the infraction at his command in order to have the supreme joy of punishing her. To become an executioner, he becomes an agent provocateur. It is the God who repents of having created the man.

This God is infamous. Not one of his gifts is without concealment. a trap, not one of its benefits is without a scourge. Proud does he put the Jews in charge of leading them to a land of milk and honey, he constantly evades his promise, he seizes with both hands every opportunity to postpone its effect, and finally, having been formally notified,

A tiger could not have played better with its prey.

A hideous sight indeed: this God and this nation in chains. one to the other! God clinging to her like a vulture, the nation dragging Jehovah around like a ball and chain. It's vampirism, historical vampirism.

When the Jews, destitute of everything, devoid of food, find enough gold to melt down a calf, the reformed God orders the Levites to kill twenty-three thousand by the sword Hebrews. Here is the decree in all its fantastical, baroque glory. bare: "Moses said: Come today with your hands full" "for Jehovah, each one with his son and his brother and bring- "May the blessing be with you (1)." Another time, this Proud Jehovah, Moses's true henchman, kills by a epidemic fourteen thousand seven hundred Hebrews, and one does not

(1) Bosode, chap. XXXU, clothes. 'f>.

138

JEHOVAH

He only lets go by anesthetizing him with incense (1).

Shall we list the executions of Corô and Abiron, Aaron's children's clean backs, forgetful backs of coals sacred (~) ? plagues, fires, snakes, all the murders of which Jehovah is the instigator or accomplice? No. The pen falls in disgust. And when you think about it... All these stories were written with an edifying purpose. beneficial and have no other aim than moralization through the

This very God, so fearsome to the people from whom he came proclaims the tutelary deity, shamelessly prostitutes himself to other nations. By the admission of its own holy books, this
The traitor disorganizes the resistance, sows discord and
for. His prophet Jeremiah, facing the besieging army Jerusalem, predicting the ruin of the temple and the Captivity, sends goals with orders to submit to Nebuchadnezzar of Jehovah's portion (3). God goes into the enemy camp and reveled in the flames of Jerusalem. The downfall of Israel consoles him for the ruin of his sanctuary.

Faced with such a range of packages, I have asked more than once if Jehovah shows love to Israel or hatred, if he is a national and tutelary God, then so be it.
enemy deity devoted to the annihilation of objects
his hatred.

This idol, whose face had been washed with great difficulty, is demanding... his worshippers, the obedience of slaves bowed under the sword, whose justice and morality are bloody whims, is well, the most infernal deity that ever inhabited heaven, and be never emerged from a human brain.

(1) Numbers, chap. XVI.

(2) Levitiqtse, chap. X, verse 2.

(3) We will not forget that, in this chapter, Jehovah is appreciated at from the point of view of orthodox books, abstracting from personal opinions sonnelles of the author exposed in Y Historical. We reconstruct Here is the Jehovah of Ezra with the materials he has given us, without ME.OCH P'ISKAEI.

139

God civilizes himself in his good time. 11 arrives an res-point of human life. Well, the prophets, these men venerable men cannot see in every disaster, in every scourge of Israel than a manifestation of its God. When, by an extraordinary metamorphosis, still a dead letter for the most part Part of the criticism, Jehovah splits in two and curses what he
he had cherished until then, so he finds in his conversion Môme, raw material for meat, o. Opening eyes to certain suspicious parts of his cult, here are the terms in which he apostrophy, his worshippers too slow to follow his about-faces:

"I will send against them the sword, famine, and plague, and I
 "I will deposit them like bad figs that one cannot
 "Eat them, because they're rotten. And I will continue"
 "in the sword, in famine, and in pesto, and I gave them-
 "I will cause vexation to all the kingdoms of the earth, and stup-"
 "fear, and hissing, and reproach to all nations"
 "which I will have rejected, because they did not listen"
 "My words that I sent them by my servants"
 "Prophets, rising in the middle of the night and en-
 "Seeing... etc. (1)."

God is a sophist. To explain his actions and escape
 In response to the accusation of inconsistency, he invents a code of dishonor that perpetuates the sins of the fathers in the sons up to the fifth generation. The so-called Jehovah reformed has the infamy of saying: "So, because you do not
 "You didn't want to follow my advice, I gave you
 "precepts that were not good and laws in the-"
 "which you should not live; and I have defiled you"
 "in your gifts when I ordered you to sacrifice me"
 "The firstborn of the vulva (2)." What hypocrisy!

But, one might say, the Jewish people who, in exchange for so much blood, reaped only slavery, the Jewish people who saw the
 The illusions of his God flee like the mirages of misfortune.

(1) Jeremiah, Revelation XXIX, verse 17, – Isaiah, chapter XL111, verse >fj.

(2) Ezekiel, chapter XX, verse 25,

JEHOVAH

MO

Will he finally open his eyes and recognize the lie?
 of such dearly paid patronage? No; Jehovah comforted him swearing to him to bring all nations down to his level of esteem lissement, exalts it with a grandiose and criminal perspective nelle. 11 promises him the devastation of nations, the bloody orgies of universal massacre and rape. He predicted the Messiah, a vice-God, a warrior Christ who will lead them to his pious works. He dreams of mountains of corpses and of bit of blood. This is the folio furioso.

"God is coming from the south," cries Habakkuk (1), "he
 "The sacred Mount Pharan arrives. Before him walks
 "The fever, and from his steps the plague is born. He stands there. He
 "He measures the earth, he looks at the nations, and they tremble"

The purest, most advanced prophets, of whom we have we so often admired morality and human polemics
The militias are all the more relentless against the Gentiles.
"This is the day when the Lord Sebaoth takes revenge on his "enemies, and, behold, the sword devours them. He is satiated and "is drunk with blood. For the Lord Sebaoth has a sacrifice
"in the north, near the Euphrates River (2)."

The descriptions of the pure Isaiah are imbued with a dark and appalling aesthetic: "Come, nations, and "Listen. Peoples, lend an ear, let the earth be attentive-" » tive, and the whole universe, even plants, because "Jehovah is angry with all the nations and in
"fury against all their armies, and he put them to death"
b and he gave them to be ceremonial. And the inanimate bodies-
"My bodies are thrown here and there. A stench rises from the corpses."
"And entire mountains melt into blood."
"The heavenly army disappears. The two are rolled up like "a book and all their legions are rushed like
"the leaf that falls from the vine and the ripe fruits of the

(1) Habakkuk, chap. U.

(Z) Jekémie, chap. XLVI.

MOIOCH u'iSBAEL,

141

"Fig tree. Soft sword in the sky is drunk with blood. He des-"
"will fall upon Idumeans, upon this people whom I am going to judge and
"to put to death. The sword of the Lord is dipped in >• blood, etc. (1). »

And further on: "Who is this who comes from Edom with..."
"Red clothes, on the Bosra side? How handsome he is in..."
"His stole, marching in the company of his courage!"

"I am the one who speaks justice and am the champion of
"Hello.-Why then is your robe red and your garment
"Like that of the treaders in the winepress?" – Me, everything
"Alone, I trod the grapes in the press. I neither trod them
b at the feet of my fury and their blood was spilled on b my clothes, and I stained them all. For on the day of the Revenge is in my heart. The year of redemption.
b came. I looked everywhere and I didn't

My own arm supported me; my indignation saved me.
 b I trampled the peoples underfoot in my fury. I I became intoxicated with my indignation and I spilled it on the earth
 b all their marrow, etc. (2). b
 In Joel, the Jews themselves are the executioners of Jehovah's butchers: "Come, peoples, draw near to the b Valley of Jehoshaphat. There, I will be present to judge all b 1® peoples. You others (Hebrews), you only have to
 b. raise the fires to cut the ripe harvest. Arrive,
 b. Strike and trample. For the winepress is full, and
 b. The vessels overflowed. Their perversity was too great. The b peoples are in the Valley of Slaughter. Lu day of b Jehovah rose over the Valley of Slaughter. The sun and "The moon has darkened. The stars have withdrawn their b splendor. Jehovah will roar from the heights of Zion.... b The whole ends with the New Jerusalem, the usual finale of these kinds of pieces: "And Jerusalem shall be holy; and the

(1) Is«B, chap. XXXIV.

(2) IsME, char. LXIU.

JEHOVAH

142

"Strangers will no longer be in its midst. And in
 "On that day, the mountains will exude sweetness, and
 "The hills will flow with milk. There will be water."
 "In all the rivers of Judah. A spring will flow forth"
 i> do the house of Jehovah and will irrigate the back stream "Thorns (1)."

All the prophets revel in these castles.
 Palestine, adorned with all the splendors of the imagination
 Semitic. "The sons of foreigners will build your walls," he said.
 "Jehovah, Jerusalem, and kings will serve you. Your gates will be continuously open; they will not be closed
 "Neither day nor night, so that the riches of "nations and that their kings be brought to you. Cnr, the people and the
 "A kingdom that does not submit to you will perish; and I will make of "These nations, a dreadful desert. The glory of Lebanon"
 "will come to your home. The fir, the boxwood, and the pine will adorn my 0 sanctuary, and I will glorify the place of my feet. The "Children of those who humiliated you will come to pray"
 "Before you, and all those who slandered you will worship the
 They will trace your steps and call you the city of the Lord, the

• hated and that no one passed through your midst, I tell you
"I will restore the pride of centuries, the joy of generations. You
"You will suckle the milk of nations. The breast of kings will nurse you—"
b tera. You will know that I am your Jehovah savior, your "Redeemer, your stronghold of Jacob, etc., etc." (2)

Come then, Jehovah, and be judged by the law that you have done. When, in the ideal desert walk, you... let you claim all the crimes as your own and strip them of them
your people, when amidst the deadly lightning you hurled
The reformist Decalogue, did you ever think you'd be subject to it?
day, that your faithful servants, the innovators of your fraud

(1) Joel, chap. III.

(2) See Isaiah, chapters LX and LV, verse 4. – Zechariah, chapter VI, verse 15, chapter VIII, verse 3; chapter XIV, verse 16. – Jeremiah, Chapter XXX, verse 8. – Sofhony, chapter III – Isaiah, chapter LXI, etc.

M01.0CH ü'iSRAKI. 1–13

Pious women will make your door, and you will appear as an accused person.
in the court of Reason?

What is morality? It is not a vile slave that one can to subjugate at will, a whim intended to subjugate the morsels such, a tasteless constraint from which divinity emerges, a something to which one can say: "You will go this far and you
"You'll stop there," Impetuous Torrent, she carried away the cult and temple, priests and gods, kings and Levites. She broke the bonds and broken the shackles with which you thought you had cast him aged, the immortal 1 She stands today trembling.
She reclaims her usurped glory. She accuses you, our queen.
all, before whom you will be the first to bow your head.

You say, "No, you shall not kill," and your hands are full of blood and all you can think about is murder.
You claim disasters and plagues for your work.
You have only managed to turn your people into a band of assassins and You used to boast of trampling nations underfoot, like grapes in the winepress. Your prophets lay down against you. Your very name accuses you and proclaims you a murderer, whether you kill with the sword, destroy with fire and poison sons by the plague.

You said: "Non fortum fades (you shall not steal),"
And you only speak to your people in the language of theft. You don't Give only the property of others. Will you hand over Canaan, men?
women, children and animals, to share the bloody gold,

still those who, exalting their lust, fanatical their minds, you have only been able to offer them one ideal in the future: Spoliation!

"You shall not covet," and not one of our joys, not one of our glories and our superiorities that you are not envious of. Crouching in the sky, you contemplate With fury, the triumphs of the earth. Intelligence, freedom, Civilization, the goads of your burning regrets, are your enemies. You put your fist on Babel and your feet on Nineveh.
You get along with all despotisms as well as with all the

JEHOVAH, MOJ.OCH Ji'LSRAKL

IM

scourges. You invented asceticism. You came sneakily.
how to pronounce praise for it, in order to disgrace humanity and to make him reject these brilliant superiorities which are his glory
And your eternal despair. May bile choke you, God.
jealous !

The commandments concerning your neighbor do not look at you
Toothless, a unique monster in nature.

A gigantic incarnation of evil, a celestial Gargantua and fierce, more than Rabelais could have dreamed of, a hypocritical, perverse God, assassin, accomplice and instigator of all the crimes, that the
the most ardent curse that came forth from your fertile lips falls on you! Humanity, bloody and slain from your claws!
It repels you and condemns you to contempt and hatred. Dark Avatar, nailed to the pillory of the centuries, be cursed!

CHAPTER V

Beaumé

NEW TABLE

Period of the making of the books of Moses and the violent formation of the Jewish people

Ezra and Nehemiah.

458–454.

Defense of foreign marriages. Proscription of opponents.
and the appearance of the books known as the Books of Moses.

Death of Nehemiah.

408.

Government of 3 high priests.

Eliarib,

Judas.

Jeans,

Jaddus.

Alexander's entry into Jerusalem.

332.

Conquest of Judea by Ptolemy Soter.

323.

12

Mii.

JKII0YAI

United I° r,

Simoon lo Juste.

2i«–281.

Add to the canon Esilras, Nehomio and the Paralipomena.
Translation of the Septuagint, under Ptolemy Philadelpho.
275.

Lileazar,

Manasso.

The kings of Syria and Egypt are fighting over Palestine.
Onias I(.

211.

Joseph,

Simeon.

Domination of the Syrians.

203.

Onias III,

Jason,

Onias IY, also known as Menelaus.

172.

The struggle of Judaism against the Hellenism of the Selencides.
The Maccabees.

166.

Judas Maccabeus.

107461.

The definitive gathering of the holy books and the covenant with the Romans.

How a people is forged through sheer willpower and boldness, so crafted a nationality and a history,

Me. eye h'isuaIîI.

This is what we learn from the composition of sacred books.
This is what the centuries have contributed to the initiative's success.
human.

It is from 458 to 100), laying three conta years of darkness relative silence, that the autocratic government high priests, instituted by the Persians, elaborated in of authority and preaching, and shaped this nation at leisure. vigorous bed which suddenly burst forth like a whirlwind, stirred and astonished the world for three centuries, by a dazzling parade of heroes, revealers, or tribunes, ot only fell under the combined forces of empiricism the man.

For if the people of Ezra are no longer the people of David, the people of the Maccabees are even less the one who returns from Babylon.

An iron fist, an implacable standard, swept across all these heads, on all these brains, on all these aspirations. The Jew is cast in an identical mold, walks in a pre-drawn circle, acts and thinks only by order. Nancy. He is the man of the law, the champion of regulations. of the Eternal. The least will be killed for the revelation of the Sinai and the apocryphal dialogues of Moses and Jehovah.

He is certainly mistaken, and we have proven it. But This mistake nonetheless gives him strength and a Incalculable reach. Go tell him that Moses is from the 16th century. century and its law of the vt", that his Jehovah, ex-Baal-Moloch, enjoyed himself under this title of "Ions, the children of the land," he told you will tear you apart or stone you, as he did to the deacon Stephen. 11 believes in the holy king David, this fanatical Molochist whose hymns are still sung in all churches false; to the holy King Solomon, drawn into his old age He leaves himself to the idolatry of foreign women. He believes in the ark and the altar of burnt offerings, these dark machines of abomination and horrors. The Jew of the Maccabees does not It seems to have nothing in common, retaining nothing of its ancestors. It is a (imvro il'ai t marked with a special caohot, the personal work- the lineage of Ezra and his successors.

JEHOVAH

HS

Because the reform of Ezra would have removed the attempts analogous to Hezekiah and Jeremiah, without the theocracy three centuries-old laws which knew, imperceptibly and through a a skillful mixture of severity and assertions, the fairo accep- to be Jews. The motives of the new reformists were not nothing less than noble and selfless. Scribe and doctor of Ezra, while undermining Molech, wanted to subject the law to The people never belonged to their caste. It was the violent coup d'état that personal. He cleared the land rather than he built.

sit, and this half-century struggle (until the death of Nehe-mieen 408) remained undecided without the authority of the kings of Persia tipped the scales. Finally, first and last.
The priest's argument is that the sabra combined with the whip serves to outlaw
the ancient monuments of Israel, imposes books and a new alphabet, the Sabbath rest, the new Passover, the prohibition of foreign women, and continues to mow down that the dissidents' final retirement, under the leadership of Manasseh, the high priest Jehoiada's own son, and son-in-law of Sanballat, governor of Samaria.

The work was only half done. There was still much to be done.
planting this reform, with great difficulty, mistress of a field
so hotly contested, to dress the wounds, to mop up the injuries
sure, to erase a hateful origin and make people forget down to memory. It wasn't enough to invent Moses, to to use his voice to strike and prescribe, if a single witness or a single rebel could come and overthrow the treachery.

It was still necessary to establish and consolidate invincibly by education, this faith whose terror had thrown 1 m seated, to instill it willingly or by force in the generations and their pre-to feel as a centuries-old point of honor what was the late and violent work of a caste. This was the work of the priest, to whom he is so wonderfully suited by His gifts
tincts, his position and habits, a dull, tenacious work,

>1»•I.oi'll li'LSKAEI.

14't

inuol. who laughed three centuries ago and encastra tout un poupio dans a tight organization, without raising a fuss or a murmur
a soft tissue rises to the victim.

World history offers us more than one example of these silent transformations under the exported hand of the priest, 18th-century Europe long accused of implausibilities
The travelers who spoke to him about an entire empire Jesuit in Paraguay; and, not so long ago, what was not our astonishment 4 the discovery of this mor- society Mone emerged from deserts as if by magic. The siî.ncô is the character of these slow priestly elaborations tales. They only appear fully armed.
So far, nothing has leaked out. No details either.
over this long period of three centuries during which the Jewish people formed and grew within the personal empire and Macedonia

milk or two, emerging on the surface, do they denounce the tra-a latent force operating in the depths. We see, for example, continuing the manufacturing or reworking the reading of the holy books with the high priest Simeon the Just which adds to the Hebrew canon Ezra, Nehemiah and the famous Paralipomena (1).

It's because the priest keeps his feelings to himself and mocks noisy satisfactions. Completely focused on implementation of legislation that handed over a people to them and endowed you with this spiritual and temporal power, the ideal of theocracies, successors and continuators of Ezra, petty czars, only interfered under duress and coercion in the affairs of the outside. Provided their property was not touched, the Jewish people, and that no one opposed the functioning of the so-called laws of Moses, their charter, they paid

(1) We see no problem in admitting this hypothesis
Orthodox Christians, although Spinoza is more difficult. In his famous
A treatise on kineology and politics, a masterpiece of criticism, it brings back to compose these books long after John Maccabeus and the attributed to the Pharisees.

lÈlIOVali

15"

conciencionsomont tribute to the strongest in the guorros of competition of Alexander's suecossours.

It was only in 170 BC, when the Antiochids, offended by this particularism which created a
A state within a state, they wanted to assimilate the Jews into their people.
and violently introduce Hellenism, which Mosaic flatly refused any transaction and showed for the first times its power of resistance. In 170, the spirit of Moses-Ezra, infused for two centuries, has passed into the blood of Jews, and, far from prostituting themselves to idols with ease fantastic, which the Bible attributes to them up until the Captivity, the Jews overwhelmingly preferred death to apostasy. This was a A sight without parallel in Judea. Old men were seen to die in torment at the age of seventy rather than children
to throw themselves joyfully into boiling cauldrons, mothers to watch, without flinching, the slaughter of their sons, things unknown in Jewish history, direct fruits and Recent developments in Levitical education. Mosaic law, inquisitorial and executioner until then, had for the first time his mar-

the books of Isaiah and Jeremiah.

This attitude and these dogmas are so far removed from Jewish customs, which at first glance they do not know how to adapt them to the circumstances of normal life. Thus violently subjected, under penalty of death, to the rest of the Sabbath which replaces the Sabbath orgy, and accustomed to the observing punctually for three centuries of a peace without clouds, the Jews are ignorant of the art of reconciling this order with the necessities of national defense. Certainly, this scruple is nothing new. Even according to the orthodox books, there was nothing new. neither under the Judges, nor under the Kings, nor have we ever seen, Before Ezra, did a Jew allow himself to be slaughtered defenseless on the day of Saturn. It has been different since Ezra. Ptolemy Soter takes advantage of this sacred day to enter without resistance at Jerusalem. Not a single Jew, eyes fixed on his text from Ezra,

ME.OOH U'ISKAEI.

131

u'oso prendre lo glaive pour rorapro lo ropos sacré. Plus lard, the heroic bands who took refuge with the grnd-prétro Mathatias in the desert, to inaugurate the guerrilla struggle Those who are supposed to bring about the independence of Judea, dare not still have to defend themselves against Syrian troops on the day of the Sabbath and present their bare breasts to the throat-cutters.

It was necessary for Mathatias to solemnly decide that one could He was going to defend his life on the Sabbath so that the Jews, victims of absurd rigorism, not all massacre down to the last man in honor of the law. Moses.

These trial and error processes, these attempts, these improvements, all testimonies to the learning of Jews in the the so-called Law of Moses and its recent emergence. These famous books, as we have seen, were not definitively stopped that half a century before Christ, by Judas Maccabeus. he left his mark right there in the Pentateuch (1) and in the Book Psalms, almost tones composed or reworked during this heroic struggle, of which they were the Marseillaise, to countless exploits.

For persecution that does not uproot takes root; and nothing tempers a people like a guardian of nationality and Religion abruptly ended by triumph. The Bible

Pure of the nation, true palladium of an entire people. One
The theocratic peace of three centuries had allowed the slow development and continuing education, under the dual guidance of the word and the sword. A triumphant war of a
The half-bard came to put the seal on the priestly work and the consecrated by a success as glorious as it was unexpected. From the Then, the Jew embraced the book with a frenzied love for which his fathers had perished and triumphed over, and put to the deto split open and proclaim it with all the energy he had expended against the futile attempts of Jeremiah and Josiah. One

(1) Chap. iV oi-dcasua.

152-

JEHOVAH

wild spirit of indopemiance, which would not be deponrva of greatness if it did not originate in instincts of selfish domination, hovering from the heights of Zion over all of Asia and gave birth to the heroic struggle of the Jews against the empire Roman.

Judea was the last province to fight for control Dominating she-wolf of the universe. A series with a difference may Jesus, alive, illuminate this last part of his history and courageously revolts, in the name of Jehovah, against the tribute of the Caesars. All these heroes of the last days, Judah the Gaulonite, John of Giscala and Simon de Gioras, the Eleazars and the Barcochebas, defending on foot at foot the walls of their temple and the independence of their countries, equal to the glory of Vercingetorix and Arminius.

It could be said that then all of ancient life, dead
Everywhere else, it seemed to have taken refuge among the Jewish people,

. unwittingly enlivened by the Greek spirit to which he had not been able escape. Lush vegetation, Essenes, Pharisees his own, Sadducees, Zealots, Hellenistic or Alexandrian Jews drins, springs from the sacred book transfigured by gloss and embroidery on the biblical canvas of almost modern arabesques.
A dizzying vitality rushes one against the other and against abroad all these energetic sects, where one would find easily 1st parties which are the life of nations and say It still polluted the political scene today. Rarely has one expended as much courage and devotion as in this

Jewish history. The divisions of these violent minds, a sign of truth, since nothing is as united as ignorance and error their downfall was the cause of their ruin. If they had succeeded If they had been in agreement, they would have pushed back the empire.

Such were the prodigious effects of a little-suspected cause known until now, the broad current flowing out of Galilee for to profoundly shake the world.

The personality of Ezra, the priest who regulates the movements elements of a people with the regularity of religious ceremonies

MOLOC1I OF ISRAEI.

153

gious, is imprinted on the Jewish people, like the personality Jesus's cautious approach has rubbed off on Christianity. Two Jews, from various eras, have changed the face of nations. Both mystical and metaphysical causes must give way the step h reality and bowing before the supreme agent h who Nothing can resist: the force I

This artificial fabrication of the Jewish people is the enormity demonstration of the omnipotence of force, for the good as for evil, for salvation as for per- version of the people.

Jnteliigmii mlwtem!

PART THREE Jesus, Moloch.

niAMTRK PREMIER

Historical

We go to see the Semites and the youth. We we surprised in our achunomont contra la natura, their contempt for nations, their continued deification. We have contemplated facing faco lo néant do cotte grandeur et de cette dignity, imagined fruits of a primal revelation. We imported by them into our laws, our customs, our society.

Leave Nonnus, Lydus, Lucian, Eusebius, Porphyry, Plotin, the horde of Alexan compilers and encyclopedists drins. Abandon these shores of Semitia where Moloch howls and the orgy. Look around us. Nothing has changed. Each monster is in its place with its own distinct appearance. of yesteryear.

These bold arrows that rise into the air, they are the Phalluses of Cilicia. These dark crypts, caverns fac-Tinex, with the altar of sacrifices in the background, is the sanctuary.

of Mutuel* or the lair of Mithra Island. The* priests are black still continuous omitted from Saturn, tonsures as mix (1); sometimes Itordo tied naked toni|ilo, sometimes mendicant orders, . Kédnsoltos vagabonds ot obscenes described by Apuleius (?), Lu 1 The Babylonian trinity, with unity for coroiluira, is the foundation "read In fui. Behold the only Son, this mysterious product of the Apason or Kolpinh mud. It comes from Comino Field mouse li-.léutl, su sncl'i'ilior To his father, or rather to give himself read enjoyment of his own immolation. He is attached to an Imia like Attis, symbolized by the lamb; and, placed at the tomimmt, mourned by the holy women of Adonios, pious women, resurrects A in the manner of the Tltammux, of Apollo, of the Ileroulo do Tyr. Lu viorgo elmsle so lient A ses côtés sous Je» traits do Artemis, do the goddess of the sky, do Dido Cnrthngi- iioiso. The young immolated men flutter with arches the seraphic wing of the angels. The saints, armed with grills and of swords, leaning on ovens, associated with the whole arsenal of the torture, they grimace in their nicks. We're all somber to the idols of Sardinia discovered by La Marmora. Oii inango with delights the flesh of the altar. Old Kronos reign still ot throws with dett its titles of Soignour (Itual- Adonuï) ot do Roi (Molocli).

Itien is not lacking. The women enter alone into sanctuaries like A Uabylone. The disciples of Moli- They supported the theory of priestly holiness which united the women and the Welsh in a sacred love. Gazelle des Tribunaux reports daily on the exploits of Modern Cinwdi.

Move forward. Take a bold step against dogma; monsters hidden in the shadows, which one abhors and fears Ignorant crowd. We greet old acquaintances. These furious and pedantic voices, rustling in the ou-

(I) The Neo-Jewish priests wore the ephod or robe of white linen.
Christians immediately resumed wearing the ancient Saturnian garment.
It's instinct or I don't know anything about it.

i'2) Arntât;, f/inetfw.

Ragan, we have already heard them, Los masques tionnont
pon ot are easy A nmoliop,

"The martyr, with her much-sung-about palm, leads the way."
In the past they would throw the believer into the furnace and the dead. Today they are more refined and do not renounce the body <juo for the Soul. When Jesus commanded "the abandonmentnor his wife, his children, his family to marry God,
as in the past with idols, when he enjoins do saerilior his lions, his vio, humanity môme, he re-edits the code "lu Molonli, For "a bold, inspired fool, the look at the woman Injustice is sin. Knowledge and wealth are Anathemas. Every manifestation of violence becomes a theft Done by A in divinity. These ideas, "human defilement, of fault" primitive and inexpiable, except by pain and death, are Ancient as the world. They wanted everything armed.
Port wine of mysteries, oriental products that have paved the way in route to Christianity and so rush on Europe an signal Jesus.

An invasion unlike any other, a barbarian's glue! The eu-cliaristio takes on, among Christians, its cana- meaning Neapolitan. Hell of flames, eminently Semitic symbol hunts the misty and aquatic Hades back to the Greeks where the
The penalties (when there are 11) are manual. He throws them right up to our squares these immense flames that devour the heretics ticks and prepares for the Christian God the eternal holocaust of the quivering flesh and burnt fat, while the
the kingdom of God unfolds the blessed annihilation promised by Moluch and his suicides. In short, Christianity is not that a continuation; and the conscientious scholar, whose 'Truth is the only guide,' we will call this phenomenon: the

REVENGE OF THE MOLOCU 1

The old Semitic ideas, transformed by contact Aryans, were still stirring up trouble in the worship and bloodshed of the Jinn, and, although contained, they nonetheless fermented with all the impatience of waiting. Jesus is their resurrection.
tion and their brilliant triumph I

fact |>1 ih uno you «la lī'goiguinont luumiin ; ot, provided that Lu Ilimo fattens his Levites, that we don't touch his
"Nuira!" sacred ot no travailla pus lu jour ito .Saturn, ce
Motoeh, defrocked, was all ready to show himself a good prince.

Another will be the Christian monster. Io vioux I)i«m dos Jews will experience again once the fate of Saturn, dethroned from his divinity activated under the honorary title of Father, reduced To eternal emotion, while his /They conquer the monda,

Ella nppnrait Idnnclio ot puro l'idolo nouvoila, brûlante
like the snow, cold, like the heated white (1).
The paternal horns are on his head; the virgin of the sky, A his right, the front adorned back put rays of the moon (2).
A lotir vuo, civilization and humanity roll of hor-rou.

It was a sad time then. There was nothing left but back masters and a people of helots. The world was the slave of a town: the town was buckling under the weight of a foolish or furious being,
whose freedmen were fighting over the scraps of power.
The contempt for man had reached a point that our state soical no nous poriiiettra jamais do sonder, ot los pères n'osaient plus mottro au monde do pour do vouer leurs onfants A uno vio piro quo la mort. Antiquity, locked away by the barbarians, strangled by despotism, no longer had of the horizon. In vain she pressed it to her chest, with a movement convulsive, the repository of ages, torch of civilization, that she could no longer find A will transmit. In the middle of the cli-
The question of weapons, "the barbaric howls and the crash of crumbling institutions, she uttered the cry of anguish that did not
It was understood that fifteen centuries later, and distraught at the prospect of terrify:
reur, believing in the last day of the world, offered himself to whoever conch promised him salvation, even at the expense of his (!) Apocalypse.

(2) See, for these prompt representations, your Abaxas.

"lineage and peace of mind, A body" of the temple of strength,
that genio had said, "pu" lux triumphs had mat'",
It was only a cadnvvo. The Moloeh could come.

The Syrian emperors* had brought some with them in their vans the impure baggage. They found themselves "for a Prey, J, Mitura, and Jesus disputed the honor of "wearing it."
Read last time In the Roman Empire,

Mithras is none other than the primitive Uien, "the ltubel, the hor-mapUrodite named by H«tradnto(l), «no «fierce swimming ut Semitic, Zurauslra, whose reform is sieur nîné du Pentatouquo, lit bien entreai» *:o fauve dans la nouvelle organisation. But A eètè of the mediator, of the luminous ètra and the demiurgic of the Parsos, the ancient Mithras still survived with SOS caverns sangluutes, its characteristic dark circles, Sus sombras mysteries. Modern people generally have trouble including Julien's attempt, in spirit "the opposition system thematic. Because this paganism of "the days is no longer the serious cult of nature, but an original adoration spirits and supernatural agents substituted for the fora vivid in matter. At this time, the Pi«>ux friends and companions of the Greeks, the gods, men and humans, said of the
 The chaos of the inhabitants of the earth, have decidedly expired. The Great Pan is dead! Plato, born before Christ, no con-more than just demons are already being born, immaterial and tyrannical beings.
 niques who scrape monasteries, virgins, blood and abstinence. His "posthumous disciples, the Plotinus, the Porphyry and the Maxims were magicians. Their ceremonies
 He was buried, and masses and incantations were sung. He descended into the pit.
 sacred Taurobolium, Julien, the favorite oniperour back Voltaire and Diderot, with whom they would not have stayed longer
 I've long agreed that Frédéric receives torrents of messages.
 a hole, the blood of oxen and bulls. It comes out soiled and purified.

Deist intolerance had already marked this imperial sec-

(I) Herodotus, book. 1", g 131.

silence of his seal of infertility, The index of the pa|» mithraïquo, emanating from his pen, proscribes Pyrrhon and Kpicuro nvoo uuo ardeur touto chrétienne. purmot Chrysippo ot Zéuim, but expurgated, warmly recommends Plato and Python
 gore (1). The profusion of faith of the Savoyard vicar, all delighted of ease I If he could at least hear Robes' tirades piurro!

It was the struggle of the gentle Moloclis, And, in truth, for It mattered to the world who triumphed. The consequences were the memos. Christianity, very close relative of Mithraism, gathered the wreckage of the shipwreck, as much by
 The right of inheritance is not the same as the right of conquest. Thus, the sophisto Augustin, qu'on n'aocusora cortos pas do nnîvoté, him, the most irritating back spur, Catholic bears, declared quo Christians, ignorant of the date of Jesus' birth, the fixed December 25th, the day of Mithras, Acotto resurrection of the Hanl-Molkartli, remarkable coincidence which unites the three deities in a single type (2). Other Similarity: the Magi, guided by the star, who brought tent & Jesus gold, frankincense and myrrh, as already los Subéens l'oifrent aux doux soeurs Oolu ot Ooliba dans la Ezekiel's feast day, these Magi are part of the symbolism Mithraic. The earliest representations that remain to us Jesus3 gives him the traits and attributes of Mithras, with this variation where lamb replaces the shoulder of God Christ, the Chaldean lion.

The Mithraic religion has its imitation, its trials of catechumens, its sacraments: baptism, penance, eulogy Ristie, with consecration through mystical words. The initiates They mark their foreheads with a sacred sign. They were presented the crown that adorns the brows of martyrs. The law of continuity Enlightenment reigned in their home in all its rigor. All these

(1) Juliani imperatoris fragmenta, 1.1", p. 300 and 301. – De Potteb, History of Christianity, vol. II, p. 432.

(2) Dnm Origin of all cults, echap. VI.

me, « mu UU

"quickly" were long common to the gentle "mlto". Me" U Victorious Christianity eventually confiscated its |<vo- nt, and Mithru «léjiosséô became, |mur fioho«ioeonsolution, the sweating George, victor, read dragon. Tcrtullien (1), plus zealous as a scholar, one cannot explain this series "the concordance* those that, by putting them on the "read" account, initiates, who wanted aping the "works of God: an irresistible argument for his time as "read ours. We can't imagine the services purring- "read by the rtialrto ô religious rhetoric.

I,o ohriatianismo nu was «rent rt'nhorrt that a Miuplo calque "read moloohismo. The sacrifice of the Healer and his resurrection Colosto, then, as a deduction, the sacrifice "the man on the roof and his resurrection to heaven or to the earth, ttrta They removed the only rtoginos rte la jaune coiniminatô. Plus only later, when his progress leads him to Aloxan* tlrio, the Church gathered up a louse everywhere, the baggage «lo suhtUitôs whimsical and arbitrary beliefs, weapons, future "the suppliers "lu Moloch – un pou purtaut — o'ost-A-rtiro in 1«îs reveries «le l'iatcn, source poisonée, et «tans the old arsenal "lucliulduïsmo which rclbrissiut nu milieu rte universal decomposition.

Plato, unworthy forger of Socrates, who was less his decline "the ancient world. Arec its immortal dialogues

The man, enamored of a mystical ideal, learned to hate and to despise his being. The entities triumphed over the forto and Harsh reality. They relied on the implored void, on the clouds.
deified beings who passed swiftly through the azure sky, while perish
They knew human greatness and virility. The Jesus of Gospels spends all its time chasing away spirits, including
The Gnostics will be extravagant, while the school of Alexander drie arrives by another route at this forced Lefkada of all idealism where, matter being debased and neglected, humanity
The nation is plunged into misery and death. In all its forms,

(1) Teotulubk, De iVwleripHoro'&MS, chap. XL.

13

the Church had to receive gift 4 * its care cos Joan-llaptisto inat* shorn men who had so cleared the way for him. The stream Having left Athens, the 'orront do Gnlilêo mingled their* theological waves, ot entto fusion onfnntn the unity of the con*
she does Nieêe.

l,n trinity, holy number of Plato ot of Pythagoras,dôjh manifested from lu |)èriodo lu most ancient pure lu tri|dioity of idols with the features of the Father, the Son, and the defiled Spirit (spù'itm) cosmogonic, the relations deientos do cos differannuities people, the expressions jonnnlquej do Logos luminous beginning, the famous start of the fourth gospel
q»'Augustin (1) proolnmait with fervor having already read in Plato, the distinction between the begotten and unbegotten Christ;
The theories of grace and predestination, such are the metaphysical elements brought by Hellenistic ideology.
Alluviou remarkable for its slender appearance which contrasts on the strong color molouiiisto. Theurgy and theosophy which are found in their entirety, not just in the writings
Plato, but in the works of Plotinus, Proclus, .famhlicus, Martianus Capolla and all the scribes from the degenerate era.

Thus, by a strange twist of fate, Christianity unites in its formula, the Semitic creations hitherto isolated, the idol of Tyre and the empii'ismo of llabal; and, armed with all pieces, the new cult soon passes from the defense to the attack.

The Christian Moluccan now wants to reign and reign without rivals. Also, he hurls his fanatraes at the enemy idols;
He ignites his disciples with the old prophetic spirit a moment to death. He furiously attacks a magnanimous enemy that he was incapable of understanding, the gentle and great Heinico-Roman pantheism. After a convulsive struggle. Christ climbs onto the abyss with a bloodthirsty, ambitious man.

(1) Saint Augustine, Confessions, book VII, chapter IX.

Muhii'il

lut

crushes under his whose cnrjw «i'ivniro of Hypatio, lo* puions, the philosophers, sectarian* j ot, when similar influence n precipitated bed, shh, inevitable, "lorompil'o, he allies himself with lus barbarians, their natural allies, long predicted to desolation (the terra, in "the wild imaginations.

The alliance of Christianity and the invaders of the world* worse produced a nameless era, for which the responsibility it all goes back to the educators of young children and nine who only knew how to turn them into hypocritical brigands, to the holy doctors who gave as a sequel In the naive state Tacitus described the criminal era of feudalism. The Middle Ages is the New Jerusalem of the prophets, The kingdom of God announced by Jesus, the triumph "read Moloeh.

Then humankind nearly perished. The night! The night... All lit by bonfires! Moloeh reigns. He sucks the human fat. ll drinks the blood of the victims. He savors their tears and their cries. Absorbing and jealous, he did not want "the man whose corpse had "the impious cleared the life had the ponsôo. He erects death into a paradise complemented by a hell, try to annihilate human desire through celibacy; and, when Life was now nothing more than a continuous suicide, the king, a tyrant, back Souls, made by the nations raise these somber, sad masses luxury of our cities, which stifles the School and the Portiquo, cos magnificent cathedrals that soar above our cities, immense catafalques erected to serve as ossuaries. A la vie ot dont the slender columns, the gaunt saints where nothing beats Moreover, the diaphanous virgins recall the specter of banishment legendary quests and his sinister opinion i The Middle Ages was the reign of the devil, the apotheosis of Semitic Satan. For everything is marked with his dreadful claw. Omadios the Ripper howls in the dungeons of The Inquisition; the royal executioners put their victims through on the fire like the priests of Moloh. The sheikh of the Minotaur, the giant Talo3, the bull of Phalaris, all

IKSI'S

Kii

«■•K nmehinos do the terrified antiquity reappear on him Place do Seville iluns los statues creuses ot brûlantes des npAtros, full of impious people, in cos viorges do Mngdoliourg
The torn sectarians propped themselves on their steel breasts.
middle back clamps and crossroads swirls the black smoke that carried the smell of grilled fat at Diou dos Christians; ot, we prey naked deliro frénéti<|uo ot To all read delights of the lost counts, the foulo dos llagel- struggles lants, back dancers of Saint-üuv, los enorgumènes of all surtu qu'évoque t livangilo ot lesquels dos hiérophantes powerless people lavish exorcism and purifying water on the mysteries.

But the underground cryptosphere extends beneath the cathedral,
the church or monastery, surrounded by horror, adorned with phlegm, axes, bloody vases, and the most Sinister rumors are circulating among the households about what is happening there.
In the evening, at the birthday party of some women. I'm not afraid.
do lo proelamor highly, since toile is the inevitable Truth, the blood shed in the Middle Ages is not understood only a public killing of heretics.
There were also assassinations of children, virgins, and men.
of mature age, innocent of any theological crime, victims
pure ones who offered themselves or whom priests dragged They were born at the altar, driven by logic and by the spirit of their God. Human sacrifices, in all their force.
In the end, these events took place in the Middle Ages; such is the revelation which is set to completely overturn the history of this era.

Christ on the cross, crowned with thorns, his side pierced,
is the great victim sacrificed every day & the mass and whose innocent blood saves the world. The saints, torn apart, gripped, stretched on the rack, or thrown into the furnace,
They receive, in exchange for their flesh, the palm of martyrdom.
and will join God in the heavenly palaces. The virgins become engaged to Jesus and, disdaining all earthly love, betrothed to Death, the old pimp of their divine lover;

here is all the poetry, the osthetic and the literature of the first on losquols the imagination of the first Christians was exercised yours and that a modern romanticism, an unconscious ally, but the elusive spirit of darkness, could alone present itself under a graceful shape,

Déjà t'aiphe "lit aux Juifs avec une uloir molo-cliisto; "It is good that a man should die for the people (1),..."
Paul, in his bloody epistle, puts a new victim above back goats and musical lambs and a famous one a true human sacrifice in the Passion, this sacrifice of redemption offered by the Semites during public calamities who has the privilege of violinizing the Divinity (2). Origen himself Even the Christian eunuch exclaims: "For the Israelites, lo
"The blood of the sheep, the ewes, was spilled. For us, the son
"God has removed the fallen!" >• And this Father, the church, joining Lfecius of Christ, does he believe the sovereign effect of voluntary murder?
to silence an innocent hoin in order to make sterility disappear from the soil, epidemics and other calamities (il).

Almost all the Fathers caress a piece in the host of bloody meat (-1). Cotte phraseology, of which I pmirrnis fill this volume, forms a fatal co-volume, a system theme of continuous excitement, of temptation, informing where Anthropothysio and anthropophagy are thus restored in a mystical and more appealing form. Also, what is not the zeal of the first Christians to come out of the cotte land rendered uninhabitable '

(1) Gospel according to St John, chapter XV111, verse 14.

(2) Paul, Epistle to the Hebrews, chp. IX, verse 1U; echap. X, verse 4; Chapter XII, verse 24, – Revelation, chapter IV, verse 18. – Acts of the Apostles, chapter VIII, verse 32, etc.

(3) Origin, Houiélío on Leviticus, chap. II; fMortatio ad martgrum, chap. I, § 30U; Contra Celsum, book I, chap- XXXI.

(4) Augustine, Contra Adoersarios Logis et Crophctarwu, chap. II.
St Ohrysostom, V» Slattheum houialia, chap- LXXXIU. St Cyr'lle, Contra Xestarium, book IV, ehap. IV, ota. See, to complete all These texts on sacred death, the excellent treatise on Damner, The Secrets of Christian antiquity, in Ewcrbeek.

ICîfî JKSl'S

The three yellow martyrs: L'antianus, Contins ot Camille they reply to the moneylender: "We are Christians, we do not "Let us swear only to our God. To Him alone we sacrifice our "living bodies (1)." Saint Lawrence, on the red-hot grill, is

Saint Catherine, who sent Christ back as her shepherd, Her God, her lover, her fiancé, wants to offer her his chair in sacrifice, among which he once took off, sacrificed for her (2).
 Saint Christ, placed on a wheel of fire, compares it to the bed nuptial (3), to the old song saorée dit do suinte Agnès:
 "That's how she ended up, this loving fiancée of the "Lord. Yes, blood reconciles, blood unites, blood alone"
 "can fix love (4)." Anyone who wants to cast their eyes in a golden legend or into the life of the saints there met by thousands of similar examples and expressions sions. Sometimes even the passive zealous goes so far as to take action.
 Thus, Saint Lawrence, Archbishop of Dublin (1181), went dait at the altar of Cantorbury, in his pontifical robes, when he was struck on the head by a blow from a man who thought he was doing a pious act by giving martyrdom to a si holy priest (5). Saint Francis, founder of the order
 The Oblates offer themselves as a sacrifice, a rope around their necks.
 and each nun must, by a somber monastic oathtiquo, to promise the abbess to immolate oneself. Postelmayer (6), in this blissful language where the fact seeps through the nausea
 The allegory of the blonde teaches us that François de Dorgia, son of the Duke of Vandie, general of the Jesuits, father of eight children, vowed to put himself in order when his wife would have died: "He sacrifices not only his laughter

(1) Wicelius, Chorus Sanctorum, 230.

(2) Wicelius, Chorus sanctorum 414.013.

(3) Rousseau, Purple Violets of the Saints (Frankfurt). Volume II, Chapter LXIII.

(4) Rousseau, same work. Volume I, Chapter XIX. – Kosegarten, Poems and Myths of Christian Antiquity (Greifswald 1821, s vol.).

(5) Life of the Saints, book X, life 513.

(6) Postelmayer, vie et acta des Saints de Rien (Augsburg 1836), 123.

MULOCII l(i7

» to cwlllo do lu duehosse, but also oollo do sas eight
 "• all his belongings and everything he owns."

The oxemploostcontagious', the syllogismimpitoyahlo. From Christianity must inevitably return to Moloebia.

And this conclusion was drawn by more ("a naive young woman, pious and ignorant. We know the Jansenist martyrs and

Days later, the memory causes children's effects. Thus, in 1823, in the Swiss village of Wildenpusch (canton of Zurich), a young country: > »o, Saint Mnrgrètho, is done crucify with the most exquisite torments. In 1817, a A young girl is also immolated during the week saint, & Ampfolwang, small village of Hauto-Autriocho(l), Dorothée R. stabbed herself to go find her Christ. the night of May 17, great day of the festival of the Uernutians (2). In 1804, a young Italian shoemaker, Voniso, arrived to crucify himself drunk in his room or to hang himself with a rope outside the house. In 1803, a fanatic Allemand kills his son with a blow of his axe, to reouuvelor Abraham's sacrifice: a woman slaughters her children for to transmute them into angels (3). I pass the stigmatized back two sexes. Finally, in that same year 1808, the workers Catholics from the Cockerill shipyard in Antwerp were having fun still crucifying their comrades, subjecting them to all kinds of torture.

fl) Meyer, the story of a crucified fanatic, according to the official report (Zurich 1824).

(2) Moritz, Psychological Manual.

(3) I read in your mysteries of the cloisters of Italy, chapter III, pages 27 and 28 1 • At the Feast of the Virgin celebrated in Messina on August 12 and 15, or

- moves an immense tank on which is mounted a device equipped – of wheels, bringing images of the earth, the moon, the sun and the

- * On other planets, children of the tenderest age are attached to "to represent the cherubim and archangels and throughout the pro- "Transfer, these poor little creatures do as many tricks as the "Sun. Many will fight. The procession finished, the drawing is done." "of the dead. The mothers are comforted by the assurance that it is a stake" • sacrifice to the Virgin who takes it upon herself to lead the troughs to paradise of his choice.

d'usngo, They beat them tlo vorgos, far away" they drove into The Hune islands, pointed huions, served as lances. Two succum- herald, the protostunt was several times subjected to cotto oruollo operation and painfully gelioned, until this that he had confessed the sanctity of the Virgin. That's what the beatific pen back Catholics, calls the folio of the cross; cotto folio do la croix qui fait les délicos et l'admiration dns Vonillot ot O'. Or si, do notre temps éclairé, on plein 10th century, the premises* of Christianity led to such horrible consequences, what no one should have been even their most atrocious applications in the Middle Ages, we

Indeed, if one takes an impartial look at this unhappy society, one can discern within it a fatal secret which weighs on everyone, but whose details are carefully kept to the shadow by the gagged history, escape in the towers mounts of popular consciousness.

lin so rendu compte de l'insupportable souffreteux et frénétique at the same time of these populations terrorisés, on suait quo Many major religious and social crimes have been committed. legends of children, of men and virgins, who die the day of the saint whose name they bear, the saints who die rent at the predicted hour, the famous signs of death where mystical pink islands and special ringtones designate the victims, abductions, escapes and the slitting of children's throats, from the year 1100 to "twelve hundred, the statues of Christ, do la viorgo and saints, darker than the Indian Kali or the • Molecbet, around which children's stories revolve removed and miraculously restored, the Saint- fires Jean, where live animals are thrown, as in the barrels of Syria, the meaning of the number thirteen, the white ladies the bloody nuns, the howling specters in the cemeteries and churches, this whole sinister cycle of the raythos popular and chronic priestly islands leads to a a set of notions, allegories, provocations even testimony* from which one could infer more, if the* historical evidence was lacking.

Because these horrors unite, memo by piercing through the Itis- youi>0. In Wilsnck, in the 15th century, part of the population tion led by Rector Lloppo rebels against the cult back bloody hosts. After a fierce struggle, the priests three are prohibited and the hosts are burned publicly (1).

Kn 1507, in burns û Shame several tlominicains, for having provided naked tailor doser uno Imisscn magic corner- placed with salt, sweat, Easter candle wax, baptismal font Easter, ehry.snmo useful hair and blood of a small child.

They still had "(strong he dosed a moistened host of the blood of God. In this curious trial, there was talk of a hostio bloody in the ciborium, in addition to a dungeon, do sweet small crucifixes, several small strips of cloth, all of them humactê do sang de Dieu, d'un verre cuntcnnt do ce sang, pilgrimages made in his honor, etc. (2). Gro>nnoirus('l) nccuso memo the Dominicans do s'ûtro servis du sang et des eyebrows of an Israeli child. which ronvornit at the clmi- tions the accusation so constantly brought) by them against their opponents.

Monasteries are a source of terrible and all too true stories. discoveries, posthumous witnesses of a whole ntondo do holy atrocities. One oxymoron among a thousand: Dorniermont, In Paris, the old Madelouottos convent was demolished. A high stone tomb was found in the cryptos. d'uu meter vingt centimetres ot largo do foranto centi- meters, next to a pillar six meters high on three in circumference, the small door opened and let see a well about ten meters deep.

The tomb has no other opening than onto the well. At- A hearth had been placed underneath. The stone that was found If it came into contact with the fire, it cracked and broke into a thousand pieces.

(1) Schlag von Uuggenroth, God and the Universe (Leipzig 1822).

(2) Hollinger, History of the Helvetic Island (Zurich 1708-1710, Volume lt, § 55i$4>5«.

(3) Chronicon, 1585.

170

JESUS

places. "One enclosed," said the report, "the roli-» giousos condemned in this stone sepulcher, we fled
"Sealed, the fire was lit below, and read molUeureuso"
"had no other alternative than to let himself be stifled len-
"try or "the drowning,"

The patient, crouching, was trying in vain to break her tomb. The stone has preserved the trace of "multiple efforts" and superhuman feats that the unfortunate women must have endured.

The bed co is not an isolated example. We did not demolish, under at any latitude, in America as in Europe, one of these hideouts, without bumping into & "the mysteries "the bar- tiario or do vengeance, whose fruits are tormented, the sque- letters still attached to the iron chains of IV" pace, los Bones sawn into pieces, the walled-up nuns are dreadful relics. Veiled the scent of its places. peace and the "recollection" of which our bishops claim 4 horn and cries for pious liberty, whose maintenance or full The 19th century is an impudent affront to civilization and to the family !

Orthodoxy dragged to the stand? It only knows how to get lost. in recriminations, to curse, to denounce to the secular arm. For
The story condemns her, showing the bloody lion's outline on his tablets. The holy kings, the pious peoples and the Christian pontiffs of the Middle Ages are a horror to honest man. Solitudes spread out in place of empires.
rissants catechized by Pizarro and Cortez (1). The hecatomb Albigensian and Vaudois France, and Saint-Barthélemy resounded painfully in our hearts. The two hundred a thousand Protestants sacrificed to the idol Moloch adorned with a petticoat
M^m Scarron's cry for vengeance! And the Chouans of 1703 renewed the ancient atrocities. Always, since From Jesus to Pius IX, his worthy successor, fanaticism has

{1} Or 6ùt pu dite, avec uns venants de Tacite., ds cts Espagnols converters and colonizers: "IJbi solitiulinem fecerunl, gentem christianam appelliant, »

ME.OCH

171

The product is a living corpse rescue operation, where moral sense is extinguished.
the initintivo siskin, frenzied seidos ready for loorimo, read fool* drunk or dead. Always Molooch pursues his double war Entering the human mind: first, official and public pursuit of the impious, dissidents and philosophers, which, after lo bùolior ot la tortura, on est réduit uu gâillon, à la prison ot A to the blight; then hidden war ot mystic against do wretched victims, desiccated by a venomous stain Intelligence kills the soul. Such is the old man's tactic.
enemy to embrace man and annihilate reason and the science, sacred gates that will prevail against him, through them are more powerful than those of the onfor.

I call on the reader to be at least somewhat prepared: from the day when the monsters crouching on the banks of the Meditorranéo, A
The ambush of their prey, so are they born, what moment of Where is rest and humanity?

Look, Jesus harvests with the sword. Mario, the Wnl-Kyrio, Christian piano, high back banners. Laws of the SMNTs they brandish against the earth the instruments of our men Teuso Torturo. Los anges sonnent aux oreilles des fanatiques
The bugle of the battles. The blood flows! Immense swell, it we know France, Europe and the world. Lo brother hugs lo

Embrace. Women disemboweled, children crushed, rape
Divine and unspeakable murder litter the ground. – Paw vobis-
Cum! The fire is incense; the howls of the condots*
Tieri and the thunder of cannons, a prayer. The lansquenets
They serve Mass. The cutthroats are altar boys.
Hurrah! Faith rolls in the coffers. The holy chrism grease the wheels, missals are used for the gas chambers, and the Papers to the rifles. Long live Saint Loyola and Saint Dominic!
Long live Saint Massacre and Saint Rape!

This statue of Jesus is terrible, enlarged by tears and blood, honored by the sword, perched on mountains of corpses! The iconoclasts, the Donatists, the pagans
The slaughtered Albigensians formed its base.

rises with the investitures, lot guerrox ilo the reform. the great massacres of peasants. Ravaillac holds neither "yes xa cmirumte. On his altar, thousands of pedestals perish; generations fall like wheat on the sickle, tjuol Rica, yes, never again! And the victims, they're gone!
grieved, their entrails panting, their limbs torn and ragged vrout encuru lu saint parvis. C'est ipio l'humanité diminution under the jealous eye of the Christian monster. After his triumph,
The most populated countries are turning into solitudes. J.ox con-
The richest lands of paganism became deserts.
or back marshes. The vio roeulo in front of the cldstinnismo (1).

(I) Mouteiquioit, Letters, I'oraano».

CHAPTER II

The Gospel

The crowd of ignorant people, mystics, Jesuits, your acmtni peeus dos dogmes établissements criera A l'Evangile, A ses sublime precepts, To his iuoralo étornollo. I will answer:
With this starting point, it was impossible to arrive anywhere else.
than in the Middle Ages and at the stake. Hence the antisocial ideology and antihumaino cannot release the vio. Death gives birth to the dead. And, at the risk of taking up the defense of Catholicism contra lossoctes dissidents, let's restore lotristo honor to him to have deduced the true consequences of Christia nism, faithfully and vigorously executed the orders of the Putrid! The Inquisition is evangelical, llogia, it is the Christ. Léotado, Mallet, Simon de Moutfort are in him like Tartuffe and Loyola.

It is because of the memory of all the misfortunes that this book has vomited upon the earth, of all the crimes to which he has contributed In terms of text and sanctions, one feels little tempted to push for... hymns of joy and renewal of professions of faith of a more or less Savoyard vicar. The majesty of the Written Words Their cruelty and hypocrisy don't surprise me. They outrage me. When humanity, for eighteen hundred years, She writhed on her bed in pain, torn to her very core. This is a bad time to be cooing over romances and to paint Christs in landscapes. And what does the poetry of songs, the passion of the style, the dramatic interest, in a word, The literary qualities of an apocryphal novel! In Jesus one should not see no Dnmorot or a philosopher, but a «ïom plus funostos inonvnntions do cetlo idée fatale qui « God's name. He unites with religion, not with literature; it is to say that clmquo vorset is a commandment, every word a dogma, of which centuries have given the bloody commentary silence.

174

JK3UK

It would be, I know, less arduous and more political to offer To the applause, a doctrinaire Christ, varnished with liberalism, even memo lo sans-culotte Jesus, prophet doubled by the tribune who reminded the powerful and the modesty and displays the virtues of the revolutionary motto. Unfortunately, against these imaginings, nurtured by sorrowful minds, are inscribed on false the general tone of the Scriptures, the declarations Repeated rations of the mnitro, SOS submission advice erected in doctrine by Saint Paul, finally the conduct of the first Christians who, closer to their Christ, put strictly in practice his teachings and examples.

A barely humanitarian hero, dear to sensitive souls, dcssino-t-il sa silhouotte dans quelques parables ot uno a handful of precepts whose isolated and contradictory nature, The hollow sound is a jarring note amidst the otherwise austere whole. Jesus, whether he likes it or not, already locks up a whole one hierarchy. It comes from God, symbol and incarnation of the other tority, and while indulging in radical declamations, ironic mask of the exploiters to come, delegates of the pou-

which still lasts. His supposed communism does not stem from more of a sense of human solidarity than his tirades against the Pharisees. Jesus attacks wealth as he attacks life, civilization, and art, because they are trophies of humanity in the face of divine impotence. He never had as an ideal (how could he have?), the dissemination of well-being and science in an expansion social, but the peace of the tombs and the impeccability of corpses. And if, in those enthusiastic fits which, in the inspired, do not exclude a relative good faith, Jesus brings pélo-môlo the country of the sword, the libortô of slavery, the Modesty and pride; the furious verses, true wolves of the Gospel, have always benefited from their numbers and their The oroo to strangle the peaceful sentence. In any debate theoretical and practical aspects in which the official directors intervened skies of Christianity, the fierce letter prevailed over the Greek letter,

Lo ton do Jesus no garde mémo jamais la sérénité qu'on persists in lending him and his face grimaces with the curse in its bloodiest form. The gestures are one of those possessed, with whom he delights. The books of Marc of Matthew, which the other synoptic Gospels have or under the eyes, give us an oxemplniro fldèlo of these inco- stories herents, a mixture of philosophy and oxtavaganco, written on their masters by the disembodiments of decadence. Plil-lostrate did not more bizzarromont adorn Apollonius of Tyanos.

All co-evangelists, moreover, remember Mark and Matthew, are late and know of the capture of Jerusalem by Titus. Jean doesn't remember her anymore. Her work, the most indigestible of the group, is a Platonic, Gnostic and Chalucan mess, logodiarrheo void where all the surgeries are buried alexandrines, or even memo on Socratic love (1).

The dominant characteristic of all these pious spiritualists was the presence to ter their leader of doctrine as a miracle worker outside online and an expert exorcist. They were also wonderful. served by the obscure or mysterious existence of the Master, whose torture is the only known fact. The few rare circumstances preserved in the memory of his disciples, such as his relationship with John the Baptist, his educational walks in Galilee, his travels and his end dramatic events in Jerusalem served as the basis for the legend. religious imaginings. And this alluvium, constantly enlarged, it itself divides into three classes:

"that Jesus loved while lying on Jesus' breast, etc."

In Versets de concordance inqdiôtiquo. Tous les témorevered gnages, the logogrijdios lias Nabi, loa misunderstandings Hebrew traditions culminate in Jesus, whose works are a supreme consumption. He is, of all evidence, the Messiah.
lo Christ announced to the prophets, lo savior to the gentle testa-comments which, cunning companions, give each other the reply (1).

U* Historical Verses <1 jiosU'i'iori. Jesus, foretold by lo
The past, becomes the prophet of the future. His mouth announces the the cross and its painful events, the disasters of Judea, the capture of Jerusalem by Titus, the tribulations of a young common, and finally the persecution crowned with triumph, grandiose perspective of faith, the work of saints and bold forgers (2).

3* Dogmatic verses. Third-class coat of maté-evangelic rials understand the doctrine of abstinence and do renunciation, a key teaching of the Master, whose conduite est ln vivant roflot ot quo les primiors chrétiens, in the most fanatical of experiments, they tried to practice Tick to the letter. It is on this last class of documentation ments, the true originality of Jesus' expression of his Semitic role, which will be the focus of our critical effort.

(I) Examples of categorical coite Matthew, chap. I; chap. U, verse 0;
Chapter VII, verse 17; Chapter XI, verse 17; Chapter XXI, verse 6; Chapter XXVI, verse 14-07; chap. XXVIII, verse 1). – Tertullian sees in Psalm XXI the very program of the Passion. Mare. chap. I; chap. XIV, verse 21-27. – Luke, chap. 1, verses 1 and following; chap. 1, verses 4 and 12; chap. 1;
Chapter IV, verse 21; Chapter XIII, verse 12; Chapter IV, verse 44. – Limitation in the Synoptic Gospels of certain psalms XXI, LIV and LXIX, by The example is obvious. The entry of Jesus and Jerusalem on the island of C3t copied from Zechariah, chapter IX, etc.

<2, Second-class examples. Matthew, chapter VII, verse 10 and sov.; ehap. XVIII, verse. 15; chap. XX, verses. 18; chap. XXI, verse. 42; ehap. XXU1, verse. 34, 35 et seq.; chap. XXIV in full; chap. XXVU, verse 19; chapter XXVII, verse 15. – Mark, chapter VI, verse 34 and following;
Chapter XII in its entirety; Chapter XIV, verse 9; Chapter XVI, verse 16. – Luke, Chapter L, verse 1; Chapter IX, verse 22; Chapters XIII and XV. The latter is a treatise on proselytizing; chap. XVII; chap. XVII, verse 29; chap.
XIX, verse 21; chap. XXI, verse 8. Jesus speaks there of heresies. Mous ne-
Let's not highlight these verses in John, there are too many of them.

ITT

Listen to it, if you listen to it, without shuddering, cotto soniltro poetry tlu christianity which bellows "you do! "the atoms comme nno rondo ilo bourreaux et île démons conjurés against the earth,

Jesus himself was the plague (1), and never declared
tion of war on the family, on life, on everything that flees the Glory and human dignity have never been more loudly proclaimed, more Adèlement followed, more strangely exploited. "No pon-
"So not," he said, to disabuse the most skeptical. "that I came to bring peace to the earth. I am not
"I came to bring peace, but also a sword. For I have come"
"To separate man from his pore, the wing from its mother,"

"The daughter-in-law with her hollo-mother. The man will have for one."

"I put those in my own house. He who loves his father
"or his mother is not worthy of me more than I am; and he
To have one's Hls or Aile more than mine is not worthy
"Do me. He who does not take up his cross (2) does not follow me" >■ not is not worthy of me. He who preserves his life
"He will lose it, and he who has lost it will find it again."

Luc is more concise: "If someone comes <\ me otno
"doesn't hate his father and his mother, su (brame and his children, sos"
"Brothers and sisters, and even his own life, he cannot be
"My disciple (4)."

And these words seemed so sublime to Saint Bernard that he add, in the mouth of the good Christian to his parents:
"What do you and I have in common? (to) P What do I "Have I received from you, if not sin and misfortune? I do not
"I acknowledge that I only received this corruptible body from you. No."

(I) * I came to set the world on fire and my greatest desire is to >. see reduced to ashes. - Lee. chap. XII, verses 49, 51 and 53.

(S) This allegorical expression could only be uttered after the Jeans' ordeal. She enters second class on the allovion Evangelical, the reasoned classification of all this phraseology is essential.

(3) Matthew, chapter X, verses 31-39.

(4) Luke, chap, XIV, vem. 20.27,

(5) Saint John, chapter II, verse 4.

J KSI.'S

7ft

"Is it not enough for you, wretch, that you take me away?"
 "miserably launched amidst the miseries of the world,"
 "for having, sinners yourselves, begotten me a sinner by "Your pèohô, etc. (1)?" This wild rhetorician speaks and so again with Saint Jerome and according to the holy child Jesus: "If your father were lying at your doorstep, if "Your mother, with her breast uncovered, showed you the breasts which They fed you; if she still held your son in her Liras
 b child, ignore it, trample underfoot your father and your mother
 b and, without shedding a tear, flies towards the banner of the b Cross... The sublime Lt0 of pity is to show oneself cruel
 b for the love of Jesus Christ (g). a Contempt, what am I saying, the family is the first duty of a Christian, if wants to follow the example of his master and God, a renegade of his family, despiser of his mother.

Jesus declares that he comes to put an end to the work of the femmo, which is what the Gnostics perfectly understood by the work of reproduction. Nothing, moreover, in the lyrics
 The master's notes do not contradict this rigorous interpretation.
 reuse. The cossation of the generation, isn't it the sign and the symbol of the heavenly kingdom (3)? reads the God himself shows no sobriety: it only demonstrates contempt, & pain tempered by caresses of satisfied self-esteem, for the women who surround him with enthusiastic love and whose feverish and overexcited impulses break against his bronze statue. What is there between him and them? between Life, humanity, and Christianity? "Woe to the b breasts that nourish and breasts that give birth (4)! b
 Jesus even provokes the most criminal mutilation.

(!) Saint-Bernard, Expersonâ Heliæ monachus ad parentes suât, Epistola lit.

(2) Saint-Bernard, Epistola CCCXXXll, Ad üvtgonem n" 2. The Deacon Pontius in the life of St. Cyprian, placed at the head of the works of this Saint. (Edited by Jacob Pamel, of Brages.)

(3) Matthew, chapter 22, verse 30. – Mark, chapter 11, verse 23 –
 Luke, chapter XX, verse 35.

(4) Luke, chap. XXlI1, verses. 20.

"If a member offends him, tear him out," and the precept do so ehfttror pour lo royaume dos eioux (1) a reçu, do la Qrigôno's part, a bloody application.

The Church Fathers continued this tra* to the very end monstrous edition; and if orthodoxy has condemned the abstention Lusitism of the Gnostics, quite Christian and logical for to put an end to the world, the principle was nonetheless reserved, Saint Paul only admits marriage as an antidote. exalts above all things celibacy (2), this state sublime back angels, imposed by the papism of his disciples.

•• 11. It is advantageous for a man not to marry. That "He who marries his daughter does well, and he who does not marry her off does not." "does better. However, if one is too weak to keep <> the continent, let's get married, because it's better to get married "that burn." Saint Jerome speaks to the virgins of the dif- Form of pregnancy (3). Saint John Chrysostom their soils the terror of childbirth pains (-1). Saint Augustine (5) restricts the use of marriage to desire alone to have two children; finally, Saint-Uyprien (fl), to whom it appears holds the palm, bluntly calls marriage an incon- gruité. The Christian thus tramples underfoot the sentiments noblest and most sacred. He outrages them, curses them as crimes; he calls them sins; and, after having polluted nature, stripped off this garment as quickly as possible polluted, in order to don the celestial livery and become a being without passion, without sex and without virtue, who will pass in one fell swoop across this land of misery.

When man destroys, it's the citizen's turn. Whoever wants Following Christ and deserving eternal life must endure

(1) Matthew, chapter XVIII, verses 8 and 9; chapter XIX, verse 12.

(2) St. Paul, to the Corinthians, Epistles I, Chapter VII

(3) St-Jéboub ÉpiltreXVtlt, Ad Euitachium De Custodià ViryinUalis, Volume IV, (Paris 1106), Book 1 against Jovinian, pp. 189 and 100,

(4) St-Ohbysostomb, llept nap0svus, chapters LVU and LXV, volume 1 (Paris 1718).

(") St-Cyprius, Vib. of Singwlarit. Clericor. ad. script.

J 8)1 <

JK.St'S

all the insults and all the humiliations with delight, "If we
"He slaps him on the right cheek, which he then shaves again
"The Gnuelio cheek. If anyone wants to take his tunic,
"that he abandons his coat again. If someone takes his
"Well, he is forbidden to claim it (1)." The com Merchandise, loans, and interest are prohibited. Otherwise, the faithful could not say in the Lord's Prayer: "Put back-
"We give our dots as we give them back to the eggs which
"We owe it." Property, above all, is the object of attack passionate ques from him on the part of the master and his disciples.
The question of choice between Mammou and God is clearly posed.
the Gospel (2) and the Church could have claimed for its greatest doctors the definition proudlionienne (3). Finally, the simple concern "read the next day, the simple concerns about food and clothing are among the lack of trust towards the creator who nourishes las birds of the sky as he clothes the plants of the earth (4).
Degrading fatalism, lazy begging, immoral sterility
rale. auarcliio in an almost wild form, veiled what Jesus dreamed what the poets sang, the moralists advised, which the first Christians faithfully executed.

What does one's homeland matter? What do family and land matter?
if God, accomplice and receiver of stolen goods, offers the fugitive splendid maquis of the sky. "We are not going to war," said Origen,
"Even if those in power force us to. We are more useful."
"that no one should be in power in the homeland through our prayers (5)."

(I) Matthew, chap. V. verse. 39-41.- Luke, chap, VI, ver*. 29.

i2) Matthew, chapter XIX, verse 16-26. - Mark, chapter X, verses 17-27.
- Luke, chap. XXU; chap. XVIII, verses. 18-27.

(3) St-Amhboisr, De Officiis, Lih ir 1, chap. XXVIII, n" 132. - St-Aüoustin. Th Joanuis Evangelium, Traetatus VI n° 25; Epistola 153; Epistola 113. Ad Bonifacium, chap. V, n" 20; De contemptu mundi, Iractaius IX, Caput U.

(5) St. Basil. Epistola CLXXXVIU, Ad Amphilochium, Caput III.
St-Aubroise. De Officiis, book I. chap. IV, n° 17. St-Auoustin, De libero arbitrio, book I, chap. V, n° 11 and 12. – St-Cyprien, Epistola < LVII, Ad Cyprianum.

MOLUCH

I SI

Never before had the fascination with the divine idea. Its absorbing effects* jealous people have manifested themselves with greater power than... in the strict regulations which the Church Fathers have wrapped all the most innocent memorandum acts of Christianity Here. Thus laughter, banter, idle talk, the Distractions are not a sin; the care of domestic affairs,
a sin; all actions that are not special authorized by Holy Scripture, sins. A Christian can no longer read secular authors, motto a perruque and learn grammar qu'oxorcor dos magistrato speak or to declaim in public ('i). On the other hand, hypocrisy made the honor of a special chapter. For the contempt of joys dos bions do la terra est d'un toi mōrito qu'il faut essayer d'en s'en s'il s'il s'il s'il s'il s'il s'il s'il ordine solitary people who will not have reached this degree of perfection do lo feindra tout au moins, -en aticlmnt par leurs acts. The most sought-after humility, walking with eyes lowered and sad, head bowed, badly combed, and spreading out a neglected exterior and dirty (it).

Filth, sterility, and hypocrisy. What must we do? Ignorance. Uuerro to the scholar and to the book! Co who was the mockery laughter from the ancient philosophers, from Socrates and Epicurus, takes his revenge on his opponents, like Moloch on Phidias and the crosier on the bath. Ignorance reigns with the lilies that do not bind, crows that eat without work
First, the Marys who converse with their divine Master without to attend to the vile chores of the household (4); This young child of Bethlehem, which clings to the strongest doctors of the Temple, the Spiritists of Gennesaret, polyglots by the Holy Spirit,

(1) St-A. mureoi8E, ūs Offlciis, book 1. chsp XXIII. n° 101 – St-Grégoire the Great, Book IV. Of the Dittoques, Chapter XXXIX, Title U.

(i) St Clement of Alexandria. Pedagogia, book III, <-hap. II.
Saint-Gbéoire le Grand, Book IX, Egidala LTV, AU«s XI, VIII, Art history of Christianity, introduction XLII.

(3) St-Basile in Grand, Epistolu II, Ad Gregorium u"G.

(4) Lie, ehttp. X, vêts. 4U.

JICSIS

JS'*

every cycle of the ignorant victor, of the simple triumphant,
The word "lo pied sur los couvres do l'esprit humain" (the word "foot on the covers of the Limo opens its porticoes to the messenger of Christ. Leprosy.
superb, the saved beggars bite the athlete's torso; and Saint Paul, throwing himself into the Christian pyre at Kphôso for plus fifty thousand killed, precious books (1), lit the auto-dn-fè and the indexes of two thousand years. "Happy are the Simpletons! Blessed are the fools! (f)" resounded like a irony of Gothic gargoyles, a beatific laugh of fools.

"The books of the Donatists, so beautiful, so excellent, bni*
u the/everything! Lifnni Donatistlonm tam pulchi'os, tam
"Exaeftentes, ineemlite omnesf ■> will shout Saint Augustine, Idiotic prayer, mechanical mumbling, simple cretinism or complicated, veiled paradise, the true Giieel of Christianity.
Nothing can equal the zeal of these faithful disciples in their debate.
The price of idiocy, the shame of those who kept what that remains literary. It's a strange rag against the spirit which remains, the memory that functions, the brain that thinks; an anger at living, at being a man, at knowing the letters or spelling. "What is," exclaims Jerome, "one of "The plague victims, the food of demons, if not the songs of..."
"Secular poetry, the pursuit of worldly wisdom,"
"The study of vain and prideful eloquence? When
"You will have spent long nights on these studies,"
"You will only reap a vain noise of words, without "Nothing solid, etc." And pious legends, popularizing
the precept, to be beaten with sticks by the angels
A relapsed scholar. Saint Caesarius feels himself withering away in a dream.
the arm that held a profane text.

On the other hand, and in contrast to the modesty of these gangs literary gems, sparkle the insolence of the dunces, the Glory to the obtuse and exultation to the stupid. Our scholars have found in ancient Cythera vast hollows filled with <21 Matthew, chapter V.

carefully mutilated fragments, donated to ancient masterpieces
l'ioins ilo leur fui naturelle, Ioh sots ont tout cassé. l.os Libraries have passed through here, just like statues, like the cerhuman calf. After the Christian era, he suffered from a "leprosy-strange sion; and Vogt, finding on Swiss soil modern, extraordinarily thinned skulls, could not to attribute them only to the early Christians (ohrisliams Crétin) (1). See, moreover, in all the collections the heads of the Gothic and Byzantine saints, backs with idiot heads.

Also, that Chateaubriand and Rousseau cut their pens for los Génie dit C/trislisme , los Itini> Jerusalem mirror, or the Savoyard Profession;
quo positivists and saint-siiuonious pull by the chovoux their series and their Christian hierarchy, while Larnark and Cuvier adjust their mammoths and their couohes to Levinthnns ot aux jours do la Hible ; quo les Raphaël ot los Michelangelo dishonors their genius by poetizing the honor.
all idols; the lowliest priest, the most insignificant clerk will know how to put them in their place and tell everyone what they think.
Those people: "Poets," says Saint Ouon in his preface to his Life of Saint Moi, "poets, philosophers and orators, all of them "Scoundrels!" That's why he was made head of the Rouen Cathedral.

Thus, love, homeland, family, even cleanliness, are sublime.
Qualities of matter, everything is banished. Heroism, wisdom, arts, science, the bonds that unite men, virtues that Honor humanity, you are outlaws, fallen, evil said to be sacrificed, as if they were attacks on divine power.
Let the comedy begin (the ascetics, with their priestly mimicry, to the artificial sanctity from which we must at least take the mask! And as if to put the seal to work for to ensure the execution of a horrible instruction, of orders so outrageously hostile to humanity, Jesus leaves his speeches ciples under the terror of his imminent arrival in the midst of the

(1) Littré's dictionary: word Cretin.

nuta*, Domain. u|«r<Vs-dümain, in a month, in a year, in a thousand years, in the pedestals, it will suddenly appear like a grumbler (stent /'ne) and, rovôtu <lo touto his glory, will come to separate the wheat from the chaff, the hoes from the sheep, ropaitra lus fidèles dos joies célestes, plunge the dissidents and the sinners in outer darkness "and it is words spoken in a shrill voice, to which were...

The first Christians anxiously awaited the hope of...
tablo do cannibales dansant autour du poteau de torture.

I, o spectacle «les damnés ne sora pas la moindro dos eternal pleasures. Let us believe a connoisseur, Tertull-Link: "What will not be the spectacle from which we will emerge?"
"The witnesses will be here soon," he exclaimed with wild joy,
"that one "the advent "read Healer now manifest A
• all eyes, glorious, triumphant! How many such Won't the show be majestic? What will I admire there?
"Especially? What is it that will excite my cheerfulness? So what?"
Will I particularly enjoy it? What will excite me?
"enthusiasm, when I see so many so-called kings"
"Mounted to the sky to groan with Jupiter and his acolytes in the "Deeper" the abysses? And the judges who persecuted him
"Healer's name liquefied amidst beautiful flames-"
"more cruel blows than those in which they consumed the "Christians? And the philosophers so renowned for their "Wisdom burns with the disciples to whom they teach"
"They proclaimed that God did not interfere in anything, to which they assumed-
"Men have no souls," or "souls"
"Will they not animate new bodies?" ■> And the trembling poets-
"blatant" raising the tribunal, not of Khadamante or of "Minos, but "the one they didn't expect, Jesus-"
"Christ? That's when we'll have to listen to the tragedians."
And the singers express their own pain! That's "whereas it will be easy to appreciate the talent of the actors."

CI) Matthie", chap XU1, ver". 50; chap XXV, ver". 30.

MOIjHCII

IR*.

"whose madman will shed the most vivid light, ol pim antent! It is
"While we'll have to see the tank driver, everything is gnawing away"
"Do fou outre dos rouos onfinmmées! Cost qu'il sera bon"
"To contemplate the athletes launched, not in the air,
"Naïais dans lo fou. However, jo no voudrais pas memo"
<> that we looked at these people there, in order to direct attention
"Exclusive and islands with insatiable eyes on the torments of "Torturers of Our Lord... It is neither the praetor,
"neither the consul, nor the quaestor, nor the priest who played"
will reward us with such a spectacle, provide us with
b. true enjoyment. We imagine it to be something i> sort, from i\ present, by the imagination of faith (1), «

Cirquo on faco do this npotro of forgiveness and love? los arenas, the Colosseum, and all the places of carnage in the face of the gentle will think of the first Christians, of the eternal circus do tortures and massacres carried out by the faith, he their youx Ecstatic? Charity, that's one of your tricks!

And so it writhes convulsively, this unfortunate society reuse, under a weight she cannot bear. She asks thanks; she seeks to flee by all means; and the mar Tyres, macerations, mutilations of asceticism are back disguised suicides.

What spectacle could be more hideous than these assassins unleashed by a God, jealous of humanity, inflames these fanatics.
Polyeucte's rage, directed less against the idol than against the statue; these furious* blind men whom he corrupts mind and heart to the point of arming their arms against the breast that nourished them, the womb that gave birth to them, society who raised them for his glory, and all these crimes in Exchange of what? The joys promised by the Old Beyond Mountain to its assassins. And how can one be so surprised?

(i) Tkrtui.uen, Dis Speculaculis, ehap. XXX. Let's remember what piouiiioi work cinema place (Je G0 kV0 êuviioi.) col the Apocalypse, this long a cry of rage against ancient society.

JESUS

180

the uproar that a society attacked with such frenzy and island passion may have had some fleeting, but alas, all too brief, stirrings!
to defend against its fierce aggressors, and that the most seized by the emperors (if these two words can be combined), the
The more enlightened, the more humane, have prided themselves on pros
Write a threatening message for civilization! Lucien
They saw the first faithful, exhausted by fasting, peeling backs imposed deprivations, consumed by mysticism, greet in the Death and plagues are the precursors of the heavenly kingdom.
Their voices, the deserts become populated by a horde of madmen whose delights are the cilico and the rotting filth.
The world would have become, if they had been allowed to do so, an immense monastery, from which vorsleciol would have perpetually ascended Alleluia and the Mesira? The city of the new society
The Christian city of Oxyrinque, so admired by the Jansenist Holiiin, where ten thousand faithful, viorgos and monks, they live in a sterile state, that is to say, in a sterile way, some of them

Persecution, the true Minerva of Christianity, emerges all armed with the Gospels, and Jesus dictates it in terms expressly: •> Bring me your enemies, those who have not "He wanted me to rule over them and kill them before me," said the king of a transparent parable (1). For, when his gentle words, his benevolent exterior, the prestige of his Miracles failed, and the God Jesus flew into a rage. Overwhelmed by In a frenzy and fury, he unleashes the rain of fire on Sodom. and Gomorrah against the rebellious cities. His contracted figure It takes turns, from angelic smiles to threats of hell. "Woe to you, Corazin l Woe to you, Bethsais I "And you, Capernaum, you could have been exalted even in "Heaven. You will descend to the very depths of hell (2)." The the most bloody blasphemies, grounds for excommunication future, escape from her twisted mouth against her advor-

(1) Luke chap. XIX, verse 27.

(2) Matthibl, chap. XI, verses. 21.

ME.WH

1*7

political figures, scribes and Pharisees (1); and ju no puis mo to recall without a shudder the horrililo formula where Eymoric and SOS commentators (2) will extract the divine order from the burning The heretics' lie: "If whatever a no does not dome one "As for me, he will be thrown out like a rag, he will dry out..." "We will pick him up and throw him naked and mad where he will burn (he)."

A character so skilled in the art of cursing, who He ordered his apostles to shake the dust off their blood decrees against the unbelieving cities and vows to destroy some those wretched, guilty little towns do not recognize a barely visible divinity, he will be able to, in a few verses on the side, give the precept of loving one's enemy, and the roundabout. Good for evil?

First, these contradictions are not merely apparent. Because if Jesus doesn't agree on the details, he is uno suiteo admirable for any co who watches the reversal of the nature and the theoretical and practical destruction of feelings human ments. They are authentic, because it is in the temperament of the enthusiast, entirely devoted to the idea of the world ment, do s'exprime d'une manière contradictoire, avoc la necessary, because they contribute to endowing religion with the satanic aspect that transforms crimes into virtues to cover the most ambiguous acts with pious pretexts.

Humanity, torn between these currents, crushed between these millstones and deeply convinced of the logic and the divinity of the work, extended and operated itself on the bed of the Gospels. The practice unites the irreconcilable, and this Mating gave birth to monsters. Pride became humble, cruel, charitable, and foolishness became a virtue. Torquemada taught people to kill their enemies out of kindness.

(1) Matthew, chapter 8, verse 7; chapter 7, verse 1; chapter 22. Jean, cbap. VUI.

(2) EYUEBic, ilanuale Inquùitorium, edition approved by Gregory XU1.

(3) St-Jean, ehap. XV, see. G.

burn with love. Molino* so plunged chastely into the orgy. (You humiliate monks, repulsive in your abjection and do vormino, placed their filthy foot on the stubborn of the well Holy emperors, the orders of my sycophants, braggarts of Poverty is insatiable, a torment for the dying, hell or! O paradise on the throat, these mortmain goods, apa-sterile swimming back communities, which EU nations can to restore agriculture only at the price of revolutions without glantes.

Also, individuality, assailed by these elements of disorder, have possessed a true mental alienation; I say, he retrograded below the brute. Cat ani-evil that grazes the grass back clmmps, drinks the water back fountains ot poussa îles cris inarticulés, c'est le grand Nebuchadnezza-nosor. This genius who was Pascal, whose childish games will follow discoveries that adolescence still had Having grown up and whose maturity promised wonders, he withered in its bloom. His science is his pain, his glory and His contempt. A horrifying spectacle of a great soul struggling with herself, taking heart to stifle all her noble instincts! 'illuise Pascal tries to make himself stupid', according to his own expression, through the most disgusting and lost practices more monotonous. It sinks into the flesh, the points of his iron belt, at the slightest feeling of satisfaction or of self-esteem, and the mere sight of a pleasant object; and the Pain tears heart-rending cries from him, condemnation of the evil that prevails. "Illness is the natural state of withered, desperate, writhing in her human damnation.

Elisabeth of Hungary, of whom M. de Montalembert is the worthy Historian, queen, wife and mother, mourns these pure joys which prevent her from giving herself entirely to her Christ.
(Hysterical) and Christian, she licks the sores of lepers at the gate of his palace.

These are the destructive effects of this living religion.
filth. It is to her that we must attribute ignorance and misery.

>101,0011

ISI

ot lu liuino dos lumières, maîtres axotusifs, plus que préfets and police officers in our sad countryside. Aueuu "these are good* apocryphal facts do not resist an impartial examination.

If this examination has not been possible so far in a com-
The complete point is that the human mind is formalistic and, even êornsô under tyrannical regulations, preferred to the revolts against the tactics of the Roman praetor, the demand of right on the ambiguities of the text. Some chance occurrences the drafting then becomes the charter of hope, the lever with which the new idea will be rejected into the infernal nr tics adversaries. Humanity, both oppressed and a believer, imagined finding her titles in a certain number of passages from the Gospels. They are essential to him hostile. Hast! She doesn't want to understand the >oas, ollo transforms it, ollo poetizes it, ello vivifies it; she ente upon these sad, withered branches, its luxuriant branches. Then the theological church raises its towers.
Cordantes. Madmen are waging war on priests in the name of Jesus Christ; others find in his disciples the Pharisees and scribes, cursed competitors. The law of Illusion thus quibbles with divine law. The heretical Christs ques and Hbérittres clash amongst themselves and seize the It's truly gut-wrenching. The generations, for their part, are held back.
out of pride, they will not budge from their age-old errors. They prefer to accept a version convenient, which justifies them and which the Church tolerates without approval
ver. And it is against these various authorities that the crowd repeats and naively believes: Christianity has redeemed woman, strengthened morals, abolished slavery, sowed brotherhood and equality on earth.

It belongs to us, young people, who have no other scruples than truth, to examine the legitimacy of all cos

From the very first pages of the Gospels, Jesus strongly rejects his mother lies, and, with the most treacherous of compliments, exalts Marié the contemplative above Marthe the me-

JKSI'S

1UM

nugèro(l). Lesson listened to too well! If Christianity
It honors woman, it is in her negation that the absolute pinnacle, when it deviates radically from the ways of nature.
Did he ever know the pious Eloatre, Penelope, and her web?
fldôlo, Alceste who offers himself to death in exchange for her husband, Cornelia pressing her precious jewels to her breast, figures sublime acts of humanity, grandiose sins of the creature preferred to the creator, in the pen of Christianity.
For him, woman is restricted to two excessive and immoral types.
Both were flawed: Mary, neither mother nor virgin, without passion, neither fidelity nor love, since she lacks the strength, like certain certain Greek heroines, to resist even God and that Her son kicks her away like a useless mold; and Mario, the repentant prostitute, who embraces Jesus with love frantically unsatisfied and inaugurated the era of these passions a dead end where denied and defied senses take revenge through temfart and fall into the vertigo-inducing zone of illnesses hystero-psychic.

Under this regime, all ties, all feelings are quickly broken.
The Christian mother becomes this Julito who, at the sight of her
The son, crushed on the steps of the courtroom, gives thanks to God.
of having removed it: while Christian marriage unites in the barren sanctity of these legendary spouses of the Middle Ages
In the midst of which an angel descends at night. Love is spelled in the manuals of Sanchez and Beuedicti with The help of the confessor. An entire existence walled in and watched over.
is now nothing more than espionage, with God acting as its henchman.
Life, expansion, joy stop under this jealous eye.

Poor woman 1 I could never think, without a don-their deep affection, to this great martyr of Christianity, to this stubborn victim that science, at the cost of all its suffering, has not yet been redeemed. Fanatic madly in love with her young Galilean, adorned with superstition of ignorance and petty practices, she sacrifices her

(I) John, chap. II will see. 4. – Loc, chap. X, verse. 40.

children, her family, her city, she throws away the fruit of her labor* trails in the abyss of obscurantism, with more than satisfaction that Carthaginian women never showed, he pvéci-to hurl her sons into the furnace of Moloch. She sacrifices would have the world, if it were in his power

Woman is passion, life, love; she is also the hearth. Antiquity offers it the enceuset, under the names of Pal-Alas, Venus, Ceres, Dinna, and Juno, varied and admirable forms and human. Thus, woman is particularly the nemy for Christianity whose main task is to to enslave her and who, not content with reissuing centrally she the Pandora's old, grumbling fable, tries to sully the sources same of existence and fled from Eve, the confidante of Satan.
 There is only one step between the words of Jesus at the wedding of Uana and the wretched questioning of the councils on the amo of the woman.

Lo respect do la femme, l'nuréolo de poésie qui l'envie-Ronne, we owe them to our great ancestors of Germany,
 the warriors with blue eyes, who armed themselves with accents of their Velléda and held a sacred veneration for their companions and their daughters until the middle of the orgy. We we owe nothing but hatred and contempt to the Tartuffes and the Christians hold of the confessional.

Good heavens! Can the water be pure when the source is troubled? What is the starting point of Jesus, Taxiomo fundamental to his doctrine, if not the profound unworthiness of the creature, the sin of life and of the flesh, the humiliation Of being and its nothingness before the sky, seeds of death? Of Therein lies the impotence of a reform entirely directed against humanity.
 nity, the secret of unleashed plagues beneath a false appearance of redemption.

11, moreover, has neither the features nor the pose of a Spartacus,
 This Jesus, a weak and cowardly figure. Improviser of curses.
 grandiose scenes where the threat evokes angels, heaven and
 In hell, Christ shows himself to be less than heroic in the face of danger.
 Seriously. I don't blame him, because not everyone has

A;

Military courage; but the God Christ flees from stones.
He dodges questions, so defiant under blows. He stammers, "rising"
Dilate, sue au jnrtlin «le» Oliviers, pleure ot so lamente sur
the cross, side i\ side with the "those thugs" the dry eye
I contemplate the day that flees and the crowd that descends the path of Golgotha.

This patient, this languishing image, nailed down forever
on the cross where she seems to revel, have nothing pro fundamentally exciting. The slave who watches him at two ages
We placed the heavens and the earth upon him. The stars upon him
They say, "Suffer," the angels restrain his arm. The foundations
The world's madness stretches upon its sera, that the eye of heaven spy; and God himself, from the binding of his cross, puts a finger to her mouth.

Christianity, a continuous hymn to the praise of slavery
Vage sings of the bliss of the tortured, the joy of the beaten, the Glory of the stunned. To attribute to it some kind of abolition
"1st, slavery would be an insult to him. Far from abolishing it, it unites
It makes universal and renders all men servants of God. Democrat
In the manner of the Caesars, Jesus equalizes the castes by killing the human freedom.

Luke, chapter XII, verse 47: "I/isslave who knew the
"The will of the master, and who will not have done that will"
"Sora was beaten severely. But he who has not known her,
"And whoever has fled from things deserving of punishment will be punished."
"Also, but a little less."

"Slaves, submit to your masters, with all two kinds of respect, not only for those who are good
"and gentle, but even to those who are harsh and troublesome(l)."
That's from Saint Peter.

Here is now a passage from Saint Paul: "Slaves, obey,
"with fear and trembling, and in the simplicity of your "heart, to those who are your masters according to the flesh, as "to Jesus Christ himself (2)."

(i) Piebbb, epitro 1, chap. 11, verses. 18.

(t) Paul, Ait Kp/iesios, chap. VI, verse 5.

\Ki

Kt co significant verse: "kill the slaves who have ifo"
"Faithful for denial) do not despise them, under the pretext"
"that they are their brothers, lest they serve them all the more"
"better than they are faithful and beloved by God. If someone "does not acquiesce to the salutary instructions of Our-
"Lord Jesus Christ and the doctrine according to godliness,
"That one is puffed up with pride—he is ignorant (1)."

And again: "Were you called and faith, being a slave,
"Do not bear this state with peiuo, but rather make of it"
"Good use, even if you could become » free (2). »

The saints, the popes, the ecclesiastical authors are unanimous in advocating patience and servitude. Exem-ples: Saint Cyprien, Saint Gregory the Great, Saint Chrys-Sostomo, Saint Basil and Saint Augustine (3). "Jesus," he wrote
The latter, "perfected the slave. He told him: Will be "More than ever."

"Even so," Isidore said to the Christian slave, "when
"Even if freedom were offered to you, I advise you to stay"
"In slavery. You will be asked much less."
"because you will have served both your master in heaven and your "Master on earth (4)." And Tertullian goes into lengthy detail
ment, ad usum tyi-anni, les mérites singulaires de l'esclave Christian (5).

"The cross! To suffer, to suffer! That is the law he teaches"
"Christ," Luther would say to the rebellious peasants of Munzer.
Louis XIV wrote to the King of Tonkin on January 10, 1681:
The thing in the world we would most desire, and

(1) Paul, Ad Timotheum, epistle I, ehap, VI, verse. 2 and euiv.

(2) Paul, Ad Corinthios, epitro 1, ehap. Vile, verse. 21.

Çi) St-Cyphibn, Testimonium, book 111, ehap. LXXII— StGrégoire
the Great, Régulas, pastorales, parfis 111, ehap. V. — St-Auoüstín, Eneraiiones insalmum CXXIV.— St-Basile, Morales regulæ LXXV, ehap. 1. — St Chrisostoms, Epistoki ad Titum, Caput II, homelia IV, etc.

(4) Isidore of Pelusium, Eoistoke, book IV, list XII.

(5) Apologetics, chap. 111.

"For you and for your states, it would be best to obtain for your » subjects who have already embraced the law of the one true God, the "freedom to profess it, this law being the highest, the "Nobler, holiest, and above all, most suitable for
 "to make kings rule absolutely over the people (1)." Some holy books introduced slavery to America and the still legitimately.

In vain, the testimonies will be repeated in such a way profusion of volumes (2). I<es councils lotus thunderbolts exhaust the slightest desire for liberation Chissoment. In vain, Archbishop Drutus and Monsignor Tiassius desperately want Christianity to have been abolished Slavery (3). The scholar Oasca proves it with great force of doctrine, and, as in Shakespeare's play, it is necessary
 I believe them because they are honorable men.

Ancient slavery was a bad luck drawn by the lottery.
 of life, which could have capriciously varied the conditions of the master and servant. Endured with resignation and com Equipped, especially dear, the Greeks, with gentleness, he is part from the public existence of these peoples and originates in debt, conquest, or penalty. We can see in Homeric poems and the patriarchal relationships of the masters and servants. The yoke was barely felt, and the slave was a member of the family, companion of the maid and of Misfortune. Eumaeus, a free man sold to the king of Ithaca by the Semites, is the advisor and master of Ulysses. The king's daughters set an example of work to their successors. Plato, Phaedrus, Terence, Epictetus, doctor
 Even the gods themselves had been slaves. The jurists defi-

(1) Key to the cabinet cited by the Philosophical Decade, 5th year, 3rd quarter, n° 28, XX prairial (8 Jiiiia 1797,) page 501.

(2) Uauroque, On slavery among Christian nations. – Akmahd River, the Church, and Slavery. – Finally, the definitive works of our Gavant and excellent friend of Ponsat in the Phare de la Loire. January 4th 1884 and the Revue Moderne.

(3) Letter on (Slavery, by Dupanloup. – Mgr O'üruick, On the acc cord of Religion and Religion – and other Rocam botes.

They say slavery is an institution of human rights condemned by natural law. Philosophers and writers Vain pagans loudly proclaim it an iniquity.
cial (1). But Olympus never took him under its patronage swimming, Jupiter never preached it to the earth, and the title Being a slave is not dishonorable. It is a sign of evil.
hour, and the slave was a man as long as the man was a citizen.

- Christianity changed all of that. The slave, of whom he aped emancipation and whose irons he riveted, fell from a to an even lower degree. It was no longer an animal that one could kill and beat with impunity, but to whom remained Oncoro, a final corner of individual existence. He became something related to terror, attached to the globe on which She lived and died, and she followed in all hands treacherous or bloody. What was then the conduct of The Church's attitude towards these disinherited people? It had the sad courage to to boast of the victims' happiness and promise them paradise for the price of their earthly suffering. The poor monks took advantage of the disaster of the feudal wars and the the bad reputation of the year 1000 for creating hordes of subjects hypocritically registered under the name of God himself, spiritual leader of communities. Millions of men
The pious, terrified, pledged their freedom and that of their race for the benefit of the church; and the emancipated serfs to tut 0 century by the democracy of Florence, in the 18th century by the French philosophy, sufficiently protest against the hypo-sacerdotal crisis. Only the revolution made the disappearance of the last vestiges of serfdom. Science will emancipate the last deny proletarian, chained by ignorance, exploited by the greed and selfishness.

(1) Aristotle, Politics, book, 1, chap. II.— Justinian, Digest, tit.
XXI, title I, law 5.— Seneca de Spirstohe LXLV.— Dion-Chrysostomus, oratio XV. — Philo, Fragmenta comicorum Græcorum, fragment XXXIX. — Athenaeus, Banquet of Scholars, chap. LXXXIII, page 508, volume U (Argentorati 1801–1807). — Petronius, chap. LXXI—Dionysius—Cato, book IV, list 44, etc., etc.

l'.IH '

J KSI'S

of the E/ij.v»* ! – Yes, the transfer of all his possessions between the hands of the priest, under penalty of death (1). For if Jesus does the fight against the rich, he thinks, and the popularization of good—to be, in the dissemination of science and the arts, h cotte meeting Noble instincts, an ideal for the future? We have only seen one A jumble of beggars holding their hands towards the sky, in cursing the earth, cowards, pious, filthy, ignorant, selfish, muttering prayers. That's the aforementioned brotherhood. Jesus! What does it have in common with ours? That one, the brotherhood of humankind, communion of all men of heart, in freedom and justice, she was preached well before Jesus, and unfortunately without support ter do glaive.

I have often wondered if we should have more do anger or pity for cos mystagogues, deceivers of the crowd and of themselves, who prepare so many sauces Synoptic legends. You have to hear them, with their tone of hierophant and sibyl. May the ages age

Let the people beat their breasts! Let Art, science, and genius, do penance! I The son of a poor carpenter from Galilee, barely instructed in the liturgy Hebrew, will embrace centuries and empires, glimpse the future of his disciples and the world, untangling all the enigmas of humanity.

Credal Judcms Apella, a Roman would say. But Saint Peter knew better than all our spiritualists the doctrine of master. The first Christian sects, Ebionites and Nazarenes (2), declared heretics by their wayward brothers, refused, in the name of Christ, any contact with the Kind. An authentic tradition combined with the habit of a

(1) The legend of Ananias and Sapphires, this miracle of the assize court, can have no other meaning – Acts of the Apostles, chapter 5, verse 10.

(2) These sects have long preserved within themselves the remnants of the the family of Joseph and the brothers of Jesus.

Mol.ui'll

lt»7

the once dominant idea, which was able to maintain in the Gospel doctrine.

The admission is difficult for those who, for two centuries, have burned, tortured, and tortured their mother. Month read Christianity was first Jewish in the mind of the minister, Jewish in fact And logic. He was not supposed to leave the borders of Judea.

It is to Saint Paul, to that bold sophist, who carried so high in the story the prudence of the serpent, that honor returns to have understood the rise and destinies of Christianity nismo extended to humanity. This converted Saul had, moreover Their steps did not know Christ. Nourished in pagan writings, where He often draws on SOS quotes and his themes, the preton despised by the daughter of (iamaliel resolutely inaugurated, despite Saint Peter and the apostles, the preaching to the (montils. Saint Paul is the true founder of Christianity, who finds itself entirely, with its dogmas and immoralities and its schisms, in the poigaéo d'épi très do l'apôtre dos Gentiles. As for Jesus, a less active and less alive, her shadow was repairing itself in certain passages, including Matthew seems to have a monopoly and those who condemn for the Paulian doctrines.

Don't think I'm here to destroy the law or the pre-
"Phètes. I do not come to destroy, but to fulfill/ Jo you "Tell me the truth: the law will be fulfilled to the very last iota,"
"as long as heaven and earth endure. Whoever has broken
"the least of his prescriptions and will have given this
b. Men's education will be relegated to the bottom of the list
b in the kingdom of two. But he who has accomplished
b and taught the law will be great in the kingdom of b heavens (1). b This is a formal excommunication of saint Paul.

And in the mission to the apostles: "Jesus sent them all

(1) Matthew, ehsp. V, verses 17-19} chap. YM, vas. 4; chap. XX1U, verses 2 and 3. – Luke, chapter 5, verse 14; chapter 21, verse 17. – Mark, chapter 1, verse 44.

Jt'Sl'S

J!W

"The twelve said; Do not go down the path of the Gentiles"
"And do not enter the Samaritan cities. But go "preferably near the backs of lost sheep from the house"
» of Isrnftl (1). »

Another verse from Matthew's memo teaches us the way Jesus performed the miracle for the stranger, "I have not
 "He was sent only to the lost sheep of the house of Israel."
 The Uhrst responds to the prayers of the Uhananèonne. St he he adds in a fierce outburst: "U is not good to take "The children's bread to throw to the dogs." What about the
 The woman replied with all the finesse of antiquity: "The little ones
 "Dogs eat the miottos that fall from the table"
 "Our master (2)." And Jesus, disarmed, complies. He heals la fillo do cotto formrno.

His words nonetheless remained a cry from the heart and from the blood Semitic. Shylock, exasperated by persecution and contempt secular, only gives to Christians when his brothers are satiated, if indeed he prefers to destroy rather than give Jesus only performs miracles for foreigners when...
 The sons of the house no longer want him. Like his master, Christianity became universal out of spite. "Love-
 "You and each other" is addressed exclusively to disciples and the community. It's a matter of sect and of tactics, council of union and discipline which alone can ensure It's about success, not humanitarian words. Jesus explained it.
 enough in this dark passage that has become the form of the primitive excommunication procedure: "If your "Brother, no, he's not listening to you. Take two or three with you."

(1) Matthew, chapter X, verses 5 and 6. – In chapter XXVI of the even and Mabc, chapter XVI, verse 15, Luke, chapter XXIV, verse 47, Jesus orders him to go and instruct all nations. It is clear that this is no longer the primitive Christ and Judah speaking, this Christ who wanted the law was executed down to the last detail, but Christ was revised and corrected by St. Paul and his disciples. These contradictory passages are the vestiges of the a struggle that began in the first century between the two rival doctrines of St-Pierra and St-Paul.

(2) Matthew, chapter XV, verses 24–28.

MOLOCIF

)!»:»

"Three people so that everything rests on the word of two"
 '* or three witnesses; if he does not listen to them, tell him
 "The Church, and if he does not listen to the Church, let him be..."
 "like a pagan and a Catholic (1)." Saint John will defend soon memo do return their greeting to the InV tiques (2).

(Juollo distance between the philosopher who exclaims with splen-deur: "lition of everything that touched man and humanity"
"Unity is not foreign to me,"

JS he I (holding to alienate me pulo, and the Christian, onnomi do sa proprio nature et du gonre iiuiuin, comprising only a brotherhood of creatures cursed, doomed to slavery and sin!

Between Socrates, the citizen of the world (Koîj«;), whose name signifies both ornament and matter, and the exiles of the valley of tears, throne of Satan, what an impassable abyss! 1

Christian charity, a solace brought to the suffering humans, it's just speculation, a way of thrifting kingdom of heaven, uno vuo étroiteo ot boundée. Stigmato Printed on the forehead of the poor, charity degrades him who the donuo and the one who receives it; and it is he who receives us, generations custodians of the future, 'that it is up to erase the insultaunt's assertion: "You will always have poor people among you." » you (3). u

Did the poor man or the stranger present himself to the man?
In antiquity, he did not lift his long toga to acquit to settle his debt in a fleeting act of charity. But, taking by the his Greek or barbarian brother, he brought him to the middle of his family, gave him a place in his home and his heart. If antiquity had the slave, let us remember that it
He also had the host and only knew the beggar under the Caesars.

(1) Matthew, chapter XVIII, verses 16 and 17.

(2) St-Jean, epistle II, verse 10.

(S) Matthew, chapter XXVI, verse U.

.h; si's

ÜÜÜ

The reward for lionesses' actions or for declared actions
The stars created by religion suppress the vorlu. Lo bion n'ost more than In, a thing rewarded; lo, evil, the thing punished.
Doing good is reduced to a long amount of work. In contrast to the animated saints do the rngo of the player who wants to win the game, world and doing to others what they want done to them, according to the great law of the human species, and not for the sake of it of a vain immortality.

What, after all, is repentance, the capital lever of young sect, otherwise a bonus offered naked vice and naked crime, a A penchant for proselytism, a human comedy? Repentance, It's failure, it's shame, it's calculation. We put on On the joys side, the happiness, the successes, the asset of luck or the cunning; or the misfortunes, the failures, the falls, disasters that strike down man and make him return on lui-même. Depending on the result, we continue or we stop repent. I, o repentir est l'homme et ne peut regarder on face his haughty rival, the vulture of Frométhôn who tears apart entrails without eliciting a cry from the victim; intimate voice by which humanity, implacable and vengeful, declares To the criminal, his outlawry: remorse. Christianity nisme abused a convenient agent who brought him & abundance men and possessions. Constantine found in her bosom the absolute tion of his crimes which the pagan priests had refused him; and Gilles de Rais (Bluebeard), that blood-stained monster of eight hundred children sacrificed in ferocious orgies, but to believe in heavenly forgiveness, because he left it to the monks his opulent lordship and that the word "repentance" had touched her lips. Humanity isn't such a good girl. She declares an eternal war, in the past and in the future, as long as she stands on earth, to the monsters who have outraged or perverted. Her cry is the law of the Twelve Tables; In hostem æterna auctoritas!

After such damning testimonies, can one ask Does Christianity have a moral code? No, since it defiles los without (i'unu systematic way and mows highly i\ the extermination of human nature. Guioonqim jetto les A look at a writing by Greek divine men, a discourse, a treatise. trngédio or piece of verse, remains confused with our admiration delightful in the presence of this entirely human morality which It excludes neither joy nor love, a halo of serenity and... Glory snatched away by ruthless hands. In contrast by Homer, Hesiod, Sophocles, Euripides, Aeschylus, Aristotle, Hippocrates, Democritus, Epicurus, Sooratus, Virgil, Cicero, Luoreoe and, later still, Seneca, Epicteto and Mark-

M0I.0C11

2W1

Equalized, does Christianity have a name or an era?
 Spread out? Saint Lattre pout-étro, Saint Simeon lestytitoou
 Saint Koch doubled by Bossuet and the danse macabre.
 Also, driven by the most intense of jealousies, he feared not to accuse the nuns of immorality. Stoics, martyrs
 Do virtue, Epicureans, who knew how to die for liberty and the homeland, austere and tolerant philosophers, serious under your porticoes like marble statues, wise damned
 by fools, hurled into hell by fanatical backs Foolish ticks, forgive them. Forgive them. 4 a whirlpool unable to understand you, animated against everything that is beautiful in the rage of the barbarian.

Every nation that has reached a certain degree of power and light includes the need for a morality or more simply a contract of mutual respect. The laws do Manu, the writings of Zoroaster, of Plato his disciple, of the Confucius, Lao Tzu and Mencius, the Koran do Muhammad and so many other treaties that encompass the law human beings, subject to a religious commandment, offer themselves in the middle absurd, eccentric or bloody orders, the lot of the religion, precepts of sound morality, heritage of Humanity. Love of one's neighbor, resignation, action to return good for evil, temperance, probity, purity, self-knowledge, and abstinence, such is the teaching of these books written in a style at least

Jl'.Sl'S

202

as pure as the Gospel Judaism, for its part, returns
 It says that there is something human in the doctrine of Christ;
 Mr. Salvador (1) has shown in the ossônion doctrines monk the books of the Old Testament the parts
 most remarkable of the innovation pretenduo.

Only the idea of universality by which Christianity wants to confiscate the world for its own profit, which differentiates them. Thus,
 The Sunday prayer is word for word the Kaddish of Talmud. The great principle of loving one's neighbor comes from the Leviticus (2), and this book contained in addition the precept of respecting his father and mother, which Jesus could have made his Profit. Fraternity and purity of heart were preached.
 without hesitation by Hillel, the Ilion and the synagogue of Alexander drie. Isaiah had already made pronouncements against the rich, the fasting, hypocrites; and the Essonians knew at These Moloohist practices of abstinence are at the heart of which

Judaism, undoubtedly, at least that which found developed in the brilliant theories of the prophets, superior in spirit and scope, not only petty practices of the Pharisees, but baroque parables of Christ. "This is what the Healer says; Do Judgment and justice. Deliver the oppressed. Do not grieve" "Not the foreigner, the orphan, nor the widow, and do not spread Here (in the temple) innocent blood (3)" In these noble and simple words sum up the doctrine of Jeremiah; and these exhortations recur more than once under his inspiration burning hot. This prophet didn't even want sacrifices of animals (4.) He would not have suffered the sacrifice any more theophagic of the Mass. But I hear the great Isaiah: "We fasted and you didn't even look. We have

(1) Salvador, Jesus Christ and His Doctrine. Volume I, Chapter VI, Book U (Pariah 1838.)

(?) Lévrnqw, «h*p. XIX, verse 18.

(3) Jeremiah, chapter XXII, verse X

(4) Jeremiah, chapter V, verse 22.

ME.OCH

•,'lC!

"Humiliated our souls, you did not put on a point," saying weary Jews. – "But," replies the noble Jehovah, "we pro-» photos, in the day of your youth, you will execute Your wishes and collect your debts. You jeùnoz ot * "You create lawsuits and quarrels, and you..." "Strike h blows with your fists like impious men. No jeùnoz" "Not like you've done so far, otherwise your cries..." "will likely strike the sky often. Kst-eo litlo joûno" "What I chose, to see man afflict his love one day,"

» turn his head in a circle and spread the ashes "Bags? Is that what you call a pleasant day?" "To the Healer?"

"This is not the fast I chose. Dissolve the lions of impiety. Lighten the burden on our shoulders. Free those Those who bend under the weight, unload their burdens. Breeze" "Your bread with the hungry and show contempt for the poor" "Do not let the vagrants into your house. If you see anything..."

"Light will burst forth like the dawn, your health will return, the "Justice will precede your face and the glory of God will overtake you"
"Loppera. You will invoke him and you will be heard, etc." Jo refers to that admirable chapter LVIII which should be quoted entirely. The worship of God in spirit and in truth, by The practice of good, which is at the heart of the useless revolution.
tempted by the prophets, these elite men superior to Semitic genius. If, with the ideas of their Due to time and their paj's, they were unable to support their generous doctrine on human greatness and dignity, at least Does their God have common sense and speak the language of the reason. It was reserved for the ancient world and the world modern regeneration of placing punishment in the conscience

(I) The rehabilitation of the flesh, plaything of Molochist tortures, that is
This is what completely differentiates the Prophets from the ascetic Jesus.
The latter only condemns simulated fasts and grants exemption from the ritual.
of macerations that weaken man and the defenseless book anxious hands of his executioners.

iKsrs

m

or the reward and to arrive at a humanitarian sacrifice
before which all blows of discipline vanish and which is accomplished without fear or hope, Morconniro.

"Be just and true," exclaims Juvenal, inspired, when... i' Pim In ris to dicterait le perjure on face do son taureau.

"The greatest of evils is to prefer one's life to honor."

>■ neur, and to keep his life from losing the real ones u reasons. »

"Pbataris lieet, imperel ut sis fats us, et admoto tfielet pcrjuria lattvo. Summum crdcncfas animating prw/brvc pudori, and. auspicious ritam. vivendi perderc causas. »

Or find in the Gospel these vibrant words which raise, nilammunt...purify and let them belong
A humanity that has produced such men? Because the Christianity invented nothing. On the contrary, it destroyed.
Its profound originality lies in the importation of evil under a guise of a new and even more fatal form, a state of mourning, a
The world's eve, where the universe packs its bags. It carries in He represents inertia. He is immoral, cold, selfish, ignorant conur, in short, profoundly hostile to nature and to progress. It is judged that the passages are countless, the improvisations, the allegories before which the a sensitive crowd whose harmful content has deeply corroded, modern societies.

The Widow's Obol (1), this much-admired parable, What is it from an economic point of view, if not a council? exploitation, a trick to squeeze money out of the poor?

Reddile Cwsari qwv sunl Cæsaris, worthy equivocation
The good old days of Escobar bring Jesus closer to the fanatics.
sectarians ready to acclaim Nero, if he wanted to do tomorrow the experience of their theories. It will be useful for a long time to come.
of consolation and pretext for traitors and cowards.

The lilies that do not spin and are better dressed than

(I) Lee, chap. XXI,

Mol.m'ii

on"

Solomon in all his sword; your ravens who do not pen
They arrive the next day and receive their food.
the hand of Jehovah (1), all co cycle tl'uno ascetic poetry, condemns work, the basis of human dignity, and rejects formally the industry, this great conquest of the 19th century century, until now, it is true, a source of misery, but, in the future, a source of emancipation and well-being.

John on the breast of Christ (2), that pious flower from a Hellenist, transports the heart of the seminars and Inflame the Antinous of the sacristy. Let, let come your little children (3) to these holy pederasts,

Blessed are those who breathe! with the empty sky and Eden
Lies, the bloodiest of your ironies!

The kingdom of the two, a vast horizon open to proselytism
ism is the state of vagrancy described by Jesus and his disciples in Palestine. Stop at the wedding in Cann, sit to sit at the table of a tax collector or a Pharisee, according to the chance occurrences, moving from conversation to Nicodemus to the cello of a tille of joy, to live off the fish of the river or the fruit of the tree, to unleash one's spirit in the squares

Cursing, blessing, dreaming, without understanding anything about civilization tion or & life, without worry about tomorrow, without attachment A people or perishable goods, to live innocently, Ignorant and sterile, that's it, in the most optimistic sense.
the ideal dreamed of by Jesus. A saccharine vision in opposition to... complete with our press, our arts, our collections of paintings,
our libraries, our instincts for progress and the future,
A sketch of an idle bohemian, where one wanted to glimpse the city future.

If they had at least stopped there, for the sake of the rest of the man Manity! But no. The God of Christians is death;

(1) Lue, chap. XII, vey. XII et seq. – Matthew, chap. VI, verses.
25 and following.

(?) John, chap. XIII, verses. 23.

(3) Mabc, chap, X, vêts. 13.

JB8CS

without

death, even more horrible under the Hour, which we cover his bare skull, beneath the makeup with which his cheekbones; death that punishes and death that rewards;
Death, the ideal of dreams, the goal of life, the fulfillment of desires
The price of hope, the price of torture.

The lying dogma of immortality, the Nepenthe of the slave, Greece has no shame in having invented you. You came out fully armed with the brain of a subtle tyrant, or rather, conscience dulled by a drunken helot. What evils have you not unleashed!
Born on earth? All these saints, your lovers, are deceitful; these virgins, prostitutes; these martyrs, spies farmers; they leave these poor people far behind.
d'Helvétius and d'Holbach in the conception of interest.

They are chaste, but hopeful of the roadside.
divine, heavenly delights. At this thought, a shiver
The way desire runs through the bodies of virgins, arousing their
In their hearts, hope flushed their faces. Emulators of Alcmena
And of Thérèse, they disdain the flesh and impotent love.
health.

They are humble; but the palaces of heaven are more splendid that the azure, brighter than jasper, open all

to cover bodies or the millipedes of angels will grow.

Blow their right cheek. They turn their left cheek;
God will avenge them. "Strike," the martyrs say to their persecutors, like Racine's bailiff: "I am the father of my virtues. To refuse everything in order to have everything, to despise everything To own everything, it's pure pricing. And the player of Pascal believes he's winning by playing a coin toss.

Comedy of refusal, hypocrisy of the flesh, false ambition
And ferocious, that's spiritualism. The chosen ones are chaste by lust, poor through avarice, humble through pride, charity tables by hope of a hundredfold.

May they, I hope, these bold sophists, Earth's executioners, may they one day rise again! May they saints, martyrs, the Rohingya, popes and helots, detainees

MftUU'It

m

their tired arms under the slabs, piercing the furrow of wheat and place their skeletal fingers in the hollow of their orbitos! May they germinate, with abundant fruit its, beneath your meadows, your cathedrals, your mountains and plains, and to see with horror that they had abandoned the prey for the shadow, humanity for nothingness and lied to life for the Eternal death! May the martyr tear open his wounds;
The ascetic, cursing his penance; the priest and the philosopher,
tear off their lying tunics; and all together, strike their sonorous skeleton of 'their yellowed knucklebones', redamor
a drop of life with more anguish than the traveler altered does not demand a drop of dew; and that, from the breast back deserted squares, destroyed cities, ruined basilicas, in the face of nature, which always lives and thinks, resounds,
with the accent of Sganarelle demanding his wages, this howl
a anguished anguish; "Christ! Christ! You have deceived us."
"May you be cursed!"

CHAPTER III

Conclusion

In summary, Christianity is emerging from a period of immense decline.
Despair. Humanity had lost all faith. Kilo
He called upon God. Death, pain, and frenzy answered.

Christianity is guilty of having deified crimes social issues, poverty, ignorance, uselessness. He embodies all of them.
destructive agents that man traps in his care.
It is the refuge of this venomous spirit of the abyss, everywhere grappling, in all religions, with the beautiful and splendid This matter. It is the origin and support of all abuses of our social order. In it are symbolized the revolt of grace against the law, authority against liberty, Selfish exploitation versus the social ideal. The citizen is sacrificed to the believer; man, to God. This much-vaunted genius, What Chateaubriand celebrated was Satan conspiring to bring about ruin.
of the globe.

The task of the modern mind is therefore to sweep away even the last fragment the Semitic spirit and to return to the ancient destiny of our race, to the motto without which
It cannot overcome Humanity with its sublime dogma.
Every time man leaves this sacred ground for armed chimeras against himself, every time, Giving in to the pride of the deified self, he subjects nature to God.
matter to spirit, then the most dreadful of diseases seizes hold of the social body and progress halts for a period of time centuries.

To the ancient world revitalized by the alluvial deposits of the nations

10

•IfcSl'S

Jlq

"We owe the conquests of our sciences, the brilliance of our arts, the dazzling beauty of our cities. It was he who tore them away
The veil thrown over the violence by religious terror. It is he who gave us back unlearned love, family, and friendship Cursed, all these true acts of piety, envied by the divine unity. The reconciliation of man and nature has put an end to...
The dualism we wanted will become eternal. We are saved by the tears of the Muses, raised up by the wisdom of Minerva, freed by the labors of Hercules, redeemed by Apollo's victory. These defeated gods are ours.
Cos, goddesses whose free charms have been cloistered under the habit

With man, they rise again with him. Already the ancient cult revives in the sciences and the arts, sustains with its breath powerful, the masterpieces of our literature, is the guide and the thinker's faith. The social question resonates deeply.
from the voice of the Gracchi and the storms of the Agora.

I see it rising in the future, the future Athens, no not brilliant with jasper and emerald, like the sad neck
wind of the apocalyptic Jerusalem, but adorned with men, of citizens, of wise men, and where all will participate in these privileges privileges too often reserved by the city for its aristocracies.

The Greek spirit represents the gushing forth, the effusion, the a-
He is the divinization of all physical qualities.
and moral, the splendor of matter. To him belongs the morality of wise, the useful sacrifice of the citizen, the religion of humanity unity, faith in progress, equality and freedom affirmed, even in the midst of a civilization that divided men my Greeks and Barbarians. To him, holy tolerance. When The Arian Valons persecutes Catholics; a voice is raised in favor of freedom of conscience; it is that of a pagan,
of a persecuted man, Themistius.

"Understand that it is not in the power of princes."

"to compel their subjects to all their wishes, but that he

"There are certain things that we absolutely cannot..."

"Force them against their will. This class embraces everything that

MtiMu'!l! ýl 1

"ust of the domain of virtue and particularly the ideas and feelings about the worship of the Divinity. For virtue

"is a voluntary movement, and we will never be able to

"Forcing me & thinking that I don't want to. All that is u of the hardware domain can be ordered and obtained by "Violence. But thought and all its manifestations"

They are free and independent. You can force me to do it.

"That which I do not approve of, but it is not in your power"

"To have me execute it voluntarily. No threats,"

"No torture that could bring me there... 11 has not"

"Missed, I remember our ancestors, the princes badly"

"inspired who wanted to do violence to the thirties and attempted"

"to impose the religion they had received from their fathers."

"But all they did was reveal hidden feelings"

"real out of fear of torture and brought no one

b in their opinion. Also, it is not their imposed God that "The new converts would dream, but the imperious purple-to follow the religion he deems appropriate and of the

b. follow freely. And you didn't invent this law;
b. It is within human conditions and sanctioned by "All eternity by Providence. Also, he who brings
b. Violence is a struggle against God and natural law (1).

This God of Themistius is not the God of the Christians.
Religion produces saints; philosophy produces sages.
And unfortunately, there are also victims. Because the principles Themistius's words were the seal of his defeat. Grateful to his opponents a right that they themselves denied him, Paganism was defeated in advance by its humanity.
It was not with such lofty reasons that he could resist Cyril's frenzied torch and axe and of the Augustinians.

Even today our gods are outlawed. The robes

(1) Themistius, Discourse X (Paris 1684) and Discourse XII, translation Latin of the para Petau.

Nuiras violated marble and ivory. Fury and ignominy rancid destroy or mutilate our sacred books, works splendid historians, philosophers, poets. Each Each day brings its tribute of curses, insults, and o-tragedies. The state has recognized all cults, even the most bloodthirsty.
like the crudest ones, apart from the great Hellenic cult of the connection. In our time, in our modern century and enlightened, the philosopher, this educator of injustice who has created the men of the Revolution and will evoke the
A hero of the future, the philosopher is an outcast. He does not exist.
with certain social necessities that are in a state of tolerance and surrounded by every precaution, while on the Heights rise, crenellated and feudal, these two castles wools dressed in black and ermine which are called Theology Religion, flanked by laws, veritable sharpshooters on the public. In the depths, the very core, grazes the philosopher Sophie is outrageous and insulting, thank you, found guilty at the slightest hint of a reply. While the Jupiters of the sculpted pulpit hurls its thunderbolts, one must bow the
We back down and keep quiet. We don't even have the right to do
The insult of a fair discussion. "Discussing religion"
"Christian," Mr. Plougoulm declared in the middle of the courtyard of
"To appeal to the Court of Cassation is to insult him."

Condemning, gagging, even strangling, is not responding dre, and there is an excommunication more formidable than the extinguished torches and priestly follies, that's excommunication.
communication of reason and common sense.

"Just relax," they tell you, "you can enjoy yourself."
As if the life of thought were not as demanding as the violence of the body, and as if we shouldn't fight for his conscience with as much fervor as for his defense personal.

"Keep your ideas to yourself and for the dust of your home." As if expansion wasn't a con
the compelling nature of existence and that the truth must remain eternally confined to her well, for fear of hurting social vices and morbid vanities.

Happy IVplu'môro who sees luiro io soloil ot dies for Never! Its leaning from the top of the esplanade onto the abyss obscure, to probe the darkness and see the dawn break, to bring his grain of sand to the edifice, protesting in his weak voice or powerful against the prescription of the true, before do so rocou-Dear in nature, such is the duty of man. If you have a handful of truth in hand, open-minded, no risk to be struck by lightning. What does it matter what the light devours, provided that it illuminates?

The sacred duty is to work on human genesis.
And the building of the great city. One of them moves blocks,
The other idea. We are artists, workers, pundits, poets.
Idleness and idleness are two crimes.

And you, old whore, vondeuso & false weight, flilo
The eldest of the inquisitors and executioners, Justice, the inquisitors
Sprangor and Torquemnda will therefore not let you Sleep? Weep, inconsolable widow, weep your pincers, your easel, your blazing pyre, the ordinary and the extraordinary ordinary. You still have imprisonment, outrage, ruin and defilement. Go, we offer you ample and loyal breasts. Ya, hyena, feast on our flesh and do
Our blood. This is your funeral meal.

History has never shown a believer burned by an atlioceus.
Faithful, tortured by two philosophers. We have too much do res-Respect for thought, even in its errors. Our weapons are reason and justice. We challenge you to arms equal, without surprise and without ambush, in broad daylight public. Will you give us a little less stopping at the end?
A few more reasons?

And what criticisms can be leveled against us? If we practice the Well, it's for the reward it contains within itself.
and not for others. "We don't trade in it. We don't
We don't sell, we give away. We don't place.

"Pax God, n Is it our fault if we sought it" everywhere without meeting him, if we didn't want to

li'.svs ME,Wtl

214

to worship him in the dreadful golden idol, of wood and of metaphysics sique, which we have seen everywhere devouring nations;
Yes, stopped and gilding Vespase, we shouted three times:

"My father! My father! "without having any other answer that the drop of water that fell for two centuries in the abyss?

If God exists, let him show himself in all his glory. Let him expüquo the contradictions of its essence, the motives Seriously, his impotence or his rest on Faeo dos injustices of history. May he unfold the treasures of his kindness misunderstood, like the marvelous depth of its pro-evidence. That far from being the worst-case scenario of the circuit, the reason its, it so revealed itself to our dazzled eyes like their suite ot Their infinite apnisomont! Let him do that, if he can, and...
We'll see.

Chimera and Lies 1 Iæs criknes to which it was revealed the admirable reality of nature, or those who have been astonished by vain, supernaturalist thoughts will roll along, like a molehill.
the pebble. The same decomposition will dissolve all these bodies, while humanity will continue its eternal journey.
May she live strong, powerful, and free, and may her light shine forth reveal it to his blinded enemies!

May their punishment and our vengeance be severe!

APPENDIX

HAS

THE DIÜON OF VIRGIL

This is the literal translation of the titra porso of Astarte.
Dido (llXswnw VErrante). She founded Carthage, all like Astnrté, Saturno, Hercules and so many others

Life and body, through the magic of an immortal poem, and tomb under the inexorable blows of criticism.

This poetic Elissa (1), the loving and passionate queen, that which finds rest only in death, is an Action. The Aeneid put into verse and action the legend and the ceremonies of the goddess. She didn't even bother to conceal. In the middle of the city rises the temple surrounded of austere trees and where an eternal fire burns in honor of powers of Erebus. Virgil dedicated it to Juno for the needs of his cause, but Silius Italicus does not recognize it that Elissa-Dido and the infernal realm of the Saturnian cult.

All the characters in Virgil belong to this
A mixed family of heroes and gods, an obligatory procession of Primitive genealogies: Bel, father of Dido and the Gods, Mars in the guise of Yarbas, the Libyan Mars, and enun

(1) Elissa, do la desinence El, the great God.

JESUS MOLOCH

2HI

Pygmalion, an important figure in all the myths of the 11th century. Colcstis, He has at tiadès a golden olmar, with the fruits of em-ramlo. (Uost the murderer of Eljon, the Jewish and Phoenician Esau, uno nature faruuuohé ot greedy, & in times Moloch ot Mammon.

Siohée (lo Pur), victim of Pygmaiiion, was in the temples on the side of Dido, like the boau Sorach-Moinnon years alongside ApHrodito.

Ipsa solo! tandem oelcrnttm ronjimcta Si eh ko.

Soul pciles ensisphrygius scitcl.

"A lours piods roposo uno épée phrygionno", symbol of Sichôe who must never touch the blood.

The cult of this pale and melancholic figure, innocent
And equal to that of Memnon of Paphos, it consists offerings of flowers and white fleeces.

There is not a single element of Virgil's poem that one cannot Eliso's suicide retraces one of the mip* parties where one burned an image of God or goddess, and Hercules Sandan is recognizable under the flowing dress, the bonnet Aeneas' sword. This singular pantheon is completed by the goddess of Nature, sister Anna (Clemens, Misericors, GXsi)(u<n), confidante of lovers, the Anna Perenna of Romans, the Anna Purna of India (1).

(1) Movbbs, Die religion des Pfuenisiar, chap. d'Astarté.

B

MOLOCHISMLÎ OF THE PRIMITIVE AMERICANS

A singular encounter that would almost give reason to naked Mormon myth, the Aztecs are, along with the Semites, part of the... The Holy Inquisition, the puppets who penetrated the most before, in the paroxysm of religious destruction. A With Cortex's arrival, they've almost reached Christianity.

As early as 1518, the Spanish landed on an islet in the Gulf of Mexico, named Carolina in honor of Charles V, today the Island of Immolations, they discover there with horror several bronze columns with hollow bellies full of charred human bones. Some had arms Some were outstretched, others with their hands folded. This fact is so Molochist that Muntér alleging the famous passage of Diodorus (V. 10.20) infers from this the discovery of Mexico by the Phoenicians. Ghillany himself doesn't know how to deny a certain connection between the Phoenicians and the Egyptians with The early Americans (1). *

There is no more extraordinary concordance in history. naire. The Aztec race adores, absolutely like the Semites, divinity through the shedding of human blood. All They also curse

(1) See irar ce carieux sujet Plato Critias, Billat (letters snr Atlantis). – Fhed. Dausieb (Moloch, Sabbath, Taboo).—The journey from Mnlloch to Mexico. – Views of Nature and the journey in The equinoctial regions of Uraboldi. – The Cities and ruins of America Centrale with photographs by Ch. de Charaay, published by Morel and CA

JESUS

like the Semites, they destroy the sexual instinct and rogar-including In terra as soiled by sins and the new one.
calf-born conceived in sin. "Come and accept this water,

"said the midwife as she bathed the newborn; your mother
"is the goddess Colchinweneja; may this purified enu ta
"Poor soul; for you are not innocent, all yellow as you
• Be. May this water grant you a virtuous life.

Whereupon the midwife addresses a prayer & the goddess Colchinwonoja and verso with the right hand of water on the mouth and on the newborn's chest, while crying out;

"May the invisible God come and sanctify this water for you-"
"to cross the line into crimes and sins, do ootto vio immonde."
Dear little child, the Gods Omètencli and Omoahuathl
They created you in heaven. They sent you to this sad place.
"Earth, in this awful life. You will only eat by working-"
"Valiant. May the divine grant you its aid in the » anxieties and perils that await you here below. b
Is there anything more Semitic than this?
Christian P

During Mostezuma's time, Mexico was covered in cou-winds where the sons of the family do penance before taking possession of their immense wealth.

The Mexican priest continually sheds his blood and the collected in vases. The pond where the priests bathe
She blushed. The head of the clergy, a less pope-like figure Tinfoillibitè, retreating to a desert hut,
during great calamities, and inflicts upon himself, for ten months,
the most refined torments. The Aztecs, moreover,
They are familiar with the Semitic rituals: fasting, maceration, especially continence. As for torture, they argue, the not to the fiercest Semites. At the festival of the idol Tlaîoc, A boy and a girl drown in a lake. In another,
Three boys are dying of starvation in a cave.

Idols, monstrous products of the imagination, gr
They lay amidst the blood and bones. The trophies of death, the coils of the serpent, associated with the teeth and the

vit"

Tiger's claws, closed a god. The victims were dressed in the same way as the idol, which one destined. Terrible, especially the appearance of the high priest clad on the back in the colors of Kronos-Snturne, scarlet robe, blackened face. The priest struck the victim, opened the door with a cutlass to the chest, seized the beating heart and sheared it on l'air vors le solil, principal divinity. Co coenr dépôt a moment at the feet of the idol is introduced, & the aid of a golden spoon, in the mouth of God.

Some men carried the skulls of the victims. Tapia, Cortés' aide-de-camp, and a few others counted among them one hundred thirty-six thousand.

For the honor of humanity, we would like to accuse of ex-managing such a figure. According to Torquemada (1) the inquiry siteur and the mass murderer, divine consumption has rising to twenty million children per year, without counting the other victims. But Clavigero, a layman and not a cleric (and which is a guarantee), they value at twenty thousand, children and adults. That's already enough. As a final touch & this painting, let us recall that Torquemada, a true priest of Moloch introduced Christianity into people's minds. Aztecs, using its analogies with their religion, then fulminates at every turn against these pseudo-Christian cults and extinguished them with force, halberds, pyres, and gallows.

Nothing disarms him, neither original sin nor baptism. nor the ideas about atonement, heaven, and hell. He accuses the devil, that ape of God, and misunderstands the Eucharist in this idolatrous image composed of human flesh that was distributed to the people like the flesh and blood of the Divinity.

The Peruvians draw blood from the veins of a young boy for the nocturnal preparation of a sacred bread and the They eat at the Citu festival, after having prepared themselves by fasting.

(1) ToRijuehad," Monarchia Indiana, 7, ?J.

JESUS MOUTCLt

like the Israelites of Passover.

The IJrout still has some kind of mannequin human beings are composed of food substances, each of which...
The assistant ate a portion. Eleven had arrived during this period.
where we move away from the atrocious institution by humanizing the rite, or rather by disguising it in a watered-down form, a lamb, bread, a compound of food substances.

No resemblance could be more absolute, and from which the deduction so Trouvo thus pushed to its absolute limits.
their cruelties, through this appalling procession of horrors surrounded by them, Mexicans deserve to be Semites. It was this title that prevented us from passing them under silence in a work devoted to Semitism.

G

HELLENIC SEMITIC GODS

The Greek gods themselves are invaded. The Semitic gods forced their way in and formed a party, draped in the shadow, whose gloomy demeanor chills the joy of the Immortals such.

What a profound allegory! The great God of the Hellenes, Zeus, the god, man and human, of greatness and human weaknesses, dispossesses the Semite Kronos, devours—
a father of children, who, relegated to the west in a more obscure. God of time and space, shake the door of Olympus, its great black wings.

Hercules' struggle against the lineage of Typhon u ost-ce not the eternal struggle outlined in broad strokes in history and supported by humankind against Jewish fury
And Phoenician women? Yes, in the heroic age. Hercules menrt treacherously struck and awakens for Olympus, the pre—
On the first day of our era, he was again defeated by a monster of the Gergon family and wild boars of Calydon... Nowadays, it barely lifts the heavy tom—beautiful.

The very name and idea of Hercules originate from Phoenicia.
where they are used interchangeably to designate both principles.
Greece seized upon the barbarian type and threw it into the
The bold mold of his destiny drew from it the powerful personality fiction that everyone knows. But we feel it all too clearly by

“*”

JKsrs

brutalities of the warrior fort and the outbursts that dishonor norent tant do travaux.

Dualism ended by the oppression of benevolent genius health, the momentary passion of Herculo forms the first an act in a drama continued by the Gospel. First, Hercules identifies overwhelmed innocence, the cry of pain and the moaning sowing of the earth. 11 climbs onto his symbolic pyre, the Ilujsj, which can be found on medals and in ceremonies monies; then suddenly rises again full of glory and intones the hymn of the triumphant God of Israel, Jarobbaal, Archal!

His life is a struggle; his death, a passion. The God
The martyr is resurrected, descends into Hades and returns to his heavenly homeland.

The Greek myth, in its final part, touches on history fabulous, joins the heroic myths of the High East, the swift tragedies of the harem. He is no longer a furious man, a God. The proud warrior dressed in women's clothing spins flax virgins, while Omphale and Semiramis wear the massacre and the lion's skin (1). Strength gives way to beauty and the woman triumphs with so much energy and courage spread at his feet. Ninus-Ninyas, the many-faced Sardanapal, The formidable Semiramis, the despair of historians, are the Historical modes of this dual theodicy. They form the cycle of Hercules Sandan, of the great Sandan HpaxXt>< or A-nor/a eu SapSxv AnaXa (2). And Sandon, Sandan, Sardanapal designates, throughout the Orient, the feminized Hercules, the Moloch united with the Mylitta (3).

Three deities still bring to the ban
a strange and foreign air from Olympus: Dionysus, the Indian god with strange attributes, both god of the day and

(1) Ecrhbl. Doclr. ttum, Vet. Volume 111, page 263.

(2) Which means the magnitude.— Syt, log. Num. Vet. bob. (VI, n* 1).

(3) Mcuxa, Sandan and Sausakapal. In rhcinischcn Muséum for philology, geschichte, and griechische philosophy. Jahrang, III, of the night, and the unfeeling couple, Artemis and Apollo.

MOL.nUH

Our perversion of ideas about antiquity, maintained by
The Christian declamations evoked in Dionysus-Hacchus
The bastard, coarse drunkard. Cost, the type from Silôna. Lo Mysterious Dionysus wears horns. His forms are par* Done. Her features have something focused and...
He was thoughtful. He wore an oriental cap and a tiger skin.
hangs on his shoulders. Arabia was his residence for a time.
11. There he met Moloch and took in his frenzied joy, his laughter strident, the bloody orgy.

Apollo (aroXXttv, destroy), God of the sun whose rays are arrows, the great dispenser of plagues,
She and her sister Artemis are among the most wicked deities.
from the Hellenic sky, and the Muses certainly would not have recognized their divine master in the barbaric idol of the earliest ages.
First, the wolf-headed Apollo arrives with the Pelasgians, while from the depths of the Orient to the islands of the Archipelago advances Homer's Apollo (1), the dark one, the son of darkness, which plays a significant role in the Trojan War Baalic. An alliance is forged between these gods and the wolf.
animal of darkness, son of the great she-wolf Latona, confused with the dark God of Destruction. Later
Only much later did the Greek Apollo spring from the Hippocrene, Driven by an affinity, everything points towards the horse, creature peaceful, and the sacred springs now only used against the hydras and the villains of its power to harm.

Artemis, the horned one, chaste, insensible, implacable, is the female Moloch, the bloody Tanaïs-Astarté.

(1) Iliad, 1.17; XV, 306. Apollo is called Ex;*«to» the Dark One, Auxstoç, AoKeyeitic the Dark One, son of the She-Wolf and of Darkness, and even OeXtoç -See ncore Mawey, religions of ancient Greece.

D

ADONIS'S PARTIES

We know the legend of this young Ephebe, dear to Venus,

Goddess by the Erebus nttondri. Such were the Adonias, both somber and smiling, festivals of death, festivals of resurrection.

In the month of Thamraoux, at the time when the Adonis River, Reddened by the soil of Lebanon, it seems to flow with blood, the Pilgrims flocked to Uyblos from all parts of the world Semitic, and for seven days and seven nights they celebrated the The Passion of God. The feast began with the Disappearance. The crowd stirred in a wave of anxiety. Then came the Search. Groups wandered in mourning, calling to all echoes: Adonis! Finally, the Discovery. The wooden image of the corpse lay, its side pierced, in a early-maturing plant garden: fennel, wheat, barley and lettuce, on which the god had expired, according to legend. At this As soon as they saw it, the crying and moaning burst forth and intensified. The Salammô flute, the instruments of the gods Kinnor and Giggras and Abobas, cast their mournful sounds. A multitude immense, overcome with despair, laments the irreparable loss. The women cut their long hair, bruising themselves breast and strike themselves with the sacred knife, or else, seated at the door of the houses, on the steps of the temple, mute and in mourners, their hair disheveled, sobbing, in the posture of Holy Women. The body of God is exposed on a cata-Falque, with his injury to the armpit. The Haaltis press him in SOS arms with the feverish ardor of the Sorrowful Mother of Christ. They wash him, they perfume him with myrrh and echinochre. We wrap it in the cloth and wool and lower it to tomb, amidst the lamentations of an entire people. "Fragile things, human things. Vanity of vanities!" This is Semitic philosophy (1); and Lord! oh ost ta Lordship? Adoni-Mah-Odoh!

But the seven days have passed. The sacred head thrown... The sea of Alexandria arrives in the port of Byblos. "Adonis "He lives! He is risen!" This cry filled the city and the countryside. A wine cellar, drawn by oxen, drags along, in the form Phallic, the triumph of life. Women who have not Having abandoned their hair to the scissors, they must give themselves to foreigners. Abstinence, faithfully observed until then (the Fathers attest to it), giving way to a furious orgy. The sounds overflow without restraint.

(U AMM1EN MaBCELUK, XIX, 1. – MATTHIEU, XVII, 01). – JK AN, XIX, 30.

Sacred Festival in Njinve

The Saeêos Islands or Tabernacles Festival retraces, in the High Asia, the fables of Omphale and Semiramis, even of Esther. It's the Saturnalia of the seraglio, the triumph of the harem courtesan. All the servile people participate in it. The slaves there give orders to the masters, usurping their bed. One of them, condemned to death, lasts five days. scepter of kings, presides over the great orgy and dies under the Eve's heel.

This Zogan, or condemned slave, wears the purple robe. diaphanous and voluptuous of the Cottys and the Cottylo (1),

The festival took place in the royal harem, thousands Men for spectators. Hardly Orion or Nimrod had he, in the heavens, that the perfumed, dyed Zogau and made up, almost bending under the weight of the chains and collars liers, offered itself to the gaze and acclamations of this people Ninevite, compared by Nehum to a courtesan. A cup in one hand, the double axe in the other, surrounded by his women and his eunuchs, he would sit under the canopy of purple. Perhaps they even pitched the royal tent at summit of the palaces, amidst the hanging gardens of Semiramis, and this crowned slave, this ephemeral god, pre-Absalom was born in possession of the throne and the harem in the manner of Absalom(2). His reign lasted five days, and he lived in tents of animal skins or The foliage roared with the holy orgy. Sardanapalus had spent this time in pleasures, before lighting his pyre. The overconfident Niuus, having put in a second place for the same period, finished 1st

(1) See on this subject the dictionaries Purdos, Hestchius, Athenke.

(2) Jur.gs, il 10,82.

jksi's moi.ocii

